The City Press regrets to hear of the death of Mr. Samuel Tomkins, which took place on Sunday, at Shoreham, Sevenoaks, at the age of 68. There is no doubt that his death was accelerated by the downfall of the house of Willis, Percival, and Co., in which he was a partner, an event which would be acutely felt by so high-minded and honourable a man as Mr. Tomkins. He was treasurer of several great charitable institutions.

The general manager of the London and Brighton Railway, with a view of affording increased comfort to passengers travelling during the hot weather, has ordered at a penny a glass a supply of fresh cold drinking water to be supplied to passengers at certain stations on their journey. The platform attendants will walk alongside the train, and as may be required hand the drinking water to the passengers in the carriages.

An appeal has been issued on behalf of the popular actor, Bro. Henry Marston, who, from infirmity, is unable any longer to follow his profession. The services Bro. Henry Marston has rendered to dramatic art at old Sadler's Wells Theatre, and elsewhere, ought to secure him a handsome testimonial to alleviate the pecuniary distress from which he is now suffering.

Anderton's Hotel, (Bro. Clemow's), Fleet-street, is to be rebuilt, and for the carrying-out of the work thirteen tenders have been sent in, varying in amount from £28,497 (Messrs. Kirk and Randall), to £27,036 (Messrs. McLachlan).

Miss Emily Faithfull delivered an address on "Modern Extravagance, its Cause and Cure," at the Pavilion, Buxton, on Thursday last. His Grace the Duke of Devonshire presided.

The ninth annual competition of the Society for the Promotion and Encouragement of Gardening in the City was held on Tuesday in the grounds of Finsbury-circus, the Lady Mayoress—in the absence of Princess Beatrice, who, it had been hoped, would this year present the awards—distributing the prizes.

His Grace the Duke of Manchester, R.W.G.M. Norths and Hunts, took the chair on Tuesday night at a banquet at Willis's Rooms, given by a number of gentlemen connected with the colonies in honour of the Australian cricket team. A very brilliant company was present, including the Right Hon. Hugh Childers, M.P., and a number of distinguished colonial administrators.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT DARTMOUTH.—On Tuesday, the Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by Prince Louis of Battenberg and Sir Massey Lopes, M.P., Civil Lord of the Admiralty, paid a visit to the Britannia training ship at Dartmouth. Their Royal Highnesses left with their two sons, who return home for their holidays. The Prince and Princess had a most enthusiastic reception on Tuesday afternoon, and the town was brilliantly decorated and illuminated in honour of the visit. The Prince received an address on board the Britannia from the Mayor and Corporation, and the Princess presented the prizes to the cadets. The Duke of Connaught received his brother on his arrival.

We have much pleasure in announcing that the proposed lodge to be held at Landport will shortly be constituted; the petition was strongly supported by the Masonic elite of the district, and favourably recommended by the Provincial Grand Master to the Grand Secretary. We have no doubt under the able guidance of Bro. R. Murrell, the W.M. nominate, it will prove a great success, its situation at the north of this prosperous town securing for it a large amount of patronage and support. The Freemasons of this locality must be congratulated on the privilege of witnessing its constitution by Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., the able Provincial Grand Master, whose performance of this, as of all other ceremonies connected with our sublime ritual, is worthy of emulation.

A meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hertfordshire was held on Friday afternoon at the Freemasons' Hall, Watford. A full report will appear in our next.

The Harcourt Preceptory of Knights Templar was held at the Greyhound, Richmond, yesterday. The Provincial Priory of Surrey was also held, and the new Provincial Prior installed by Lord Skelmersdale. A full report will appear in our next.

R. W. Bro. Lord Leigh, P.G.M. Warwickshire, opened the first coffee-house for Leamington on Wednesday. Speaking of the evils of intemperance, he said, as a thirty years' visitor of Warwick Gaol, he believed the prison would be closed were it not for that vice.

LONDON MASONIC CLUB OF INSTRUCTION.—At the last meeting of this flourishing lodge of instruction, it was decided that the meetings should be adjourned over the summer months. The lodge will re-open on Monday, October 14th, at 6 o'clock p.m.

Appropos of the imperturbable Mr. Cool, here is a little incident somewhat savouring of the quiet flavour of our old friend in London Assurance. It occurred in a London theatre a little time ago. Said a highly glib, very "gummy" young man—black-crutched, toothpicked, and short-sighted—to a stranger who happened to be standing on the steps leading into the stalls, "Aw, have you got a programme?" and the answer came back very quietly and promptly, "Yes, thanks; got one from the other man." It was much better than swearing at him, wasn't it.—World.

Reviews.

BRIEF. A Weekly epitome of the Press. Vol. 1. Wyman and Sons.

We have been favoured with this goodly first volume of a new weekly paper, now, we believe of much circulation. We have connoed over its pages, and found much to admire and much to amuse in them. As an epitome of weekly facts it undoubtedly has its use, and if "brevity be the soul of wit," we think that it is likely to be much appreciated, inasmuch as short extracts are often read when long leaders are passed over. Without at all endorsing its peculiar views or political utterances of many kinds, as alien altogether, whether on one side or the other, from the genius and mission of Freemasonry proper, we yet can fairly commend the idea, and as honestly praise the consummation.

THE HISTORY OF THE LODGE OF KELSO, No. 58. By Bro. W. Fred Dixon, W.M. No. 261. Printed for private circulation.

We have read this little work in extent, having had the pleasure to peruse part of it in the Sootish Freemason previously, with much satisfaction, and we feel strongly that the thanks of all Masonic students are due to Bro. Vernon. This unpretending sketch of the valuable Minute Book of the Lodge of St. John, Kelso, dating from 1701, is full of those minute touches of facts which delight the eyes of our Masonic "Dryasdusts" and "Jonathan Oldbucks." Two points come out clearly, the mixture of the speculative and the operative elements in 1701, and the late character of the Master Mason's Grade, (1754), "nomination," though of the Master Masons named, all seem to have been old members of the lodge. We can commend this little work as most carefully and conscientiously edited by Bro. Vernon, and to all in whose hands it falls it will be, as it was to us, alike a source of valuable information.

MUSIC. Six New Tunes to Well-known Hymns. By Mrs. M. A. Texas, dedicated to the Bishop of Rochester. London, Novello and Co.

These hymns, the production of the wife of our well-known and able Bro. the Rev. W. Tebbes, will be welcomed by all lovers of hymn music. They are written to certain well-known hymns in the equally well-known popular selection termed "Hymns Ancient and Modern." We wish for them all success, and we think we shall not be wrong in anticipating for them much of public patronage and approval.

Walton in Verse; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

I was refreshing myself with a "dip,"—(how suggestive in this weather),—into Edward Jesse's pleasant edition of honest old Isaac Walton's "Complete Angler," when at page 280 I lighted on the following note, which is quoted as taken from Tenneman's "Manual of the History of Philosophy, Bonn, 1854." All such notes, "quantum valent" when found, I think right to be recorded, and, therefore, I give this one for the benefit of fellow students. "The title of the Rosycrucian, or the brothers of the Rosy Cross, was first assumed by a set of Hermetic philosophers in Germany about the commencement of the 14th century. They professed to have a knowledge of all the occult sciences, as the making of gold, the prolongation of human life, the restoration of youth, from which they were also called Immortales, and the formation of the Philosopher's Stone; but all these secrets they were bound by a solemn oath to reveal only to the members of their own fraternity, and it is to this custom in particular that Walton alludes. Their founder was a German gentleman, named Christian Crux, who had travelled to Palestine, where falling sick he was cured by Arab physicians, who, he asserted, revealed to him their mysterious arts. He died in 1484, and the name of his society was composed of the word Ros, dew, and his own name, Crux & Cross, the old chemical character for Light."

THE NEW "CREATON" LODGE.

(Communiqué.)

We have been informed that some difficulties have arisen in the granting of a warrant for this proposed new lodge. We think, however, that there is some mistake about the matter, inasmuch as, according to statements which have reached us, some one seems to have made a blunder of the most amusing kind. It appears that some persons have read the name of the proposed new lodge as "Creaton," whereas it was intended to be called the "Creaton Lodge," after our gallant and deserving Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton, who was to be the first W.M. And this is the one point we do not ourselves profess to understand, nor can we realise how any such mistake could possibly have been made in the affair. It is obviously impossible for a moment to admit the idea that any slight, on any ground, personal or otherwise, was intended to be cast upon so excellent and worthy a brother as Lieut.-Col. Creaton, and we feel sure that this is a mistake of some kind, which has arisen from "circumstances over which nobody had any control." As we understand the case, the proposed Creaton Lodge has been set on foot by many most respectable and zealous brethren residing in the neighbourhood of Regent-street, who were desirous to give their new lodge (a not unpardonable desire) the prestige and popularity of their well-known and highly valued Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton. We are aware that some opposition has been entertained to the multiplication of the names of living Masons as given to lodges, but remembering that we have a "Hervey Lodge," an "Erasmus Wilson Lodge," and a "Muggeridge Lodge," we are glad to hear of the so-called "Creaton Lodge."

R. WENTWORTH LITTLE MEMORIAL.

The first meeting of the committee, appointed on the 5th inst., was held on Friday last. The chair was taken by Bro. John Boyd, P.G.P. Col. Burdett was elected Chairman, he having consented to accept the office if the committee would act without him for the next two months, during his absence from England. Bro. James Lewis Thomas, Asst. G.D. of C., was elected a member of the committee, and it was resolved to ask Bro. Col. Creaton if he would become a member of the committee and accept the office of Vice-Chairman. It was resolved that an advertisement be placed in the Freemason asking for donations to the Fund to be sent to Bro. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, Freemason's Hall, and that a letter be printed and sent to the Life Governors of the Girls' School, and to the Masters of lodges, but it was thought advisable that this should be postponed until the first or second week in October, as the lodges were now closed for the vacation. The Chairman wished the members of the committee to ask all their friends to forward donations to the Treasurer in the meantime. The meeting was then adjourned until Monday, the 28th of October, at 5 p.m.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE AND EDUCATION.

Professor James Stuart, of Trinity College, Cambridge, whose exertions in establishing the University Extension scheme, of which he was the principal founder, are well known, recently visited the Crystal Palace on behalf of the Cambridge Syndicate, and delivered an address in the lower lecture-room of the Ladies' Division of the Crystal Palace Company's School of Art, Science, and Literature. Mr. Thomas Hughes, Q.C., chairman of the company, was in the chair, and there were also present Mr. George Grove, the Rev. Henry White, of the Chapel Royal, Savoy, Professor of English Literature to the Palace Company; the Hon. and Rev. Augustus Legge, Vicar of Sydenham, Major Flood-Page, Miss Macmillan, Mr. F. Shenton, and a number of ladies. Mr. Stuart's lecture was mainly an explanation of the system adopted by the University for the instruction of the extra University classes, which now number many thousands of pupils. Not only are lectures delivered, but the teacher is directed to remain in the room for some time after the conclusion of each lecture, and class, in order to answer questions or solve the difficulties which have occurred to pupils, and to give advice as to the reading of text-books and other means of efficiently studying the subject. Each lecture is accompanied by a syllabus distributed to the pupils and by questions. Those who desire to answer these questions do so in writing at home, and submit their answers to the teachers for correction and comment. A class is formed of those who desire to study more fully the subject of particular lectures. The class, at the discretion of the teacher, either takes up the subject of the lectures or cognate subjects bearing directly on it and necessary for its elucidation. The teaching in the class is more conversational than that in the lecture. The teaching in a course of lectures is of a continuous character. Written examinations are held at the conclusion of each course by examiners appointed by the Syndicate, certificates of attendance and examination are given, and after three years' attendance the students become entitled to a Vice-Chancellor's certificate specifying the courses attended and the distinctions gained. Mr. Stuart having given his account of a system which has been already experimentally in force for a year at the Palace, thanks were offered to him by Mr. White, Mr. Legge, and Mr. Hughes, and the meeting dispersed. The original design of the Crystal Palace was to promote education, and for that purpose large sums were expended in science and art collections. It now has 500 regular students and 27 teachers, and is seeking to develop the educational department of the Palace into a collegiate institution for the South of London. The Cambridge local examinations for ladies are conducted at the Palace, and it is the fourth centre for them in England in importance. Three courses of lectures will now, in the ensuing session which begins in October, be delivered to ladies by teachers appointed by the Cambridge Syndicate. The subjects are to be history of England, political economy, and "social history," which means a sketch of the nature, progress, and influence of the various classes and ranks of the community—a history not of Governments but of nations, with special reference to the English. Courses by the ordinary teachers of the school will also be delivered on general history, physical geography, English literature, and German literature and language. At the meeting the hope was expressed that University extension lectures will be established for young men also, but Mr. Legge said, amid signs of surprise and amusement, that in some parts of his parish the female population is three times that of the male.

The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's have given their consent to the experimental execution of designs for the decoration of the dome of the Cathedral. An experiment is first to be made of Mr. Leighton's cartoons, to cost £4000, and if successful his larger work will be undertaken, costing from £45,000 to £50,000.

Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to confer the vacant Garter upon the Marquis of Salisbury.

STORM WARNING.—The following cable message has been received at the London office of the New York Herald from New York:—Storm centre, preceded by shallow depression, will probably reach British, affecting French, coasts, about the 27th, attended by strong south-east to north-west gales; rains, possibly lightning, following by fall of temperature. Storm track will probably range between latitudes 40 and 50 to longitude 30, thence north-eastward over British islands.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

It is said to be "authoritatively reported" that the Porte is about to grant an English company a concession for a railway from Mersina through Diarbekir to Erzeroum, "both for strategical and commercial purposes."

Alexandria is threatened with a water famine. The canal, thirty miles long, supplying it from the Nile, has become almost dry. It is choked with mud, the water being diverted by great landowners higher up for their cotton crops. The old Roman cisterns have mostly been broken up for building material, and those remaining are too foul for use.

Professor Kiepert asserts that the Dobrudscha will ever remain, despite the most energetic efforts to improve it, what it has been for three thousand years, an unhealthy, treeless, desert soil.—Standard Correspondent.

A Madras paper narrates the following occurrence:—On the 13th of May a very large number of locusts settled on a portion of the Madras line of railway, covering the metals for some distance. A passing train crushed some thousands of them, and the glutinous substance from their bodies rendered the rails so slippery that the wheels refused to take the metals, and the engine had to be brought to a stand-still, and the wheels and metals cleaned before the train could proceed. The train which followed was also detained by the same cause.

The recently printed Bill which empowers the Trustees of the British Museum to transfer to other places some of their collections, according to which the Natural History Departments will be moved to South Kensington, ought to add more than a hundred valuable portraits, long ago hoisted over the stuffed birds, to the National Portrait Gallery. These works are nearly all of more or less interest. They include a good picture of the Protector Oliver, by Walker, and 23 Royal Portraits—e.g., Elizabeth, Princess Palatine, by Mierevelt, and Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, by the same; the Duke of Monmouth; James I.; Duke of Cumberland, by Morier; Queen Elizabeth, ascribed to Zuccherro; George II., by Shakleton; Margaret, Countess of Richmond; Queen Caroline. There are many portraits of men of science, and letters, and arms, such as Dr. A. Giffard; Rev. T. Birch; H. Wanley; Claudius J. Rich; Sir H. Sloane, by Slaughter; Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford; Sir R. Cotton; Sir John Cotton; Edward Harley, Earl of Oxford, by Dahl; Speaker Onslow; Bacon; Duke of Marlborough; A. Marvel; Archbishop Usher; H. Spelman; M. Prior, by Hudson; W. Camden; Speed; John Ray; Cranmer; G. Baughman; Voltaire; Vesalius, ascribed to A. More; Sir F. Drake; Luther; Captain W. Dampier; J. Locke; Dr. J. Wallis; R. Baxter; Britton, "the small coal man"; Sir H. Vane; Robert Cecil; and Lord Anson. Also a first-rate Weenix, "A Hunting Piece," which would be welcome at the National Gallery. Clause 2 of the Bill permits the Trustees of the Museum to transfer "all or any pictures belonging to them to the National Gallery or to any department of her Majesty's Government."

The Blackpool Winter Garden and Pavilion, which have been formed at a cost of about £100,000, were opened on Thursday week by the Lord Mayor of London and a great body of civic dignitaries from all parts of England and Wales.

Sir Coutts Lindsay asks us to state that it is his intention to open the Grosvenor Gallery free after 3 o'clock on the afternoons of the ensuing Saturdays—viz., July 27th and August 3rd. As the galleries will only accommodate a limited number some system of admission is indispensable, and it has therefore been decided to issue tickets, which can be obtained gratis on Friday next and on each succeeding Friday by application, either personally or by letter containing addressed envelopes to the secretary, 132, New Bond-street.—Times.

The Building News says that Mr. Street has undertaken to design the memorial brass, which is to be placed over Sir Gilbert Scott's grave in Westminster Abbey.

A young lady, the daughter of Mr. C. K. Hall, an Englishman in practice at Paris as a French advocate, has just successfully passed her second examination at the Sorbonne, which entitles her to the diploma of Bachelier es Lettres.

The parish church of Eckington, near C 1 1 1 1 field, has been reopened after restoration, and being of great antiquity and interest in the neighbourhood, was visited by crowds from all parts. Stained windows, by Taylor, have been presented to the church—the two in the tower by the Wells family, and those in the north aisle by Messrs. Wilson, of Eckington Mills, and by subscription of friends in memory of the late Mr. Alderson.

Theatrical business at Pompeii, which has been at standstill since the eruption of Vesuvius in 79 A.D., appears to be looking up, judging from the following announcement of Signor Luigni:—"After a lapse of more than 1800 years, the theatre of this city will be reopened with La Figlia del Reggimento. I solicit a continuance of the favour bestowed on my predecessor Marcus Quintus Martius, and beg to assure the public that I shall make every effort to equal the rare qualities displayed during his management."

On Friday week a tank of 2000 gallons of creosote, which was being conveyed from Birmingham to South Wales, burst at Hereford and ran into the River Wye, killing a great quantity of salmon, trout, and other fish.

It has been determined to form a high grade school in Barrow-in-Furness, and with a view of assisting the scheme, the Duke of Devonshire has given £1000. It is proposed, pending the erection of a permanent building, to commence the school in temporary premises forthwith, and the Duke of Devonshire has offered £50 a year towards its maintenance. The school will be under the South Kensington Department.

Answers to Correspondents.

ST. GILES.—Without the consent of the W.M. such minute we apprehend cannot be erased, but it could, in our opinion, be "non-confirmed," though as a record of facts it was undoubtedly true. There are two views of non-confirmation, one of which goes as to the entry itself, the other as to correctness. In the interests of harmony it would be better to erase it probably.

THE FREEMASON,

SATURDAY, JULY 27, 1878.

IN MEMORIAM.

Hardly a week passes over our heads but we have to deplore the loss of friends and brethren, and record that irresistible summons which Death, the stern visitor of humanity brings to us all in turn. In vain are the sighs of friendship or the tears of grieving relatives, all have to bow submissively to that stern behest. We deplore to-day, and our Craft will deplore, the removal from amongst us of our old and valued Grand Treasurer, Bro. Samuel Tomkins. For nearly a quarter of a century he was the active and respected Treasurer of our Grand Lodge, and if clouds supervened and dimmed his later days, such, the often the inevitable lot of mortals, ought to be regarded by Freemasons with feelings of sympathy and commiseration. We shall all of us long remember his smiling face and his gracious presence, and his kindly words, and many of us in old lodge association, and the privacy of the friendly and domestic circle, will recall before us happier souvenirs of "Auld Lang Syne," and the genial heart and unchanging pleasantness of Bro. Samuel Tomkins. It is sad to think what havoc time is making in the serried phalanx of our ancient Masons, and it may be that in years to come, some will have cause to call to mind how much they owed to the good sense, zeal, earnestness, and highmindedness of that older generation to which Bro. Tomkins belonged. Peace be to him!

THE CONSTITUTIONALISM OF ENGLISH FREEMASONRY.

If there is one thing to which we should all adhere, as essentially bound up with our very existence, it is what an old Grand Master of ours liked to call, the "Constitutionalism of Freemasonry." But just now we see that that great characteristic of English Freemasonry receives often very rude shocks, owing to the idiosyncrasies of some, the perversity of others. In a very distinguished province (which shall be nameless pro hac vice), a proposal was recently made, which on the face of it was clearly illegal, and ought never to have appeared on the agenda paper at all. We have reason to believe, that the highest authorities have declared the proposal to be illegal and unconstitutional, and yet we read in the province's agenda paper, that a discussion which is declared to be "ipso facto" useless, because illegal, is to be "resumed." This is not Masonic Constitutionalism. Whatever our private opinion or fancies may be, we ought to give way to proper authority, and we trust that there is some mistake in the matter, and that the agenda paper is in error.

THE PRESENT POSITION AND FUTURE PROSPECTS OF OUR CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

We take this subject in hand, which is rather a wide one, and undoubtedly a very important one, with some reluctance and not a few misgivings, especially in this very hot weather, for we can expect our readers, suffering and perspiring, to read our lucubrations, much less, if they hardly are able to cast their eyes upon them, to think over them. The process is alike too fatiguing and too exhausting. However, as no time is like the present time, and whether we are at 90° in the shade of Fahrenheit, or cool, collected, and comfortable, the Freemason must appear hebdomadally, we shall proceed to favour our sympathetic audience with our ideas on the subject, premising that if they like them not, or disagree with them "in toto," if they neither seem customary nor convincing, they must be so very good in their fraternal charity as to put it all down to the "great heat." We are among those who, while we admit the very wonderful efforts which have been made for the Charities of late years, alike in the metropolis and the provinces, do not affect to regard with satisfaction their "present position," much less their future prospects. And we will tell our readers why. The present position of the Charities is simply this. They are working the "willing horses" too heavily, in our opinion. Year after year, the same brethren generously come forward as Stewards, while the great majority of our brethren do nothing. Like a general officer who attacks a position with the same gallant men over and over again, not using his reserves, so the Secretaries of our Charities, through no fault of their own, are making use of the same Stewards year by year. The proportion of new Stewards is not sufficient, and this fact alone suggests many serious considerations. What is the present position of our Charities? Two-thirds of the lodges and chapters do nothing, and have done nothing, for the Charities; not two-tenths of our brethren are to be found among the Life Governors or the Subscribers. As Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creton so well said at the Boys' Festival, not much above 60 brethren and 52 lodges and chapters are Vice-Presidents of the Boys' School! What then is to be done? We would venture to impress upon our brethren that if the Charities are to be supported in the future more must be done to qualify lodges and chapters and individual Masons as Life Governors of our Charities. Our three Charities now require an annual income of £30,000 to be kept up in a proper state of efficiency, and for this sum we shall have to rely on increased efforts on the part of brethren and lodges and chapters! Then the best friends of the Charities need not feel anxious for the future, then the zealous efforts of the Secretaries would be cheered, and their grave responsibilities lightened in respect of the Institutions they serve so well, and all loyal Masons would feel confident that in the future, as in the past and present, the zeal and liberality of our brethren would be commensurate with the claims of our Charities. Then instead of retrogression we should anticipate advance in that general support, which those great and goodly creations of true Masonic Charity have a right to expect at the hands of English Masons.

OUR NEW LODGES.

Our new lodges are not "coming to the front" for charity as we should like to see them. From No. 1700 downwards only ten have aided the Girls' and Boys' School this year, and we feel bound to express alike our disappointment and regrets at such a state of things. We fear that, in London especially, the expenses of the social circle swallow up all the available returns, however large, and that many of the lodges are in debt to their Treasurers. We, therefore, feel bound, in the interests of charity and of the new lodges themselves, to remind them, that stately and æsthetic consecrations are very good in their way, that the social gathering is by no means to be overlooked, but that as Freemasons, whether as regards the lodge or themselves as brethren, the great and blessed principle of Charity has a paramount claim on their sympathies and their finances. We might say much more, but we think it well to stop here to-day.

NOT AFFECTATION.

Freemasons are accused by the Hornet of an "unworthy affectation" in these words:—"I took up a Masonic journal the other day, and was a little surprised to find, as I thought, that the Freemasons had invented a new deity, whom they spoke of in print, and in capital letters, as the G.A.O.T.U. 'G.A.O.T.U.,' said I to myself; 'what heathen divinity can this be?' A friend, however, explained to me that the mystic letters stood for Great Architect of the Universe. I am a little consoled, but I still wonder why the simple, but majestic word God, which is good enough for the Bible, is not good enough for the Masons; and I am still inclined to regard the uncouth G.A.O.T.U. as an unworthy affectation." Why the Freemasons should be guilty of unworthy affectation, or how they are, this somewhat unreasoning scribe says nothing, except it be on his own "ipse dixit," which, to say the truth, cannot stand for much. There is no possible harm in the use of this harmless and familiar symbolism, and if a writer wishes to attack Freemasonry, he must be very badly off for an argument, if he can find any fault or make any merchandise out of so unpretending and innocent a formula. It is well known and agreeable to Freemasons, and that is quite sufficient for "Hornets" or any one else to know or to be told.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED SCOTTISH RITE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The letter of my Ill. Bro. Gen. Pike, in the Freemason of 6th inst., does not, I regret to say, treat the points on which he writes with that impartiality which I would expect from a brother of his distinguished eminence and learning.

He denies that the higher degrees of Masonry were practised by the Grand Lodge and Grand Orient of France prior to the commencement of the present century, and he states that the Grand Lodge practised the Blue Degrees only. He admits, however, that that lodge had united with it the first twenty-five degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite; and, as regards the Grand Orient, he speaks of it as having in 1786 reduced its degrees to seven, thereby implying that prior to that date it had practised a larger number. But the Grand Chapter General of France, possessing, according to Thory, an "incredible number of degrees," and every other Masonic order in France, became united to the Grand Orient prior to 1801, when it proclaimed the unity of Freemasonry in France.

We learn, further, from Gen. Pike himself, that the Supreme Council of Charleston in 1801 had before it "the French Copy of the Constitutions," containing peculiar provisions; and the Supreme Council of Scotland describes the position of the Rite in 1765 as having then "extended throughout Europe." At that period France was the leading kingdom of the world, both socially and politically, and if the Rite then extended throughout Europe, and France had an edition of the Constitution for itself, why deny its existence there? It is well known that the Order originated in France, and I take the liberty to say that no one knows that fact better than Gen. Pike himself.

I regret that I must question the accuracy of the General's statement as to the formation of the present Supreme Council of France. That Council was formed in May 1811. Assuming that the Count de Grasse imported, as the General states, the Ancient and Accepted Rite into France, we find that in October 1804 he instituted, according to Gen. Pike, a genuine Supreme Council, which he designated the "Grand General Scottish Lodge of France." In December following that lodge entered into a concordat with the Grand Orient by which the two bodies became united, and the Grand Orient was declared to possess "the Grand Council of the 33° and the Supreme Council of the 33°." De Grasse and the Office Bearers of his lodge became officers of the Grand Orient, and his lodge proclaimed that its existence had terminated. In consideration of this union the Grand Orient discharged the pecuniary obligations of de Grasse's lodge, and guaranteed a pension to its Secretary.

One named Pyron, who had been Orator of De Grasse's Lodge, having calumniated some of the officers of the Grand Orient, was deprived of this office also held by him in the Grand Orient, and in consequence he immediately thereafter organised a rival council, and prevailed on de Grasse, and others of his friends, to join it. Following up this secession, De Grasse in 1805 pretended to cede the rights he had previously transferred to the Grand Orient, and which that body still held to Prince Cambacérès, as Sovereign Grand Commander of Pyron's Council. It is manifest to any one that such a proceeding was invalid. But Gen. Pike appears to be of opinion that everything De Grasse did, however extravagant, was lawful, and that he could enter into onerous contracts and break from them at pleasure. Strange principles! The Grand Orient held other views. It adhered to the agreement, and still adheres to it. It is thus seen that Prince Cambacérès's body was spurious. But even it recognized the rights of the Grand Orient, and provided by its constitutions that none of its degrees would be conferred, unless the recipient at his initiation took an obligation to the "Grand Orient as uniting to itself the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite." The Cambacérès body ceased to exist in 1814.

De Grasse in 1815 instituted another Supreme Council under the title of the Supreme Council of America, or Du Prado. To evade the diligence of creditors he left France in 1816. On his return in 1818, his Du Prado Council still existing, he created another, which he styled the Supreme Council of Pompeii. Outraged by this proceeding, the Du Prado Council met, tried and deposed De Grasse, as being guilty of "trafficking in degrees."

General Pike wishes it to be understood that De Grasse's first council, that of the "French West Indies Islands," was part and parcel of the Du Prado and Pompeii Councils. In this he is mistaken, for the West Indian Council continued its existence throughout, and side by side, with all the other Supreme Councils of France, and exercised jurisdiction there until at least 19th March 1823. I have seen one of its diplomas of that date. The Du Prado Council ended its career in 1820. In 1821 the members of the Pompeii Council convened some of the members of the late Council of Cambacérès, and they on 7th May, 1821, declared themselves the Supreme Council of France. It is thus seen that that Council was formed in 1821.

General Pike states that the Grand Orient of France "never had any lawful possession of the supreme powers of the A. and A. Scottish Rite. This possession for a long period of time became title by usurpation." We have seen the character of the Grand Orient's possession of the Rite, and that, assuming it did not have it before the concordat of 1804, it lawfully acquired it then. But this is a singular objection on the part of General Pike. When did he, a well known Masonic historian, discover that the Grand Orient never had lawful possession of the Rite? His own council, and that of Northern States of America, for many years, not only recognised, but entered into alliances with the Grand Orient as a lawful Supreme Council, and General Pike and his council interchanged representatives with it. This alliance is no doubt now severed, but it was so only in 1870, and not because the Grand Orient was in unlawful possession of the Rite, but because, being so, it had recognised as genuine a Supreme Council for Louisiana, which was repudiated by the other two American Councils. The severance too, was not intended to be permanent, for these two councils declare, in announcing their breach of alliance with the Grand Orient that "this suspension of amicable relations will continue only until all claim of right on the part of the Grand Orient of France, to consider the pretences of legality of bodies of the A. and A. Scottish Rite within our respective jurisdictions, are disavowed." It was then too, and only by way of retaliation, that the two American Councils resolved "henceforward to recognise the Supreme Council for France and its dependencies * * * as the sole legitimate supreme power of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of France." In the face of such circumstances, I have again to ask General Pike when he first became aware of "the usurpation of the Grand Orient as a Supreme Council"? To say that the Grand Orient is not a Supreme Council because it does not adopt that descriptive name, is simply playing upon words. The infallible De Grasse called his councils by many names, some of them certainly strange ones, and yet General Pike makes no objection to them.

The explanation he gives of the institution of De Grasse's Supreme Council of the "French West Indies Islands" renders the genuineness of that body very doubtful indeed. But this is so clear that it is unnecessary for me to follow him on the point. Its existence at Paris was clearly illegal. We have seen how the General has dealt with rival councils in Louisiana, and the exercise of the functions at Paris of the West Indian Council was in more unfavourable circumstances, for there it was not only acting beyond its assigned territory, but in rivalry to councils, the creatures of its Grand Commanders' own creation. While General Pike denies that it exercised jurisdiction at Paris, he contradicts that denial by stating that it did so in 1815, and giving a list of distinguished men (Dr. Morison has to be added) whom it admitted in France as members of the Rite. None of them appear to afford the excuse of having been connected directly or indirectly with the French West Indies, to which the Charleston Council limited De Grasse's patent as Grand Commander.

But General Pike states Dr. Morison's patent of 1814 had nothing to do with his powers in 1826, and he hazards a random statement that Morison "had ample power then." He does not say what that power was, nor by whom conferred. Between these dates, no additional powers were conferred on Morison. His mere presence at meetings of Supreme Councils did not confer such powers. He was there under his limited patent of 1814. By that patent, the power to create councils was expressly withheld, and the Supreme Council of Scotland in its Constitutions assigns to that patent alone, Morison's authority to form it. In so far as the creation by him of a council in Scotland is concerned, it might as well have been formed by any one not a member of the A. and A. Rite. Scotland has recently conferred the Thirty-third Degree on a brother in New Zealand, but under a declaration that he shall not have power to form Supreme Councils. Suppose that brother were to disregard the terms of his patent, would General Pike consider a council formed by him as lawful, because he discovered he had been subsequent to the date of his patent present as a 33° at a meeting of a Supreme Council? If he would not, why does he maintain the Supreme Council of Scotland to be validly created? The General says that the English Council was similarly formed. The circumstances are entirely different. Dr. Crucefix received his patent direct from the Supreme Council at Boston. That council's validity is admitted, and the patent was granted for the special purpose of forming the English Council. Dr. Morison held his Patent from a spurious source, and even by it he was debarred forming councils. When we consider for what Masonic offence De Grasse was deposed, the cause of the restriction is easily seen. Morison himself seems to have had little faith in the genuineness of his patent, after having been, according to General Pike, a genuine 33° for ten years, or in that of the Supreme Council of France, for in 1824 he applied to the Grand Orient for the 30th Degree, and obtained it in May of that year, probably with a view of further advancement.

The Supreme Council of France's recognition of Scotland appears to have been given on the erroneous assumption of Morison's patent being unqualified in its terms, and that the 33rd Degree was not worked in Scotland at the time. Had it been truly informed on these points, such recognition would have surely been withheld. France, however, by its recognition conferred no warrant on the Scottish Council. Its recognition was an act of courtesy merely, neither conferring a right nor taking one away.

I think that General Pike has failed to establish that his is the Mother Council of the world. There was only one original council. The General says that it existed at Berlin, and unless his council was formed by some member of it, or a descendant of such member, his council is necessarily illegitimate. I fear that it is so.

So, for by the Constitutions, the presence of three Sovereign Grand Inspector Generals is required to form a council, and by the Charleston records only two—assuming them to be genuine—were present at its formation. To overcome this fatal difficulty the General makes an inference, but inferences are not admitted to override the statements contained in contemporary records, and thus create legal titles. Besides, the inference that De Grasse was present does not hold, for his patent is dated in 1802. The Charleston Council was formed in 1801.

Yours fraternally,

A 33°.

IRISH ROYAL ARCH MASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The original of the enclosed has been sent me by my friend, our Ill. Bro. Col. C. McLeod Moore, 33°, the Great Prior of Canada.

This certificate is now the earliest known record of Irish Royal Arch Masonry, and proves that this degree was worked in Ireland 106 years ago, the next record being that contained under date 2nd December, 1781, in the minute books of the High Knights Templar of Ireland, Kilwinning Lodge.

Lodge 308 was warranted by the Grand Lodge of Ireland on 7th December, 1758, and was working at Carrick-on-Suir up to the year 1825. This Royal Arch Degree must have been conferred under that Craft Warrant.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES H. NEILSON.

15th July, 1878.

"We, the Right Worshipful Grand Officers of a Royal Arch Excellent Lodge, held under the sanction of Lodge 308 on the registry of IRELAND,

"Do certify the bearer hereof, our well-beloved Bro. Henry Price, a Past Master of Lodge 308 aforesaid, was by us installed and instructed into the Sublime Secrets of Royal Arch Excellent Masonry, he having with due honour and justice to the Royal Craft justly supported the mysterious and amazing trials of skill and valour attending his admission to our said lodge, wherefore we recommend him as a just, honest, skilful, and worthy brother.

CLIQUEISM.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

There seems, if I may judge from current conversation amongst my brethren, a sort of floating idea, very prevalent just now, that there is a tendency to create and make use of such a very unwholesome agency in our English Freemasonry, and especially in the metropolis.

From the most careful enquiries I am led to hope that such is a chimera, as not only would such a state of things be most hostile to all the true principles of Freemasonry, but I do not think that Freemasonry is a soil in which such a parasitic plant could flourish. Your correspondent "H" seems to have heard the same remarks as I have, but he, unlike myself, seems to lay more stress upon them than I do. I believe Masonic cliqueism to be impossible.

Yours fraternally,

CAUTION.

MARK MASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to the letter of Bro. Mortlock I beg to state.

1. That there is no metropolitan district in Mark Masonry.
2. That the Provincial Grand Lodge of Middlesex and Surrey was constituted in 1870.
3. That the Temple Mark Lodge, No. 173, was consecrated in 1874.
4. That the Temple Mark Lodge meets at Stepney, in the county of Middlesex, and is, therefore, within the province of Middlesex and Surrey.
5. The Temple Mark Lodge refuses to pay dues or acknowledge the Provincial Grand Lodge in any way.
6. That the Provincial Grand Lodge contests the so-called decision of the Temple Mark Lodge, and the matter has yet to be otherwise disposed of.
7. That my report to the Provincial Grand Lodge was therefore correct.

Yours fraternally,

W. G. BRIGHTEN.
Provincial Grand Mark Secretary
Middlesex and Surrey.

THE RITE OF SWEDENBORG.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In answer to Bro. Kenneth Mackenzie's courteous letter, I beg to say that I am quite open to information and correction upon the point.

As far as I have been able to master the history of the so-called Swedenborgian Masonry, or the "Rite of Swedenborg" two points are clear. 1. That Swedenborg was not a Mason himself. 2. That Swedenborgianism is an outcome of "Martinism." Though I am quite ready to accept Bro. Kenneth Mackenzie's statement that it cannot in any sense be called a "Christian Rite," yet it has always been classed amongst the "Apocalyptic systems," so termed. I do not profess to understand, if it is not based upon Christianity, on what it can be built up.

Bro. Kenneth Mackenzie will remember that the "Handbuch" denies the name of a system to it, and declares that it is "nur eine phantasie der Französischen Schriftsteller—only a phantasy of the French writer."

The "Handbuch" asserts that it is identical with the system of the "illuminés philosophes" and was first put forward by Benedict Chastanier in 1767, and by the Marquis de Thomé in 1784, with some alterations.

I shall read Bro. Mackenzie's communication in the Rosicrucian with much interest.

I am yours fraternally,

CRAFTSMAN.

GASTRONOMICAL EXCESSES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The remarks of Lord Skelmersdale on the excessive banquetting at present in vogue amongst us, cannot but be acceptable to the majority of right thinking Masons, although Bro. Binches endeavoured to champion the present social system. The necessity of a reform in our present dinners is generally admitted, as there is no reason why we should not enjoy the pleasure of each other's society without the elaborate and expensive style of banquet which at present prevails; an example in this respect could be well set by the Provincial Grand Masters, who should endeavour to discountenance as much as possible the many course dinner, and substitute a plainer, more homely and inexpensive luncheon at the Provincial Grand Lodge meetings, which would be quickly followed by the lodges under their control; and in fact the adoption of this course would popularise the meetings, and the P.G.M. would find himself supported at the luncheon table more numerously than heretofore.

Yours fraternally,

E. S. M.

TESTIMONIAL TO BRO. W. J. HUGHAN.

An occurrence of a very interesting character to members of the Masonic fraternity took place at Liskeard on the 16th inst., when Bro. William James Hughan, of Truro, was presented with a testimonial by the St. Martin's Lodge, No. 510. Few members of the Craft are better known among Freemasons than Bro. Hughan; none, perhaps, are more respected. His researches into the early history of the Order have won for Bro. Hughan distinction, not only in the Grand Lodge of England, but generally amongst all English-speaking Masons; whilst his devotion to the Craft, and his labours on its behalf, are highly appreciated in the province with which he is more particularly connected. For many years past he has acted as one of the Stewards for the great Masonic charities, representing in that capacity the county of Cornwall, and as such he has displayed a faculty of organisation that has borne valuable fruit to his constituents. Instead of allowing the Cornish votes to be distributed over a number of candidates, he succeeded in inducing their holders to entrust them to his care, and thus the whole voting strength of the province has been brought to bear in support of the most deserving cases in the county. If at any time there has been no Cornish candidate for election to the benefits of a particular charity, Bro. Hughan has given his votes to another province on condition that he should have its support for some other charity for which he might require it. This plan has worked so well that a Cornish candidate supported by his province, small though it is, may almost be certain of success. Among those benefiting from Bro. Hughan's exertions have been a Past Master of St. Martin's Lodge, and the widow of another Past Master, who were some time since elected as annuitants of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; and it was in recognition of his labours on their behalf, and his good fame as a Mason, that the members resolved to pay Bro. Hughan the well-deserved honour which he has received from them. Associated with him in this testimony of gratitude was Bro. John Constable, P.M. of Lodge 185, a well-known London Mason, who rendered great assistance in the election of one of the annuitants.

The day's meeting was held in the handsome lodge room of St. Martin's, in the Masonic Hall, which is the property of the lodge, and which is quite an ornament to the town. The W.M. (Bro. John Beaglehole) presided, with the Senior Warden (Bro. William Nettle) and the Junior Warden (Bro. John Harris) in their respective chairs. Among the brethren also present were Bros. H. G. Colville, P.M. 330, P.P.S.G.W.; G. Kerswill, P.M. 970, P.P.J.G.W.; J. F. Childs, P.M. 510, P.G.R.; T. W. Chegwidden, P.M. 510, P.P.G.D.C.; T. White, P.M., P.P.G.S. of W.; R. A. Courtney, P.M., P.P.G.D.C.; W. Rowe, W.M. 330; J. Smith, W.M. 856; J. Rawling, W.M. 1071; H. Pole, W.M. 1164; G. Barnes, P.M. 1164, P.P.G.P.; W. Polkinghorne, P.M. 1151, P.G.S.; T. Lang, P.M. 510; R. Coath, P.M. 510; and R. E. K. Wilkinson, P.M. 767, P.G.R. Punjab. After the lodge had been opened the ballot was taken, and Bros. Hughan and Constable were unanimously elected honorary life members. Bro. Hughan was then introduced into the lodge by Bro. Courtney, the Secretary, and met with a very cordial reception. In informing Bro. Hughan of his election, the W.M. said he knew of no brother who deserved to be received more heartily, and that he looked upon it as a very great honour to have the names of Bros. Hughan and Constable on the books of the lodge. (Applause.)

Bro. Hughan, in returning thanks, remarked that he believed the honour of election as honorary member had been conferred upon him by about as many lodges as his age numbered years; but that as the youngest child was generally the pet, so his warmest sympathies would be with the lodge of which he had just become a member. He felt the honour very much indeed.

W. Bro. Chegwidden called attention to the presence of Capt. Colville, expressing regret at his approaching removal from the province, and bearing high testimony to his labours on behalf of the Order. In conclusion, he moved that the lodge should pass a vote, to be recorded in its minutes, recognising Bro. Colville's zeal for Masonry during his residence in Cornwall. This was seconded by W. Bro. Childs, and carried amidst much applause.

In the course of a feeling acknowledgment of the compliment, Capt. Colville said that whatever he might have done for Freemasonry was only that which every Mason ought to do. He held that no man ought to take the obligations of the Order without carrying them out. He could not leave the county after eighteen years' residence in it without many feelings of sincere and great regret. He had made many friends there, and believed that he had made no enemy; should unfortunately this not be the case he hoped that before he left Cornwall he would grasp the hand of the man who was his enemy, so that this stain might be wiped away. Capt. Colville concluded by congratulating Lodge St. Martin's on having done honour to a brother towards whom he had feelings of esteem and regard that he durst not express in his presence.

The lodge having been closed, the members and visitors proceeded to Webb's Hotel, where a cold collation had been laid. After the toast of "Queen and Craft," and that of "The Prince of Wales, Grand Master of the Order," Bro. Chegwidden proposed "The Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. Deputy Grand Master, and the Officers of the Grand Lodge of England."

Bro. Hughan, whose name had been coupled with the toast, replied, and in so doing referred with pride to the high position attained by Grand Lodge, which was the parent of some of the noblest charities under the sun. The progress of Freemasonry generally during the last 150 years far exceeded, he believed, that of any other society. One hundred and fifty years ago the number of lodges in England was about that now existing in Devon and Cornwall, and he estimated that throughout the world there were 2,000,000 Freemasons, whose lodges had an income of £5,000,000. But he felt that neither antiquity nor wealth would help them in their progress if they failed to realise the glorious principles which lay at the root and foundation of the Order. A society having for its principles not only the fatherhood of God but the brotherhood of man must succeed; if it did not it must be because something was wrong in the realisation of those principles.

Bro. Childs afterwards rose to make the presentation of the testimonial. He said they had met together to do honour to one to whom honour was due, and to whom their lodge, the whole Province of Cornwall, and the fraternity in every part of the world were deeply indebted. (Hear, hear.) Their Bro. Hughan was looked upon as one of the greatest living authorities on Freemasonry; he had done more for the Order than anyone living, and by his exertions he had considerably augmented the funds of the great Masonic charities. After referring to Bro. Hughan's management of the votes for the charities, the speaker remarked upon the scant acknowledgment it had received, and added that Bro. Hughan had worked nobly and steadily on with scarcely the thanks of the province to help him. (Hear, hear.) He fully acted up to the three grand principles which lay at the foundation of their Order—brotherly love, relief, and truth. (Loud applause.) The members of St. Martin's Lodge were deeply grateful and thankful to him. Sufficiently thank him they could not, but as a small token of their gratitude, they begged his acceptance of a purse of twenty-five guineas—(renewed and long-continued applause)—and hoped that that would be the forerunner of a much larger and suitable acknowledgment from the province. (Applause.) Mr. Childs then read the following address, accompanying the purse, subscriptions for which, it may be added, were confined to the members of St. Martin's Lodge:—

To the Right Worshipful Bro. William James Hughan, P.M. 131, Truro, P.S.G.D. of England, P.S.G. Warden of Egypt.

We, the undersigned members of St. Martin's Lodge, No. 510, of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Liskeard, desiring to express to you our gratitude for, and our appreciation of, the valuable services rendered by you to the Craft, but more especially to our own lodge, by your successful efforts to secure the election of our Senior Past Master and the widow of a Past Master of our lodge as annuitants of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, London, request your acceptance of the accompanying purse of twenty-five guineas as a slight acknowledgment of those services.

Dated this 16th day of July, 1878. A.L. 5878.

[Here follow the names of fifty subscribers.]

At a regular meeting of the St. Martin's Lodge, No. 510, held on the 16th day of July, 1878, A.L. 5878, at the Masonic Hall, Parade, Liskeard, the Right Worshipful Bro. William James Hughan, P.M. 131, &c., &c., was unanimously elected an honorary life member of the lodge, in appreciation of the valuable services rendered by him to the lodge.

JOHN BEAGLEHOLE, W.M.

W. NETTLE, S.W.

JOHN HARRIS, J.W.

R. A. COURTNEY, P.M., Secretary.

The reading of the address was followed by loud cheers.

Bro. Hughan, in returning thanks, said he had never felt so pleased at anything he had done in his Masonic career as he had that evening. There were several reasons for this, and one was that to whomsoever he had spoken on the subject he had been told that the annuitants to whom reference had been made were fully deserving of the benefits of the charity. He felt that they were just commencing in the province of Cornwall to take their proper position with regard to the great Masonic charities, but what they had done for them was nothing to what they ought to do. During the ten years he had had the management of the votes of the province they had received in Cornwall something like £6000 or £7000 from those charities, and he was glad to find that there had been a generous response made to the appeal on their behalf by the Provincial Grand Master, the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, the contributions of the province amounting to £560. The speaker afterwards spoke of the large sums expended in charity by the Order, and concluded amidst renewed applause.

The toasts of the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, Grand Master, and the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, the Visitors, and the Masters of Lodge St. Martin followed.

Letters expressing regret at inability to attend were read from the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, Sir F. M. Williams, M.P.; and Bros. William Tweedy, P.G. Treas.; E. T. Carlyon, P.G.S.; T. C. Stephens, P.J.G.W.; and R. John, P.G. Assist. Sec.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SUFFOLK.

In compliment, it is to be presumed, to a juvenile lodge, the Suffolk Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons held its annual meeting, on Tuesday, the 9th inst., under the banner of the Lodge of St. Andrew's, at Gorkston. Every arrangement that could possibly be devised to give éclat to the event and show their sense of appreciation of the honour conferred on the locality was made by the Worshipful Master of the St. Andrew's Lodge, Bro. E. P. Youell, and the successful result of the day's proceedings entitle him to the thanks of the brethren of the district for having creditably acquitted itself, and of the brethren of the entire province for the preparations for their comfort in accomplishing a long programme of Masonic duties. St. Andrew's Hall has not an imposing exterior, architecturally speaking, and is situated in a locality where the juvenile element abounds to a degree which speaks volumes for the healthiness of the district. The approach to the building could not be improved, but all the care and taste of the decorator's art were lavished upon the interior, and under the guidance of the committee specially appointed for the purpose, consisting of Bros. Youell, Major Dods, Messrs. Cockrell, J. Hammond, J. Fiske, and J. T. Arnott, a coup d'œil was achieved which must have been as satisfactory to those who accomplished it as it was to those who merely visited it. In addition to the usual upholstery of a Freemason's lodge, a handsome dais was constructed, covered with crimson cloth and festooned with beautifully white and delicate-looking drapery. Around the side of the dais some choice plants were arranged, whose foliage contrasted well with the blue, white, and crimson surroundings. Conspicuous amongst the banners on the walls was that of St. Andrew's, 1631; and that of the Provincial Grand Master (with its motto, "Loyal au Mort").

The Lodge of St. Andrew's was opened about one o'clock, when the W.M., Bro. Youell, presided. Presently the brethren, numbering about 150, were called upon to receive with fitting honours the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Waveney, and the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk. As the brethren of the Provincial Grand Lodge entered, the Organist played some appropriate music, and they were conducted to their proper positions on the dais. The R.W.P. Grand Master, Lord Waveney, after cordially shaking hands with the Worshipful Master, Bro. E. P. Youell, took the chair. Amongst those on the dais were the V.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain of England; Bro. Terry, P.G.D.C., Herts., Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution; the Provincial Grand Chaplain, and several past and Present Prov. G. Officers from the Province of Norfolk. Bro. W. H. Lucia, Grand Sword Bearer of England, was in his place as Prov. G. Sec., Bro. E. P. Youell, occupied the position of Senior Grand Warden, and Bro. W. Boby, P.P.G. S.W., P.M. 114, that of Junior Grand Warden; Bro. Armstrong, P.P.G.S.D., as acting Senior Deacon; Bro. Wrightson, Junior Deacon, Bro. W. Whitmore, Pursuivant. Amongst the brethren present were also the following, P. Whitehead; P. Byford; T. J. Wentworth; W. G. Cunnold; Geo. Abbott, P.G.S.B.; R. Lenton; W. Daking; A. A. Bennett; T. Hanson; W. Wilmshurst, P.P.G.S.B.; Robert Clark, P.M.; Geo. Hall; J. A. Fisk; W. W. Walesby, P.P.G.S.W.; W. B. Jeffries, P.G.S.; W. E. Smith; H. R. Campling; F. W. Tewson; James Bond, P.G.G.P.; W. Stenbridge; J. G. Churchyard; A. L. Woodward; H. Sparrow; Chas. Nunn; G. Roper; J. M. Hervey; W. W. Bird; J. Marjoram; W. C. Randall, P.P.G.P.; W. Dods, P.G.S.W.; J. Makin; Jos. Shepherd; John Gohner; Alfred Cracknell; Thos. Newman, P.P.G.P.; F. S. Ballard; J. I. Clarke; H. Smith; E. J. Bonfellow, P.G.A.D.C.; J. S. Cockesedge; H. E. Rowe; W. Whitmore; Robert Baker; H. A. The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened with prayer by the Prov. Grand Chaplain, the Rev. J. T. Hassall,

The Prov. Grand Master proposed, and the Deputy Prov. Grand Master seconded, that the minutes be taken as read, and this was agreed to. The minutes were then confirmed.

Representatives from the several lodges in the Province reported on the condition of the lodges respectively.

Bro. Strathern called attention to an omission in the minutes with reference to the report of the Provincial Grand Secretary, as to what constituted a Provincial Grand Lodge. Past Masters were omitted. He also called attention to the desirability of registering the names of members of the Provincial Grand Lodge.

The P.G. Secretary explained that with regard to the first point it was purely an accidental omission; and with regard to the other matter, that relating to the registration, while he perfectly agreed with the remarks of Bro. Strathern that such a book ought to be in existence, such a book could not be kept unless returns were sent to him regularly and properly. (Hear, hear.) Notices of removals and deaths should be sent to him at once. (Hear, hear.)

The P.G. Master remarked that the forms prepared by the P.G. Secretary provided for the fullest information, and it was the members' own fault if that information was not supplied. He thought the brethren would agree with him that the Provincial Grand Secretary had shown a minuteness of attention in preparing returns that was beyond all praise—(hear, hear)—and he would avail himself of the authority with which they had invested him to direct that such a book be prepared, and that it should be a permanent record in the nature of a ledger, which should be serviceable for some years to come. (Hear, hear.)

On the suggestion of Bro. Strathern, Masters of lodges were rendered eligible to attend, and in their absence appoint a Past Master to attend.

The Provincial Grand Master congratulated the Provincial Grand Lodge on the solicitude that the Board of General Purposes had shown for the honour and integrity of the Masonic body, and agreed in the importance of having the fullest enquiry made into the antecedents of applicants for the honour of being admitted to Freemasonry, especially when individuals, after being black-balled in one locality, sought election in another. In all these matters, however, they must show a spirit of brotherly forbearance. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Strathern again brought before the Provincial Grand Lodge the scheme of centralising the voting power of the province for elections for Masonic charities in a committee. Since the meeting last year at Halesleigh the matter had been discussed at a meeting at Ipswich, and after entering fully into the question, he had decided to bring forward the following motion, which he thought, from its permissive character, would reconcile the views of all parties: "That in order to prevent, as is often the case, a waste of votes from the brethren of the lodge of candidates for Masonic charities in this province, a committee be appointed to conduct the election of such candidates, such committee to consist of the Provincial Grand Master, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, the Provincial Grand Wardens, and the Secretary, ex-officio, and a member appointed by each lodge in the province; and that it be a recommendation to the Provincial Grand Lodge that the several lodges and such committee, by giving the votes of their members when not otherwise engaged, and that they avail themselves of this committee when they deem it advisable."

Bro. T. F. Lucia said when they met at Ipswich time would not allow this question to be gone into; he, therefore, thought that the committee should again be called together, and that it would not be right to receive the proposition of a single member of the committee, instead of a recommendation from the whole of the brethren appointed for that purpose. (Hear, hear.)

The resolution was supported by the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, who bore testimony to the difficulty experienced in securing the election of a candidate from the Province of Suffolk to either of the Masonic charities. If they had a central committee in whom was vested the power of using all the votes in the province, they could by a reciprocal arrangement assist in the election of candidates in other provinces, and when occasion required there would be a similar amount of support given in return to the province. Until, however, they had the sanction of the Prov. Grand Lodge to such an arrangement they could make no premises of support to other Provincial Grand Lodges, and they could never rely with any certainty on the chance of securing the election of any of their own candidates. He asked them to make it compulsory, although some people might kick against it and say, "We have paid our money, and we have a right to vote just as we like;" but he was sure that until they had such an organisation they could not utilise their voting power as they might under the circumstances be proposed. The voting power in Suffolk had been very greatly increased. Last night the list for the province of Suffolk reached £125, which he thought was no mean sum for the province to send up, and in future years that would no doubt be considerably increased, because in the past few years the voting power in Suffolk had doubled, trebled, and quadrupled. It was therefore an important matter that those votes should not be scattered, but be gathered together as far as possible. (Hear, hear.) He did not wish in any way to bring forward his own views in opposition to the views of the Grand Lodge, but he apprehended that, after the long discussion which had taken place at Ipswich, they should be no nearer a settlement of the question two years hence than they were now, and he therefore advised the adoption of Bro. Strathern's motion.

Bro. W. Whitmore, P.G.P., seconded the proposition.

The motion was then carried.

The Prov. Grand Master then proceeded to invest his officers for the year, and said that, in the exercise of his prerogative, he had resolved in future the term of office in Prov. Grand Lodge should be one year only, instead of two as previously. In the absence of the Senior and Junior Grand Wardens, the appointment of their successors was not proceeded with. The P.G.M., however, invested Bro. Youell as Senior G.W. designate. In appointing the Rev. W. Bird, of Framlingham College, to the office of Chaplain, he remarked that he for one knew how anxiously and steadily his labours had been given to the young men of this province, and he was sure that what he had done for the young men he would continue to do the old men, and he had great pleasure in showing the confidence he placed in him by appointing him Provincial Grand Chaplain. Bro. Wheeler, of Lodge 1224, was appointed Registrar; Bro. George Cooper, of Lodge 71, Supt. of Works; Bro. Campling, of Lodge 929, Deputy Director of Ceremonies; Bro. Huddleston was unanimously elected Prov. Grand Treasurer; and Bro. Syer, Tyler.

The R.W.P.G.M. said he had pleasure in re-appointing as Prov. Grand Secretary for the year Bro. W. H. Lucia, to exercise those duties which he had satisfactorily discharged for so many years to the Prov. Grand Lodge of Suffolk. (Applause.)

Bro. W. H. Lucia having thanked the P.G.M., the following were appointed as Stewards: Bro. C. F. Brown, Doric Lodge; Bro. Woodward, Adair; and Bro. Cracknell, Hantsmore.

The P.G.M., in highly complimentary terms, re-appointed Bro. Clark as Director of Ceremonies. (Applause.)

The brethren, who were attired in full Masonic costume, and who excited considerable interest among the large number of spectators, then proceeded to Gorleston Church. (The church is in process of a much-needed restoration, and in this work Bro. Youell has taken the greatest interest.)

The Vicar, the Rev. G. W. Tomkins, read the prayers, and the Rev. M. Whitehead the lessons. Bro. Bailey was most polite and attentive in his capacity as churchwarden. Bro. Bray presided at the organ. The hymns used were of an appropriate character.

The P.G. Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. W. W. Bird, Master of Framlingham College, preached an excellent sermon from the text, "He that loveth another hath fulfilled the law." The collections amounted to £9 11s. 8d.

In leaving the church, the brethren re-formed their procession and returned to the lodge-room, where the R.W. Bro. Lord Waveney delivered an eloquent oration on the principles of Freemasonry, prefacing his observations by desiring that the offertory at the church should be placed in the hands of the Worshipful Master of St. Andrew's Lodge, partly for the restoration of the church, and partly for the purposes of charity in such manner as he might deem suitable.

The Deputy Prov. Grand Master conveyed the regret of Lord Henniker in being unable to be present, and said he was asked the previous evening by the Prov. Grand Master of Norfolk, Lord Suffield, to make a similar apology, and express his lordship's hope that the proceedings would be of a satisfactory character. (Applause.)

The Senior Grand Provincial Warden, Bro. Youell, returned thanks to the Grand Master for placing the proceedings of the offertory at his disposal.

The P.G. Master, in his address, recapitulated what had occurred in the past year, and then expressed their hopes for future. He was happy to find there was such a good feeling existing between this and the neighbouring Provinces of Norfolk and Essex. (Hear, hear.) They had not forgotten the kind way they were received in the neighbouring city of Norwich on the occasion of the Grand Master of England being present. (Applause.) Those events should never fade from their memory. (Applause.)

Under the presidency of Lord Waveney the brethren sat down to an elegant banquet in a marquee on Bro. Youell's lawn. Willing hands had also been at work here, and the result was that the floral decorations were really very beautiful.

The noble Chairman, in introducing the toasts, said that, under present circumstances, if they could not act purely Masonic they could be loyal. He therefore, in giving the toast of "The Queen," finished with cheers.

Then came "The Health of the Grand Master of England," of whom his lordship spoke in the highest terms, and whose name was received with rounds of applause.

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master, in proposing "The Health of the Grand Officers," said Lord Skelmersdale was always ready to come down to Suffolk to do anything in his power to promote the interests of the Craft. On Wednesday he would be at Clacton-on-Sea to inaugurate the Lieboat there. (Applause.) He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. P.M. Lucia, Grand Sword Bearer of England. (Cheers.)

The toast was most heartily received.

The Worshipful P.G.S.B. of England, Bro. Lucia, returned thanks for the kind way in which the toast had been proposed, and the heartiness with which the brethren had received it. Unlike the Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, he was able to be present, and was very happy to have the honour of returning thanks on behalf of the Officers of the Grand Lodge of England. (Cheers.)

The V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G. Chaplain of England, said he was only too delighted to have such an excellent confere as Bro. Lucia to respond for the Provincial Grand Officers. One of the greatest privileges belonging to the position of a Grand Officer was that of proposing "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master," who ruled over the province. (Hear, hear.) There was no man in England holding the position that he (Bro. Martyn) held with such a Provincial Grand Master as he had the honour to be associated with. (Applause.) He had the pleasure of proposing, and he asked them to drink it with all cordiality "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Waveney." (Cheers.) We all know (he said) how in every relation of life our W. Master shines, and it would be superfluous in me to say further in introducing the toast to your approval. (Cheers.) I may mention, however, that I notice on the card that the song to the toast is "Love's Request." Let it be love's request that you drink this toast. (Much cheering.)

The Provincial Grand Master, in response, said he felt quite sure that the discipline and admirable arrangements for which this Grand Lodge was noted were never more fully discernable than on the present occasion, as was proved by the fact of their drinking his health in a lodge that was not close tyled. He felt particularly fortunate in having so excellent a Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and he felt confident he should always be able to concur in whatever was done by Bro. Martyn in his absence. (Hear, hear.) He assured them his work was both easy and pleasant, and he thanked them for the honour they had done him that day. (Applause.) Rising shortly afterwards, his lordship said the toast he was about to give them was that of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master. (Cheers.) He would say nothing of the advantage it was to himself to have such assistance, but he might be permitted to say that it was of signal advantage in working the province of Suffolk to have such assistance granted to such a lodge at the shortest notice. (Hear, hear.) The Deputy Provincial Grand Master was always accessible either by letter or in person on any contingency that might arise, and he was a man who was looked up to as one who was experienced in the Craft. (Hear, hear.) He gave "The Health of the Very Worshipful the Deputy Provincial Grand Master," and he trusted he might be as acceptable to them as he was to him. (Applause.)

The Deputy Provincial Grand Master, when the cheering had subsided, said he had at all times received so many marks of kind favour from the Provincial Grand Master that he hardly knew the way to thank him sufficiently for the kind sentiments he had expressed. (Hear, hear.) Anything connected with Freemasonry was to him a labour of love, but it fell to the lot of very few men to have their own peculiar hobby honoured as his own hobby had been; but it so happened that he had succeeded more in Masonry than his most sanguine expectations had looked forward to, and this he attributed to God's great goodness to him, and to the kind forbearance shown towards him in his many shortcomings. He thanked them most heartily for the kind way in which they had received the toast proposed by the Provincial Grand Master. (Hear, hear.) The Grand Master had said he trusted him, and he (Bro. Martyn) hoped and trusted that that trust had not in any way been misplaced. (Cheers.) Such were his feelings towards him, and he believed they were those of all the members of the province. (Applause.) Their Provincial Grand Master had just completed his 50th year of Freemasonry, and he would tell them that he had never regretted having joined it from the first down to the present day. (Cheers.)

The Rev. W. W. Bird, Chaplain, in responding to the toast of his health, said he was not a little surprised when he received a letter appointing him to the Chaplaincy of their lodge. The more he saw and heard of Freemasonry the more he was convinced that it was worthy of every support from them. He was sometimes asked what was the use of Freemasonry, and his answer was, "If I am not a better man the fault is my own; the fault is not in the system." (Applause.) Freemasonry was based upon the strictest principles of morality, and rested on the soundest of bases—the volume of the Sacred Law. It was a wheel within a wheel, and he most firmly believed that those beautiful and solemn ceremonies, which had been heard or joined in by every brother, must sooner or later produce a wholesome effect. (Applause.)

The Provincial Grand Master, in complimentary terms, proposed "The Worshipful Master of St. Andrew's Lodge." (Long continued cheering.) The hospitality which was associated with the name of St. Andrew's was as well known many degrees to the south of the county in which he lived. (Hear, hear.) The question had been raised whether the figure of St. Andrew should be placed before or behind the cross, but wherever St. Andrew's cross was seen, whether it floated from the great keep of Edinburgh or from an English castle, it was respected and honoured. (Applause.) The privacy of Bro. Youell's beautiful home had been broken in upon by friends, and they all knew how well he had received them, and honoured their visit by ensuring their reception in that great and noble church, which, like the other churches in this country, was a beacon of safety, not only to the landsman but to the mariner on the deep. (Applause.)

The toast was very heartily received and responded to by the W.M. in appropriate terms.

At this stage of the proceedings Lord Waveney was compelled to leave, and the chair was most ably filled during the remainder of the evening by the D.P.G.M., Bro. Martyn.

The other toasts of the evening were "The Officers of St. Andrew's Lodge," "The Masonic Charities," proposed by Bro. Strathern in a lengthy speech, and which was admirably responded to by Bro. James Terry; "The W. Masters of the Lodges in the Province," proposed by the Chairman, and responded to by Bro. T. F. Lucia; "The Prov. Grand Secretary," by the Chairman, in a very humorous and complimentary speech; and that of "The Ladies" exhausted the toast list.

We cannot close this report without expressing, on behalf of all who were present, the warmest acknowledgments to Bro. Youell for his brotherly and generous reception. All that could be done was done by him and Mrs. Youell and family, and we are sure that such kind efforts will not soon, if ever, be forgotten. Thanks are also due to Bro. and Mrs. Franklin for the admirable manner in which, although so far from head quarters, the entire arrangements of the banquet were carried out.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OF THE LODGE OF FIDELITY, No. 3.

Again we have the pleasure of narrating the annual excursion of the members and friends of the Lodge of Fidelity, and, long as this lodge has been established, as shown by its noble order of precedence in the Masonic list, we will venture to assert, at the outset, that the day has never been surpassed either in the brilliancy of the gathering, the beauty that adorned it, or the pleasure which attended it in its train. The festival was, indeed, not only worthy of the lodge which organised it, but also of the city in which the renowned Dick Whittington was chief magistrate.

The enjoyment of all, too, was no doubt enhanced by the weather which prevailed. It was almost disappointingly fine, for, early in the morning and up to eleven o'clock threatening clouds swept through the murky horizon, and at that hour one could only hope against hope that the weather god would be propitious. So much of the success of such a fête—an al fresco entertainment—depends on the kind of weather that prevails that it is almost absolutely essential that a fine day should be a factor to ensure a satisfactory result; and though we did not see "the sun spring dancing through the gates of day," shedding a stream of glory all around, still we had at intervals a gleam of his ethereal splendours, lighting up the gay landscapes, and "hurling his bright beams o'er the proud hills," as we slowly pursued our way over the once sweet and "silvery Thames," endeared to us by the memories of the past.

"Punctual as lovers to the moment sworn," we "hove anchor" at Kew Bridge at twelve o'clock, and the famed "Maria Wood" never bore a lovelier burden or a more hopeful band. Onwards, aided by the tide, and harnessed to half-a-dozen proud steeds, flew our gallant barque, as if proud of its charge. The watchful pilot stood at the helm—all eye, all ear, while his satellites stood attentive to his call. As we leave the old bridge the strains of music burst upon our senses, and the call to the dance is eagerly responded to by maiden fair and gay cavalier, who "exhibit that sense of the graceful which is one of the higher faculties of our nature." Well might an admirer of the "fair" (and who is not?) muse with Suckling,

"Her feet beneath her petticoat,
Like little mice, stole in and out,
As if they feared the light;
And oh! she dances such a way
No sun upon an Eastern day
Is half so fair a sight."

Faithful to the traditions of the past, the band (Edward's military) as we approached Richmond struck up the favorite ballad of "The Lass of Richmond Hill," a compliment not unnoticed nor unappreciated by the spectators on the banks. "With stately step, and slow" we continue our journey till we reach Pope's Cottage, at Twickenham opposite which we cast anchor and moor for dinner. A splendid repast is served, after which a few toasts are given.

It would be impossible amongst any company of Englishmen with the slightest pretensions to loyalty, particularly amongst an assembly of gentlemen so chivalrously loyal as are all Freemasons, to omit rendering due honour to the throne of these realms. "The Health of Her Majesty the Queen" was, therefore, most appropriately proposed by the W.M. of the lodge, Bro. George Cordwell, the Chairman of the dinner, who also, in happy terms, gave "The Health of the Prince of Wales," alluding to the Prince's devotion to all questions calculated to advance the principles of Freemasonry, and to the love and respect entertained by every member of the Craft towards not only His Royal Highness, but to every member of the Royal family. The toasts elicited the warmest greetings, and were followed by the singing of the National Anthem, first as a solo by a lady volunteer, who sang it in capital style, and subsequently by the whole company in chorus.

Bro. Dearsley, P.M., next proposed "The Lodge of Fidelity," coupled with the name of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Cordwell, and feelingly alluding to the many years of uninterrupted friendship that had subsisted between them. He congratulated the Worshipful Master on the numerous array of beauty and worth which graced the annual excursion of the lodge on the present occasion, and naively intimated that the W.M., though a widower, was far from being in the "sere and yellow leaf." Reciprocal compliments were paid by the Chairman to his old friend, Bro. Dearsley, and reference was made to the long friendship—upwards of twenty years—which had prevailed between them. The W.M. also assured his Masonic brethren that he should never fail in his interest to the lodge, nor in his endeavours to promote the interests of the Craft. Alluding to Bro. Dearsley's compliment to the ladies, the Chairman gallantly remarked that he felt that the present company was worthy of the Lodge of Fidelity, but a prince might be flattered with having such a galaxy of beauty around him. Only one other toast was proposed, that of "The Ladies," which was given by the Chairman and duly acknowledged.

Dancing was then resumed, and the barge left her moorings at Twickenham at five o'clock. The return journey was devoted to the "poesy of corporeal motion" with the same vigour as the onward journey had been, and Kew Bridge was reached once more, after a couple of hours spent in the most exhilarating manner, conscious only of the flight of time by its loss. Here we remained for upwards of an hour, anchored in mid-stream, and still pursuing the same pleasurable occupation which had engrossed our attention throughout the day, and during which there was no sign of abatement, nor the least flagging in the general harmony which prevailed throughout. "The thousand hopes," indeed, with which we had sallied forth, "unspeakable for brightness," had been more than realised, and none could have for one moment regretted having determined in the first blush of morning to run the risk of the frowning weather which seemed as if it would destroy all the hopes which had been formed.

We must not conclude our account of this happy day's meeting without acknowledging the assiduity and polite attentions of Bro. J. W. Squire, who ably occupied the important post of M.C., nor of the willing services of other members of the lodge, all of whom were unremitting in their efforts to make the day, that which it proved to be, a crowning success to all, and not merely that, but one of those enduring monuments of pleasure which can never pass away whilst any of those who participated in it shall continue to enjoy this "pleasing, anxious state of being."

The company present was larger this year than it was in 1876 or in 1877. In the first-named year it numbered 105; in 1877, 110; and on Thursday last, 120; whilst it was known that several others were absent on this occasion on account of the threatening aspect of the weather, so that, as the pleasing gatherings are becoming decidedly more appreciated every year, we may hope, in 1879, to see a still more numerous assembly than any preceding year has witnessed.

Amongst the company we noticed the W.M. of the Lodge of Fidelity, Bro. Cordwell, Bros. H. Dearsley, P.M., Treas.; J. Squire, P.M., Sec.; J. W. Squire, M.C.; Macnamara and Miss Macnamara, A. Yates and wife, Savafter and wife, Medcalf and wife, H. West and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, Bros. Iron and wife, B. Hart and Miss Hart, Mr. Ladbroke, Mr. J. Larkin and wife, Miss R. Scoones, Bro. C. Saunders, Lodge of Economy, Miss L. Sydney, Miss Oliver Fardell, Mr. and Miss Radcliffe (Virginia Water), and others.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASONS OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master of the above Province, the Rev. Bro. G. R. Portal, M.A., with his officers, honoured the Aldershot Mark Lodge, No. 54, by holding their annual meeting at the Assembly Rooms, Aldershot, on Wednesday, 10th July, 1878.

The lodge was closed tiled at 2.30 p.m., when there were present:—The R.W. and Rev. Bro. G. R. Portal, M.A., in the chair; V.W. Bro. W. Hickman, D. Prov. G.M.; V.W. and Rev. Bro. Johnson, No. 17, Prov. G. Chaplain; V.W. Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre, Prov. G. Sec.; W. Bro. R. Eve, No. 54, Prov. S.G.W.; W. Bro. Groves, No. 17, Prov. G. J.W.; W. Bro. Harrison, No. 62, Prov. G.D.; W. Bro. Osborne, No. 17, Prov. G.D.; W. Bro. Payne, No. 2, Prov. G.S.B.; W. Bro. T. J. Pulley, No. 54, Prov. G. Dir. of Cers.; Bros. Hacker, Gold, Adnett, Douglas, Benham, Nichols, Westall, Dormor, Bruce, Ellis, White, and others of Lodge 54.

After the ordinary business of the lodge, the R.W. Prov. G. Master invested his officers for the ensuing twelve months as follows:—Bros. Hickman, D. Prov. G.M.; Everard, No. 17, Prov. S.G.W.; Henry Hacker, No. 54, Prov. J.G.W.; Rev. Johnson, No. 17, Prov. G. Chaplain; J. Lillywhite, No. 17, Prov. Grand Treas.; J. E. Le Feuvre, No. 63, Prov. G. Sec.; Thos. Benham, No. 54, Prov. S.G. D.; Osborne, No. 17, Prov. J.G.D.; Douglas, No. 54, Prov. G.M.O.; Payne, No. 2, Prov. G.S.O.; Harrison, No. 62, Prov. G.J.O.; Cole, No. 54, Prov. G.I. of W.; McKenzie, No. 54, Prov. G.A. Dir. of Cers.; Askham, No. 54, Prov. G.I.G.

The business of the Provincial Grand Lodge being over, it was closed in due form after solemn prayer.

The brethren then retired to an excellent banquet, which was provided at the Wellington Hotel, and served in the recherche style for which that hotel is noted.

After the usual loyal toasts had been proposed and drank with the enthusiasm which characterises Freemasons, the Prov. Grand Master expressed the great satisfaction he experienced in complimenting the Masters and Wardens and members of the Aldershot Lodge upon having made during the past two years greater progress than any other lodge in the province.

The Prov. Grand Master then proposed "The Health of the Provincial Officers," which was responded to by W. Bro. Hickman and Bro. Eve, who stated that it afforded the brethren of the Aldershot Lodge much pleasure in having the honour to entertain the members of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and still more to hear the complimentary terms in which the R.W. Prov. Grand Master had been pleased to speak of their efforts to promote the best interests of Freemasonry in this district, and that he might depend that what had been done in the past was an earnest of zeal in the future.

The Deputy Prov. Grand Master then proposed "The Health of the Master, Wardens, and Members of the Aldershot Lodge."

Bro. Hacker, in the absence of the W.M., responded, and thanked the Provincial Grand Master for the honour done the lodge in appointing Aldershot for the meeting this year, and also in selecting members of that lodge for his officers.

After some excellent songs by Bros. Eve, Adnett, White, and Hacker, the brethren left at an early hour.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND AND THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC.

The following has been sent us from Quebec, which we publish, of course, with all reserve:—

PROCLAMATION.

To all brethren in obedience to the M.W. the Grand Lodge of Quebec Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons.

Whereas, the Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons of Scotland has granted warrants to form two lodges of Masons at Montreal, in the province of Quebec, one to be called "King Solomon, No. 622," and the other "Argyle, No. 625." And

Whereas, it has been officially announced that the said lodges are to be erected, constituted, and consecrated by virtue of such warrants, and their officers to be installed on the twenty-fourth day of June, instant. And

Whereas, by such action, the Grand Lodge of Scotland has unjustifiably and unlawfully invaded the territory and jurisdiction of "The Grand Lodge of Quebec Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons," in violation of the laws and traditions of the fraternity affecting the establishment and sovereignty of Grand Lodges, and in a manner calculated to interfere most seriously with the welfare and harmony of the Craft in the said Province. And

Whereas, such action on the part of the Grand Lodge of Scotland has occurred after unconditional recognition by her of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, as having and exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in said Province, which recognition she subsequently withdrew without just or lawful cause.

Be it therefore known unto you all, that in vindication of the sovereignty of "The Grand Lodge of Quebec Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons," and of the inherent rights and prerogatives of our ancient, honourable, and loyal fraternity, and in justice to all those Grand Lodges whose recognition has been extended to her;—I therefore, in virtue of the authority vested in me as Grand Master of "The Grand Lodge of Quebec Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons," declare and proclaim that the action of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, in granting said two warrants, was and is unfraternal and unconstitutional; that said warrants are irregular and illegal; that the lodges to be formed thereunder will be irregular and illegal lodges; that all Masons named in said warrants are now, and all persons becoming members of said lodges will be, irregular Masons; and I hereby further declare and proclaim all Masonic intercourse to be suspended, and to cease between this Grand Lodge, its subordinate lodges, and all brethren in obedience thereto, and the G. L. of Scotland, and all lodges and brethren in obedience thereto; and all brethren of the G. L. of Quebec are hereby commanded to hold no Masonic intercourse with any brother in obedience to the said G. L. of Scotland, as far as ancient Craft Masonry is concerned; and this edict shall be and remain in full force and effect until revoked by the Grand Master or the Grand Lodge of Quebec;—and it is hereby further ordered that due proclamation of this edict be made to all brethren in obedience to this Grand Lodge, of all which they will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly; and also that the same be communicated to all regular Grand Lodges throughout the world.

Witness my hand and the seal of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, at Montreal, Province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada, this 21st day of June, A. L. 5878.

MELBOURNE M. TAIT,
Grand Master.
JOHN H. ISAACSON,
Grand Sec. G. L. of Q.

THE VISIT OF OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER AND THE PRINCESS OF WALES TO THE LONDON HOSPITAL.

The following graphic account from the Times of Tuesday of the visit of our Royal Grand Master and his amiable and gentle consort to the London Hospital on Monday, July 22nd, (the Prince only having arrived from Paris early on Monday morning), will be read with pleasure by our numerous readers. No words of ours can enhance the touching simplicity of the little tale nor of the kindness and warmheartedness of the Royal visitors.

The Prince and Princess proceeded from the Committee-room to the Buxton ward in the Alexandra wing, where there are 20 little cots for children seven years old and under. The ward was decked with flowers, and the children were amusing themselves with toys. The Prince and Princess went straight to the cot which had been occupied by Katie Ambler, the little girl to whom a few words of the Queen, on her memorable visit, seemed to bring speedy recovery. A child two years old, suffering from dropsy, lies there now, and next to it a sick baby of five months. The distinguished visitors made many minute inquiries about the patients in the several wards. Mr. Hutchinson, the surgeon, and the Sisters who direct the nursing (there are 27 head nurses, 127 under-nurses and probationers, as well as 70 male and female servants in the hospital), were continually called upon to give them practical information. In the Gloucester accident ward, which was visited after the Alexandra wing, there are 64 beds for men and boys suffering from the effect of accidents. William Henry, Duke of Gloucester, was president of the hospital from 1767 to 1805, and was succeeded in 1805 by William Frederick, Duke of Gloucester. The Albert ward is one of this group. It was named in 1842 after the late Prince Consort. Here a dock labourer, who broke both arms in falling down a ship's hold, men with compound fractures of the leg, &c., and with their legs in cradles, were typical cases. Much sympathy was expressed with the dock labourer (Robert Thorn) by both Prince and Princess. In the Cambridge ward, named in 1842 after the late Duke, lay a railway porter, Frederick Lobb, whose arm had been amputated. He was shutting the door of a railway carriage, when he stumbled over a parcel on the platform, and his arm went down between carriage and platform. In one of these wards was a man whose head had been lacerated and was bandaged, but he pushed the bandage off his eyes to see the Prince and Princess, and was eager afterwards to tell how the Prince stopped and asked how he was. Opposite him was an engineer, on whom an iron shaft fell as he was working in a cellar, who was equally anxious to speak of the notice of the Princess. The next man could repeat her exact words, "I see you are getting better; you are up;" but others reported her speeches with the freedom with which Dr. Johnson would transcribe the proceedings of the House of Commons, and expressed the sense of the gracious Princess's words in the grammar and dialect of Whitechapel. Through the Beatrice ward the Royal party entered the sun-lit and well-ventilated apartment in the Grocers' wing to which Her Majesty the Queen in 1876 gave the title of the Victoria ward. Here, as in the ward called by the name of Princess Beatrice, were young children who had scalded or burnt themselves, fallen over hearth-rugs, or rolled into danger from the arms of sisters a little bigger than themselves. The surgical cases of children were also here, and in more than one instance a mother sat beside her little one. The Royal party went upstairs to the Rachael ward, so called after Mrs. T. Fowell Buxton, in which the Sister, a French lady, was able to speak with the greater freedom of her patients because she conversed in French with their Royal Highnesses. Typhoid, atrophy, Bright's disease, glandular disease, phthisis, St. Vitus's dance, had filled the wards on the first floor with pallid girls, one of whom held a rose in her hand; another was comforted by being allowed to nurse a pet cat; most looked up brightly, very grateful for the sympathetic smile which was never wanting from the Princess. "It was worth lying here to see that," said one after her Royal Highness had passed on. In this manner the tour was made of the Sophia, Augusta, Granby, and Princess Royal wards, where much, of course, that was painful had to be seen by the Princess. In the Mary ward was an Indian girl from the foot of the Himalayas, who had married an English soldier and was now being treated by the charity of a hospital which is open as freely to the dark-skinned as to the fair-haired subjects of the Empire. Through the Charlotte ward the Prince and Princess passed into the Victor ward, named after their own child. They went back into the Committee-room, where the mallet is still preserved which was used by them in laying the first stone of the Alexandra wing. It was carved out of a white thorn which grew upon the spot.

The Prince and Princess drove away from the hospital amid cheers, after a full hour spent in laborious examination of its details, and after the Prince had written in the visitors' book the opinion we have already quoted. His Royal Highness further desired Sir Dighton Probyn to inform Mr. Barclay that he was exceedingly pleased with his visit and was sorry that he was unable to see more of the building.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. C. JOLLY.

On Saturday evening, the 13th inst., Bro. C. Jolly was presented with a handsome silver claret cup and a cheque for £5 10 0, subscribed for by the Freemasons of the Woolwich district, as a recognition of his services as reporter to the Freemason.

The meeting took place at Bro. G. Beaver's, the Fortune of War, and was a most enjoyable affair.

Bro. W. T. Vincent, P.M. 913, was voted to the chair, and made the presentation in the following terms:—We meet to-night for the purpose of recognising the merits of one well-known and much esteemed both in and out of the Craft. It is unnecessary that I should sound his praises or even record his attributes. We have in our Bro. Charles Jolly a man with a warm and generous heart, a genial soul, and a good conscience. We have seen in his writings the genius and the instincts of the true poet. We have listened to his eloquence, and we have all admired, and some of us envied, the sterling talents which, if fate and fortune had been more favourable, would have placed the name of Bro. Charles Jolly high among the honoured of the land. (Applause.) However, it is in a special sense that we meet our Bro. Jolly to-night. Among his many avocations and amusements he has for some years past devoted some of his time and energies to the newspaper which is the organ of the Craft, and it is for the ability and fidelity he has displayed, as representative of the Freemason in this locality, that we are assembled now to honour him. It has been my privilege, during many years of service on the press, to be associated with Bro. Charles Jolly, and I know of no one from whom, as a colleague, I have received more kindness and sincere friendship. He has at all times performed his duties so as to win the respect and confidence of all those with whom he may have been associated. If otherwise, we should not have been here to-night. I am happy to inform subscribers that the testimonial has received spontaneous support from all quarters, among others our distinguished Bro. Boord, M.P. for this borough, and Bro. Kenning, the proprietor of the Freemason, has been pleased to testify his appreciation of our brother by a contribution of £5 5s. The total amount is fifty guineas, and in addition we have, through the thoughtfulness and generosity of our Bro. Hayes, this magnificent claret cup, upon which Bro. Jolly will find inscribed the date and the motive of an event which I trust will be remembered with pleasure hereafter. (Loud cheers.) He then read the inscription, which was as follows: "Presented to Bro. Jolly, reporter of the Freemason, as a mark of their esteem by the Craft, July 13th, 1878," and in handing it to the recipient said: Bro. Jolly, in the name and on behalf of your brethren in this district, I present you with this claret cup and fifty guineas, which I beg you to accept as a tribute of our admiration of your excellent qualities and of the esteem in which you are held. (Cheers.)

Bro. Jolly, who on rising to respond was loudly cheered, said it was out of his power adequately to express to them his thanks for the very handsome and substantial present they had made him. His esteemed and respected brother, Past Master Vincent, had spoken of his poor abilities in such glowing terms, and had made the presentation in such a kind and genial manner, that the very recollection of it in after years would be as gratifying as the testimonial was, and would be useful and pleasant at the present time. (Cheers.) His association with Masonry and the many friends he had made in it had been to him the best hours of his life. His reception by them had always been most cordial, and if his services had been of any value, then had he always been doubly repaid by the welcome he had at all times met with at their hands. Nor had he ever expressed or desired a greater reward than their continued kindness and brotherly love. (Cheers.) When he looked upon that handsome cup, and that valuable slip of paper, he felt that if he had been in the past worthy of it, then would he in the future try to be even worthier and more deserving of their continued friendship and consideration. He had no words to thank them, he must life his thanks. Actions were more eloquent than words, and like the eternal rocks lasted for ever. But his heartfelt thanks were offered to every subscriber. To Bros. Vincent and Weston his thanks were especially due for their arduous and loving labour in the cause. To Bro. Hayes, who always put the crowning stone upon every work that came under his hand, and who had presented that handsome cup, he tendered his warmest thanks, as well as he did to Bro. Pryce, who had so heartily and earnestly given his valuable aid. And to one and all he wished every happiness that such generous actions always earned. (Cheers.) In conclusion, Bro. Jolly assured them, that so long as he lived he should look upon that night as the most honoured and memorable in his whole life. (Loud cheers.)

The cup was then filled, and refilled again and again with champagne, and passed round, each brother drinking "Health, Happiness, and Long Life to Bro. Jolly."

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the business of the meeting.

Obituary.

BRO. SAMUEL TOMKINS.

After the startling announcement of the 28th of last February, that the firm of Willis, Percival, and Co., had suspended payment, the brethren were fully prepared for the event of never seeing Bro. Samuel Tomkins, Grand Treasurer of the Order, in Grand Lodge again. A sensitive mind would naturally induce a man who had always borne an unblemished reputation, to avoid the presence of his old associates, after a failure of his commercial relations, even though the failure were brought about by no fault of his own, but solely through misfortune. It is not the man of refined mind that asserts his purity by making no change in his accustomed walk; such a man feels his position destroyed, and bears an inward consciousness that his misfortunes have made him an inferior to those with whom he had been equal. Bro. Tomkins's absence from Grand Lodge since the memorable Thursday was therefore no surprise, but the Craft had not reckoned on his removal from among them by the power that knocks with equal hand at the cottage of the poor and the palace of the rich. Some brethren, indeed, had ventured on the prophecy that he would not long survive his misfortunes, but there are in all ranks of life prophets who prophesy evil things, and evil things are of sufficiently frequent occurrence to make the prophet in little jeopardy of damage to his reputation. Bro. Tomkins's banking firm has been established between one and two centuries, and its failure after so old a reputation seriously preyed upon his mind, and if ever there was such a complaint as a broken heart Bro. Tomkins succumbed to that infirmity. After the failure he was never the man he had been before, and on Sunday last he died at Shoreham, near Sevenoaks, of ossification of the heart, at the age of sixty-eight. The office of Grand Treasurer is at present in abeyance, and its filling up stands over. If the time ever comes when another Grand Treasurer is appointed, it will be almost startling to hear another voice than that of Bro. Tomkins speaking as Grand Treasurer from the dais, for Bro. Tomkins held the office for twenty-four years, and the brethren annually heard him return thanks for his re-election. Such an old familiar friend has been already missed—he never knew how much; but he will be missed much more when (if) he has a successor. There is still a remnant of old Masons left, and though another generation has arisen, which scarcely knew the old Grand Treasurer, the memory of him will remain green in a band of staunch and true brethren. Bro. Tomkins, whose remains were interred at Shoreham on Thursday, was originally a Scotch Freemason, in which character he joined the Lodge of Antiquity in February, 1852. He was Master of the lodge in 1855. Two years before that time he was elected Grand Treasurer, in which office he succeeded the late Bro. Percival. Bro. Tomkins also joined the Royal Alpha Lodge in 1872. He was Treasurer of the Benevolent Institution and of the Girls' School, and was a strong supporter of all the Masonic Charities.

BRO. FOSTER WHITE, P.G.D.

This event, which occurred on Saturday last, cannot be allowed to pass by without a brief record of services devotedly and zealously rendered to the two noblest and most useful of our city charities. Bro. Foster White was for a period of eighteen years the treasurer of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. During the whole of that time he resided constantly within the hospital, displaying daily, in the administration of its affairs, rare energy and sagacity, as well as warm-hearted sympathy with the suffering poor whom accident or disease had made inmates, and for whose individual comfort and well-being he never failed to evince a most considerate regard. In addition to the treasurership of St. Bartholomew's, Bro. White also discharged, for nearly six years, the equally important and onerous duties of the treasurership of Christ's Hospital, and the records of that institution, as in the case of those of its neighbour, bear abundant evidence of his attachment to that "religious, royal, and ancient foundation," and of his self-sacrificing endeavours to advance its interests, whilst his bearing and conduct towards the boys were such that every one of them truly felt that they possessed in him a most sincere and generous friend. Many other institutions, and notably the Foundling Hospital, shared his liberality and his labours; and when, now six years ago, he was stricken by paralysis and rendered incapable of further work, the expressions of sorrow were on all sides most sincere. He has lingered long in his illness, withdrawn from the scenes of his active benevolence, but the affectionate regard of the many who, knowing him, had learned to appreciate him, is still alive and unfaded. The funeral took place on Friday at Norwood Cemetery.

BRO. EDWARD BECKWITH.

After a long and painful illness, the death is announced of Bro. Edward Beckwith, who was for many years connected with the Gas Light and Coke and the Surrey Consumers' Gas Companies. The deceased expired at his residence, 255A, New Cross-road, on the 12th inst., at the age of 56, deeply regretted by a large circle of friends in the neighbourhood of Rotherhithe, Deptford, and New Cross. His remains were interred in Brockley Cemetery on Tuesday, Bro. Hunt, of New Cross-road, being the undertaker. Bro. Beckwith was a member of the Era Lodge, No. 1423, held at the Island Hotel, Hampton Court.

VISIT OF AMERICAN MASONIC KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO LONDONDERRY.

The Freemasons of this city had an opportunity, of which they were happy to avail themselves, on Tuesday evening week, of welcoming a number of the brethren who had crossed the Atlantic for the purpose of visiting some of the principle lodges in this country. The event is one of considerable importance, as showing the fraternal relationship which exists between the members of the Order, and the bond that unites them as closely in the new as it has for centuries in the old world, teaching the ennobling lesson to mankind that, amidst all the changes through which empires and peoples have passed, Freemasonry is immutable in its adherence to the principles of love and charity that the Supreme Architect of the Universe intended should bless and guide his creatures. About eight o'clock a body of the Knights Templar of Mary Commandery, No. 36, Philadelphia, conducted by Brother W. E. Franklin, P.G.S.D., Durham, arrived at the quay, per the steam tender, from Moville, which the brethren had reached in the Anchor Liner Anchoria, and, on landing, proceeded to Mr. Jury's Hotel, Foyle-street. After remaining there for a short time, they left for the Freemasons' Hall, Magazine-street, where the Provincial Grand Lodge of Londonderry and Donegal of Free and Accepted Masons entertained them to a grand reception, under the presidency of Sir William Miller, M.B., Provincial Grand Senior Warden. The brethren, to the number of about seventy, sat down at nine o'clock to supper, supplied in recherche style, and the night passed over in a most enjoyable manner, to the delight of all present. The following are the names of the guests:—Charles E. Meyer, P.M.; Daniel Sutter, P.M.; Geo. T. Conrade, Charles Mathews, jun.; John Bordon, Thomas A. Harris, P.M.; H. Edward Wendel, Chas. W. Packer, P.M.; Charles W. Leary, M.D.; Jackson Heniss, Wm. M'Carter, John Dornan, William J. Norris, Christopher Johnson, Thomas Kelsh, Lewis G. Drake, John A. Bickel, John S. M'Kinlay, Daniel Alfred Davison, Edward White, Jacob V. Gotwals. The presence of a number of ladies in the gallery also graced the proceedings. Nor should we forget to mention that the lady friends kindly supplied each guest with a beautiful bouquet of flowers, to which was attached a card bearing the Derry Arms and the words "cead mille failthe." The visitors left Derry for Portrush, and were to visit Belfast, Dublin, &c.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Thursday afternoon at Freemason's Hall, Bro. A. H. Tattershall in the chair. There were also present Bros. Major E. H. Finney, R. B. Webster, H. Browne, Arthur E. Gladwell, John A. Rucker, Thos. W. White, E. Letchworth, Col. James E. Peters, Walter Wellman, H. A. Dubois, F. G. Baker, Thomas Mass, W. Paas, W. H. Saunders, C. G. Rushworth, E. Spooner, S. Rosenthal, G. Faulkner, F. R. W. Hedges (Secretary), and H. Massey (Freemason).

One petition was received, and the candidate was ordered to be placed on the list.

On the question of the guarantee to be given by the Secretary, it was arranged that he should give security for £500.

The salary of the head clerk was increased to £100 a year.

MANCHESTER.—Strangeways Lodge (No. 1219).—Saturday last was a gala day, with a number of the members of this lodge, and their wives and sweethearts, on the occasion of the picnic, which was originated, carried out, and brought to a successful termination through the excellent arrangements of Bro. Brandon, W.M., and Bro. Past Master Schofield, assisted by Bro. Leech, S.W. The party left the Empire Hotel, Strangeways, shortly after ten o'clock by bus, drawn by four splendid bays, to Knutsford. The first halting place was Cheshire, ten minutes being allowed, and before leaving the whole of the party were photographed by a local artist. The bugle sounding the advance, the party again started on the journey, passing some very delightful scenery. After driving a few miles, Bro. Brandon, ever thoughtful for the comfort of the party, ordered a halt, and improvised an alfresco luncheon by the roadside, in which he was most ably assisted by his estimable wife. This part of the day's proceedings appeared to be enjoyed by all, coming, as it did, so unexpectedly. Time being up, the party continued the journey through Withenshaw and Bowdon for Knutsford, arriving there about two o'clock. Dinner was shortly announced, the ladies and gentlemen setting down to a most recherche repast, the tables being profusely laid with all the delicacies of the season. On the removal of the cloth, the toast of "The Queen," and "The Grand Master of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," both of which were received most loyally. Bro. Schofield, P.M., then desired the company to "charge," and in a neat and complimentary manner gave the toast of "The W.M. of Strangeways Lodge," the reception of which was such as to convince the W.M. of the high estimation he is held by the members. In responding, Bro. Brandon thanked all present for the expression of good will towards him, and hoped ere long he should have the pleasure of meeting the company at a similar gathering. Bro. Needham, L.P.M., in proposing the next toast, spoke of the pleasure it was that on occasions like the present, they could have the company of the ladies, and talked on the brethren to drink their health in a bumper. The name of Bro. Leech, S.W., was coupled with this toast, who responded in a witty speech, paying the most graceful tributes to the endearing influence of the fair sex. Tatton Park was then visited, and a short ramble there passed away the time until the departure for Hoo Green, which was ultimately reached after an exceedingly pleasant drive. Here the host and hostess of the "Hilton" had prepared a substantial tea, which the visitors thoroughly enjoyed. Tea being concluded, some of the party commenced to trip it on the "light fantastic toe," others joined in a game of bowls, and others indulged in the fragrant weed. Pentually at eight o'clock the word "homeward bound" was given, and proceeding through Bowdon, Altrincham and Sale, safely returned to the Empire at 10.30. The day's proceedings were enlivened with strains from popular airs on the cornet by Mr. Dodd, who as a solo player and artist stands high in his profession, and every one expressed themselves in the highest degree delighted with a most enjoyable day's pleasure.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—The installation meeting of this well-established lodge was held on Saturday, July 20th, at the Red Lion Hotel. Bro. C. W. Fox, W.M., opened the lodge. The minutes were read and unanimously confirmed. The report of the audit committee received, adopted, and entered on the lodge minute book. By desire Bro. Frederick Walters, P.P.G.D. M.D., P.M. and Secretary took the chair. He installed Bro. J. G. Woodrow, W.M., who appointed all his officers

C. W. Fox, L.P.M.; Captain R. W. Williams, P.P.G. Reg. M.D., P.G.S.B. M.D., W.M. 1275; S.W.; J. Hamilton, P.G.S. M.D., P.M. 201; W.M. 1512; J.W.; S. Wickens, P.M.; Thad.; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. M.D., P.M. 73, Secretary (reappointed for eighth time); J. B. Shackleton, P.A.G.P. M.D., P.M. 1524, S.D.; J. W. Baldwin, P.P.G.P. M.D., P.M. 1423, J.D.; H. Gloster, W.M. 1531; I.G.; T. W. Stone; Organist; D. Steinhauser, M.C.; H. Potter, P.M. 11; W.S.; J. Edutence; C.S.; J. Gilbert, P.G. Tyler M.D., Tyler. The customary addresses were given by Bro. J. W. Baldwin, P.P.G.P. M.D.; P.M. J.D. The W.M., Bro. J. C. Woodrow, on behalf of the lodge presented Bro. C. W. Fox with a massive ten-guineas Past Master's jewel. Bro. F. Walters, Sec., on behalf of himself and a few friends, gave Bro. C. W. Fox a Past Master's collar and silver jewel. Bro. C. W. Fox acknowledged the presents in a suitable speech. Two gentlemen's names were given in as candidates for initiation. There were present also Bros. H. G. Buss, A.G. Sec.; P.G. Treas. M.D., P.M.; H. C. Lyander, P.G. Sec., P.M.; E. Gilbert, P.M.; J. T. Moss, P.P.G. Reg., M.D., P.M. The visitors were Bros. W. A. Barrett, P.P.G. Org. Oxon., W.M. 1766; W. A. Simmons, C. G. Rushworth, P.G.R. M.D., P.M. 1309, Hon. Sec. 1309; J. Hutchings, S.D. 147, 1531; W. Goldsmith, Sec. 1351; and others. Business ended, the lodge was closed and adjourned to meet on Saturday, August 17th at 3.30 p.m. Banquet followed.

STAINES.—Musgrave Lodge (No. 1597).—This lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday, the 20th ult., at the Angel and Crown Hotel. Present: Bros. Fred Keily, Past G. Treas. Middlesex, W.M.; E. Amphlett, S.W.; Sindall, J.W.; A. S. Paterson, Secretary; Kentish, S.D.; Gillard, J.D.; Bing, J.G.; Fant, Tyler; also Bros. Wilson, G. Phythian, W.M. 22; William Cock, Fred G. Hubbard, and others. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes read and confirmed. Bro. Wm. Cock was examined and entrusted. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. William Cock was passed to the degree of F.C. The Secretary was requested to convey the regrets of the lodge to Mrs. Little, the widow of Robert Wentworth Little (an hon. member) and D.P. G.M. of this province. The Secretary read several notices received from the Prov. Grand Secretary, also letters of apology for non-attendance on the part of several members. The lodge then voted a sum of money towards a testimonial to be presented to the R.W.P.G.M., Colonel Francis Burdett. This being all the business before the lodge, it was closed in due form. The brethren then adjourned to refreshment, under the presidency of the W.M., and at an early hour returned to town.

MAIDENHEAD.—Royal Savoy Lodge (No. 1744).—On the 15th ult., this lodge held its summer festival at Maidenhead, at Lewis's Hotel. Early in the day the brethren left London, well knowing that if the weather did but favour them it would be their own fault if they did not have what our American friends call "a good time." In such lovely scenery as is to be found in that picturesque neighbourhood. It will be remembered, however, that the weather in London was decidedly wet in the earlier part of the day, and that fact no doubt kept many away who would otherwise have taken train to Taplow for Maidenhead Bridge. The energetic W.M., Bro. Willing, however, nothing daunted, conveyed a party of ladies and a brother or two to the rendezvous, starting at eleven o'clock in the thick of the rain; but it would take very heavy rain to quench Bro. Willing. However, he was not very severely tried on the present occasion, as the rain gave over, and when the rest of the party arrived at Maidenhead, in the early afternoon, there was Bro. Willing to receive them in the midst of sunshine. Of course it is of no use to go to Maidenhead if you don't go on the water, so boats were prepared, and parties made, and away went the company to enjoy the beauties of the river before dinner. And they did enjoy the river scenery and the fresh air, and the sight of wild flowers and water lilies, and the making acquaintance with each other, to say nothing of merry talk and bad jokes, and snatches of song and a slight shower to whet their appetites, and then they returned and sat down to dinner at a little after five. Well, life is nothing much to say about a dinner, but as to this one we may say that it was eaten in a booth on the lawn of Lewis's Hotel. At the conclusion of the dinner Bro. Willing, who presided, rose and said that as a short list of toasts had been printed, it was necessary for him to say a few words, and his idea was that it would be a great mistake, on an occasion like the present, for them to spend their time in that place in making and listening to speeches. After the usual loyal toast, "The Queen and the Craft," he should combine all the remainder in one big toast which they could drink in a bumper. This programme was carried out, and the brethren and ladies again separated into small parties, some chartering carriages for a drive, others going on the water again, while a few preferred strolling in the riverside garden of the hotel; and at the appointed hour all met again at the railway station and returned to London, by the same train, after a very enjoyable day.

SUNBURY ON THAMES.—Sunbury Lodge (No. 1733).—The third regular meeting of this new lodge, which bids fair to be a great success, was held at the Maple Hotel on the 27th ult. Amongst the brethren present were Bros. W. H. Stevens, W.M.; A. Leigh, S.W.; J. Harris, J.W.; J. L. Jones, Treas.; W. Chilton Crick, Sec.; H. Whakey, S.D.; Dr Thomas, J.D.; J. N. Ward, I.G.; Penniston Dunn, Steward; W. F. Wood, F. Freeman. The lodge was opened in the three degrees and Bro. W. F. Wood and F. Freeman were raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. The lodge being closed the brethren adjourned to a banquet served up in a style which reflected great credit on Bro. F. Freeman. Some of the brethren having to return to town, the party broke up at an early hour, after a very pleasant evening. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the fourth Saturday in September next.

Many other brethren were present, amongst whom were noticed Bros. P. M. Loewenstark, sen., Butt, sen., S.D. 907; E. Mallett, W.M. 141, acting Secretary in the absence of Bro. F. Walters, P.M. 73, P.G.P. of Middlesex. A vote of thanks having been passed to Bro. Pennfather, P.M., Preceptor, for presiding, and hon. membership on Bro. Stephens, for presiding as S.W., also vote of thanks to visitors, to be duly entered on the minutes, the W.M., after usual observance, closed the lodge in due form, after receiving the congratulations of all the brethren present. It may be well to mention that the lodge has only been in existence eighteen months, and numbers over one hundred members, with good muster every Monday night.

WHITEHAVEN.—Sun, Square, and Corn passes Chapter (No. 119).—The quarterly convocation of this chapter was held on Tuesday, the 23rd ult., in the Freemasons' Hall, College-street. Owing to various occurrences in the town, the principal of which was a flower show, there was a smaller attendance of the Whitehaven companions than usual, but those from a distance mustered well. Meeting at half-past three, the following were present: Comps. W. Sandwith, M.E.Z.; J. Bair, P.Z.; P.G. Treas., as H. (in the unavoidable absence of Comp. Dr. Henry); W. F. Lamony, P.G. St. Br., J. (Freemason); W. B. Gibson, P.Z., P.G.J.; G. W. Kenworthy, P.Z.; E. Fearon, P.Z.; E. Tyson, Scribe E.; J. Braithwaite, Steward, as Scribe N.; J. Rothery, P.S.; W. F. Hunter, 1st Asst. S.; E. Hodgson, Steward; J. Spittal, J. Bell, W. Armstrong, J. J. Atkinson, J. R. Banks, T. Dixon, J. W. Young, J. R. Smith, G. Sparrow, J. W. Miles, J. T. Hay, Dr. Ablett, and G. Fitzgerald, Janitor. After the minutes of the April convocation were read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for the admission of Bros. Dr. Dodgson, P.M. 1002, P.P.G.J.D.; Capt. Sewell, S.W. 1002; and J. L. Burns-Lindow, P.M. 1267, P.G.J.D., ex-High Sheriff of the County; all of whom were unanimously accepted for exaltation. Comp. J. Mills, of Furness Chapter, 995, was also balloted for as a joining member, and accepted. Afterwards Bros. Burns-Lindow, 1267; W. Jackson, 119; and G. Brash, 1002 (the two latter of whom had been previously balloted for), were admitted and duly exalted to the Sublime Degree. The historical symbolical, and mystical lectures were delivered by Comps. Lamony, Sandwith, and Barr. The election of officers for the ensuing twelve months was next on the agenda paper, and the Scribe E. having read over those qualified for Z.; there was no opposition to Comp. Dr. Henry, H., who was accordingly declared elected. For H. there were two qualified candidates, in addition to the Past Principals, and the contest lay between these two, viz., Comps. J. R. Tickle, P.J., and W. F. Lamony, J. On a ballot being taken, Comp. Lamony was elected by a large majority to the Second Principal's chair. There were at least half-a-dozen candidates in the field for the position of J., but, to use a sporting phrase, none of them "were in it" with Comp. E. Tyson, who for two years had filled the onerous duties of Scribe E. with infinite credit both to himself and the chapter, and this new recognition of his merits is a fitting corollary to his recent elevation to the chair of W.M. of Lodge 119. There were numerous candidates for the minor offices, the balloting for which resulted as follows: Comps. J. Rothery, Scribe E.; T. Dixon, Scribe N.; and T. Atkinson, P.S. Finally, Comp. J. McKelvie was unanimously re-elected Treasurer for the tenth time, as was also Comp. Fitzgerald, Janitor, for we do not remember how many times. This being the whole of the business, on the proclamations being put, Bro. E. Clarke, P.M. 1267, P.G. Stwd.; J. Cason, 119; and J. Holloway, 872, were proposed as candidates for exaltation, after which the chapter was closed in ancient form. The annual convocation for the installation of Principals and investiture of officers will be held in October.

PLYMOUTH.—Concord Chapter (No. 223).—The annual meeting of this chapter was held on the 9th inst. at the Masonic Rooms, Union-street. The Ex. Comp. the Principal elect was installed as the presiding officer for the ensuing year; Comps. J. W. Cornish as Z.; E. Patten, H.; J. Treby, J. Ex. Comp. R. M. Andrews, P.P.G.D.C., the retiring Z., conducted the installations, supported by the following Board of P.Z.'s: Ex. Comps. J. P. Phillips, P.P.G.P.S.; J. B. Gover, P.P.G.P.S.; S. Jew, P.P. G. Treas.; E. Aitken-Davies, P.P.G. Reg.; W. Coath, P.P.G.S.B., Cornwall; J. M. Hifley, P.P.G.S.B.; C. Godschall, P.P.G. Std. B.; H. Miller, P.P.G. Std. B.; W. K. Mitchell, P.P.G.D.C.; W. Browning, P.P.G.O.; A. Wolf, J. Smith, 223; and W. D. Thomas, 159. At the close of the installations the following officers were invested: Ex. Comps. R. Andrews, I.P.Z.; J. M. Hifley, S.E.; Comps. R. Blight, S.N.; T. C. Lewarn, P.S.; Jno. Lavers, 1st A.S.; Nicholas Wakeham, 2nd A.S.; Ex. Comp. W. Browning, Treas.; Comps. J. Moysey, Reg.; Thomas Knuckey, M.C.; Peter Hamley, A.M.C.; Archibald Trout, 1st S.; W. Hannaford, 2nd S.; Jas. Bartlett, Janitor.

LIVERPOOL.—Hamer Chapter (No. 1393).—The installation meeting of this excellent chapter was held on Friday evening, the 11th inst, at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street. The chapter was opened at seven o'clock, and amongst those present as visitors were Comps. R. Wylie, P.Z.; J. T. Callow, P.Z. 673; J. W. Baker, P.Z. 241; and J. Pemberton, P.Z., each of whom also holds distinguished provincial rank. The Hamer representatives who put in an appearance were Comps. R. H. Evans, Z.; H. Jackson, H.; T. Sammons, Treas.; W. C. Erwin, S.E.; R. Large, R. Reader, John Houlding, Callaghan, Pilling, and others. Comp. R. Wylie took the installing Principal's chair, and most effectively installed Comps. Henry Jackson as M.E.Z.; J. Houlding as H. (by special dispensation, as he had not previously passed through the third chair); and Thomas Sammons as J. The following were invested as the officers for the ensuing year: Comps. R. H. Evans, P.Z., Treas.; W. C. Erwin, S.E.; Callaghan, S.N.; R. Read, P.S.; W. Pilling, Asst. Soj.; and M. Williamson, Janitor. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Comp. Wylie for the very efficient manner in which he had fulfilled the duties of Installing Chief, and he acknowledged the compliment in suitable terms. The balance sheet, which was passed, showed the chapter was progressing satisfactorily, and was monetarily in a healthy state. The chapter was closed, and the companions adjourned to banquet, over which the M.E.Z. presided.

HAMPTON.—Era Chapter (No. 1423).—The installation meeting of this flourishing chapter was held on Saturday, July 13th, at the Island Hotel, Hampton. The chapter was duly opened by the Principals and Past Principals, who were present. The minutes of the previous convocation were read and unanimously confirmed. Apologies were received from Comps. T. J. Sabine, P.P.G.S. Middlesex, M.E.Z., and T. J. Hooper Wilkins, excusing and regretting their non-attendance, caused by circumstances entirely beyond their own control. By the invitation of the Installed Principals, Comp. Frederick Walters, P.P.G. 1st A.S. Middlesex, P.Z. 73, in an able and efficient manner installed Comp. E. H. Thiellay as the M.E.Z., who, in return, installed Comp. F. Walters, as H. The J. elect, Comp. John Mason, was too ill to be present, so his installation had to be deferred. The other officers who were present were invested and appointed to their several offices. Comp. E. H. Thiellay, P.P.G.D.C. Middlesex, M.E.Z., gave great proofs of his proficiency by the able manner in which he exalted Bro. John Beresford Ryley, 1423, into Royal Arch Freemasonry. The candidate expressed himself well pleased with the interesting ceremony. The report of the Audit Committee shewed the funds to be in a good state. The I.P.Z., although absent, was not forgotten, for a ten-guinea jewel (P.Z.'s) was voted to him unanimously from the chapter funds. A vote of thanks was unanimously given to Comp. H. A. Dubois, P.Z., &c., for his services rendered to the chapter as its first Treasurer. Business ended, the chapter was closed, and adjourned to meet on Saturday, September 14th, at three o'clock p.m. Banquet followed.

COMPLIMENTARY DINNER TO DISTINGUISHED AMERICAN FREEMASONS.

On Wednesday evening a dinner was given by Bro. Kenning, the proprietor of the Freemason, to some distinguished Freemasons from America, who are on a visit at the present time to Europe.

The dinner took place in the large hall of Freemasons' Tavern, at eight o'clock in the evening, before which time the company were received by Bro. Kenning, Bro. A. F. A. Woodford, and Bro. W. J. Hughtan, of Truro, the first of whom was to take the W.M. chair, the second the S.W. chair, and the third the chair of J.W. at the banquet. The reception took place in the drawing room, where the company assembled shortly after half-past seven, but before entering every brother signed his name and rank, and on doing so was presented by Bro. Kenning with a ribbon favour, on which were the American and English flags crossed, with the words "July 31st, 1878." When the company were all assembled, they were conducted to the great hall of the Freemasons' Tavern. At the Chairman's end of the hall were the English and American flags, and over the entrance the arms of Grand Lodge, the Knights Templar and Red Cross arms, all these banners having been sent down from the manufactory in Little Britain. The hall was very tastefully decorated, and the tables were handsomely arranged with a beautiful display of flowers and fruit.

The brethren walked into the hall in procession, Bro. Kenning conducting Bro. Meyer, who took his seat on the immediate right of Bro. Kenning, who occupied the position of Chairman. The rest of the American brethren were seated on the right-hand side of the table. Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, took the chair of S.W., and Bro. W. J. Hughtan that of J.W.

The American brethren present were, Bros. Charles E.

Meyer, P.M. Melita Lodge, 295, Pa.; Daniel Sutter, P.M. Phoenix Lodge, 130, Pa.; George T. Conrade, Lodge 295, Pa.; Charles Matthews, jun., P.M. 481, Pa.; John Borden, Lodge 441, Pa.; Thomas A. Headon, P.M. 1416, 1669; Wm. Worrell, P.M., P.Z.; Henry Birdseye, P.M. 715; Jas. Stevens, P.M. 720, 1216, 1426, P.Z. 720, 771; D. M. Dewar, P.M. 1415; C. J. Harmsworth, P.M. 956, 1729; P. Saillard, 22; Chas. E. Soppet, W.M. 1627; C. L. Marsh, 1464; A. J. Altman, 1657; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason).

The following brethren sent letters or telegrams expressing regret at their inability to attend: Bros. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro G.M.; Lord Skelmersdale, R.W. D.G.M.; John Havers, P.G.W.; Sir Albert W. Woods, P.G.W., G.D. of C.; Aeneas J. McIntyre, Grand Reg.; John Hervey, G. Sec.; Capt. N. G. Phillips, Col. Shadwell Clerke, J. C. Parkinson, Col. Francis Burdett, General J. S. Brownrigg, Rev. C. J. Martyn, F. Bennoch, John Derby Allcroft, M.P.; Charles Hutton Gregory, John A. Rucker, James H. Neilson, George R. Harriott, James Lewis Thomas, E. M. Hubbuck, D. Murray Lyon, W. Roebuck, Rev. H. A. Pickard, Thomas Fenn, H. Browne, Dr. Erasmus Wilson, James Glaisher, Rev. Dr. Brette, H. G. Buss, A.G.S.; Hon. R. W. H. Giddy, Angela J. Lewis, Edward Cox, W. H. Lucia, Wm. Tinkler, W. S. Gover, Wm. Officer (Edinburgh); Raymond H. Thrupp, Emma Holmes, Alderman S. C. Hadley, J. Daniel Moore, J. Kellett Smith, J. R. Goepel, Robt. Wylie, H. S. Alpess, J. J. Taylor, S.W. 121; G. Ward Verry, George Lambert, and others.

The banquet, which was of a most recherché character, was admirably served, Bro. Best personally superintending the service. After dinner, grace was sung by the musical brethren, and the toasts of the evening were proposed.

In giving the first toast,

Bro. Kenning said: Brethren, I have to introduce to your notice the first toast of the evening, "The Queen and the Craft." I feel sure that I need not recommend this toast to your hearty acceptance, as I know that it will be most warmly received by all present. We will drink to the health of a daughter of a Mason, and the Queen of these Realms. In the United States as in England the virtues of the woman have enhanced the brilliancy of the diadem of the Queen. Brethren, I give you "The Queen and the Craft."

This toast having been heartily drunk and followed by the singing of the National Anthem,

Bro. Kenning again rose and said: Brethren, I give you "The Health of the President of the United States," (applause), the freely elected Supreme Officer of a free and great people. (Cheers.)

This toast was followed by the singing of "Hail Columbia."

Bro. Kenning: Brethren, I have to propose to you "The Health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Grand Master of English Freemasonry." His genial qualities, his kindly presence, his personal interest in our Order, over which he happily presides, have endeared him to us all alike. As well abroad as at home, he has won golden opinions for the zealous discharge of his duties and his kindly consideration for all. We will all gladly unite in wishing long life and happiness to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, our Most Worshipful Grand Master.

Song: "Come let us join the Roundelay."

Bro. Kenning: Brethren, I have to ask you to drink

"The Health of the Grand Masters of the Grand Lodges of the various States in the American Republic. They will receive, as they deserve, our grateful recognition and our hearty good wishes. (Cheers.)"

Bro. Kenning: Brethren, I ask your attention to one of our American brethren, who will propose the next toast, Bro. Gotwals.

Bro. Gotwals, of Norristown, Pennsylvania, who was received with hearty applause, then rose and said: My brethren, I can assure you it affords me great pleasure, and I, indeed, consider it a high compliment to have the honour of proposing the toast of "Lord Carnarvon, Pro G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., the Present and Past Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge of England." We, as American brethren, composed of about twenty-five good, loyal, true Masons, under another Grand Lodge, most of us from the State of Pennsylvania, of the great United States of America, and having left our country, and leaving behind it a great regard and respect for other high officers in authority there, it affords me, I say again, great pleasure after having arrived on this side of the great Atlantic amongst our brethren here to be called upon to propose this toast. We, as Americans, have been accustomed, old man as I am, and as all members of the subordinate, and subordinate lodges themselves are to the supreme authority, to respect it, and we consider it an honour to yield to it, and to bow to its authority. The same as you and me are loyal to our government, so we, as Masons, are loyal to the supreme authority by which we are governed. And by way of parenthesis, I say that we have met after having arrived in this great, and glorious country, as soon as we stood upon the shore, we were met with a good loyal hand of friendship from Masons, and found from the time we landed until this day that we have had grand receptions and ovations on our journey, but I must say and confess that this is the climax of them all. (Hear, hear.) I now have the honour, having made the brief remarks that I have, of proposing the toast of "Lord Carnarvon, Lord Skelmersdale, and the Present and Past Grand Officers of the Grand Lodge of England," from whom we as Americans on the other side of the Atlantic acknowledge that we have received the authority which we exercise, and we all bow to the authority which they have given to the Grand Lodges in America. I, therefore, propose "The Health of Lord Carnarvon, Pro G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy G.M., and the Present and Past Grand Officers of England," and may they live long and prosper.

Bro. J. B. Monckton, P.G.D., and President of the Board of General Purposes, said, Worshipful Sir and Bro., I do not know that I have ever felt so thoroughly in the jaws of a dilemma as I do this evening. On the one hand I am naturally oppressed with the necessity of being as brief as I possibly can at this early stage of the toast list in the remarks which I have to make, and on the other I am anxious that there should be as much point as possible in those remarks. I speak not only on behalf of the Grand Officers, my worthy and respected colleagues on my left who are here to night, but for the Provincial Grand Masters and Deputy Grand Masters and the great array of Grand Officers which we are proud to think comprises not only the noblest, but what is equal, and in fact of more importance, the ablest and best in the land. Worshipful Sir, what shall I say in the name of those Grand Officers? I will say this: no one knows better than we do how thoroughly Masonry is carried out, is beloved and honoured on the other side of the Atlantic, and I am quite confident that no class of Masons in this country more than the Grand Officers can, so far as we are concerned, and will so far as our absent are concerned, appreciate the public spirit that has induced you to illustrate the universality of Masonry in the splendid manner which you have done to night. (Cheers.)

Our excellent and eloquent American brother who spoke just now said very kind, and very good, and very appreciative things, but it was some gratification to me, Bro. Kenning, to know that we, the Grand Officers, thank you from the bottom of our hearts for the hospitable international banquet which you have given us this evening. (Cheers.) In the name, Sir, of the Grand Officers, I hold out the right hand of fellowship to our American brethren from the other side of the Atlantic. (Renewed cheers.)

Bro. Kenning: Brethren, I ask your attention for Bro. Joshua Nunn, who will propose the next toast.

Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., (American Vice-Consul General) Brethren: Our worthy host has chosen me as a humble representative of the United States in this country to give you the next toast. I cannot say that it is quite so easy a toast to give as the last, where only one Grand Lodge was represented, one set of Grand Officers, and as we say, one Prov. and one Deputy Grand Master. I have now to call your attention to at least 37 Grand Lodges, and I think I may say, something like 20,000 Past and Present Grand Officers, and am quite sure that this meeting will hold out the right hand of fellowship to all those Grand Lodges and to all those Past and Present Grand Officers. It gives a great deal of pleasure this evening to have the opportunity of meeting so many American Masons. I am sure you will all join with me in wishing the Grand Lodges of that country, as you have heard them spoken of by my worthy brother by my side, as feeling as if they came from us in the first instance. I am sure you will recognise the kindly feelings which prompted him to say so, and in holding out the right hand of fellowship to him it is with cordiality which every Mason should give to another in every part of the world. The Grand Lodges of America are separated, as of necessity they must be in consequence of the enormous territories in every state, and I think I may say, in some of its territories, as well as its States. Consequently there is a vast number of them, and they represent half a million of Masons. Freemasonry there is very flourishing, I am very glad to say it is so, and I am sure, the more Masonry flourishes throughout the world, the better the world must become. I can only, therefore, ask you to join with me cordially in drinking "The Health of Grand Lodges of America, and the Present and Past Grand Officers."

Bro. Meyer: Worshipful Sir and brother, I regret very much that a more suitable person has not been chosen from amongst the American brethren to respond to this toast. As Bro. Gotwals has already said, the Grand Lodges of America derive their existence from the Grand Lodge of England. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, of which I am a member, and of which many of the brethren here are members, received its Masonic life in 1730 from the Grand Lodge of England. In 1732 Benjamin Franklin, whom you all know, was the Provincial Grand Master. From 1730 up to 1830, a period of hundred years, Masonry slowly but surely progressed, but in 1830 a great Masonic excitement commenced, when Masons, or, at least, a great many brethren deserted, but by the few who remained firm and steady to the institutions of the Fraternity the Society was perpetuated, and Masonry from about 1834 progressed. At that time there were in the entire United States about 10,000 Masons. At the present time we have forty-five Grand Lodges, with a membership in the entire United States of very nearly 800,000 members. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania has 350 lodges and 40,000 Masons. The Grand Lodge of New York over 500 lodges and very nearly 80,000 Freemasons. I may state that each of these forty-five Grand Lodges is sovereign and supreme in its own jurisdiction. Each one is the peer of the other, each one recognizes the rights, (territorial and jurisdictional), of the other, and the entire forty-five stand side by side with the Grand Lodge of England in maintaining the landmarks of Freemasonry. (Cheers.) At this time nearly every Grand Lodge (I think I may say every Grand Lodge) has severed its connection with, and refused communication with the Grand Orient of France, and with Masons under its jurisdiction. (Hear, hear.) I thank you on behalf of the Present and Past Grand Officers of the Grand Lodges of America for the very cordial and fraternal manner in which you have received the toast. (Cheers.)

Bro. Brackstone Baker, P.G.D.: Worshipful Sir, and brethren, the observations that you have just heard from our Bro. Meyer form a most admirable introduction to the few words I am going to address to you. I am quite aware of the value and importance of brevity, as our Bro. Mookton has so well and ably expressed just now; but the importance of this toast can scarcely be overrated, and perhaps you will allow me three or four minutes' extra time in order, not to dilate upon it, but to give expression to those feelings which rise for utterance to my lips. By the doctrine of natural selection I presume our excellent, worthy and hospitable host has chosen me to be the representative of the larger assembly to propose to you "The Health of our American Visiting Brethren." I happen—by chance, I suppose—to be the representative in our Grand Lodge of the State of Alabama, of Illinois, of Missouri, of Oregon and Tennessee, besides two Grand Lodges of the Dominion; and, therefore, I should suppose I should have more acquaintance with our American brethren from my official position than any of the brethren; but if there is any possible occasion on which we ought to cordially welcome from the other side of the Atlantic brethren coming here to visit us, as they do, under the hospitable roof of our Bro. Kenning, it ought to be on this occasion. I suppose such a thing has never happened before, where one hundred English brethren have met to welcome a corps of American brethren and extend the right hand of fellowship, to tell them, as the emblems on our banquet hall show, that the stars and stripes and the Union Jack shall be indissolubly bound together, and that the motto of "E pluribus unum," and "Dieu et mon Droit," shall be the guide of our Masonic existence. If we require any other incentive it would be in the knowledge that our brethren come mostly, and almost without exception, from Pennsylvania and Philadelphia—the city of brotherly love—that brotherly love, Philadelphian affection, I may say that we ought properly to extend, and we do extend to brethren in Masonry, we surely should extend to the Philadelphians, who are brethren in Masonry and not merely in name. Let us remember the lines we have just heard.

"Firm, united let us be,
Rallying round our liberty,
As a band of brothers joined,
Peace and safety we shall find."

I cannot better introduce this toast than by citing the characteristics of our two nations well-known in a familiar expression of each of our countries. We Englishmen are known by "All right," and Americans by "Go ahead." With those phrases "All right" and "Go ahead" we are sure to prosper. I will not detain you any longer except to ask you to do justice to the entertainment, the rich, the sumptuous entertainment, that our Bro. Kenning has spread before us to-day, by giving a hearty welcome to our Philadelphian brethren; and, as our Bro. Gotwals said just now, may they live long and prosper. We have heard that before on this day. As long as we have those sentiments so long will Masonry flourish. As long as Masonry maintains its course as it does at present so long shall we extend the right hand of fellowship to our brethren. The toast is "Welcome to our American Guests from the other side of the Atlantic."

The toast having been most warmly received, Bro. Sutter, in reply said: You have heard a great deal about Masonry, and I am not going to tell you much about it on this occasion; what I am going to do is to tell you who we are, where we come from, a little story, and to thank you. We come from the State of Pennsylvania (I suppose every Englishman in this room will know was settled by Wm. Penn, the Quaker). We are not here to-night in our broad brims, having left them at home, but we are here with full hearts. From the time that we left home we have received nothing but kindness. We started from Philadelphia, came to New York, stayed there one night, had a reception and a God speed, and next morning, on our sailing, a large steamer accompanied us five miles out to sea, and the people on board gave us "Good bye, and God speed," and the cordial welcome which we have received here to-night will for ever be impressed on the hearts of our little party. The blessing of heaven seems to have rested upon us ever since we left home. We were rocked on the gentle bosom of the deep, but we came over here safely, and the right hand of brotherhood was extended to us before we stepped on British soil. We have received nothing but kindness wherever we have been, in England, Ireland, and Scotland. Now I will tell you a little story. Bro. Meyer and I were in the Tower to-day, and it was brought to my recollection that there was a legend in the town in which I was born, that an old blacksmith, living in Iron Work Hall, made with his own hands a cannon out of hoops, that he took the cannon into battle, that it was captured by the troops of the mother government, and that it was to be seen in the Tower of London. I asked the old guard to let me see the cannon, and he said to me, "My dear Sir, we have nothing in this Tower captured from America; we do not want anything, and we do not expect to get anything." Now, that made me feel very good. (Cheers and laughter.) In travelling through your country I have seen many relics of the past, in the shape of the abbeys and the chapels, and for the first time in my life I have seen the marks of our ancient Masters. We have seen the rough and smooth ashlar with the mark of the maker on it in St. Mary's Chapel, York, and at Westminster Abbey. I see around me worthy descendants of those ancestors, and I have heard their remarks with very great pleasure. Our visit to Europe has done us great good. I will tell you a great secret, there is seated at the table amongst you an historian well-known to all of you, Bro. Hughan, and very near him are Bro. Whitelaw and Bro. Ellis; they have all met together for the first time to-night at the genial board of Bro. Kenning, well-known to all of us for a long time. (Cheers.) For this mark of his appreciation of our visit we are going to remember him until the Masonic candle goes out.

Bro. Meyer proposed "The Host, Bro. Kenning." In doing so he said: Brethren, I have to give you, on behalf of the American brethren, the toast of the evening. As Bro. Sutter has said, from the time we set foot on the shores of Ireland we have received one continuous ovation, till to-night, in the greatest city in the world, it has reached its acme. It can go no higher than it has to-night. I would state to the American brethren, and to the English brethren, that Bro. Kenning is well known to us on the other side of the Atlantic as the publisher and proprietor of the Freemason, which he established in the year 1869; and I can say truly that it is appreciated and valued abroad, as much as it is at home here with you, as the exponent of the Laws of the Grand Lodge of England. (Hear, hear.) Bro. Kenning is the cause, perhaps, directly and indirectly of this present meeting to-night—both. It was first through the columns of the Freemason, published by Bro. Kenning, that we, on the other side of the Atlantic, came to know, to honour, and to respect, what we consider the great lights in Masonry, the historians, Bros. Hughan, Woodford, Whitehead, Ellis, Lyon, and a host of other good men and true. He has also brought before the profane, anti-Masonic world, the Masonic charities of England, of which he has been an exponent for this country and all over the world. Bro. Kenning has not it, not only by himself, but by those employed under him, only the respect of the Craft but also of the many hundreds of his employés, to whom he has always shown the great characteristics of a gentleman and a Freemason. (Hear, hear.) Brethren, I give you the toast of the evening, on the American side, and also, I think, on the English side, "Our Brother Kenning."

Bro. Kenning in reply, said: Brethren, I am extremely flattered by the kind way in which Bro. Meyer has proposed my health this evening. I am still more flattered by the kindly manner in which it has been received. I am glad to see assembled around this board this evening distinguished members of the two countries, which I hope will ever live in peace and amity. As proprietor of the Freemason it has always been my earnest endeavour to advocate the cause of Masonic brotherhood, and to spread peace and goodwill among men. Brethren, I thank you very much for the honour you have done me. (Cheers.)

Bro. Kenning then called on Bro. Muckley to propose a toast, but calling him "Mackley" at first, was corrected.

Bro. Muckley, in proposing the toast of "The Masonic Press all over the world," said, Bro. Chairman and brethren, I thank you very much for correcting my name. At the same time I remember distinctly a line or two of Shakespeare in which he says, "A rose by any other name smells just as sweet." Now, I don't pretend to say I have the odour of rose about me, but whether Muckley or Mackley it is just the same to Mrs. Muckley. Now, brethren for the toast allotted to me, "The Masonic Press all over the World," and I know no special reason why it should be confided to such poor hands as mine, except that I have spent 36 years of my life in the newspaper business; but not a Masonic press business; and when I remember as far back as 30 years in Masonry that a great many publications that should have been made in those days a strong use of their great work were kept back or kept away from the printers' hands with as much care as if they were surreptitious matter, they made a mistake. To-day there is nothing which does the Order so much good as publishing to the world the good that we do; and I think if a man does good he should not hide his light under a bushel. I see to-night in the chair a gentleman and a brother whose name and fame as a publisher in Freemasonry is known all over the globe. (Hear, hear.) We know him in Philadelphia, and in fact in the United States, just as well as the brethren who meet with him once a week or once a month, at least I have felt so towards him, and I feel I am asserting that which every American Mason feels. If we have good Masonic news, good and true, spread it to the world; let our deeds be known by the only charities which are under your charge. In the City of London the sums of money you give to the education of children, both those who are orphans and those who are not, are very large. So do you in Masonry, and it is that which the profane cannot understand, but we do. We have the pulsation, the electrical pulsation in our hearts which binds us to the widows and the orphans. Then again, brethren, would we to night have been gathered together in this good, social, Masonic style if it had not been for a Masonic journal? (Hear, hear.) We are all Masons, but I can assure you, brethren, that some of us have not had lighter hearts than the others. Why it is I know not, for it is no use grumbling against the Almighty. If He makes a large body, He makes a large heart; if He makes a small body, He makes a small heart, therefore, when I look at an English nobleman, as I call your chair man, in form, and manly form, and see how much bigger he is than I am, I come to the conclusion that he has a heart twice as large as I have. If he has not got that, I trust he may have a purse a thousand times larger, good luck, good fortune, long life, and good health. I trust that all of these may attend Bro. Kenning, and all of those who surround this board to-night to do him honour. This is my toast, "The Masonic Press all over the World."

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford in reply said, Bro. Chairman and brethren, before I commence the few remarks it is my great privilege to make to you to-night, I have been requested by a most distinguished brother of our Order, whose name is a "household word" among us—I allude to our esteemed Bro. John Havers (cheers)—to state that through ill health, and being with his family at Matlock, he is unable to be present, as he says, to-night, to thank Bro. Kenning for his patriotic and Masonic assembly, and to offer his hearty good wishes to his American brethren. (Applause.) Brethren, the toast to which I have been called upon to reply is one of no little difficulty. We all of us in this room to-night are agreed with regard to the advantages of a well-regulated press. As the guardian of our liberties, as the upholder of civilisation, as the preacher of toleration, as the advocate of justice,—I do not think there is a brother around this table who is insensible to the advantages of a properly regulated press. Those of us who have studied the history of mankind will do justice to the principles of the press, proclaimed thoroughly in consonance with our Masonic teaching, namely the advocacy of the sacred principles of justice and liberty, of toleration and truth. But when we come to the Masonic press the way is not so clear. Masonry is a peculiar system, and many of us have some hesitation in agreeing at once to a general and indiscriminate publication of all Masonic proceedings. But I venture, Sir, to say to-night that so long as the Masonic press continues, as our eloquent brother from America says, to advocate its own unchanging principles, to support our great Charitable Institutions, to vindicate alike legitimate authority and the rights of the Craft, and yet to proclaim universal goodwill and brotherly love, hatred of persecution, and liberty of conscience, the Masonic press is equally a blessing both to our Order and to the world. (Cheers.) I know of an admirable Masonic paper of America, for instance—a credit to Freemasonry and to its country—I allude to the Keystone, conducted by my esteemed brother and friend Clifford McCalla, which equally with the Freemason advocates the true and lasting principles of universal Freemasonry. I therefore venture to advocate on every ground the value and utility of the Masonic press. Brethren, it has struck me to night that one of the advantages of the Masonic Press, as some of us have already said, has been to bring together by our hospitable host this goodly gathering. Here we are, English brethren and American brethren, met together in fraternal goodwill and amity; and be it remembered that in that great struggle which has been thrown upon us on the Continent by the unwise proceedings of the Grand Orient of France the whole of the American Masons are standing with the English Masons side by side and shoulder to shoulder, advocating those noble principles which as our Pro Grand Master puts it are not only the distinguishing characteristic, but the eternal heritage of Freemasonry. (Cheers.) I remember a story which I think is a very good one, and which illustrates our position as English and American Freemasons, and which some of us may call to mind, appeared in the pages of Blackwood, some years ago, in a most graphic account by the late Admiral Sherard Osborn. It was at the time our fleet attacked the ports in the Peiho River, under a very gallant officer, Admiral Hope. The shells were flying, and some of our gun boats were in flames, and though the American sailors were told to remain perfectly neutral, yet they were to be seen leaving the vessel to help the English blue jackets to put out the fire. (Cheers.) But as the American Commodore said, "Blood is thicker than water." (Cheering.) That, sir, I believe to be the principle you wish to inculcate to-night, that "blood is thicker than water." The American Masons are bound together by pleasant ties of amity, affection, and goodwill with us. Yes, sir, I believe that in the kindly and glorious principles of Freemasonry we have found a bond of union which shall cement our two great countries more and more. A poet said in very beautiful words, which I take the liberty of adapting to the present occasion, and which I think we shall all heartily agree to,

Their sons and ours have walked abreast as kinsfolk and as friends,
As men who seek the same high goal and choose the same high ends;
Their sons and ours have sought to teach the world to Keep in awe
The cloudless face of liberty, the level gauge of law.

I venture, Sir, as a Freemason, and as deeply interested in the spread and maintenance of the prestige and character of "the Masonic Press all over the World," to express a fervent hope that this auspicious gathering may be a symbol of that peace and friendship and goodwill that will ever bind England and America together; that our rivalry henceforward will only be, which country shall most try to advance the welfare of the people, the dignity of the law, and the preservation of good order and society on the great principles of toleration, justice and truth—which of us shall best succeed with united energies in promoting the civilization and the pacification of mankind. (Loud cheers.)

Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., P.G.D., proposed "Anglo-Saxon Masonry." He said, Sir and Brethren: At this hour of the evening, and after the very eloquent remarks that you have just listened to, it would ill-become me to detain you long in proposing the toast that has been assigned to me. "Anglo-Saxon Masonry," is one which needs nothing in an assemblage of Masons to commend itself. Our very presence here to-night is a testimony that Masonry among the great English speaking nations of the world is not the mere curious theories, nor the mere secret assembly that some would suppose; it is not the mere "dead letter," of an obsolete ritual; but it is a living haven in the hearts of men. And if I may borrow from the eloquent words that fell from one of the American officers, the progress, the grand progress, that Masonry has made in the great countries on the other side of the Atlantic, which though severed from us we are proud in the old country to feel sprang from our loins, I cannot but feel that Masonry in its highest and its best sense is an institution that flourishes best in a land of freedom among a people enlightened and free, who having won and achieved liberty of conscience and action and thought, know and respect those great guarantees for the exercise and the perpetuation of their liberties, of which Masonry is one of the greatest, if not the chief. We hear much in this side of the world, of not merely Masonry that is a tied within these isles, but the difficulties of those who adhere to our order in foreign countries are subjected to; but I think you will agree in the truth of this remark that wherever there exists the truest freedom there Masonry best takes its root, there it spreads its branches widest, there its fruit is the fairest. A gathering like this must make us all who participate in it not only feel grateful to him who has given us the opportunity for thus assembling and testifying our regard, not only of thanking him for the splendid hospitality which has graced his entertainment, but also for the opportunity of holding out the band of friendship to our American brethren, and of assuring them that while we in England of course are loyal and true to the governing power of the Grand Lodge to which we owe allegiance, yet we feel that those who have sprung from us, and who, so gracefully recognise, as has been done this evening, the parent authority which first created the Grand Lodges in America, that they are true and worthy descendants of those who first carried from the old country into plantations, as they were called in the olden time, those germs of Masonry which hand in hand with the hearts and freedom of Englishmen had contributed to found the great and glorious Empire, which I will not prophesy what destiny has in store for it, but at this moment is one of the greatest powers on the face of the globe, not merely in extent, not merely in numbers, but one of the great powers for good, preserving all the principles of freedom, asserting in the face of mankind that indomitable love of liberty, that freedom of speech, and which distinguish, and I trust ever may distinguish the Anglo-Saxon race, of which the Anglo-Saxon Masonry is the worthy exponent. With this toast I beg to associate the name of a brother who sits at the other end of the room, who has contributed largely to Masonic history, and is one of the great ornaments of the Order—I mean our Bro. Hughan.

Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.G.D., in reply said: Worshipful Bro. Kenning, I think every brother present this evening will recognise the fact that in my following our eloquent Brother Philbrick, Q.C., I have a very difficult task to perform. The nature of the toast makes it still more difficult, for that of Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry is one which must make all our hearts burn while we respond. It is a toast so great in itself that I am afraid in responding to it I can scarcely do more than express the fact that I agree with every word that has been uttered by Bro. Philbrick, and to note that from early times in this country, and the early times in the new country we have up to the present, a magnificent illustration of Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry. Leaving out of the question the antiquity of Freemasonry in England, I would ask you one minute to go with me to that of the United States, and remember that from Daniel Coxe's Grand Lodge of 1730 down to the Grand Lodge of yesterday, or alphabetically from the Grand Lodge of Alabama, down to that of Wyoming Territory, not forgetting the Grand Lodges of British North America, there have sprung something like the million and a half of Freemasons of to-day. I say without any hesitation, and I am sure every brother here will agree with me that Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry is symbolically a continuous and permanent Atlantic cable which unites the old world with the new, and in fact connects the north pole with the south, warmed from the east and fed from the west. May we indeed all see, that it is only by our remembering the landmarks of Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry that we remain true to our colours. With your permission I will at once construct an Anglo-Saxon Masonic apron. We have in the four pre-requisites of Freemasonry the four points of the Parallelogram, viz. (1) men, (2) just, (3) upright, and (4) free, uniting in the promotion of Faith, Hope, and Charity, composing the Triangle, all pointing to the Great Architect of the Universe, whom we should all love and obey. I have great pleasure in responding this evening to so great a toast as that "Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry," for I am persuaded the more it is studied and understood, the more it will be valued, and in proportion as we follow its principles shall we be true to our professions.

Bro. Col. Creaton, P.G., in proposing "Our English Masonic Charities and Distressed Masons all over the World," said Bro. Chairman and brethren, the toast which has been placed in my hands requires few words of comment or recommendation in such an assembly as this. The three great Masonic Charities of England seem to mark out for us a line of Masonic duty and of Masonic sympathy. They grant annuities to aged and decayed Masons and widows of Masons, and they provide a good sound and valuable education for 200 girls and 211 boys. Thus the English Craft taxes itself to the amount of £30,000 annually to maintain these excellent charities. I am quite confident that the American brethren will join us in wishing "Success and continued Prosperity to our English Masonic Charities." I am requested by our Chairman to couple with that toast the name of Bro. Binckes, the Secretary of the Boys' School.

After Bro. the Rev. P. M. Holden had recited "Sheridan's Ride."

Bro. Binckes said, if Bro. Hughan asks indulgence for himself after following the eloquent speeches which preceded his address, how much more ought I to ask indulgence for myself after the eloquent recitation of Bro. Holden? I feel that after such a stirring delivery everything that falls from me must be "stale, flat, and unprofitable." But at all events on an occasion so interesting, under circumstances so fortunate and so peculiarly acceptable as those which had brought us here this evening, I have only one dissentient voice to the proposition I start with that the toast proposed by Col. Creaton of "Success to our great Masonic Institutions," is one that will carry the sympathies of every one around this table who has the interests of our great Order at heart. The observations which fell from Col. Creaton in proposing the toast render it unnecessary for me to weary our friends from the other side of the Atlantic, or those who are here who are conversant with all that is done by our Institutions; but I think it must be a matter of congratulation to us all, hailing from whatever jurisdiction we may, that we in this little island of England are able to produce in this year something like £30,000 for our three institutions, and so to support altogether 800 individuals, aged people and children of both sexes; and of late years we cannot only find means for the sustenance of those institutions, but our income, as a rule, exceeds our expenditure. The words first used by our illustrious brother from the other side of the Atlantic would just lead to say one word as to my ignorance of what organisations they have for charitable purposes in the United States of America, but this much I fortunately know, that I and others who are in the same position, have received over and over again, the most gratifying testimony and assurance of the delight that they experience in the success that we enjoy; and I have no doubt that our friends here this evening will be the first to follow, and co-operate in the work of the great Masonic charities under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England. It is very difficult in speaking at a late hour in the evening, in responding to the toast of "The Masonic Charities," to avoid repeating somewhat of what has fallen from previous speakers, I do not wish to weary our friends from the other side of the water, or our English friends, with any statistics. I would only repeat what has been said over and over again, and direct their attention, not so much yours as theirs, to the two great watchwords of our Order, announced by the Prince of Wales at his installation in the Albert Hall, "Loyalty and Charity;" and in doing so I wish to express an earnest hope that while, as in days gone by, we looked on that great expanse of water that separates the mother country from its promising child, the great improvements that have been made of late years in navigation and in the means of communication may, perhaps, quoting the words of a cabinet minister of the present day, lead us to understand that whether the billows of that great ocean be lashed into fury, they shall no longer be regarded by us as an obstacle that separates, but rather look upon them as a link that unites the two great English speaking people of the world, whose high and earnest hope will be used in inculcating lasting happiness, the principle of loyalty to our regularly constituted governments, to practising the universal spirit of charity, and in maintaining in all its integrity that unity of speech, heart, and action, which is the birthright and distinguishing characteristic of both. (Applause.)

Bro. James Terry (for whom there were loud calls) said: Bro. Kenning, Brethren of America and of England, after the exhaustive speech, and the very eloquent, I would also say, of my friend and colleague, Bro. Binckes, very little more is left for me to give utterance to in response to the toast of "The Masonic Institutions," remembered in this great assembly—one so kindly collected together by the unbounded hospitality of our host this evening, than to thank him and many good friends we see around this room for all they have done in days gone by in support of the interest of the whole three of our Masonic Institutions; and I may be, perhaps, permitted to say that the amount of our contributions have been rather under than over stated by our good friend who proposed the toast, and also by my colleague, who responded, inasmuch as during the last two years we have not only had the sum of £30,000 each year, but we have totalled over £42,000 a-year during those two years that represents, in American currency, something like 210,000 dollars, brought in at three meetings in the course of one year. Now, Sir, if that is the fact, in respect of our Masonic Institutions, how much must we be indebted to the Craft, for all that they have done, and to the Masonic Press, for every effort they have given us in endeavouring to make known the claims of those three Institutions, and personally speaking, on behalf of myself, I may say the Order is very much indebted to the press for all they have done. We may, perhaps, differ as to the way it should be done, but we know after all that we have one heart, one soul, one spirit to work in; we do all we possibly can to promote the good and the prosperity of them all. I thank you very much indeed, and you also, Mr. Chairman, for having given me the opportunity of responding to the toast, and congratulating our American brethren to this great hall of ours in England, and I hope and trust they may carry back to their country the kind consideration of all London Masons, and the earnest wishes for their health, wealth, and prosperity, and the goodwill of all our Masonic brethren.

Bro. Kenning called upon Sir John Bennett "to propose the last toast."

Bro. Sir John Bennett, in proposing the toast of "The Ladies," said: Last, indeed, unduly last; but, nevertheless, I am deeply indebted to the grace and favour of our munificent host for having the pleasure of attending here this evening, and though it is my good fortune from time to time to address important assemblies elsewhere, I look with peculiar interest and satisfaction on the remarkable meeting that I have attended this very night graced as it is by men representing almost every branch of human interests, graced too with the presence, the august presence I would almost say, of the leading spirits of our great corporation of London, "the guide, philosopher and friend" of the Common Council in its most profound deliberations. I feel that this is no ordinary assembly, and we are quite in a position to night to greet the Craft from the other side of the Atlantic, and it would not be befiting that we should part to night, having toasted brethren of our Craft without remembering the sisters of our Craft, because whatever the brethren might be, whether of the States, abroad in Europe, or at home, the chief contributor to the "United States" or the old and the new world in woman. Yes, whether young or old—and I happen to be in the somewhat fortunate position of being a somewhat young man, and therefore can dilate with heartiness on the subject of the toast—whether in the spring of life, as I suppose Byron was when he said—

"In the days of our youth, when the heart is in its spring,

The affections will never take wing;

I have lived, and who has not, and what heart will declare

That pleasure was absent while woman was there?"

I never knew a good thing in this world but a woman was at the bottom of it. I say in spring she does—in our infancy—her duty to mankind; ay, in the heyday of manhood what a joyous and blessed companion; in our autumn she ministers to our joys, and when we have none elevates our sorrows; and at last when it comes to it, she is the very hand and support of the winter of old age. We toast them with all reverence, with all honour. We toast woman, whether on the other side of the Atlantic or here at home with us. I know how much every man is, a public man especially, indebted to his better, his purer, and very frequently his lesser half. People who wonder among ourselves where some of us get our original thoughts from do not know we have talked them over with our wives over the breakfast table in the morning, and our original thoughts come from that quarter. In the "light fantastic toe," as we term it, we engage her, and in the song we have had here to-night I miss her. In nature also I may observe that the creator did not fancy the world complete unless he gave us the soprano and alto, and, therefore, in song I regret we did not have female voices. We have not had woman to give grace to this entertainment; but in whatever phase of life, in whatever character she appears, we, good Masons, from the old and from the new world, are prepared to drink this toast with all respect, affection, and reverence, and so in that spirit I speak to you, in that spirit I give it, and in that spirit, I am quite sure, Worshipful President, the Craft will be so good as to drink it.

Bro. Altman said in reply: After the eloquent words that have fallen from the young man who had just spoken, I am almost ashamed to think that this is the last toast of the evening, although as he has justly observed it is not the least. For my own part I would rather it had been the first toast, because from what I hear of Masonry, if it was not for the ladies many of the brethren who are now around the festive board would not be able to be present. They are the heartstrings of Masonry. I, for my part, regret that the ladies are not present to give our American friends the hearty welcome that they will give to all Masons not only here but coming from the other side of the Atlantic. After the eloquent speeches of the brethren right and left of us, the only thing I can say is this that although the ladies could not be present to-night I am sure they feel very grateful for this toast. The ladies are very useful in Freemasonry. Look through the books of subscriptions that are published and you will see that the ladies become Life Governors and Life Patrons of our Institutions. Therefore, as they are such a help to us it is our duty to drink their health. I thank you on their behalf for the very kind way in which you have done so.

This closed the proceedings in the dining hall, and the brethren then took tea and coffee together in the drawing room. The whole evening was of a most enjoyable character, and all the brethren expressed the greatest gratification at what they had witnessed. The English brethren were much amused and astonished at the special American "fire," which was given by the American visitors. This fire is called "the rocket fire," and is only given on exceptionally grand occasions. The musical artists who contributed materially to the enjoyment of the evening were Bro. T. W. Simons, G. T. Carter, F. H. Cozens, Theodoras Distin, and Thomas Lawler.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

Notices of motion to be discussed at the Quarterly Communication on 5th August, 1878:—

1. Moved by Bro. William H. Bickerton, R.W.M. No. 423, seconded by Bro. John Morgan, R.W.M. No. 219:—
 1. "That after the word 'Master,' in Section 1 of Chapter i. of Grand Lodge Laws, and 'all Past Masters' be introduced."

2. "That all that follows after the word 'Chair,' in Section 4 of Chapter iii. be deleted."

3. "That the following sentence be introduced into the chapter on Grand Secretary's duties, viz.:—'He shall furnish a printed copy of minutes to each lodge and member of Grand Lodge quarterly, showing in detail all the sums which have been received on behalf of the Grand Lodge during the quarter.'"

4. "That the Grand Cashier shall devote his whole time to the duties of his office."

5. "That after 'Craft' in Section 9 of Chapter ix., add 'who are not members of Grand Committee.'"

6. "That the second sentence of Section 16 of Chapter xx. read thus:—'The By-laws of lodges out of the Edinburgh province shall in the first place be submitted to the Provincial Grand Lodge, and in districts where there are no Provincial Grand Lodges, to the Grand Lodge or Grand Committee.'"

7. "After 'regularly' in Section 1 of Chapter xxv., add 'and correctly;' and add to end of said Section, 'whose duty it shall be to see that all sums of money received on behalf of Grand Lodge have been duly credited in said cash book, and that the balance as then shown is correct and accounted for.'"

8. "That the Grand Master shall have power to appoint the Deputy and Substitute Grand Masters."

II. Moved by Bro. Colonel Montgomerie Neilson, Provincial Grand Master of Glasgow, seconded by Bro. William H. Bickerton, R.W.M. No. 442:—

1. "That an Accountant in Glasgow be appointed to act in conjunction with an accountant in Edinburgh, in Auditing Grand Lodge Accounts."

2. "That the Finance Committee be composed of Three Members of Grand Committee, one of whom to be chosen from brethren resident in Edinburgh, and two from other parts of the country."

III. Moved by Bro. Robert Nisbet, P.M. No. 340, seconded by Bro. George Fisher, R.W.M. No. 129:—

1. "That Section 8 of Chapter iii. of Grand Lodge Laws be deleted, and the following be substituted, viz.:—'That no Grand Office Bearer (the Grand Secretary, Grand Cashier, and Tylers excepted) shall hold office longer than two years consecutively, or be eligible for re-election until he be one year out of office.'"

2. "That 'Masters of Lodges or Proxy Masters' be deleted from Section 1 of Chapter ix., and 'Members of Grand Lodge' be substituted."

3. "That the word 'Immediate,' be deleted from Section 2 of Chapter xii."

IV. Moved by Bro. Robert Bryce, R.W.M. No. 392, seconded by Bro. William Niven, R.W.M. No. 97.

"That the lodges within the Metropolitan District be formed into a Provincial Grand Lodge."

[The Alterations on Grand Lodge Laws, recommended by the Grand Committee on 9th April last, and appearing in the printed Minutes of that date, also fall to be disposed of at the Quarterly Communication on 5th August next.]

Issued in terms of enactment of Grand Lodge, May 4, 1874:— "That copies of all Notices of Motion given in Grand Lodge be sent at once to Provincial Grand Lodges, and that they be requested to circulate them in their provinces."

D. MURRAY LYON,
 Secretary to the Grand Lodge.

CONSECRATION OF THE WEST SMITHFIELD MARK LODGE.

This interesting ceremony took place on Friday, the 26th ult., at the New Market Hotel, King-street, West Smithfield, under distinguished patronage. The officer appointed by the W.M. to consecrate this new addition to the ranks of this rapidly increasing and powerful Order was Bro. F. Binckes, the G.S., who was supported by Bro. Davison, D.P.G.M. of Middlesex and Surrey; Brighton, P.G.S. of Middlesex and Surrey; D. Dewar, Asst. G.S. Amongst the other Grand Officers and members of the Order present were Bros. J. Stevens, Wilkins, Levander, Pope, Barry, Shackleton, F. Walters, Dibdin, C. Horsley, 32; Baldwin, T. C. Walls (Freemason), Gilbert, Adams, and L. Berk.

The Consecrating Officer having appointed Bros. Stevens, as S.W.; Dibdin, as J.W.; Dewar, as Secretary; Wilkins, as D.C.; and Shackleton, as I.G., proceeded to carry out the beautiful and impressive ceremony, and at its conclusion duly installed the W.M. designate, Bro. Gilbert, into the chair. Both ceremonies were most ably performed by Bro. Binckes.

The W.M. then appointed and invested his principal officers.

Upon the motion of Bro. F. Walters, Bros. Binckes, Davison, Stevens, Dibdin, Brighton, and Dewar were elected honorary members.

Several propositions for advancement having been handed in, the lodge was duly closed according to ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent collation, well catered for by Bro. Butt. Upon the removal of the cloth the customary Royal and Grand Mark toasts were done full justice to. Bros. Davison and Levander responded at length to the latter.

In proposing "The Health of the W.M.," Bro. Binckes took occasion to give an exhaustive and most able dissertation upon the Mark Degree. He particularly alluded to the gigantic strides it had made of late years, and to the success that had attended its charitable institutions. In alluding to the event that had brought them there that day, he said he believed that the Order by the advent of the West Smithfield would gain a most valuable addition to its ranks. Bro. Gilbert, who had been installed that day as first Master, had proved by his services to the great and good charitable institutions of Freemasonry that his heart was in the right place, and in other respects he was thoroughly conversant with the vital principles of this ancient Order. From the fact of the West Smithfield Lodge being connected with the Craft lodge bearing the same name and held under the same roof, he augured for it a most prosperous and happy career. In conclusion, he charged the brethren to drink most heartily "The Health of Bro. Gilbert, the W.M., and Success to the West Smithfield Lodge."

This toast having been duly honoured, the W.M. made a modest response in acknowledgment of the compliment paid to him and the rest of the founders.

"The Visitors" toast was responded to at length by Bros. Stevens, Pope, Wilkins, and others.

"The Consecrating Officers," "The Masonic Charities," "The Officers," and the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

During the evening instrumental and vocal contributions were given by Bros. Beck, Walls, Dibdin, and others.

CONSECRATION OF THE EQUALITY CHAPTER, No. 1145.

The consecration of the above chapter took place at the Red Lion Hotel, Accrington, on Saturday, the 20th ult., the M.E. Prov. Grand Superintendent, Col. Le Gender N. Starkie, performing the ceremony, supported by the following Prov. Grand Officers: Comps. J. L. Hine, Prov. G. and Principal; Peter Royle, M.D., P.P.G.S., 3rd Principal; John Tunnah, Prov. G. Scribe E.; Thomas Hargreaves, P.P.G.S.; E. Linck, Prov. G. Assist. S.; F. S. Ainsworth, Prov. G. Reg.; J. H. Sillitor, Prov. G.D.C.; and E. Heywood, Prov. G.S.B., and numerous companions.

Comp. Sillitor, Prov. G.D.C., acting by command of the M.E. Prov. Grand Superintendent, installed Comps. E. Heywood, Prov. G.S.B., 1st Principal; Thomas Hindle, 2nd Principal; and John Tennant, 3rd Principal.

Comp. E. Linck, Prov. G. Assist. S., invested the following officers: Comps. Richard Rushton, Scribe E.; John Royston, Scribe N.; Benj. Thos. Gossling, Principal S.; J. H. Bury, 1st Assist. S.; C. Furness, 2nd Assist. S.; John Halstead, Treasurer.

The musical portion of the ceremony was ably presided over by Comp. T. Hargreaves, P.P.G.S.

The thanks of the members of the chapter were tendered to the M.E. Prov. Grand Superintendent and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, and duly responded to by the M.E. Prov. Grand Superintendent.

A banquet followed, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL NOTES.

"Brief abstract and chronicles of the time."—Hamlet."

STRAND (ROYAL).—At this house Mr. Walter Joyce has brought his company with Gilbert's clever comedy "Engaged." This piece, though extremely clever, and possessing all the elements of success, did not succeed, from a monetary point of view, at the Haymarket, where it was first produced. At the Strand, however, which is about half the size of the Haymarket, I have to record the pleasant fact that "Engaged" is doing well—hot weather notwithstanding. Mr. Honey's acting as Cheviot Hill is positively fascinating in its irresistible comicality.

FOLLY AND GLOBE.—The latter opens in a month, when "Les Cloches de Corneville" will be the chief attraction. A two-act drama, by J. Mackey, will, it is said, be the opening piece, but looking at the fact that "Les Cloches de Corneville" now plays three hours, and is to be produced at the Globe on a more elongated scale, I fail to see how a two-act drama can precede it. Miss Lydia Thompson and company will again occupy the Folly.

THEATRE ROYAL YARMOUTH.—This elegant little theatre, re-opened on Monday last, under the direction of Mr. Terry Hurst. The company is a good one, comprising among other artists Messrs. Bentley Middleton, Arthur Williams, Harrington Bailey, and Miss Nellie Atherley. The piece selected for performance this week was Lord Lytton's famous comedy "Money," and it only remains to be recorded, that it was produced in a manner reflecting credit on all concerned. Playgoers visiting Yarmouth are to be congratulated on the fact that its theatre is in such excellent hands.

MARBLE RINK, CLAPHAM.—The Marble Rink Club gave another of their highly successful promenade concerts on Tuesday last. The attendance was not only very good with respect to numbers, but very select with respect to persons. Madame Rose Hersee and Mr. Barton McGuckin were among the artistes engaged, and gave great satisfaction, the orchestra too, conducted by Mr. F. Taylor, fully deserved the warm appreciation awarded. The next concert at "The Rink" is fixed for the 13th August, and after that date, we are pleased to note, these concerts will take place every Tuesday evening throughout the season.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

A considerable portion of the basement of the cloister of Old St. Paul's has been laid bare, very near the surface of the present ground, together with the basement part of two of the buttresses of the Chapter-house. At the south-eastern angle a strip of basement wall, showing the mouldings and the bases of the shafts of the arches, and of an exterior corner buttress, and equal to the space occupied by three of these arches from the south-eastern angle to a gateway into the cloister, is exhibited in wonderful preservation. The cutting of the Caen stone is much of it fresh and sharp, and there are fragments of the Purbeck marble shafts of the beautiful fourteenth century work. At the south-western angle, besides the remains of the mouldings and shaft bases, there is a portion of the old pavement of the cloister, squares arranged diamond wise, still undisturbed. Within the line of the cloister the moulded bases of the south-eastern and south-western buttresses of the octagonal Chapter-house, with the bases of interior shafts, are to be seen; and the south-eastern angle of the old outer boundary wall has been found. The position of the cloister and Chapter-house can now be accurately fixed. It appears, in Mr. Penrose's opinion, that they were larger than they are drawn in Holiar's plan, and also that the axial line of the old church, which must have been parallel with the north and south walls of the cloister, must, at least in the western part of the church, have had a considerable divergence northwards from the axis of the present building.

The National Health Society, Berners-street, is taking steps to obtain park shelters for the public parks, and this week communicated with the Commissioner of Works on the subject, submitting at the same time a plan of a park shelter of a picturesque form, such as is about to be introduced as a forest shelter at Epping Forest. The same society is also endeavouring to induce some of the London vestries to erect seats for weary pedestrians in suitable thoroughfares and public places in the London streets.—British Medical Journal.

At a meeting of the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society of Ireland on the 25th inst., Major Borrows called attention to a new turnip-crop pest—a species of small green worm or caterpillar, which within the previous 48 hours had covered a space of 12 acres of turnips on his estate in the county Kildare. Such a thing has not occurred there for 25 years. The worm speedily ravaged all the leaves except the centre one, and showed wonderful powers of getting over the ground.

A second Arctic Expedition is about to be fitted out by Mr. James Gordon Bennett, the energetic proprietor of the New York Herald. The yacht "Dauntless" will attempt to reach the Pole via Spitzbergen, while the "Pandora," or, rather, as she is now named, the "Jeanette," will proceed through Behring's Straits.

The beautiful Stadtheater at Frankfort on the Maine has been burnt to the ground. A similar catastrophe has visited the Théâtre Guignol at Lyons.

The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's have consented to the experimental execution of designs for the decoration of the dome of the cathedral. The late Mr. Stevens left a model of a portion of the dome on which he had wrought out an elaborate plan of mosaic decoration, and the sub-committee propose that the decoration should be proceeded with in substantial accordance with Mr. Stevens' designs. Before proceeding, however, with the permanent execution of the plan in the costly and indestructible material of mosaic, the sub-committee recommend that Messrs. Leighton and Poynter should be employed to furnish designs of cartoons for a specified portion of the decoration, and that these designs should be reproduced in full size on canvas by Mr. Stannus, a former pupil of Mr. Stevens. The experimental cartoons thus prepared are to be fixed in the place ultimately to be occupied by the permanent mosaics, in order that there may be some opportunity of judging of the effect of the proposed decorations. This experimental process is estimated to cost a sum of about £4000., and to occupy a year in execution. If the designs are approved, the sub-committee propose that Messrs. Leighton and Poynter should be commissioned to furnish the remaining designs, and that the whole should be executed in mosaic at a cost of from £45,000 to £50,000. The Dean and Chapter have given their sanction to the preliminary expenditure, but reserve their discretion on all other questions raised by the sub-committee.

With a view to mitigate to some extent the loss of life which at this period of the year occurs with such distressing frequency, especially when the temperature is so high as it has been recently, Mr. Lambton Young, the secretary of the Royal Humane Society, has opportunely issued and circulated the following advice to bathers:— "Avoid bathing within two hours after a meal, or when exhausted by fatigue or from any other cause, or when the body is cooling after perspiration. Avoid bathing altogether in the open air if, after having been short time in the water, there is a sense of chilliness with numbness of the hands and feet; but bathe when the body is warm, provided no time is lost in getting into the water. Avoid chilling the body by sitting or standing undressed on the banks or in boats after having been in the water, or remaining too long in the water, but leave the water immediately there is the slightest feeling of chilliness. The vigorous and strong may bathe early in the morning on an empty stomach. The young and those who are weak had better bathe two or three hours after a meal; the best time for such is from two to three hours after breakfast. Those who are subject to giddiness or faintness, or suffer from palpitation and other sense of discomfort at the heart, should not bathe without first consulting their medical adviser."

THE FREEMASON,

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1878.

OUR AMERICAN GUESTS.

The proprietor of the Freemason in a pleasant meeting, carefully recorded elsewhere, sought, and not in vain, to maintain the character of English and Masonic hospitality. He wished, as the sole owner of the most successful modern Masonic paper, to ensure to his brethren from the other side of the Atlantic all those courtesies which their own high character, and the great link of Masonic sympathy, might fairly claim from him. He also was most anxious to convey to many hundred thousand brethren in the United States the fraternal and kindly feelings by which American and English Freemasons are ever bound. The times of alienation, of suspicion, of opposition, of hostility, have long since passed away, and England and the United States form a close and happy alliance, in which are most truly symbolized both the great principles of toleration, loyalty, and charity, as well as the peaceful progress and the ultimate civilization of mankind. By our report elsewhere, it will be at once seen what a great success attended in every way, the patriotic and hospitable idea of Bro. Kenning, who enhanced the genial character of host, by the admirable manner in which he discharged the duties of Chairman. No more enjoyable meeting ever took place, or under more auspicious circumstances, and from first to last, this festival of International Masonry was a "white day" to all who took part in it, and will be long remembered by that goodly phalanx of American and English Masons, who hailed with delight every warm expression of Masonic sympathy and fraternal goodwill. It would not have been in good taste at such a meeting, composed of the elite of two great bodies, to speak in terms of praise of the Freemason, but the proprietor feels, that to-day, he may look with pride, on what the Freemason has done, and the position it has achieved, solely on its own merits, and in the fair open market of Masonic criticism and general appreciation. The Freemason is now confessedly the great representative of English Masonry, as well abroad as at home, and is largely read and widely known in the United States as in England, and its proprietor rejoices to think that he has sought only to make the good old axiom true, "Palmarum qui meruit ferat." The Freemason aided to inaugurate years ago that historical and archaeological study of the antiquities of Masonry, which in the hands of Hughan and D. Murray Lyon and others in England, and of Mackey and Fort, and others in America, has culminated in such striking results. One of its most distinguishing features has been its avoidance of personality, and its unceasing hostility to that sort of scandalous garbage which finds a ready sale, alas, in some sections of the press to-day. The Freemason has sought to limit the area and elevate the tone of Masonic discussion, and while it manfully supports authority, to be alike independent and unpartizan, encouraging discussion, within proper limits, and upholding the rights and privileges of Freemasons of all ranks and classes amongst us. Hence its legitimate authority, its large circulation, and its increasing popularity. The gathering of Wednesday was, to its proprietor, alike an agreeable interchange of personal courtesies with his amiable and distinguished party of American brethren, and it was a reminder of gallant efforts and high prestige as a Masonic journal fairly won, while at the same time it was a flattering, and we venture to believe a most truthful omen of future and still greater success. And one great good result will have been achieved, if answering his earliest anxieties, the Freemason aids to promote lasting peace and heartfelt goodwill between those two great countries, Great Britain and the United States of America.

A CORRECTION.

We have been requested to point out, that in our leader last week respecting the present position and future prospects of our great Charities' we put wrong words by a "lapsus calami" into our gallant Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton's mouth, as he used the words "Vice-Patrons," not "Vice-Presidents." We apologize for the mistake.

GERMANIC LOYALTY.

We are happy to be able to record the continued progress of our venerable and illustrious brother the Emperor of Germany to complete convalescence, and to note the abounding proofs of the loyalty of the German people. It would be strange if it were otherwise. The Germans are a most warm-hearted, intellectual, sympathetic, home-loving people, and the designs of traitors and the violence of fanatics find with them no support or approval. As for the present socialistic craze, it is a craze, and that is all you can say; utterly scouted by the great and overwhelming majority of a cultivated and reasoning population. We take from a letter of one of the correspondents of the Times, the following description of the many kinds of German loyalty, which are alike pleasant to realise and proper to commemorate: "An exhibition of the written addresses presented to the German Emperor after the recent attempts on his life has been opened at the Old Palace at Berlin. Besides thousands of telegrams, there are more than 200 addresses, the number of signatures to each address varying between ten and 10,000. Many of the addresses are perfect works of art, calligraphically executed and adorned with pen and ink drawings, water-colour paintings, and photographs. Most of the bindings are in blue velvet, the favourite colour of the Emperor, with gold or silver clasps, and alto-relievs in the same metals. To the addresses of all the principal political, municipal, and learned corporations in Germany are added those from the German residents in Vienna, Pesth, Dublin, Brussels, Antwerp, Revel, Moscow, St. Petersburg, Switzerland, &c. Nearly all the addresses are in German, but there are several in Latin, Italian, Hebrew, and other languages. The contents of these loyal addresses speak for themselves; as to the getting up, it has probably never been surpassed for taste, costliness, and art." This is as it should be; and as loyal Freemasons, disavowing socialism and abhorring treason, we are glad once more to express our heartfelt sympathy with our venerable and illustrious brother and his loyal people.

A LIFE SERVICE.

We recall from week to week in the Freemason the deaths of those who have done the State, the public, and Freemasonry good service in their time and generation, whose lives have been very useful, whose deaths are losses to the community, as well as to their families and friends. Bro. Foster White, P.G.D., whose death we recorded last week, was one of that numerous class of valuable citizens who devote their intellects, their energies, and often their whole existence, to the interests of one or other of those most valuable charities, (great in every sense), which abound in our metropolis. At a time when our charities are so ruthlessly attacked, their administration impugned, and their value questioned, it seems to be good for us to bear in mind, how much of invaluable assistance is given to them by some of the most honoured, and able, and high-minded of our fellow citizens. With no sordid motives, no unfitting aims, no longings after "pelf" or "self," many whom we know ourselves, and associate with day by day, and who are fitted to adorn any station in society, concentrate the zealous efforts often of a whole life to the promotion of the interests, and the maintenance of the efficiency, of some one of those countless eleemosynary institutions of which as Englishmen we may well be proud. It is not too much to say, that in no country in the world do the "great unpaid," in almost every department of social life, render such signal services to society as in Great Britain. And as the tendency of the day is to centralize everything, to bring everything under an elaborate bureaucracy even, it is now proposed to place our charities under practically centralized and irresponsible committees. It may be true that what has been called the "laissez faire" system has great evils, and has led to many anomalies and more complaints. But why then rush into the very opposite extreme, and fall, as the old English proverb has it, "out of the frying pan into the fire?" We choose to forget daily in public matters especially that the abuse never "takes away the use of a thing," and that, admitted a first principle is sound and healthy per se, its practical application is quite another thing. It is to this forgetfulness of such obvious and primary truths that we owe almost all of the unreality, the "high falutin," the fallacious argument, the unreasoning sentimentalism of the hour. Before we then join a senseless crusade against our admirable charities, let us remember what signal good they have done, alike for honest poverty and for suffering humanity, and let us gratefully recall the services of fellow citizens and brother Masons like Foster White, who gave up to the noblest of all duties the power of their intellect, and the energies of their lives.

BATHING PLACES.

As Freemasons we take an interest in all social questions which affect the peaceful progress of the world, or the comfort and welfare of the various layers of society which comprise the pyramid of our English monarchy. We always remember Prince Albert's golden axiom, that "the happiness of the most widely contrasted classes is identical," and therefore we always feel that the social improvement and well-being of the people is alike the highest and truest aim of the philanthropist and the statesman. We then are always averse to petty restrictions, the interference of "Red Tape" in whatever form, which seem to diminish in any way or to antagonise social freedom or elasticity of social arrangements, and that which tends to enhance our public or individual privileges as a free and contented people. With such feelings we agree heartily with the remarks of our contemporary the Graphic on bathing places, which are as follows: "Bearing in mind as we do how the poor suffer from heat during the hot weather in their small rooms, which often lie under the roof, we feel indignant to read of small batches of boys being fined for the shocking offence of trying to cool their bodies by bathing in the Regent's Canal or elsewhere. Surely such an injustice as this might be avoided by the expenditure of a little trouble and common sense. Why should not the police be empowered to permit bathing at certain spots, on the condition that all bathers should wear drawers, constables being on duty at the places in question to prevent disorder? The worst of it is that our period of heat is so brief that the bathing enthusiasm of our populace speedily abates, and so the scandal is repeated year after year. On the one hand, respectable peoples' sense of decency is outraged; on the other hand, poor lads are punished for doing that which is in itself a natural and creditable action. And yet we prate about encouraging people to learn to swim!" No doubt certain rules are requisite and must be enforced, but, surely, as our contemporary well puts it, to the police may be fairly be left much common sense and needful arrangements.

THE RITE OF SWEDENBORG.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

With reference to Bro. "Craftsman's" letter in your issue of the 27th ult., I have to say that the question of whether Swedenborg was himself a Mason scarcely enters into the general problem. It is true that Bro. Beswick argues this point with considerable ingenuity, but that in no way touches the Rite itself. It is wrong to class the Rite among the Apocalyptic systems, for the ceremonies in no way refer to the Apocalypse, nor do the reveries or writings of Martin at all allude to the Rite. That Benedict Chastanier had to do with it is not at all improbable, but it has nothing to do with the Masonic Illuminati, by which I neither mean the Arignon body or the Weishaupt Illuminati. Except that Swedenborg's name has been, rightly or wrongly, associated with it, I do not perceive any indication of Swedenborgian influence, unless certain passages of his works, particularly his doctrine of correspondential colours, may be thus regarded.

In any case, however, the Rite is worthy of the attention of Masons for the very reason that, in no fantastic manner, and without any far-fetched analogies, it completes the curriculum of the Craft Mason, and assigns proper meanings to the ceremonies of the Mark Degree, the Ark, Link, and Wreath, and also the Royal Arch. Of course, my obligation prevents my saying any more in your columns. Sooner or later, I am convinced the interest of my brethren will be permanently and increasingly excited in this valuable Rite.

There is evidence in existence to prove that Swedenborg belonged, after his theological illumination, to some secret society, probably the society of the Sons of Mercy, of which Pernetty, the author of the Hermetic Dictionary, was a leading member.

But of mysticism the Rite of Swedenborg, as at present practised, presents no traces—it is not theosophical nor anthropomorphic. Any Freemason familiar with the esoteric meaning of Craft Masonry on being made acquainted with the Rite will perceive its enormous value in obscure points.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
KENNETH R. H. MACKENZIE,
Supreme Grand Secretary, Swedenborgian Rite.
Hounslow, 27th July, 1878.

ORIGINAL RESEARCH.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I beg to present you herewith printed copies of prospectus of contents of pamphlet, in two parts, to be published at one shilling, in the course of the year, entitled "Original Research," containing about 120 pages MS., with two ancient pictures, in illustration, one Egyptian, on the cover, the other solstitial, at the commencement of second part. I also beg to thank you for assenting to receive the names and addresses of subscribers to the pamphlet.

You will perceive that the contents embrace fifty-two subjects, relating to, and interpreted by the re-discovered science of speculative astronomy, on which the ancient, pure, and simple Masonic faith in God, the Grand Architect of the Universe, was founded.

At this critical epoch, when men's minds are agitated by wars and rumours of wars, as well as by religious distrust, scepticism, and infidelity, the science appears as a Divine messenger, not only to ratify and confirm that faith, but the superscriptions on the Royal Arch jewel, or celestial keys of the Order, that exhort brethren, as citizens of the world, to cultivate God, for He alone reigns, while wisdom, strength, and beauty are visible in all His glorious works of creation; also to cultivate truth, peace, and concord, fraternity, honour, fidelity, and benevolence.

Then the science not only dispenses all religious mysticism, but virtually unites all men, of all creeds, within one fold and under one Divine Shepherd, however visionary that unity may previously have appeared.

If not trespassing too much on your space, I would suggest that the contents referred to be subjoined to this letter, for the perusal of your readers. Meanwhile I remain yours faithfully and fraternally, Orchard Hill, Guernsey. W. N. CRAWFORD.

ENGLISH TEMPLAR CEREMONY.

I can confirm most of the statements of our excellent Bro. Col. W. J. B. McLeod Moore as to some of the Templar ceremonies of the last century.

I know of a curious ritual, at least of the year 1780, which partakes of the character noticed by Bro. Moore, and which has so excited the interest of "Masonic Student." Knowing well the labours of the latter on behalf of our Craft, I can promise him full information as to its contents after he has become a Sir Knight "Masonic Student;" meanwhile we may state that mention is made of a Knight Templar being admitted "a member of the Holy Fraternity of the Lillie Crucians, out of the ashes of the R.C. Phoenix in seculo spiritus sanctis."

Many titles are recorded quite different to the present nomenclature, and several of the preliminaries agree with those peculiar to the present Rosicrucian Society of England, as also with the Royal Order of Scotland.

The obscurity of the language at times is such that I have failed adequately to master the meaning intended, and, in fact, the degree is as different to "modern" Knights Templar, as I anticipate the reception of an Entered Apprentice in our lodges now differs from that peculiar to "the olden time."

My opinion, however, is, that the ritual in question was not generally worked, as one I have seen about 1790 is quite of another character. Both I take it were unknown before the middle of last century.

WM. JAMES HUGHAN.

A correspondent of the Times notices that if extremely cold weather is prejudicial to the health of the aged, excessively hot weather has the same effect on them, as the deaths of eight persons were recorded in Friday's paper, four of each sex, whose united ages amount to 674 years, giving an average of 84 years and 3 months to each. The oldest was a gentleman who had reached the great age of 92 years, the youngest of the same sex being 80. Of the ladies the oldest was 85 and the youngest 81 years of age. There were the same number of septuagenarians also, whose ages ranged from 71 to 78, four of each sex, and averaged rather more than 74 years and a month each.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HERTFORD.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of the province of Herts was held at the Freemasons' Hall at Watford, on Friday, the 26th ult., the Right Worshipful Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P., Provincial Grand Master, presiding. He was supported by Bros. Lambert, acting Deputy P.G.M.; John Livingston, P.G.S.W.; Rev. H. F. H. Brunkhill Herne, P.G. Chaplain; Rev. G. Finch, P. Assist. G. Chaplain; A. Copland, P.G. Treas.; H. J. C. Finch, P.G. Reg.; Dr. F. H. Wilson Iles, Prov. G. Secretary; G. Askew, P.G.S.D.; E. Bowyer, P.G.J.D.; J. Terry, P.G.D.C.; Venables, P.G. Pursuivant; W. Webb, Assist. Prov. Grand Pursuivant; John Parrott, J. Britten, E. Bernard, Thos. Thomas, and Thos. Wright, P. Grand Stewards. Among the visitors were Bros. W. Wilson, 504; W. Bywater, P.M. 19 and 504; H. Hollis, 504; W. C. Maddever, 504; J. Gray, 504; E. Baxter, 504; T. S. Carter, 403; J. C. Dick, 403; A. Wiley, 404; G. E. Wade, 404; Faulkner Leigh, 404; F. Levick, 404; J. Knight, 134; G. F. Cook, 1480; H. Cox, 1480; T. J. Hellier, 1480; F. D. Rees Copstick, 869; C. J. Hogard, 453; W. W. Hay, 1480; W. H. Etherington, 869; A. Malcolm, 327; W. Cook, 1480; T. J. Hyland, 1480; P. Stern, 1377; G. C. Plank, 404; J. Lee, 404; T. Kent, 1479; W. O. Thompson, 1759; J. Lowther, 1385; H. Mallard, 404; F. Webster, 1479; E. Palin, 404; G. Tidcombe, jun., 1549; C. W. Reynolds, 1477; W. Wells, 1479; G. D. Groom, 449; W. Steadman, 754; W. Bauser, 1580; J. Johnson, 504; C. E. Keyser, 404; W. J. Green, 404; H. Crutch, 1278; J. Benkin, 404; J. Middleton, 864; J. E. Cussans, 403, and P.M. 1366; H. Massey (Freemason).

Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, Bro. Dr. Iles read the minutes of the last Prov. Grand Lodge, which were duly confirmed; after which Bro. Copland was re-elected Provincial Grand Treasurer.

The next business was the appointment and investiture of the Prov. Grand Officers for the ensuing year, of which the following is the list:

Sedgwick, 404	D. Prov. G.M.
Copland, 404	Prov. G. Treas.
John E. Dawson, 404	Prov. G.S.W.
James Terry, P.M. 1327, 1580	Prov. G.J.W.

W. H. Etherington, 869	Prov. A.G.D.C.
H. Hollis, 504	Prov. G.S.B.
Faulkner Leigh, 404	Prov. G. Org.
A. Malcolm, 327	Prov. G. Purs.
F. Levick, 404	Prov. A.G. Purs.
A. O. Wiley, W. J. Green, W. Cook, Flint, Hare, and Bedall...	Prov. G. Stewards.

Bros. T. Thomas, 404, and J. Wright, 403, were re-appointed Prov. Grand Tyler.

Bro. T. S. Carter, P.P.S.G.D., moved that the sum of twenty guineas be voted from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, which was seconded by the Prov. Grand Secretary, and carried unanimously.

Bro. J. Terry, P.J.G.W., proposed that the sum of ten pounds be voted to the Watford Lodge towards defraying the expenses of entertaining Provincial Grand Lodge, which was seconded by Bro. Livingston, and carried nem. con.

Bro. Copland, P.G. Treas., proposed "That the sum of £10 be given from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the three unmarried daughters of the late Bro. F. Westcott, a member of the Watford Lodge, No. 404, who has lately died, leaving them unprovided for." He said that, as the brethren would see from the agenda paper, this resolution was to have been proposed by the Deputy Prov. G. Master, Bro. John Sedgwick, but unfortunately Bro. Sedgwick was unavoidably absent, being detained at home by illness. He said that Bro. Sedgwick would have been able to do greater justice to the subject than himself, having known the late Bro. Westcott better than he had. Bro. Westcott he believed had been a subscribing member of the Watford Lodge fifteen years, and a member of the Watford Chapter. He was an artist of considerable note, though he believed not a frequent exhibitor at the Royal Academy, but it appeared when death overtook him that he had not been able to provide for his family. Three of the efforts of his talents were before the brethren on the walls, he having painted the portraits of two of the Past Grand Officers, besides that of the present Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master. Bro. Copland spoke very ably in support of his motion, showing clearly that the case was worthy of the liberal consideration of Prov. Grand Lodge.

Bro. Dr. Iles in seconding the motion said that this was one of the sad cases which too often occurred of daughters left unprovided for who had not received such training as would fit them for any special career. Whatever Prov. Grand Lodge might do for these ladies would enable them to tide over present difficulties. They hoped in a little time to be able to establish themselves in some suitable business, but in the meantime the object of the present motion was to assist them with a trifle just to help them on their way.

The Right W. P.G.M., Bro. Halsey, expressed his entire approval of the object of the motion, which he then put, and it was carried unanimously.

Bro. C. E. Keyser said the next motion on the paper was "That the Provincial Grand Lodge do invite the Masons of England to contribute towards the erection of a stained glass window in the west of the nave of St. Alban's Cathedral, in memory of St. Alban, the first Mason of England, the cost of such window not to exceed £2000." Bro. Keyser said that he did not come forward prepared with any particular scheme. He believed the matter had been brought forward by lodges before, and he had had some talk with some of the Committee appointed in connection with the scheme for restoring the abbey, but without much result. He believed Capt. Dick's idea was to get subscriptions from the provincial lodges for general repairs, but that his (the speaker's) idea was for the Freemasons to confine their efforts to the restoration of some particular portion of the building—he thought one or more of the western porches. He said it was generally supposed that there were two of these porches, but in reality there had been three; that they had been cut in half, forming the present west front of the building, but on examination inside might be seen two other porches equally beautiful, and he considered among the best examples of early English architecture. He thought it would be best to confine their attention to the restoration of this part of the building, and that if this resolution was carried the restoration should be of as conservative a character as possible. He estimated the cost for the porches at about £6500; that was, two porches at £2000 each, and the other at £2500, besides which for repairing the gables another £2500 would be required.

Bro. Lambert objected that Bro. Keyser was out of order, as the motion on the paper was for the erection of a window.

The R.W.P.G.M. said he thought it was competent for Prov. Grand Lodge to waive the objection, because the main question was a subscription for restorations, and Bro. Keyser was only substituting a porch for a window.

Bro. Keyser then proposed the motion, substituting "the restoration of one of the western porches," for the words "erection of a stained glass window."

In this form the motion, having been seconded, was put and carried.

R.W.P.G.M.—Before going further in this matter I should like to know whether there was any result from the last resolution of Prov. Grand Lodge on this subject.

The P.G. Secretary said that the last resolution was that the brethren of the province be invited to subscribe as a body to the restoration of St. Alban's Abbey, and that he had communicated with the lodges of the province on the subject, but that the majority of them did not reply, and of those that did one objected to it, and two did not see their way. It appeared, however, that the Hertford Lodge had voted £25 towards the object, which they were prepared to contribute.

The Grand Treasurer said that the members of the various lodges appeared to think that it was too general an object to be dealt with by the lodges of a single province, and one that ought to be taken up by the whole Craft.

The P.G.M. reminded the brethren that there was a great deal of trouble and labour attached to such a matter, and enquired whether there was any brother prepared to undertake such a work.

The Grand Secretary proposed that a committee be appointed, and after some conversation it was resolved to appoint a committee consisting of Bros. Keyser, Captain Dik, Edwards, and Kemp (with power to add to their number) to consider the subject, and to take such steps as they considered necessary for the collection of a fund, provided always that no expense be incurred by Prov. Grand Lodge in so doing.

The Prov. Grand Secretary reported that the cost of the Provincial Calendar for the present year was £10 4s. 6d., as compared with £21 19s. 6d. for the previous year, that £7 17s. 6d. had been received for the sale of copies, and that therefore only £2 7s. had to be made up by Prov. Grand Lodge; therefore he thought he might congratulate Grand Lodge. For his part he was very desirous that the publication of the calendar should be continued, as it was a very useful work; only two out of the provincial lodges had not taken any copies, but if all the lodges would take them he thought there would be nothing in future for Prov. Grand Lodge to pay. He therefore proposed that its publication be continued, and that the committee be re-appointed to carry out the object.

The motion having been seconded was put, and carried unanimously.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in due form and with solemn prayer, and the brethren adjourned to the corn market, where the banquet had been prepared. This spacious room or hall was very tastefully decorated with trophies of banners round the walls, while the ends and sides were enlivened with palms, ferns and other ornamental plants, arranged with great variety and taste, the tables being enlivened with an abundance of the most beautiful summer flowers, while two huge pyramids of ice in the centre tended to keep the atmosphere at a pleasant temperature. The banquet was sumptuous and admirably served. When the substantial part of the banquet was disposed of and the company turned their attention to the dessert, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed by the Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Lambert, F.S.A. P.P.J.G.W., acting Deputy G.M., said:

Brethren, I might begin with that most happy phrase that this is the proudest moment of my life; but that the pride of this moment is somewhat overcast because I fill this position by reason of the illness of the Deputy Grand Master of the province, whose friendly acquaintance I have been honoured with for a space of about twenty years. I miss his kindly presence, and regret that his illness is the cause of my occupying this position to day. I have the honour to introduce the toast of "The most excellent and Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master." (Applause.) There is no doubt that it is difficult to fulfil the duties of that exalted position, and there can likewise be no doubt of the ability with which they are fulfilled by our R.W.P.

Grand Master. In his presence I will say no more because it might sound like fulsome adulation. I give you "The Health of our Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Halsey."

Bro. Halsey.—Brethren I thank you most heartily for the kind reception you have given me on this occasion, a reception which appears to me to grow in warmth every year that I come among you, which I think is more than I deserve, but while I doubt meriting at your hands the reception which I have always had when I have come among you I think that I may fairly congratulate you upon the state of Masonry in this province. During the four years I have had the honour to preside over you there have been two new lodges working under dispensation that will shortly be consecrated. I think that the province over which I have to preside should be considered in a prosperous condition, because of course we cannot compare with such provinces as Lancashire and Yorkshire, and some of the great manufacturing districts, but I think that in a county having no very large towns it is very creditable that in every place approaching the name of a town we have a Masonic lodge. I think that is a condition of things some larger provinces might be unable to boast. We are really a large fraternal union, and I trust that this brotherly feeling will long continue. I have only to say in conclusion I hope that we may go on as well as we have done hitherto. But it must be remembered that though our numbers may increase, the number of Grand Offices does not increase, and it is not in my power to grant every brother grand honours. I believe it was at one time the case that all the brethren in the province were either present or past Grand Officers, but of course that cannot be the case at present, because of the numbers, but it will always be my endeavour to distribute grand honours as impartially as I can. In making my selection it must not be taken for granted that that selection will always fall on the W.M. of a lodge, because there may be some P.M. or other brother who has more claim to grand honours than the W.M. I shall always, however, endeavour to make my distribution so as to serve the best interests of the Craft. Perhaps, before I sit down it will be well to mention that it is the desire of many brethren that I should hold the next Provincial Grand Lodge under the banner of the Berkhamstead Lodge. I beg to thank you for the very kind manner in which you have received this toast. "The Health of the Very Worshipful the Deputy P.G. Master, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers, present and past," was then proposed from the chair, which was responded to by Bros. Lambert and Copland, the latter of whom took the opportunity to thank the brethren for their hearty response to a kindly suggestion made by Bro. Lambert in reference to the benevolent object which had occupied the attention of Prov. Grand Lodge, and he was happy to say that their liberality had placed him in possession of an additional sum of over £12 for the benefit of those three poor women who had been left unprovided for.

"Success to the Masonic Charities" was responded to by Bro. Jas. Terry, P.J.W. and Sec. of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, after which "The Visitors" was duly honoured, and then the chairman proposed "The Lodges of the Province" coupled with the name of the W.M. of the Watford Lodge, who returned thanks.

A final toast before separating, the Tyler's, was proposed by the assistant Grand Chaplain, by permission of the P.G.M., a toast that was received with great applause. "The Health of Bro. Dr. Hles, P.G. Sec." who in replying said that he was rather taken aback by this unexpected toast; he felt very deeply the honour conferred upon him. For four years he had endeavoured to perform the duties of P.G. Sec.; during which time Masonry had made rapid strides in the province. He had endeavoured to perform his duties without fear or favour, and by the kind manner in which he was received that evening he was sufficiently rewarded.

The enjoyment of the brethren was greatly enhanced by the vocal performances of Miss Annie Sinclair, Mr. Walter Bolton and Mr. Faulkner Leigh, Bro. H. T. Parker, P.P.G. Org. Middx., presided at the pianoforte.

THE AMERICAN MASONIC PILGRIMS.

The party of American Freemasons, whose intended coming we announced in our last issue, arrived in York via Leeds on Wednesday evening week, and on Thursday were formally received and welcomed by their brethren of this city. Ever since their landing in Ireland on the 15th ult. this "Pilgrims' Progress" has been of an almost triumphal character, the Masons everywhere greeting them in such a marked manner as to show the true fraternal spirit which animates the minds of the brethren of the mystic tie. At Londonderry they were welcomed by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Londonderry and Donegal, under the presidency of Sir Wm. Miller, and were entertained at supper. A number of ladies were present, who presented each guest with a bouquet of flowers, to which was attached a card bearing the Derry arms and the words "cead mille faikhe." Belfast and Dublin accorded equally hearty welcomes, and when Scotland was reached the brethren of Glasgow and Edinburgh held out the right hand of fellowship in a similar manner. In Freemasons' Hall, at Edinburgh, on the 23rd ult., they were received by the Deputy Grand Master and a number of the officers of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, including the Grand Secretary, Bro. D. Murray Lyon, Col. Robeson, U.S. Consul, and many others. A number of Masters and Past Masters of lodges were also present. The American visitors were warmly welcomed, the D. Grand Master individually greeting each brother. After the closing of the lodge, refreshments were served. The toast of the evening, given from the chair, was "The Mary Commandery of Knights Templar," of which body most of the Pilgrims are members. Bro. C. E. Meyer, P.E.C., Grand Recorder of the Grand Commandery of Pennsylvania, in responding, said it was the first time, to his knowledge, that a Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons had recognised a Commandery of Knights Templar, comprised altogether of Freemasons though it was. The party left Edinburgh for Abbotsford the following morning, and arrived in Leeds on Wednesday afternoon, where they were met by a party of York brethren, and after dinner at the Queen's Hotel, the whole party resumed the journey to York in saloon carriages, which had been specially despatched for their use by Bro. Welburn, of York. On Thursday the principal objects of interest in York were visited, including the Walls, the Museum Gardens, and the Minster, where by direction of Bro. Dr. Monk they listened to an organ recital by Mr. M. Monk, with which they were much gratified. At the Freemasons' Hall the party were received by Bro. the Rev. Wm. Valentine, W.M. of the York Lodge, 236, who had caused to be laid out for inspection the many interesting ancient Masonic MSS., minute books, &c., of which this lodge is the fortunate possessor. Bro. J. Todd, P.M. 236, was present and exhibited the various curiosities. From the Minster carriages were taken to the Merchants' Hall, which was at one period the meeting place of Freemasons, and thence the party were driven through Walmgate Bar, past the Castle and to the Queen's Hotel, Micklegate, where they were received by the W.M. and brethren of the Eboracum Lodge, 1611. The lodge was opened in the First Degree for the purpose of giving a masonic welcome to the Transatlantic Masons, and the W.M., Bro. T. B. Whytehead, expressed in a few words the great pleasure it gave the Masons of York to see amongst them the guests of the day. Bro. Meyer responded briefly, and the ceremonies being brought to a close the whole party sat down to a champagne luncheon. Amongst the specially invited guests were Bro. Wm. Valentine, W.M. 236; Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.M. Scarbro; and Bro. S. B. Ellis, P.M. Sheffield. Here was exhibited the old black letter Bible and Loving Cup, formerly the property of the Grand Lodge of All England at York, and a very curious and gigantic old Masonic flagon. After luncheon the lady visitors of the American party were escorted to the Minster service, whilst the members of the Mary Commandery of Knights Templar proceeded to Freemasons' Hall, where the Ancient Ebor Preceptory of Knights Templar, of which body Bro. W. Valentine is the present Preceptor, held a meeting for the special purpose of greeting the American Knights. There was a large muster, and the visitors appeared in full American Templar costume. The ceremonies of the order were worked by Bro. T. B. Whytehead, P.E.P., assisted by Bros. J. W. Woodall, R.E.P., W. Lawton, P.E.P., Thos. Cooper, P.E.P.; T. B. Prissick, J. S. Cumberland, G. Simpson, P. H. Rowland, J. G. Croft, G. H. Simpson, and other members of the order; and at the conclusion Bro. Sutter, P.E.P. of the Mary Commandery, presented, in the name of Bro. John Dornan, to the Ancient Ebor Preceptory a very beautiful and valuable sword, formerly the property of one of the earliest of American Knights Templar. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the whole party returned to the New Station Hotel, where a banquet had been prepared in the large dining-room, under the banners of the Ancient Ebor Preceptory and Priory of Malta, the members of these bodies then entertaining the whole of the American knights and their ladies. The room had been tastefully decorated by Bro. Hartley, the English and American flags appearing in close conjunction, whilst the banners of the Preceptory and Priory and those of the knights, together with emblems and mottoes of the Order, and a trophy of Templars' swords, adorned the walls and mirrors. The dinner was of a most excellent character, supplied by Bro. Duret, manager of the hotel. As the procession moved in to dinner the band of the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards, who were present by kind permission of Bro. Major T. B. Shaw-Hellier, played a Grand March, founded on "Hail Columbia," and arranged by the bandmaster, Bro. W. S. Smith, and during dinner performed a beautiful selection of music. The chair was occupied by Bro. the Rev. W. Valentine, E.P., and the vice-chairs by Bros. Major Prissick and J. S. Cumberland, Bro. T. B. Whytehead, P.E.P., acting as Director of Ceremonies. The toasts of "The Queen, the Patroness of English Masonry," and "The Prince of Wales, Grand Master of the Temple," having been gracefully given from the chair and warmly received, Bro. J. W. Woodall, P.G. Constable of N. and E. Yorkshire, gave "The Great Prior of England, Lord Skelmersdale, the Sub-Prior, and the Great Officers and Officers," which was responded to by Bro. T. B. Whytehead, G. Captain of Guard, England. Bro. T. B. Prissick, Constable of the Ancient Ebor, then gave "The Provincial Prior, Lord Lonsborough, the Sub-Prior, and the P.G. Officers and Officers," which, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. J. F. Holden, Sub-Prior, was responded to by Bro. J. W. Woodall. Bro. T. B. Whytehead then gave the toast of the evening, "The members of the Mary Commandery, No. 36, Philadelphia, and the rest of the American Visitors," a toast which was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and replied to by Bro. C. E. Meyer, P.E.C., who in return proposed "The Ancient Ebor Preceptory, No. 101, York." As instancing the extent and strength of the Order in the United States, Bro. Meyer mentioned that in Philadelphia there were seven Commanderies, and that the one he represented numbered over 450 members. He at the same time, in the name of the Mary Commandery, presented the Ancient Ebor Preceptory with a magnificent silk banner, richly embroidered with gold, and exquisitely finished. This toast was suitably replied to by Bro. W. Valentine, E.P., and Bro. P. W. Rowland then gave "The English Visitors," who were very numerous, and Bro. Ellis, E.P. of the D. Furnival Preceptory, Sheffield, replied, "Prosperity to the City of York" was given by Bro. D. Sutter, P.E.C., and responded to by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of York, Bro. Wm. Vane, who in return proposed "Prosperity to the City of Philadelphia," a toast which was received with great cheering. Bro. M. R. Muckle, P.E.C., Grand Treasurer of the Grand Commandery of Pennsylvania, responded very happily, alluding to the cordial relations between the countries, and especially as exemplified in the noble reception they had met with that day. "The Ladies" was proposed by Bro. Ald. Terry, and responded to by Bro. C. D. Barlow, and after the toast of "Prosperity to Masonry throughout the World," given by Bro. J. S. Cumberland, Marshal of the Ancient Ebor Perceptory, Bro. J. Ward gave "The Equerry's Toast," and the formal proceedings were brought to a close. Bro. C. G. Padel presided at the piano, and between the toasts songs were given by Bros. J. S. Cumberland, J. E. Wilkinson, G. C. Lee, and others. Amongst those present, in addition to those already named, were Bro. R. W. Hollon, P.M. 236; Bro. J. Wilkinson (Town Clerk); Bro. Richie, R.A.; Bro. C. Jackson, E.P. St. Cuthbert's Perceptory, Darlington; Bro. C. Palliser, P.M., Northallerton; Bro. E. T. Clark, W.M. St. Oswald's Lodge, Pontefract; Bro. Captain E. T. Lowe; Bro. Captain Murphy, Bro. S. Middleton, Scarbro'; Bro. W. Bealand, P.E.P. Bradford; Bro. F. Valentine, R.N.; Bro. G. B. Jemford, P.M.; Bro. C. G. Padel, Bro. F. M. Bellringer, Bro. T. J. Wilkinson, Thysk; Bro. C. Foster, W.M. Leeds; and a number of York brethren, the whole party numbering 126. The most noticeable feature in the proceedings was the presence of the Lady Mayores and numerous ladies, who for the first time in York were entertained at a Masonic gathering. The Lord Mayor attended the banquet in State, with his sword and macebearers; and the "Baubles," together with the ancient Cap of Maintenance were objects of interest to the visitors. Many letters of apology for non-attendance were received, and at the last moment several brethren who had accepted invitations were unable to be present, Bro. B. Wormald, P.E.P., 101, York being prevented by severe illness.

On the 26th ult., the American brethren left York for Sheffield, where they were escorted to the chief manufacturing works, and in the evening were entertained by the three Craft lodges in the town.—The Yorkshire Gazette.

17th July, 1878.

GRAND LODGE OF GREECE.

On the 22nd of July a numerous and distinguished meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Freemasons of Greece was held in the Throne Room of the Hall at Athens, to witness the installation of Colonel H.I.H. the Prince Rhodocanakis, of Scio, as M.W. Grand Master for the years 1878-81.

His Imperial Highness the Grand Master, who on rising, was received by the brilliant assembly with enthusiastic and prolonged cheering, said that he was glad to have that opportunity of personally expressing to the members of the Masonic order of Greece his warmest thanks for having so unanimously elected him again their Grand Master. He congratulated them for the annexation to their native land of new territory, in the principal towns of which lodges were already in the course of formation; he dwelt on the progress which Freemasonry made in all parts of the kingdom, and of the cordial relations which existed between the various Grand Lodges throughout the world and that of Greece. He viewed with profound regret the step taken by the Grand Orient of France in removing from its Constitution those paragraphs which assert a belief in the existence of God and the immortality of the soul, and by which all the Freemasonry of the World is bound together. He declared that no candidate can or shall be admitted amongst Greek Freemasons who did not profess to put his trust in God, and he concluded his remarkable speech by tracing the history of Freemasonry, and by urging the necessity of establishing in Athens Masonic Institutions for boys and girls, in imitation of those existing in Great Britain.

The M.W. Grand Master, H.I.H. the Prince Rhodocanakis, then appointed as Grand Officers for the years 1878-1881 the following brethren, and invested them with the insignia of their office:

Professor N. Damascino, LL.D.,	Pro G.M.
Col. S. G. Karaiskakis, K.S. ...	Dep. G.M.
Professor C. Kosi, LL.D. ...	S.G.W.
Siridon Bravantino, LL.D. ...	J.G.W.

Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was followed by a grand ball, honoured by the presence of their Majesties the King and Queen; and of His Imperial Highness the Prince Rhodocanakis, and attended by the whole court and the elite of the Athenian aristocracy.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The summer entertainment which since the able Secretaryship of Bro. James Terry commenced has been annually given to the annuitants, male and female, at Croydon, took place on the 18th ult. The weather was all that could be desired, and well calculated to promote the thorough enjoyment by the visitors of the pretty grounds of the Institution. A special saloon carriage was attached to the 2.17 train from Cannon-street, of the South Eastern Railway, by the courtesy of Bro. Abbott, and the party arrived at Croydon in excellent time for a good day's amusement. Among the company present were Bros. T. Cubitt, P.G.P.; C. J. Perceval, V.P. and Mrs. Perceval, Bro. H. J. Strong, the Honorary Surgeon to the Institution; Bro. Hicks and Mrs. Hicks, Bro. Shiller and Mrs. Shiller, Mrs. H. Massev, Mr. J. H. Harris, Mrs. Terry, Miss Terry, Mr. J. E. Terry, Bro. J. G. Stevens and his two sons, Bro. T. J. Barnes, Bro. Newton and Mrs. Newton, Bro. Hickman and Mrs. Hickman, Bro. Stock and Mrs. Stock, Bro. Goode, Bro. C. H. Webb, Mrs. and Miss Constable, Bro. Buckworth, Bro. Porter, Bro. Wm. Clarke and Mrs. Clarke, Mrs. Michael, Bro. G. T. Carter and Mrs. Carter, Bro. Seymour Smith, Bro. Wieve and Mrs. Wieve, Bro. R. V. Davies and Mrs. Davies, Bro. Terry, Bro. Kuill, and Bro. Recknell.

In addition to these were the celebrated Mohawk Minstrels, who had kindly arranged to give gratuitously some portions of their admirable entertainment. Shortly after the visitors had arrived they paid their customary friendly calls on the old brethren and ladies resident in the Institution, and spent a short time in kindly greetings before the programme for the day was entered upon. The entertainment by the Mohawk Minstrels, many of whom are members of the Order, was the first performance. All the pieces in the programme were thoroughly enjoyed by the annuitants and visitors. As the Mohawk Minstrels had to leave early to fulfil their engagements at the Agricultural Hall, Bro. Terry at the conclusion of the performance proposed a vote of thanks to the artists for their kindness and liberality in giving the entertainment, and Bro. R. G. Thomas, the manager of the company, having returned thanks, and expressed the pleasure it gave him and his coadjutors to assist the cause of benevolence, more especially when it was Masonic benevolence, the minstrels took their departure. Tea was then partaken of in a pretty and commodious marquee pitched in the grounds, and after this was disposed of the company and annuitants reassembled in the Board Room, where a delightful concert was given, in which Miss Terry, Miss Constable, Miss Owen, Bro. G. T. Carter, Bro. Seymour Smith, Bro. Wieve, Bro. W. Clarke, Mr. F. Stevens, and Mr. E. Stevens took part. Refreshments were served during the evening, and the gift of the Supreme Council, consisting of tea and tobacco, was distributed amongst the residents, by whom it was gratefully and thankfully received.

A vote of thanks with three times three was passed to Bro. Terry for arranging the entertainment, with which every one present expressed the greatest satisfaction, and after Bro. Terry had acknowledged the well-deserved compliment, the visitors bade good-bye individually to the residents of the Asylum, and returned to town, after having spent one of the pleasantest days on record.

MASONIC HALL AT BANGALORE.

Nothing tends more to secure on a solid and firm basis—or has a more powerful influence in furthering the progress and advancement of any order or society of men than the erection of stately, ornamental, or convenient edifices, wherein the members of such order or society can always find a permanent home or place of assembly. And in no country in the world more than in India, where the numerous splendid temples, gorgeous ruins, and mighty and marvellously ornamental caves, thickly strewn over the land, have left an indelible mark on the very impressionable native mind—does the rising of modern buildings of a high architectural character, influence and guide the opinion and sentiments of the vast and teeming population, who see in those edifices but too convincing a proof of the skill, energy, power, and progress of the dominant race. So thoroughly is this understood by the Roman Catholics, that for years past highly instructed and clever craftsmen have been arriving in India, and the handiwork of these artists is now assuming no insignificant position in the general view of our large cities of India, from the far north-west to the sunny south. From Peshawar to Cape Cormorin more skilled workmen are unceasingly employed, and notably in the Madras Presidency, in Diindigul, Trichinopoly, and Bangalore, cathedrals, of much artistic beauty, and worthy of all admiration, stand tangible proofs of the solid basis on which Catholicism and its mission rest in Hindostan. We do not for a moment venture to compare ourselves with, or to put ourselves on a footing of equality, with the Roman Catholic body. Nevertheless, it gives us the very greatest pleasure to hear that the Fraternity at Bangalore, who hitherto have been compelled to hold their meetings in a hired bungalow, painfully inadequate to their requirements, have at last united and determined upon the erection of an elegant and suitable Masonic Hall. A plan has been very carefully designed, a convenient and prominent locality selected, and steps have been taken to secure the necessary funds and to obtain the sanction of government. This excellent move is due to the zeal and energy of the I.P.M. of the Bangalore Lodge, W. Bro. Dr. Balfour Cockburn, warmly assisted by P.M.'s Bros. Nepean Smith and J. W. Hayes, s.n., both of whom are able lawyers, and thoroughly acquainted with the place and people, and as they have thrown themselves most energetically into the work, their local and legal knowledge will be invaluable. The Bangalore Lodge has long maintained a vigorous existence, and in point of members it is by a long way the most flourishing lodge in Southern India. It has always been distinguished for the careful and strict manner of its working, and the late D.G.M., V.W. Bro. John Miller, at the annual communications of D.G.L. invariably complimented the lodge on its excellent management. The lodge is at present ruled by the Senior Warden, Bro. A. Hayes, the W.M., W. Bro. Captain McClevery, having gone to England with his regiment soon after his installation, but the I.P.M. is invariably at his post at every meeting, and the working of the lodge proceeds with the utmost order, peace, and harmony. In all probability, before many years have elapsed, Bangalore will assume a far higher and far more important position in the Madras Presidency than it does now. Common sense has long pointed it out as the proper city for the seat of government, and political reasons alone have prevented the consummation of this idea. It is almost a certainty now that these political reasons will disappear, or be greatly modified, in the course of two or, at the most, three years. Joyful indeed will be the day when officials will no longer be compelled to work out their existence in that fearful hot and sandy desert, Madras, but be removed to the comparatively cold and bracing atmosphere of Bangalore. By that time, and we hope long before, the Fraternity will have a Masonic Hall worthy of comparison with the many other public buildings that adorn this Cheltenham of the East.

MASONIC BALL AT BANGALORE.

The two St. John's-day balls given annually by the Freemasons of Bangalore have come to be looked upon by local society as institutions of the city. The 24th day of June and the 27th December are indeed looked forward to by lovers of the light fantastic, eligible "spins," and match-making mammas, with feelings of the greatest expectancy. The ball given by the brethren on Monday night at the Cabbon Rooms was pronounced on all hands to be a perfect success, and the dance of the season, which in fact the Masonic hops invariably prove. Brown's splendid rooms were very tastefully got up for the occasion. The floral decorations were exquisite, and were set off to advantage by the mystical-looking Masonic banners and emblems which were hung about the walls, and which puzzled the head of many a pretty damsel. The band of the 67th (Royal Tigers) Regiment performed the excellently arranged programme, and it would be superfluous to say that the music was of the best. The attendance was very large, there being some three hundred guests present, and the attention, activity, and tact exercised by the worthy and Worshipful Master, Bro. Dr. J. Balfour Cockburn, and the Past Masters, Wor. Bros. J. W. Hayes and Pratt, provided every one, except the inveterate "wall flowers," with partners, and preserved the greatest harmony and good humour throughout the night. At the witching time of night when the spirits (not the champagne cup, mark you) were getting exhausted, the welcome "Roast Beef of Old England" was struck up by the band, and the supper which was laid out for the hungry guests was such a one as only the proprietor of the "Cubbon" can provide. After replenishing the inner man dancing was "resumed with much spirit," as the penny-a-liners say, till 3 a.m., when "God save the Queen" reminded the guests that the cock would soon begin to crow, and that it was time for business men to think of snatching forty-winks or so to clear away the cobwebs before turning up at office in the morning. We cannot too much approve of this wholesome plan of early closing of balls, and those who with a "beery" vaunt declare with the poet that

"The cock may crawl, the day may daw,
But aye we'll taste the barley breeze," will experience curious sensations after day-break, which we certainly would not covet.

BRO. GEORGE KENNING'S ANNUAL EXCURSION.

The annual treat given by Bro. George Kenning to his employes took place last Saturday, when 200 male and female assistants in the gold lace embroidery and Masonic regalia departments left the manufactory in Little Britain, at 9 o'clock in the morning. Several private omnibuses were engaged, and a very gay and attractive procession was exhibited when the party got under weigh for a trip to Buckhurst Hill. The weather was highly favourable for a country outing, although the change of the previous few days had caused some anxiety amongst those who were to join the happy throng. The party, it may be presumed, was in the best of spirits, and even if there had been any individuals among them of a lachrymose or despondent state of mind, any remnants of such a disposition which might lurk under a resolve to make the day agreeable must have been rapidly dispersed by the strains of a most efficient band, for which Bro. Kenning had commissioned Mr. Stuart Dudley.

Shortly after the appointed time, the vehicles were successfully drawn up in front of the Little Britain establishment, and all being comfortably seated, a start was made, leaving crowds of admiring of less fortunate individuals giving a parting salute to the happy throng. Passing through Aldersgate-street, heads peering from every window, and neighbouring tradesmen and their assistants sparing a moment from their busy avocations, gazed from shop door and window till out of sight and sound. As three-quarters of an hour were sufficient to leave the rattle of the London stones behind, at the end of that time the party had got fairly into the Lea Bridge-road, where they began to sniff some of those pleasant breezes which a south-easterly wind brings off the mouth of the Thames, across the marshes, and the pretty scenery of Wanstead and Woodford. The roads on to the forest afford excellent travelling, and, mounted on the tops of the conveyances, the pleasure-seekers, while enjoying the scenery to the right and left and in front of them, were not inconvenienced by such inequalities of the way as London streets abound with. The metropolitan holiday maker is too well-known to require a description of the thorough manner in which he devotes himself to his enjoyment, and it is therefore only necessary to say that Bro. George Kenning's party as faithfully represented the genuine species of partakers of happiness as any photograph could have given. "Music, and joy, and mirth" were heard and seen, and there was the same absence of cloud from the minds of the company as there was from the sky above. Everything combined to make the day pleasant, and everybody seemed determined to back up the endeavours of Bro. Kenning to please them by hearty individual co-operation. The rendezvous chosen was the "Bald Faced Stag," a house than which no better could have been found, and reflects great credit on the discrimination of Bro. F. A. Kelly, to whom had been assigned the duty of selecting the best place of entertainment. The proprietor of that hostelry had made ample provision for the material enjoyment of the visitors, and the grounds attached to his house afforded every means for engaging in sports and pastimes. Even if the ambit of the premises themselves had not been sufficiently extensive, the forest was all before them where to choose their place of exercise, and there is a wildness about Epping Forest which makes one shake off for the time all knowledge that there is such a circumscribed area as London. The party having alighted at this admirable hotel immediately availed themselves of all its advantages, and lost no time in beginning their sports, for although the programme was so arranged as that a long day was provided, amusement makes time fly very fast, and enjoyment would seem only to have just commenced when the dinner hour arrived. "Dinner hour!" Welcome sound that dinner bell; and it would have been still more welcome if the company had known beforehand what a store of good things the host had provided. The dinner hour was one o'clock, and punctual to his time the landlord had everything on the table that was to be partaken of for the first course. The little girl in Dickens' "Christmas Carol," who said there was "everything, and more," would have been justified in her comprehensive description if she had witnessed the repast set out for the Little Britain establishment. There was everything there which was in season and which was substantial, and what was substantial was necessary, as appetites by that time had acquired immense keenness. The party set to at this delightful meal, and did as much justice to the meal as the host had done to them. The usual sports followed the dinner; the band had its full work to do; and the charms of music kept the party very lively. Bro. Kenning, with a party of gentlemen, all of whom had their business avocations to follow in the morning, left Little Britain by one of Wragg's four-horse stage coaches at two o'clock, and on their arrival were serenaded by the band, who had selected as an air appropriate to the founder of the feast, "The Fine Old English Gentleman." At the sound of the strains of the band the party, who were aware what the latest arrival was, turned out in a body and greeted their employer with hearty rounds of applause. The new arrivals then entered into the amusements of the day, and afterwards sat down to a bountiful dinner, over which Bro. Kenning presided, Bro. J. A. Reeves taking the vice-chair. This party had also a good appetite for a good meal; and good meal it was, for the landlord had been as attentive to this smaller banquet as he had been to the larger. The comfort of a dinner without speeches to succeed it, being at all Bro. Kenning's annual excursions a part of the arrangements, no speeches were contemplated, but Bro. Reeves could not allow the visitors to rise from the table without acknowledging the Chairman's hospitality. In a few sentences he described the growth of the Little Britain business, commencing with his own recollection of its being conducted in one house, No. 4, Little Britain. He next described its extension right and left, its further branches in Fleet-street, Liverpool, Manchester, and Glasgow, and concluded by observing that this extension was due to the enterprise of Bro. Kenning, his business habits, and the favour in which he stood among all whom he employed. If the business extended as it had extended, he thought that not only Little Britain but Great Britain would not be large enough for Bro. Kenning's establishments. Bro. Kenning made a brief reply, and carried his recollection back before the time when No. 4, Little Britain, was established, and when No. 18, Little Britain, was the scene of his labours. Thanking Bro. Reeves for his reference to the energy and enterprise with which he (Bro. Kenning) had conducted his business, he added that it was not by his own exertions alone that he had succeeded in establishing such a large extension of the business—unaided he could not have done so; his exertions were admirably assisted by those who did the work, the assistants at the establishments of which he was the head. To those assistants his thanks were largely due, and he was happy to say those assistants most cheerfully performed their work. To see them also enjoy such a day's pleasure as he was able annually to give them was no small part of his own enjoyment. By this time the tea, provided for the whole party, was disposed of, and dancing was then again engaged in, and kept up with unflagging spirit till eight o'clock, when the return journey was made. The excellent band played all the popular tunes on the road to town, and on the arrival at Little Britain, at half-past nine, as a finale played "For he's a jolly good fellow," and "God save the Queen." The day's pleasure was thoroughly enjoyed, and the company before parting bade a hearty good night to Bro. Kenning. Among the ladies and gentlemen present during the day were Bros. J. A. Reeves, sen., J. A. Reeves, jun., W. H. Froom, D. W. Pearce, G. E. Baker, B. Wright and Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Martin, H. Cox and Mrs. Cox, H. Massey and Mrs. Massey, J. H. Gaball and Mrs. Gaball, Master George Kenning, Mr. G. K. Baker, Mr. Wm. Baker, Miss Sutterfield, Miss Kemp, Mr. George Adley, Bros. Wm. Toye and F. A. Kelly.

FREEMASONRY IN AUSTRALIA.

The annual installation ceremony of the Duke of Sussex Lodge was held on Monday evening, April 8th, in the Freemasons' hall, Lonsdale-street, East Melbourne. The attendance was large, as on these occasions the brothers of the Craft usually muster in force to do honour to the W.M. elect. The Grand Lodges of the English, Irish, and Scotch Constitutions were represented by Bro. P.M. Chapman, Bro. P.M. Duross, and Bro. Cederberg, Bro. P. G-sling, the W.M., after opening and raising the lodge, resigned his position in favour of Bro. W. H. Parkyn, the W.M. elect, whom he duly installed for the ensuing twelve months by the retiring P.M. Bro. W.M. Parkyn having selected his officers, at his request, Bro. P. Gosling, P.M. also performed the ceremony of their installation, which was rendered by him in a very impressive manner. The following are the officers:—Bros. Simmons, S.W.; Rev. M. Saunders, J. W.; Bowring, S.D.; Kauffmann, J.D.; Tibbets, I.G.; Clark, Tyler. Stewards: Bros. Burrough and Gardner. P. M. Crew was re-appointed Secretary, and Bro. Fergie, Treasurer; these brothers have held their offices for a number of years; the latter brother was presented with a Masonic jewel, emblematic of his office, as a token of esteem from the brothers of the lodge. The general working of this lodge is highly satisfactory, and it is fortunate in having two distinguished lecture masters among its members, Bros. P.M. Crew and P.M. Gosling, which enabled them to dispense with the usual custom of appointing an Installing Master for the occasion; and when practical the installing of the newly elected W.M. and his officers by the retiring W.M. reflects the highest credit upon his general working, and finishes his term in a truly Masonic manner. The business of the evening concluded, at the invitation of Bro. Parkyn, W.M., the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The banquet was provided in excellent style by Bro. Paul, who has succeeded in establishing his claim as caterer to most of the lodges who meet at the hall.

Between the various toasts songs were sung by P.M. Bro. Evans, Hughes, Bowring, and others. Altogether a very enjoyable evening was spent.

In reply to the toast of "The Worshipful Master," Bro. W. H. Parkyn said: Officers and brethren, I rise to respond to the toast of my health with mingled feelings of pride, gratitude, and humility. Pride to think that you in your wisdom and goodness have seen fit to appoint me to be your Worshipful Master, to occupy for a time the Throne of King Solomon, which is, or ought to be, the goal of every Mason's ambition. To think that you should have appointed me to rule over this worthy and worshipful lodge of brethren and fellows, most of the members of which are not only my seniors in Masonry, but are my superiors, both in social position and in intellectual abilities. Believe me, brethren, I feel deeply grateful for the high honour you have thus conferred upon me, I say this not as a figure of speech, a mere empty sound, but as fully appreciating that it is a high honour. I also fully appreciate that the exalted position to which you have elevated me is not altogether a bed of roses, it is a proud position, but it has onerous duties and responsibilities, these I shall endeavour to discharge to the utmost of my power and ability. I shall always endeavour to act for the best interests of the lodge, and shall always gladly listen to any suggestion which may have for its object the good of Freemasonry, or the comfort and prosperity of any brother in it. But the feeling of pride, which my exalted position induces, is subdued and controlled by feelings of humility, when I reflect upon my position. You are aware brethren, that I have attained this position under somewhat peculiar circumstances. I am not only a very young Mason, but I have a Lecture Master for my predecessor. It is not every newly installed W.M. who has a Lecture Master at his elbow; I am in that peculiar and somewhat embarrassing position. I say embarrassing, because after fully admitting that in all ordinary cases a Lecture Master would be of immense benefit to his successor in prompting, guiding, and keeping him in the straight paths of Masonry, still the fact remains, that in my case, thanks to his unwearied instructions, for which I here publicly tender him my sincere thanks, I should be able by this time, if not to run, at least to walk alone, and standing as I shall in the full blaze of the light of his perfections, I feel painfully that any imperfections of mine will not only be clearly revealed, but will be doubly magnified. Notwithstanding the careful training I have had the privilege of receiving at the hands of P.M. Gosling and P.M. Crew I shall no doubt occasionally make a slip or a blunder; in such cases, if not too often repeated, I trust the brethren will exercise towards me that virtue which is justly denominated the distinguishing characteristic of a Freemason's heart, I mean charity, and will credit me with good intentions, even when actions fail. But, on the other hand, I would particularly request of brethren and visitors, that should unfortunately my performances on any occasion not deserve commendation, they will not award undeserved praise, but on such occasions, that they will exercise that excellent virtue of the Craft, which is silence. Although I have but faint hopes of being able to equal my predecessor, I shall still take Excelsior (onward and upward) as my motto, and shall use every endeavour to excel him, by as much as he excels the ordinary W.M. Although but a young Mason, it has seemed to me that in some lodges there is a tendency rather to increase numbers than to introduce only men who are at heart Masons, we are already strong in number, and unless only those whom we have strong grounds to believe will ultimately reflect honour on our choice are introduced, I think it would be better if the introductions were fewer. Officers and brethren, I thank you sincerely for the very kind, enthusiastic, and flattering manner in which you have drunk my health, and hope that when my term of office has expired I shall not find that I occupy a less exalted position in your friendship, favour, and esteem than I do at this present moment.

After the toasts of "The P.M. and Visitors" had been given and responded to, the W.M. proposed "The Health of the Officers," saying that he did so with much pleasure, as he believed he possessed a set of officers of which any W.M. might be justly proud, most W.M.'s. possessed more or less of good and valuable officers, but he believed his were all so, and not to be excelled. A watch, he said, was a beautiful piece of mechanism, harmonious in its action, regular in its movements, a something to be relied upon, beautiful to behold, and a treasure in possessing, but in order that a watch may be all this it must be furnished with a mainspring, which must not only be of good steel, but it must be perfect in its proportions, and of an even and proper temper, nor could we stop here, as even should we possess the best mainspring the world ever saw, we had not a watch until that mainspring was attached to and connected with a series of wheels and pinions, spindles and bearings, to which, if all were in harmony, it gave life and motion, but should any part of that watch be untrue in itself, or out of harmony with the rest, the whole mechanism was deranged, and no matter how perfect the other parts might be, their action was paralyzed, and their perfection could not appear. In many respects a Masons' lodge might be likened to a watch. The W.M. was the mainspring, the officers were the works, and if all were in unison, working smoothly, harmoniously, and perfectly, they formed a whole which afforded a source of pleasure to visitors to behold, and of pride to the brethren of the lodge to which they belonged. He therefore earnestly hoped that his officers as well as himself would during their term of office endeavour to keep up to their work, and cultivate such a feeling of unity and brotherly love as would render their work smooth and harmonious, without which the full effect of our really beautiful ritual could not be properly developed, or fully exhibited, and assured them if this were done it would not only reflect credit upon themselves, but would afford pleasure to the visitors, pride to the brethren, and would cause it be generally remarked, (which would be better than vain gloriously boasting themselves) that the Duke of Sussex was the best worked lodge in Victoria, or at least second to none. The toast having been duly responded to, "The toast of the Poor and Distressed" was given, and the brethren separated after having spent a very enjoyable evening.

MARK MASONRY IN AUSTRALIA.

On Friday, April 26th, the most important ceremony of opening the first Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of the Province of Victoria took place at the Freemasons' Hall, Melbourne, when Bro. Henry Wallace Lowry was installed as the first R.W. Grand Master.

An emergency meeting of the Victoria Mark Lodge, No. 47 (the principal one in the Australian Colonies), was called for the purpose of the installation. There was a large attendance of members and visitors from various Mark lodges under the different constitutions.

The W.M., Bro. S. G. Martin, having vacated the chair, it was taken by Bro. Thomas Russell, the senior P.M. (excepting Bro. A. W. Lowry) of the lodge.

The patent received from the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England and Wales, dated 19th November, 1877, and issued by the M.W. Grand Mark Master, Bro. the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Limerick, was read, and the ceremony of installation proceeded with by Bro. Russell. The R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Bro. H. V. Lowry, having been installed, declared the Prov. Grand Lodge duly opened, and appointed and invested the following brethren as the first Prov. Grand Officers:

Thomas Russell, P.M.	Prov. G.S.W.
A. W. Rodd, P.M.	Prov. G.J.W.
C. R. Martin	Prov. G. Treas.
Thos. Ashley, P.M.	Prov. G.M.O.
W. Dodds	Prov. G.O.
J. Cahill	Prov. G.J.O.
C. Allport	Prov. G. Reg.
G. T. Martin	Prov. G. Sec.
Joseph Storer	Prov. G.S.D.
W. Marshall	Prov. G.J.D.
T. Ford	Prov. G. Org.
J. D. Drew	Prov. G. I. of W.
P. Donald	Prov. G. D. of C.
J. P. Cederberg	Prov. G. A.D. of C.
Y. Bramwell	Prov. G.S.B.
Thos. Main	Prov. G. Std. Br.
T. E. Bolton	Prov. G.I.G.
Terry, Raffle, and Dunsdin	Prov. G. Stwds.
A. J. Clark	Prov. G. Tyler.

The brethren then adjourned to the large refreshment hall, where a sumptuous banquet was laid out in Bro. Paul's best manner.

After the usual loyal toasts had been acknowledged, "The Health of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master" was proposed by Bro. Russell, P.M., who in a few appropriate remarks testified to the excellent qualifications of Bro. Lowry to fill the high and honourable office to which he had that evening been installed, an opinion, he believed, all Masons in Australia would unanimously endorse. He hoped that Bro. Lowry would continue in good health and live long to fill the office. (Applause.)

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master expressed his gratification at the honour paid him by the brethren, in having selected him as the first R.W. Prov. Grand Master of Mark Master Masons in Australia. He believed that before long Mark Masonry would take a marked position in Victoria. During the past two or three years it had made very rapid strides. For some time previously the lodges were merely existing. They were now not only able to walk alone but run away. Now that a Prov. Grand Lodge had been established he believed that Mark Masonry would soon occupy a prominent position in the colony. (Applause.)

A number of other toasts having been given, interspersed with harmony, a very pleasant and eventful evening for Freemasonry in Australia terminated at a late hour.

We learn from the Daily Chronicle that at an ordinary meeting of the Richmond Select Vestry the vicar of the parish (the Rev. T. C. Proctor) moved the following resolution: "That this vestry presents to Mr. Edward Hertslet, C.B., of the Foreign Office, and Bellevue House, Richmond, being a member of the Vestry, their sincere congratulations that Her Majesty has intimated her intention to confer on him the honour of knighthood, in proof of Her Majesty's satisfaction with his labours at the late Congress at Berlin." Admiral Stopford seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously, and it was further resolved to invite Mr. Hertslet to a complimentary banquet to be given in his honour at some future date, a committee being appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

The Earl of Beaconsfield and the Marquis of Salisbury, at the request of numerous Conservative associations throughout the country who are desirous of presenting addresses to them personally by deputation on their return from Berlin, have consented to receive such addresses at the Foreign Office on Tuesday next, the 6th inst., at half-past three.

At a special general meeting of the United Kingdom Railway Officers' and Servants' Association, held on Wednesday, at the Cannon-street Hotel, Bro. Alderman Hadley presiding, five candidates for pensions of £30 each were elected, and it was resolved to increase the pensions granted at the elections of August, 1877, and February, 1878, from £15 to £20. Testimony was borne to the steady progress which the Association is making in the estimation of the public.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgic Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attack no tissue of the human body is exempt, no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The pills must assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders, whilst the ointment cures the local ailments, the pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body. The cure is neither temporary nor superficial, but permanent and complete, and the disease rarely recurs, so perfect has been the purification performed by these searching preparations.—Adv.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Lancashire will be held on the 2nd October next, at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool, under the presidency of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Dep. G.M., P.G.M. W.L., and the banquet will be held at the new Eberle Restaurant.

At the quarterly general meeting of the Liverpool Masonic Hall Committee, held on Friday, the 26th ult., Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., in the chair, a letter was read from Bro. Peter Ball, P.G. Tyler, resigning his position as House Steward of the Masonic Hall. The resignation was accepted, and it was resolved to advertise for a successor.

R. W. Bro. Col. Francis Burdett will probably be away from home for six weeks.

Bro. the Earl of Bective, M.P., R.W. Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmorland, has appointed Friday, September 13th, for the annual festival, which will be held at Millom, under the banner of Whitwell Lodge, No. 1390.

Lord Skelmersdale, M.W. Grand Mark Master of England, has granted a warrant to work a lodge of Mark Master Masons, at Cockermouth, under the title of the Faithful, No. 229, named after a late distinguished P.M. of Skiddaw (Craft) Lodge, in that town, who himself was a member of the Cumberland Lodge, No. 60, of Mark Masons, at Carlisle. The consecration and dedication of the new lodge will take place shortly.

The Midland Railway Company have given notice of their intention to supply travellers on their system with iced water gratis. The passengers by Midland line have merely to make a request for iced water at any of the company's own refreshment rooms, and a glass of the cool refreshing beverage is immediately supplied.

Hastings, in common with other seaside resorts, is suffering from a dearth of visitors, and, to make matters worse, subscriptions for the Hastings Regatta, in August, and St. Leonards Regatta, in September, are coming in very slowly. At a meeting, however, of the Hastings Committee, it was stated that Bro. Sir John Bennett had again promised a silver watch as a prize, and that Mr. H. Bracey, M.P., had forwarded a contribution of £5.

The Marquis of Lorne has accepted the Governor-Generalship of Canada. The Princess Louise will accompany him when he proceeds to Canada.

The State Apartments of Windsor Castle are now open to the public on the usual days.

The Royal Academy Exhibition will remain open on Bank Holiday until 10.30 p.m.

Bro. Edward Hertslet, C.B., (librarian and keeper of the papers at the Foreign Office) was on Monday last introduced to Her Majesty's presence and received the honour of Knighthood.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Vienna, July 23, says:—"Professor Charles Rokitsky, the eminent German physician, and author of several well-known medical treatises, died to-day."

The guardians of Plympton Union have refused, by a majority of eleven to seven, the gift of an harmonium for use in the workhouse chapel.

The Masonic Magazine for August is now ready. Price, post free, 7d. from the office, 198, Fleet-street, London.—Adv.

SADLERS WELLS THEATRE.—This establishment was offered for sale at the Mart, Tokenhouse Yard, on Tuesday, but as no higher sum than £2,000 was bid, the building was declared not sold.

THE LONDON HOSPITAL.—This institution has just received the munificent sum of £525 as a donation from the Mercer's Company, who have always been most liberal to the London Hospital. The Saddlers' Company have also voted £26 5s., being the second grant of that amount during this year.

A meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight will take place by the command of R.W. Bro. W. B. Beach, M.P., Grand Master, on Tuesday next, at two o'clock p.m., at the Philharmonic Hall, Southampton.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire took place at the Freemasons' Hall, Surrey-street, Sheffield, on the 24th ult. Sir Henry Edwards presided, and was supported by a numerous assemblage of brethren. A full report of the proceedings, owing to the pressure on our columns, is deferred till our next.

Whilst steaming into Portsmouth Harbour, her Majesty's troopship "Assistance," collided with Bro. T. Bracey's yacht "Sunbeam," lying at Gun Wharf buoy. Several stanchions and bulwarks were carried away in addition to slight damage on the starboard bow.

ERRATUM.—In our report last week of the Whitwell Mark Lodge, in the last line but one "officiating" was printed in error for "affiliating."

The Directors of the Bank of England have advanced their rate of discount from 3½ to 4 per cent.

Bro. Sir Gilbert Greenall, M.P., has announced his intention of again contesting Warrington in the Conservative interest at the general election.

Several lodge reports unavoidably stand over till next week.

MAILS FOR CYPRUS.—The Postmaster General having made arrangements with Bell's Asia Minor Company for the conveyance of a mail to and from Cyprus weekly, in connection at Alexandria with the Overland India mails via Brindisi, a mail for Cyprus will be made up in London on the evening of Friday next, the 2nd August, and thenceforward on every Friday evening. Mails by the same route will be brought to London with the Overland India mails via Brindisi. The following rates of postage will be chargeable:—Letters, 2½d. per half-ounce; post cards, 1½d. each; newspapers, 1d. each (not exceeding four ounces); books and patterns, two to four ounces, 2d.; every additional two ounces, 1d.; registration fee, 2d.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Votes of the Governors and Subscribers are earnestly solicited on behalf of

META BELL BRASIER.

The following letter, which appeared in the Freemason of the 20th July, will fully explain the merits of the case.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I trust that you will give space for the following letter, in aid of a girl named "Meta Bell Brasier," whose case is so unique and exceptional that no words from me would be needed to draw attention to it, as any body thoroughly reading the details cannot fail to understand and appreciate; but as a rule, the circulars are only carelessly glanced at and then thrown into the fire or waste paper basket; I wish to attract the notice of your readers to a case whose claims only require to be known to receive the support of those whose votes are disengaged. Indeed, so great is the claim, that in my opinion, other claims which have one or more chances, might fairly lay in abeyance to secure her election. I know, or rather feel, that as a rule, you might reasonably decline a letter for any particular case, but I do believe that you could afford to insert this on behalf of a candidate whose position stands almost if not quite alone. I beg to state that I was, and am, unacquainted with any of the family, but when the case was pointed out to me by one who had known the father and family well and for many years, I at once saw the great need of every exertion, as there are only three vacancies at the ensuing election, so I temporarily gave up a case which could better afford to wait.

The case is as follows: The girl's father was initiated into Freemasonry in 1853, died in May, 1878, leaving six daughters unprovided for, the youngest of whom is the subject of my letter, and should she not succeed in the ensuing election, her age will preclude her from another attempt; now, the great claim consists in these facts, that our brother was a subscribing member for over twenty-five years, that he was a constant subscriber to, and took an active interest in all the Institutions, and, brethren, this is the only chance we have of showing in a small way our appreciation of one who so ably performed his work and assisted the Craft during his life, let it not be said that the Craft generally failed to render so small a tribute to one so worthy of our remembrance.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

CHARLES JOHN PERCEVAL,

V.P. of all the Institutions.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.
Craft Masonry.

THE ALL SAINTS LODGE (No. 1717).—This flourishing lodge held its regular meeting on Friday, the 2nd inst., at the Town Hall, Poplar, when the following brethren were present: Bros. W. H. Farnfield, W. M.; J. Dennis, S.W.; J. K. Coleman, acting J.W.; N. J. Fenner, Treas.; Leonard Potts, S.D.; W. C. Young, I.G.; C. A. Smith, Org.; J. J. Abbott, T. Bates (who acted as J.D.), H. J. Hancock, E. Witherston, E. Phillips, J. B. Finney, R. M. Talbot, T. L. Kennett and F. A. White, P.M. 907, and honorary member of the lodge. The minutes having been read and confirmed ballot was taken for Messrs. Hunt, Grout, Mills and Kirk, the result in each case proving unanimously affirmative, these gentlemen, together with M. Hine, who had been balloted for and approved at a previous meeting, being the initiates of the evening. The lodge having been opened in the Second Degree Bro. T. L. Kennett, candidate for raising, was duly and regularly raised to the Sublime Degree, this part of the ceremony being performed by Bro. J. Dennis, S.W. (by permission of the W.M.); he having initiated Bro. Kennett and also advanced him to the F.C. Degree. The lodge was resumed to the First Degree, and during the temporary absence of the W.M., Bro. N. J. Fenner, Treas., took the opportunity, this being the last regular meeting before the installation, of proposing that a jewel with a suitable inscription be presented to the W.M. on the termination of his year of office. He spoke in eulogistic terms of the W.M., referring to the fact that he was in reality the founder of the lodge, as the idea originated with him, and that during the year he had worked heartily for the good of the lodge, its present prosperous condition being mainly due to his exertions. This being seconded by Bro. F. A. White in a short but pithy speech, was put to the meeting, and it is almost needless to say unanimously carried. The W.M., having entered, was informed of the resolution, and in a few well chosen words heartily thanked the brethren. He was proud to have been a founder and the first W.M. of the All Saints Lodge, and if during his year of office he had won the esteem and confidence of the members of the lodge, he was well repaid for any little trouble he had been put to. The mark of their favour was a source of great gratification to him, and in the future as in the past he would always have the interests of the lodge at heart. The candidates for initiation being in attendance were then severally and duly admitted to the First Degree. The next business being the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, the Secretary announced the brethren eligible for the position, and the unanimous choice of the lodge fell on Bro. J. Dennis, S.W.; who briefly returned thanks. Bro. N. J. Fenner was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Harrison, Tyler, and Bros. Bates, Potts, and Witherston were nominated to serve on the Audit Committee. A letter of resignation, on account of ill health, was read from Bro. Chard, and the lodge, after a meeting of about three hours, duration, was closed with solemn prayer and adjourned.

FARRINGDON WITHOUT LODGE (No. 1745).—The last meeting of this new but prosperous lodge was held at the Viaduct Hotel, Holborn, on the 29th ult. The lodge was opened at half-past five o'clock in the afternoon by Bro. W. H. Jackson, jun., W.M., P.M. Royal Arthur, assisted by Bros. C. Jacques, S.W.; T. C. Walls, P.P.G.O. of Middx., &c., J.W., and Sec. (pro tem.); W. Ramsey, P.M., Treasurer; H. A. Dubois, P.M., P.P.G.D. of Middx., &c., Hon. I.P.M.; H. J. Lardner, S.D.; and Parkinson, Tyler. The visitors were Bros. T. L. Green, W.M. 1194; W. Malthouse, West Smithfield; and S. W. Fraser, 1670. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M., with the assistance of his officers, initiated Messrs. W. Potter, jun., and C. Potter into Craft mysteries, and passed Bros. M. Samuel and Quilter to the degree of F.C.; both ceremonies being well performed. Upon the motion of Bro. Walls, J.W., seconded by Bro. Jacques, S.W., Bros. Wellsman, Dalwood, and Dodson, of the St. Dunstan's Lodge, for their services to the Farringdon Without Lodge, were unanimously elected honorary members. Bro. Newton, of the Belgrave Lodge, having been balloted for as a joining member, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to an elegant repast, well catered for by Bro. Ackland, manager to Messrs. Spiers and Pond. Upon the removal of the cloth the customary Royal and Craft toasts were done full justice to. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed in a neat speech by Bro. Dubois. "The Initiates" having been duly toasted, made a suitable response. "The Visitors," "The Treasurer," and "The Officers" followed. The latter toast was responded to by Bros. Jacques, Walls, and Lardner, on behalf of themselves and absent brethren. In proposing "The Masonic Charities," the W.M. made a very exhaustive speech upon the principle and necessities for support of those valuable institutions. The name of Bro. Dubois having been associated with the toast, that brother in reply endorsed the remarks of the W.M., and also made a powerful appeal upon behalf of the whole of the Masonic Charities, and hoped that No. 1745 would be well represented at the festivals in 1879. The Tyler having been called upon to discharge his duty, the proceedings terminated.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (No. 41).—A lodge of emergency was held at the Masonic Hall, Bath, on Monday, July 22nd, almost especially for the purpose of initiating a candidate, elected some time ago, who has been on a voyage, and considering the time of year there was a fair muster of brethren, Past Masters, and visitors. The lodge was opened in due form at 7.45 p.m. by the W.M., Bro. F. Wilkinson, supported by Bros. F. J. Brown, I.P.M., and P.S.G.W.; Major J. W. Preston, P.M.; Geo. Falkner, S.W.; P. Abraham, J.W.; T. P. Ashley, P.M., Treas.; W. Hunt, Acting Sec. pro tem; J. J. Robinson, I.G.; A. Holmes, and E. J. B. Mercer, Stewards. In the absence of Bro. Wilton, Bro. Carey, P.M., kindly undertook the office of D.C.; Bro. Davies, S.D.; W. B. Gregory, J.D. There were also present Bros. Ames; James Clark, P.M.; T. E. Wilton, jun.; Richd. Mann; W. L. Baldwin; J. W. Murlis; R. B. Cater; Chas. Wilkinson, S. G. Mitchell, P.M. The visitors present were W. F. Reeves, P.M. 906, P.P.G.O.; F. D. Gardiner, W.M. Rectitude Lodge, Corsham. The W.M. first invested Bro. W. L. Baldwin with the Organist's collar. The candidate Mr. S. S. Parton, being presented, was duly admitted and initiated; the ceremony being impressively performed by the W.M., after which Bro. Ashley delivered the charge in his usual clear manner; the working tools were presented by Bro. Geo. Falkner. An apology from Bro. Dr. Henry Hopkins for absence, being at present on the continent, was made by Bro. W. Hunt. Ballot was then successfully taken for two newly-proposed candidates, Mr. H. B. Smith and Mr. W. E. Smith. The lodge was closed in perfect harmony at 9 o'clock, when by the kind hospitality of the W.M., Bro. Frank Wilkinson, the brethren adjourned to the large room adjoining the lodge to an excellent collation, and after the usual loyal toasts, "The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., and the Princess and Family," which were heartily and loyally responded to amidst capital firing. A special toast and farewell address was given to a most respected brother and P.M. of 41, Major J. W. Preston, who is about removing to Birmingham to a higher appointment, and having evinced, during his long connection with this lodge, an untiring exertion, a never failing and regular pursuit of all its duties, the kindly acknowledgment of these Masonic characteristics were most heartily evinced by every brother connected with this lodge; and the Major having feelingly responded, a similar compliment was paid to the S.W., Bro. Geo. Falkner, who will be leaving Bath shortly, and who has passed through all the offices to the entire satisfaction of every Mason he has come in contact with. Bro. Falkner responded in a neat little speech. After some capital songs by the brethren, and a few other suitable toasts to the visitors and the officers of the Royal Cumberland, all of whom were highly complimented by the W.M. on the very creditable manner in which the duties were performed, and their regular attendance, the meeting separated after a most enjoyable evening.

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights (No. 148).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, 29th ult. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M., Bro. Thomas Tunstall, I.P.M., presided, assisted by the Wardens, and a goodly number of members and visitors. The lodge was opened in form, and the minutes read and confirmed. Bros. Dr. Mackie and G. F. Curzon being candidates for preferment were examined and entrusted. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and the two brethren re-admitted and passed. The lecture peculiar to the Fellow Craft Degree was delivered by Bro. John Bowes, P.M., P.P.G.J.W. of Cumberland and Westmorland. The lodge having been closed down in solemn form, the brethren separated in peace and harmony.

GARSTON.—Lodge of Harmony (No. 220).—The annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Wellington Hotel, on Wednesday, the 24th ult., at four in the afternoon. The W.M., Bro. Samuel Tickle, presided, assisted by his officers and a large number of P.M.'s, members, and visitors, including Bros. H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec.; John Bowes, P.P.G.J.W. Cumberland and Westmorland; Vines, Prov. G.D.C., and others. The lodge having been opened, and the minutes read and confirmed. Bros. Baker and Vines presented Bro. George Price, S.W., and W.M. elect, for the benefit of installation. The preliminaries having been completed, the W.M. invited Bro. John Bowes to instal Bro. Price, which he did with the aid of a Board of Installed Masters, properly constituted. The charges to the Wardens and brethren were delivered by Bro. Baker, P.M. After the transaction of some routine business, the lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, well served by Bro. Wood, the host of the Wellington, and under the presidency of the newly-installed W.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly cared for, and in the course of the evening the W.M. presided, on behalf of the lodge, a costly Past Master's jewel to the I.P.M., Bro. Tickle.

HAMPTON COURT.—Campbell Lodge (No. 1415).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at the Mitre Hotel, on Saturday, the 13th ult., when the following brethren were present: Bros. F. W. Levander, W.M.; H. C. Levander, S.W.; J. L. Thomas, J.W.; T. Cubitt, Treas.; D. M. Dewar, P.M., Sec.; R. M. Jones, S.D.; R. Applegarth, J.D.; and W. S. Moses, I.G.; and the following brethren, members of the lodge: Bros. E. Kimber, P.M.; Thos. Keene, P.M.; C. J. Wallis, W. O. Bywater, J. W. Lambert, and G. A. Rooks. Visitors: Bros. Col. F. Burdett, P.G.M.; P. de L. Long, P.G.D.; Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; Fredk. Binckes, P.G.S.; W. Bristol, 1364; W. Murlis, 1642; R. A. Wright, 504; Col. J. Peters, 1460; W. Stephens, 1489; J. M. Klenk, 1339; C. G. Rushworth, 1309; and F. W. Percival. After the minutes of last meeting had been read and confirmed, and other lodge business transacted, the W.M. installed his successor in the chair of K.S. in a most correct and impressive manner, which elicited universal approbation. Bro. H. C. Levander, having been saluted, appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. J. L. Thomas, S.W.; W. S. Moses, J.W.; Thos. Cubitt, Treas.; D. M. Dewar, Sec.; J. W. Lambert, S.D.; G. A. Rooks, J.D.; W. O. Bywater, I.G.; C. J. Wallis, Steward; F. H. Atkins, Org.; B. Humphrey, Dir. of Cer.; J. Gilbert, Tyler. A Past Master's jewel having been presented to Bro. W. F. Levander, the lodge was closed and adjourned to an elegant banquet, prepared in Bro. Sadler's best style.

WIGTON.—Chapter of St. John's (No. 327).—The quarterly convocation of this chapter was held at the Lion and Lamb Hotel, High-street, on Thursday, the 1st inst., at which a number of members were present, amongst whom may be mentioned Comps. Henry Bowes, Z.; Jas. Gardiner, H.; Joseph Pearson, J.; John Gate, P.Z.; Hoodless, E.; Lazenby, N.; Robinson, as P.S.; Walker, as A.S.; Harris, Jun. S.; and Richardson, P.Z., Janitor. The chapter was opened in ancient form, and the minutes of the previous convocation being read and confirmed, the chapter proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. Comp. Gardiner was unanimously elected Z.; Pearson, H.; Hoodless, J.; Bewes, P.Z., Treas.; Lazenby, E.; Carrick, N.; Robinson, P.S.; and Richardson, Janitor. The business of the chapter having been disposed of and the chapter closed, the companions partook of refreshments.

TWICKENHAM.—Francis Burdett Chapter (No. 1503). A convocation of this chapter took place on the 24th ultimo, at the Albany Hotel. Amongst those present were Comps. W. Wigginton, P.G.S.N. Middx., M.E.Z.; Tomlinson, P.Z., H.; C. Horsley, P.P.G.S. Middx., Treas., and acting J.; H. Court, S.E.; W. Taylor, P.S.; Walls, P.G.O. Middx., 2nd Assistant; Rushworth, W.; H. Saunders Platts, Prudent Brethren; Harrison, Janitor. The minutes of the previous convocation having been read and confirmed, the M.E.Z., with the assistance of his officers, ably exalted Bro. Richnole, 1503, and Dr. Jefferies, No. 2, Kilwinning, to the Sublime Degree of the R.A. Several communications having been read, the convocation was duly closed, and the companions adjourned to an excellent collation, at which the customary toasts were duly honoured. Comp. E. Horsley replied at length to the toast of "The Provincial Grand Officers, Present and Past." He also proposed in very flattering terms the health of "The M.E.Z." Comp. Wigginton having highly replied, gave "The Exalters." This toast having been duly honoured, Comp. Dr. Jefferies, upon behalf of his co-exalted and himself, made a very interesting speech in reply. The toast of "The Second and Third Principals," "The Treasurer and Scribe E.," and "The Officers," quickly followed, and were briefly acknowledged by the companions thus honoured. The proceedings terminated with the Janitor's toast. The next convocation of this chapter will be held on the fourth Wednesday in October next.

RICHMOND.—Harcourt Preceptory.—This preceptory met on the 16th ult., at the Greyhound, under the presidency of the Eminent Preceptor, the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, M.A. The Preceptory was opened at 4.15 p.m., when there were present Sir Kts. Rev. A. W. Hall, Preceptor; W. Nettleship, Constable; Hyde Pullen, as Marshal; Dr. Harcourt, as Sub-Marshal and Captain of the Guard; Frank Richardson, as Reg.; R. H. Thrupp, as Prelate; Grillion and Boor, as B. Brs.; E. M. Lott, as Org.; and the following visitors:—V.E. Shadwell H. Clerke, G. Sub-Prior; Sir Knt. Charles Gooldeen, K.C.T., Treas., Great Priory; Hon. R.W. H. Giddy, Prov. Prior, South Africa

Sir P. Colquhoun, LL.D., Past Grand Chancellor; Hyde Pullen, P.G.D.C.; Charles Grillion, Studholme Preceptory; J. Lockhart Sim, and Standish Grove Grady. The muster roll was read, and the minutes of last preceptory were read and confirmed. Apologies were received for non-attendance from Sir Knights Col. Burdett, Dr. Willett, T. W. W. Bullock, and C. H. Rogers Harrison. Comp. Ralph Gooding, B.A., M.D., London, of Heath Lodge, and of Prince of Wales Chapter, 259, was balloted for, and installed. The preceptory was closed at 5.30 p.m., and the Provincial Priory was opened, the Harcourt Preceptory having previously received the provincial officers. Present: Sir Kts. Shadwell H. Clerke, Great Sub-Prior, as Installing Officer; Rev. A. W. Hall, Prelate; F. W. H. Ramsay, Sub-Prior; G. Harcourt, M.D., P.P. Prior; Hyde Pullen, as Constable; G. E. Wainwright, as Marshal; J. Lockhart Sim, as Sub-Marshal; R. H. Thrupp, Chancellor; Frank Richardson, as D.C. and Captain of the Guard; J. R. Boor, Registrar and Treasurer; W. F. Nettleship, Herald; E. M. Lott, as Organist; Ralph Gooding, (just installed). Visitors: V.E. Sir Kt. Shadwell H. Clerke, Gr. Sub-Prior, Installing Officer; Sir Kts. Chas. Gooden, K.C.T., Treas. Gr. Priory; Hon. R. W. Giddy, Prov. Prior S. Africa; Sir P. Colquhoun, LL.D., Past Grand Chancellor; Hyde Pullen, P.G.D.C.; Charles Grillion, Studholme Preceptory; J. Lockhart Sim, Standish Grove Grady. The V.E. the Prov. Prior nominate, V.E. Sir Kt. General John Studholme Brownrigg, C.B.; the V.E. Sir Kt. Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, Great Sub-Prior, Installing Officer, and other Grand Officers and Officers of Provincial Grand Priory were received under the Arch of Steel. The Prov. Priory was then opened, muster roll called, letters of apology for non-attendance read from Sir Knights same as at Harcourt Preceptory. Minutes of last Provincial Priory, held at the Greyhound, 28th July, 1876, read and confirmed. Sir Kt. J. R. Boor, Prov. Registrar and Treasurer, then gave his report: Balance in hand on general account £28 10s. 6d., on Alms account £7 2s. 6d.; total, £35 13s. Accounts audited and found correct by Sir Kts. Thrupp and Nettleship. The report being considered satisfactory, Sir Kt. Boor was again re-elected Treasurer by ballot. The V.E. the Prov. Prior then appointed his officers, viz., Sir Kts. Dr. Ramsay, Sub-Prior; W. F. Nettleship, Constable; G. E. Wainwright, Marshal; Rev. A. W. Hall, Prelate; R. H. Thrupp, Chancellor; J. R. Boor, Registrar and Treasurer; F. W. Bullock, 1st Std. Br.; Capt. Blake, 2nd Std. Br.; Ralph Gooding, Sub-Marshal; W. H. Dodwell, Captain of the Guard; F. Richardson, 1st Herald; Alfred Isaac Bristowe, 2nd Herald; E. M. Lott, Org.; Frater Geo. Harrison, Equerry. Alms collected £1 5s. 6d. Prov. Priory closed, 6.15 p.m. A procession was formed and entered the preceptory, passing under the Arch of Steel, and the chair was taken by Sir Kt. Col. Shadwell Clerke, the G. Sub-Prior of England. After opening the Provincial Priory Sir Kt. Shadwell Clerke addressed the assembled Knights, and informed them that in consequence of the resignation of Sir Kt. Harcourt as Provincial Prior of Surrey, Gen. J. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., had been appointed by the Great Prior to be P.G.P. of Surrey, and that it would be his duty that evening to install Sir Kt. General Brownrigg. He alluded to the valuable and eminent services which had been rendered by Sir Kt. Harcourt, and said that he was sure that the appointment of Sir Kt. General Brownrigg, who already held high Masonic honours in the county, and was well-known as a most energetic Mason, would be most beneficial to the province, and he congratulated both Gen. Brownrigg and the province on the appointment. General Brownrigg then took the required obligations, and a procession being formed he advanced through the Arch of Steel to the east, and was duly installed by the Great Sub-Prior, and was saluted by the assembled Knights. After having thanked the Knights for his reception, the Prov. Prior expressed his sense of the valuable services which had been rendered by his friend and predecessor Sir Kt. Harcourt, whose position in the province it would be difficult to fill, and Sir Kt. Harcourt having responded, the P. Priory proceeded to the discharge of its duties, and the P.P. appointed his officers for the ensuing year. The preceptory having been closed the Sir Knights adjourned to banquet, and afterwards proposed and drunk the usual K.T. toasts. General Brownrigg having proposed the toast of "The Queen," which was drunk in usual K.T. form, gave "The Master of the Order," and this toast having been honoured, General Brownrigg said: Sir Knights, on a recent occasion that official, whose health I am about to ask you to drink, the Eminent Grand Prior, remarked (I thought very justly, and at all events had my entire sympathy) how very advisable it would be that speeches on all occasions, especially on Masonic occasions, should be made as short as possible. I am sure you must all agree with me how sensible the remark was, and how wise it would be for us to follow it. I will thank you, therefore, now to drink "The Health of Lord Skelmersdale, the Great Prior of England and Wales." Most of us know him personally, and have seen the way he performs all his duties. It is not only the charming manner that he has about him, but I do think that as a fine, upstanding, handsome Englishman he is very well worth looking at. He holds his position well wherever he goes. I am old enough to remember him when a very little boy, and I have watched his career since he was that small boy and until he grew the fine man he is. He takes a leading part in all manly English pursuits and sports. In those pursuits and sports, in cricket for instance, he excels, and it is gratifying to us, who are members of this Order, to have such a fine type of an Englishman at our head. Up to this point I have omitted the name of a distinguished visitor which I ought to have coupled with this toast. That distinguished visitor has done me the honour to-day of installing me in the dignified position I now hold. With "The Health of Lord Skelmersdale" I beg to give you "The Health of the Sub-Prior, Col. Shadwell Clerke." He comes next in rank to Lord Skelmersdale, and we are all aware how able a lieutenant Lord Skelmersdale has in him. Aware as we are of this fact, I am sure none of us are more aware of it than Lord Skelmersdale himself. His ability was shewn most manifestly to-day. I must say I am deeply impressed with the ceremony in which I took a principal part. I have never seen it before, and what pleased me more than anything else was that all the Sir Knights were permitted to see the whole ceremony. We old Masons can see the necessity of a Board of Installed Masters, where every one but an installed Master is kept out of the lodge at an installation; but in this degree everybody is allowed to be present to see what is done, and I was particularly gratified to find that they had the opportunity of witnessing a ceremony performed in an admirable manner. It was a very beautiful ceremony, and I am quite sure I had the sympathies of you all when I submitted to that patriarchal benediction which was so ably delivered. Col. Shadwell Clerke, in reply said: I thank you very sincerely indeed for this toast. Having had the privilege of knowing your Provincial Prior for many years it was a high honour for me to attend to install him. I felt at the same time very sorry indeed that that was in succession to so good and so worthy a Sir Knight as I have on my right (Dr. Harcourt.) Still, these things must be done when ordered, and consequently I am here to-day. As I said just now, it was very gratifying to me to put so good and worthy a brother in the chair. I omitted to tell you that Lord Skelmersdale fully intended to be down here; but at the last moment there was an important whip in the House of Lords. He told me yesterday that it was perfectly impossible he could attend here, and he begged me to apologise to the Provincial Prior and the Sir Knights present. All you who know Lord Skelmersdale will credit him with a desire to be here. The Duke of Connaught would also have been here, but I know of my own knowledge that it was simply impossible he could attend. As short speeches are the order of the day, I will not say more than that I am very much obliged to you indeed, and also tender my best thanks to the very important officer, the Prelate of the Order, who assisted me, and whose duties gave great zest to the proceedings. Dr. Harcourt proposed the next toast, and said: I am just placed in that position to observe a happy medium. I am afraid of saying too much, and I should be ashamed if I said too little. I cannot sufficiently praise the high individual to whom this glass is dedicated—the Provincial Prior of Surrey. You need not any great or grand language from me to show you the charm he feels in Masonry, the interest he takes in it, or how much the welfare of this province must increase under his auspices. I think you are fortunate in having so able and so excellent a Sir Knight to preside over you. I have no doubt that he will properly exact from you due obedience to his orders, and that at the same time those orders will be such as will entitle him to the love and esteem of every member of the province. From circumstances of many years' standing I might say a great deal more, but the order of the day is short speeches, and if I made a speech of an hour I could not add to the high position our Provincial Prior has taken in the Craft, and not only in the Craft but in the province and in society. General Brownrigg, in reply, said: I hope that when the time arrives that I find myself in the position the Sir Knight who has just preceded me finds himself, I may be enabled to retire with the grace and dignity with which he has retired from his office. I think nothing can be more touching than the way in which he has spoken to us. We all know the admirable way in which he has performed his work, and it makes it all the more difficult for those who succeed him to perform their duties. I will, however, sincerely do my best to follow the good example he has set me. I must own that I feel disappointed at the state of the Order in the province. At this Provincial Priory one preceptory is not represented at all, and one preceptory is almost extinct. However, I was a little bit encouraged by a conversation I had with one of the members of the Grove Preceptory, and I am not without hope that with a little good feeling, and a little give-and-take on both sides we may be able to resuscitate that. I think with the instincts of an old soldier I may be able to impress upon them that obedience—and not only obedience, but in fact fidelity to our Masonic promises—should induce them to come under our banner again. I have good hopes that we may be able to succeed. I thank you Sir Kt. Harcourt for the kind way you have spoken of myself, and I can only say that I trust when the time of my retirement comes I may retire as full of years and as full of honours as you do. General Brownrigg: Sir Knights, I ought to have coupled the few observations I ventured to make in our excellent Sir Knight Harcourt's presence with a command that you should join me and show your old fidelity by drinking his health. I am sure there has been no toast drunk this evening with greater warmth, affection, or fervour than the toast I now ask you to drink to "Our Past Excellent Prior." Dr. Harcourt, in acknowledging the toast, said: If there is one thing more than another that I dislike it is "ego"-ism; yet from the very candid way in which this toast has been received, I find that if I were to give way to it I could only talk of myself. That I beg to decline. At the same time, I feel how grateful I am at having the good opinion of those with whom I have been so long in contact. It was certainly a source of much regret on my part to retire from the high position that I held; but there were various reasons for it. I found that I had not the energy that is absolutely necessary in these days to carry on the work. I felt that my time was getting past, and that a new Provincial Prior would give life and energy to the Order. That was one reason why I wished to retire. I do not intend to retire altogether. I hope for a long time to come I may, like the old soldier, "shoulder my crutch," and see in preceptories how the work is done. Col. Shadwell-Clerke, in proposing "The Health of the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall," said: We have met here to-day under the banner of the Harcourt Preceptory. Before the Provincial Priory was opened we met in the Harcourt Preceptory, and I believe every one here will agree with me that we were charmed with the beautiful work we saw there. I never saw better work in the course of my life, and I must congratulate the Harcourt Preceptory on the manner in which it was done, and more especially on having an Eminent Preceptor who could do the work so beautifully. Our Bro. Sir Knight Ambrose Hall has made his name in the Order of the Temple, as he has done in other Orders; whatever Orders he has entered into he has made his mark there. I have had the privilege of knowing him some years, and I do really mean it when I say that a more enthusiastic and a more effective worker in all these different Orders we belong to I have never come across in my life. It is, therefore, Sir Knights, a very great and peculiar pleasure to me to be permitted to propose to-night his health, as the Preceptor of the Harcourt Preceptory, to thank him personally for the treat he has given me and the other visitors, in shewing how the Templar ceremony should be worked in its proper manner. I congratulate the candidate to-night, our Sir Knight, Dr. Gooding, on having really received that degree in proper style, which is not always the case in this Order, as frequently the reception of other degrees is not in their respective Orders. It is a very great pleasure to me to see our Bro. Hall perform that work, and I, therefore, have even unusual pleasure in proposing his health to-night, as the Preceptor of the leading preceptory in the Provincial Priory of Surrey. The Rev. Ambrose W. Hall in reply said: I consider this a proud day for the Harcourt Preceptory; but at the same time, I consider that my name being drunk alone is not quite what it should be, because we of the Harcourt Preceptory are as a body entertaining the Provincial Priory of Surrey. At the same time, for the kind words that have emanated from our very excellent and worthy Grand Sub-Prior I assure you that I, as Eminent Preceptor of this preceptory (and I feel and speak the sentiments of all the Sir Knights belonging to it) have very great pleasure in seeing so eminent a Mason as himself, and the very eminent men who compose the Provincial Priory of Surrey, in our midst. He has alluded to the Harcourt Preceptory as the first of this province. Although the preceptories here are small in number, we are the head of them, and I have endeavoured, by good work, though not of the quality Col. Clerke has made it, to make the preceptory a good one. That I shall continue to endeavour to do, and I know the other Sir Knights who succeed me will do as I have done. Thus we shall keep the Harcourt Preceptory in the proud position it now holds in this very important province. I trust that our very Excellent and Eminent Provincial Grand Prior will have the opportunity of often coming among us, and when he does he may be assured that he will have that kind and brotherly greeting which we have endeavoured to hold out to him to-day. Speeches, as you say, should be short, and therefore I will not say much more, except that this preceptory, standing, as it does, in an excellent position, will, I hope, give an impetus to the other preceptories of the province, which I think have not done their duty towards our very Eminent Provincial Grand Prior—that it will show them what they ought to do. I think they ought to have been represented here to-day, and I hope and trust that the preceptory, to which the Eminent Prior has alluded, at Ewell, the Grove Preceptory will, through his influence—and I know his influence is great, and his persuasion and kind courtesy of manner is still greater—persuade that preceptory to hold its own again in this province. General Brownrigg: Sir Knights, there is at least one more toast, which perhaps we ought to have drunk before the toast of "The Visitors." We have several distinguished visitors here; but there is one especially who has made his mark in our Order, and who has done right and real good service. All those who know him and have the advantage of his personal acquaintance love and respect him; and therefore in giving "The Health of the Visitors," I shall couple with it "The Health of Sir Kt. Patrick Colquhoun." I could say a great deal more, but in his presence I would rather not do so. We began by saying we would make short speeches, but I fear we have gone into longer ones than I intended. I ask you to drink the toast of "The Visitors," and to receive it with all the warmth of fraternal affection, coupling with it the name of Sir Kt. Patrick Colquhoun, Past Grand Chancellor of the Order. Sir Patrick Colquhoun—On behalf of the visitors, and on my own behalf, I return you my hearty thanks for the compliment paid to me individually, and to the visitors through me. I speak to you as a kind of corpus mortuum, and you will look upon me in the light of a resurrection. If you will allow me to say, it puts me in mind of that distinguished prophet and that unfortunate monarch who read the writing on the wall on a certain palace. On my own behalf and on that of the visitors I thank you cordially and heartily, and I think I have now made the shortest speech of the evening. (Laughter.) The Equerry's toast was next given by Sir Kt. George Harrison, and drank by the Sir Knights, after which the company returned to town.

On the occasion of the inspection of the squadron at Spithead by her Majesty, on Tuesday next the 13th inst., there will be no general issue of tickets, as only a very limited number of vessels can be set apart for the conveyance of official visitors. Naval officers on half-pay, and military officers of Portsmouth, garrison, will be accommodated on board her Majesty's ships Valorous and Dasher respectively, and should apply to the Commander in Chief's office at Portsmouth Dockyard. The inspection will take place at four p.m.

SUPREME GRAND CHAPTER.

Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Freemasons was held on Wednesday, when the following Grand Officers were present: Comps. Saml. Lawson, Z.; Capt. Platte, H.; Capt. Phillips, J.; Col. Clerke, P.S.; Rev C. W. Arnold, Asst. S.E.; S. C. Snell, Asst. S.E.; Erasmus Wilson, N.; H. G. Bus, as E.; James Lewis Thomas, S.B.; and Robertson, D.C. Among the other companions present we noticed Comps. Colonel Creaton, Long, Glaisher, Pullen, Grey, Filer, Rucker, Nunn, and Holman.

The business on the paper included the report of the Committee of General Purposes, which was adopted, and petitions for six new chapters, five of which were granted, to be attached to the following lodges:

Star of Gwalia Chapter—Lodge 1066, Bengal.
Marlborough Chapter—Lodge 1399, Woodstock.
Mid-Surrey Chapter—Lodge 1044, Camberwell.
St. Peter, Westminster, Chapter—Lodge 1533, London.
St. Thomas Chapter—Lodge 142, London.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held on the 5th inst. in the Freemasons' Hall, George-street, Edinburgh. There was an unusually large attendance, the hall being crowded in every part.

The Throne was occupied by Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart, Bart., Grand Master Mason of Scotland; the Senior Warden's chair was filled by Bro. F. A. Barrow, S.G.W., and Bro. Shaw-Stewart, Senior Grand Deacon, discharged the duties of Junior Warden. Among those on the dais were Bros. the Rev. Thompson Grant, H. Inglis of Torsonce, D.G.M.; Colonel Campbell of Blythwood, S.G.M.; Col. W. M. Neilson, Prov. Grand Master, Glasgow; T. Halket, Grand Bible Bearer; Alex. Hay, G.J.; Captain Hilla, G.M.; D. Murray Lyon, Grand Sec.; D. Kinnear, Grand Cashier, and others. There was a large number of representatives present from the Western Provinces, and among others in the body of the hall were Bros. Maclean, Sec. Prince's Lodge; J. Munro, P.M. 360; J. Smellie, Pr. S.W. 489; Thos. Stobo, R.W.M.; D.G. Stobe, J.W. 581; W. H. Bickerton, Prov. Grand Sec. Glasgow; Wm. Bell, Pr. M. 434; J. Steven, S.W. 116; J. A. Ferguson, Pr. S.W. 0; W. L. Shaw, Pr. J.W. 591; W. F. Shaw, Pr. J.W. 230; J. M. Watters, J.W. 17; J. Baird, J.W. 597; J. Morgan, R.W.M. 219; J. Nisbet, Pr. M. 453; Wm. Officer, Pr. M. Egypt and Penn.; Wm. Edwards, R.W.M. 36; W. L. Mair, and J. Rhind, Dr. J. Loth, Pr. S.W. 479, and others.

The Grand Master having opened the lodge in the F.A. Degree and raised it to the Sublime Stage, Bro. Nisbet, Glasgow, before entering on the business, complained about a handbill which had been distributed at the door of the hall, requesting brethren to vote against his motions which were to come up, on the ground that they were merely proposed for the purpose of turning certain gentlemen out of office.

Bro. D. Robertson rose to speak to a point of order, when great uproar ensued, and some time elapsed before quietness was restored.

Bro. Robertson went on to say that they had nothing to do with bills distributed outside, and the business should be proceeded with. (A Voice: "It was inside the Grand Lodge.")

The Grand Master then said: An irregularity has been committed, but it is outside, and the Grand Lodge has nothing to do with it. There is a lot of business before us, and my wish and duty is to act fairly and impartially. (Hear, hear.) It may be very improper, but it is not before the Grand Lodge, and we had better go on with the business. (Cheers.)

A number of proxy commissions having been sustained, the Grand Master proposed that their Royal Highnesses Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught, and Prince Leopold be elected honorary members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

The motion was enthusiastically adopted, amid loud cheers, and the Grand Secretary was instructed to communicate the decision of the Grand Lodge.

The minutes of the Grand Committee stated that the Finance Committee reported "that at a meeting held on the 6th of May they had resolved to recommend to Grand Committee that the amount of arrears found due by the Auditors be ranked for on the sequestrated estate of the late Grand Secretary. Further, that having met on the 9th of May, for the purpose of giving definite instructions regarding the investment of £1500 of Grand Lodge funds, as recommended by Grand Committee and confirmed by the Grand Lodge, they had instructed that the money be invested on deposit receipt with the Standard Property Investment Company (Limited), at four and one-half per cent. per annum, for three years—the money to be lodged in the name of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and payable to the order of the Grand Cashier or the Grand Secretary, and any two members of the Finance Committee for the time being—the Cashier to hand over the deposit-receipt to the Grand Secretary for preservation.

The Grand Secretary exhibited the deposit-receipt for £1500. The report was approved of.

Bro. Thomson, Galashiels, moved that this portion of the minutes be not approved, and called in question the stability of the company.

An acrimonious discussion followed, in the course of which Bro. Robertson maintained that the security was undoubted, while a number of others were of opinion that the debts of the Grand Lodge should all be paid before any money was invested.

There were loud cries of "Vote, vote," when Bro. Mair, as counsel for Grand Lodge, stated that the committee had executive powers conferred upon them, and in pursuance of these powers had entered into this contract. The money had been invested, and could not be touched for three years, and the Grand Lodge had no power to break the contract. The motion was then withdrawn.

Bro. Nisbet moved that the minutes, so far as they referred to the reappointment of the Finance Committee, as recommended by Grand Lodge, be not approved. He proceeded to speak at length in support of his proposal, but was frequently interrupted.

Colonel W. M. Neilson expressed the hope that brethren would not behave in such an unruly fashion. In Glasgow they were accused of conducting business in a somewhat noisy manner, but he never saw anything there as bad as what he had witnessed in Grand Lodge.

Bro. Bickerton seconded the motion for the disapproval of the minutes, and a vote was afterwards taken, when the minutes were adopted by 272 to 108.

Bro. William Mann called attention to an entry in the minutes to the effect that—"It was also, on the motion of Bro. Bickerton, seconded by Bro. William Barry, R.W.M. No. 223, unanimously resolved—'That Bro. Capt. Henry Moreland be asked to apologise for the insulting, unbecoming, and unmasonic language he had in open lodge used towards the Right Worshipful the Grand Secretary, and to withdraw the words, which were very much out of place, and totally inapplicable to Bro. Murray Lyon, either in his official or his personal character.'" Bro. Mann said he had received a telegram from Capt. Moreland, who was unwell, asking that this matter should not be disposed of until he was able to attend. If Capt. Moreland had used the language indicated in the minutes, it should have been taken notice of in Grand Lodge and checked at the time.

Bro. Bickerton said that the language referred to had been used in the Grand Lodge of India.

On the motion of Bro. Officer this portion of the minutes was remitted back to Grand Committee.

Bro. R. Bryce called attention to an application by the Lodge Caledonian, Edinburgh, No. 392, for an amended diploma in favour of a brother who had been initiated under his "professional" name, when the Grand Secretary was instructed to alter the register and issue a new diploma on payment of the full fee of ten shillings and sixpence. The Committee also directed the Secretary to minute their disapproval of candidates being received under assumed names.

Bro. Bryce stated that the mistake had been inadvertently committed, and moved that the penalty should be modified.

After some discussion the decision was confirmed.

The Grand Lodge then took into consideration the proposed alterations on Grand Lodge laws. Those under Section A, which contained 36 clauses, with one slight exception, had met with the approval of the Grand Committee, and after a considerable amount of discussion as to how they were to be disposed of, a vote was taken, which decided by a large majority that they were to be considered in cumulo.

Before proceeding to the vote, Colonel W. M. Neilson indicated that he was opposed to one clause having reference to bye-laws of lodges to be submitted to Grand Lodge or Grand Committee, and not to Provincial Grand Lodges.

A large number of the Glasgow representatives considered that the vote had settled the whole of the alterations, and as Colonel Neilson was not likely to be heard, they left the hall in a body.

Col. Campbell afterwards tabled a motion to the effect that the whole of the alterations under Section A should be reconsidered at next quarterly communication.

On the motion of Col. W. M. Neilson, seconded by Col. Campbell, it was agreed that an accountant in Glasgow be appointed to act in conjunction with an accountant in Edinburgh in auditing Grand Lodge accounts.

Bro. R. Nisbet moved—"That Section 8 of Chapter iii. of Grand Lodge Laws be deleted, and the following be substituted, namely:—'That no Grand Office-bearer (the Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, Substitute Grand Master, Grand Secretary, Grand Cashier, and Tylers excepted) shall hold office longer than two years consecutively, or be eligible for re-election until he be one year out of office.'" After discussion 32 voted in favour of the motion and 204 against.

On the motion of Bro. Officer, it was agreed that it be competent to Grand Lodge to erect district Grand Lodges and appoint district Provincial Grand Masters abroad.

Bro. F. A. Barrow, seconded by Bro. Adam Thomson, moved—"That the law ordering a monthly audit of accounts be cancelled, and that Grand Lodge accounts be audited by the auditor annually." The matter was discussed at great length, and a vote was ultimately taken, when it was found that 8 were in favour of the motion and 215 against.

Grand Lodge was thereafter closed in ample form.

THE AMERICAN PILGRIMS.

The American Masonic Pilgrims, who left York on Friday, the 26th of July, arrived in Sheffield at noon, when they were received on the platform by the reception committee (of which Bro. S. B. Ellis, P.M., was Hon. Sec.), and adjourned to the dining-room at the Midland Station, where luncheon was provided. The party then proceeded in carriages to the show-rooms of the world-renowned firm of Messrs. Joseph Rodgers and Sons, Limited, and spent some time in inspecting the splendid display of cutlery, &c. Amongst the numerous articles exhibited may be mentioned a knife with 1875 blades, and some minute specimens of scissors, almost small enough for microscopical specimens. The party then drove to the Atlas Works of Messrs. John Brown and Co., Limited, where they were received and conducted through the works by Bros. Blair, Townsend, Dyson, and Richards, officials of the company. After witnessing the rolling and shearing of steel ship-plates, the armour plate mill was visited, the party being just in time to witness the rolling of a large plate for H.M.S. "Ajax," the weight of which, as rolled, was twenty-six tons, four cwt., and the Pilgrims were informed by the manager that when the plate left the works, cut to shape, its finished dimensions would be 12 ft. 5 in. x 8 ft. 5½ in. x 10 in. thick, and would then weigh 18 tons 2 cwt. Our American friends evidently considered this a "tall sight;" and indeed, it is hard to imagine a grander scene of the sort. The tout ensemble was "big," men, tongs, furnaces, machinery, rolls, and we may add "heat." When the enormous mass of white hot iron had passed a requisite number of times through the rolls, it was picked up by a fifty ton travelling crane, and carried out of the mill on to a bed of iron to cool.

The Bessemer shops were next visited, where a "blow" was going on. This process of making steel adds to its many good qualities that of being a splendid spectacle. The molten metal is poured into a vessel holding 10 tons, and is subjected to the action of numerous jets of air blowing up through it, emitting showers of sparks, and a large flame, only second in its intensity of light to the sun itself. The hydraulic machinery, controlled by a "pointsman" on an elevated platform, has the appearance of knowing exactly what is required of it, and the visitors were much amused to see large machinery moving about as though of its own accord. The "blow" finished, and the steel, fluid as water, disposed of in the moulds, the party were conducted to the blast furnaces, and after inspecting the splendid blowing engine of 300 horse power, saw a "cast" from one of the furnaces. At this, the extremity of the great works, the carriages were in waiting to conduct the party back to the hotel. After expressing their delight at what they had seen, the pilgrims drove off, not displeased to get away from the heat and smoke of the last two hours.

The ladies of the party, who could not obviously participate in the next part of the programme, were driven out to the beautiful western suburbs of the town, Bro. G. W. Hawksley, P.M., gallantly escorting them. Sheffield although a black, smoky, and not too handsome town, is yet favoured with surrounding scenery, unsurpassed in beauty and grandeur by any in the country. The palatial residences of Sir John Brown, Mark Firth, Esq., and other local magnates, were pointed out; the Botanical Gardens (a charming spot), and Weston Park and Museum, the property of the Corporation, were visited.

Meanwhile the Masons of the party were being entertained by the three Sheffield lodges, viz., Britannia, 139; Royal Brunswick, 296; and Wentworth, 1239. Bro. E. G. Webster, W.M. 139, opened a lodge of emergency at 6 o'clock. He was supported on his right by Bro. Nicholson, W.M. 296, and by Bro. W. R. Thomas, M.D., W.M. 1239, and most of the P.M.'s of the three lodges. The American brethren being admitted, Bro. Webster, addressed to them a few appropriate words of welcome. Mr. Phillips, a candidate for initiation was then admitted, and the ceremony was worked by the W.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. H. J. Garnett, P.P.G.S.B., and the charge given by Bro. W. Longden, P.P.G.D.

Bro. Meyer, P.M., on behalf of the American brethren, briefly and happily expressed his thanks for their reception, and his gratification at the manner in which the ceremony they had just witnessed had been worked. The splendid lodge room and its appointments also came in for a share of approval.

The lodge being closed the brethren adjourned to the banquet room, where about 130 sat down to a sumptuous supper. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, "The Health of our American Visitors," was proposed by Bro. Webster, and was drunk with much enthusiasm. Bro. Meyer responded, and during his speech took occasion to present to the three lodges an engraving from a celebrated American Masonic painting, representing an incident that occurred during the building of the Temple, Bro. Meyer remarking that this engraving would not only serve as a memento of their visit, but also of the delightful harmony and fraternal union which they had witnessed as existing between the three Sheffield Lodges. Bros. Sutter and Mucklé also responded in speeches replete with kindly feeling, also the dry humour of their country. Songs, glees, and recitations were freely indulged in, and the brethren separated, each one delighted with the manner in which the evening had been spent.

On Saturday morning the hard-working Pilgrims were up in good time, and accompanied by several Sheffield brethren and ladies, drove to Chatsworth, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire, who had given special permission to the party, not only to view the house and grounds, but also the extra rooms, and by his express commands the splendid fountains played. Our friends were not altogether prepared for the treat in store for them here. The pictures, sculpture, carvings, tapestry, and articles of vertu, many of them of historical interest, were inspected with the deepest attention. The conservatories, palm house, fountains, and water works were visited, and at two p.m. the party walked through the park to the beautiful village of Baslow, where dinner awaited them.

OPENING A BRIDGE.—On Saturday last the Duke of Cambridge was present at the opening of the Gloucester-gate Bridge, Regent's-park. After inspecting the bridge, his Royal Highness formally declared it to be open. Speaking at a luncheon given afterwards, he took occasion, after referring to the great utility of the new bridge, to say a few words in warm praise of the Indian troops whom he recently reviewed at Malta.

A FAIR DISTRIBUTION.—When the British ships under Lord Nelson were bearing down to attack the combined fleet of Trafalgar, the first lieutenant of the Revenge, on going round to see that all hands were at quarters, observed one of the men—an Irishman—devoutly kneeling at the side of his gun. So very unusual an attitude exciting his surprise and curiosity, he asked the man if he was afraid. "Afraid!" answered the tar, "no your honour; I was only praying that the enemy's shot may be distributed in the same proportion as the prize money—the greatest part among the officers."

The weather was fine and the drive was charming—the route being via Owl Bar and Froggat Edge—representing every type of English scenery—farm, wood, and moor-land, craggs, hill, and dale—consummating in Chatsworth, where nature and art are so combined as to produce a glorious effect, making it well worthy of its world-renowned name of the “Palace of the Peak.”

After dinner they drove to Bakewell, and just got a glimpse of famous old Haddon Hall, which the stern necessities of time and train forbade them to visit. At Rowsley Station the party embarked on a Pullman car for London, previously collectively and individually thanking over and over again their Sheffield friends, and indulging in hopes and wishes that they would meet again some day.

GRAND LODGE OF CANADA.

A Special Communication of the Grand Lodge of Canada was held at Lansdowne, in the county of Leeds, on Thursday, the 13th day of June, A.L. 5878, for the purpose of laying the foundation stone of St. John's Church, in that village. The following Grand Officers were present:—

R.W. Bro. James A. Henderson, Q.C., D.G.M., as Grand Master; R.W. Bro. Robert Hendry, jun., D.D. G.M., as Deputy Grand Master; R.W. Bro. George M. Wilkinson, P.D.D.G.M., as Grand Senior Warden; W. Bro. Robert B. Aylesworth, as Grand Junior Warden; Bros. Venerable Archdeacon Parnell, as Grand Chaplain; Alexander Adams, as Grand Treas.; James Shannon, as Grand Sec.; W. Bros. Rev. John Gallagher, as G.S.D.; William B. Carroll, as G.J.W.; William A. Gunn, as Grand Supt. of Works; V.W. Bro. John Ormiston, as Grand Dir. of Cer.; Bros. James A. Bradley, as Grand Asst. Dir. of Cers.; Thomas C. Starke, as Grand Sword Bearer; Henry Nuttall, as Grand Organist; W. Bro. A. Stewart, as Grand Pursuivant; Bros. Dr. Preston, M.P.P.; Thos. H. Seale, T. B. Richardson, E. Rose, E. Langdon, J. Wilmott, H. Taylor, A. M. Purvis, Turner Coyle, and W. H. Wellbanks, as Grand Stewards; W. Bros. Reuben Field, appointed to carry the Corn; James Hayward, appointed to carry the Wine; A. L. Riddle, appointed to carry the Oil; Bro. J. T. White, as Grand Tyler.

There were also representatives from the following lodges: Ancient St. John, No. 3; Brookville, No. 5; Cataragui, No. 92, Kingston; Gananoque, No. 201; Sussex, No. 210; Macoy, No. 241; Minden, No. 253, Kingston; St. John, No. 340, Pittsburg; Earl of Zetland, No. 1364, E. R.

Grand Lodge was opened in due form at 11.30, by R.W. Bro. James A. Henderson, Q.C., D.G.M., who stated that he had been authorised by the M.W. the Grand Master (who was unable to be present) to perform the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, in the village of Lansdowne.

A procession having been formed in accordance with the regulations, the members of Grand Lodge marched to the site of the church, when a halt was made, and the ranks opened out and faced inwards, when the Acting Grand Master, supported by the Grand Officers, passed to the corner of the building where a platform had been erected for the Grand Officers. The proceedings were opened by singing the hymn, “The Church's One Foundation,” and Bro. the Venerable Archdeacon Parnell, acting Grand Chaplain, offered up the following prayer:—

Great Architect of the Universe, Maker and Ruler of all worlds, deign from Thy Celestial Temple, from realms of light and glory, to help us in all the purposes of our present assembly. We humbly invoke Thee to give us at this and all times wisdom in our doings, strength of mind in all our difficulties, and the beauty of harmony in all our communications. Permit us, O Thou Author of life and light, great source of love and happiness, to erect this church set apart for Thy glory and honour, so that perishing souls may be won from the evils of this world.

A scroll, together with papers and coins, having been deposited in a cavity prepared for the purpose, the Rev. R. L. W. Houston, the Incumbent, presented a handsome silver trowel to the Acting Grand Master, who in receiving the trowel said that he received the gift with pleasure, and should retain it as a pleasing memento of the work so happily begun.

The necessary mortar being laid, the Acting Grand Master spread it with the silver trowel, and said: I spread this cement as an emblem of that cement of peace and good-will which I trust will ever prevail in the sacred edifice to be erected, and may its heaven-pointed spire remind the congregation, under God's blessing, of those mansions of bliss from whence all goodness emanates. The upper stone being properly placed after being lowered by three halts, the Acting Grand Senior and Junior Wardens and the Acting Deputy Grand Master handed to R.W. Bro. Henderson the plumb rule, level, and square respectively, which he applied to the stone, and finding it properly laid, struck the stone three times with the gavel and said, “Well made, truly laid; true and trusty, may this undertaking be conducted, and completed according to the Grand Plan in Peace, Harmony, and Brotherly Love.”

Response: So mote it be.

As they were handed to him, he poured out the customary libations, saying, I strew corn upon the stone as an emblem of plenty, I pour wine on it as an emblem of cheerfulness, and I anoint it with oil as an emblem of comfort and consolation. May corn, wine and oil, and all the necessities of life abound among men, and may the blessing of the Supreme Architect of the Universe be upon this edifice and all connected with it.

Response: So mote it be.

The plans having been handed to the Acting Grand Master, he presented them to the Architect, saying: The foundation stone of this building being now laid, I present to you the implements applied to it, also the plans, in full confidence that as a skilful and faithful workman, you will use them in such a manner that the building may rise in order and harmony, being perfected in beauty and strength. He also addressed the Rev. the Incumbent as follows: Having completed our work according to ancient usage, I now wish that every success may attend your and the congregation's endeavours, that as the work has been happily begun, it will, with God's blessing, be carried to a happy ending. May I remark that when on the chancel arch you will emblazon that prophetic sentence, “Glory to God in the Highest and on earth peace good will toward men,” you will remember that within our Mystic Halls we have inscribed in letters of gold on the cope stone of the arch, and on the pillars, these words of far greater antiquity, “Holiness to the Lord, Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth,” and thus your parishioners and our brethren are alike reminded of their duty to God and man.

The Grand Honours were then given, led by the Acting Grand Director of Ceremonies.

The Acting Grand Master re-ascended the platform, and spoke as follows:

By invitation duly given, we assembled here to lay the corner stone of an edifice to the glory of God. The corner stone has been laid by us according to the usages of our time-honoured Order, and with the ceremonies have not only a beautiful significance to the brethren, but even to the intelligent they shadow forth a meaning which must be considered appropriate to the occasion, and certainly to the diligent reader of the volume of the Sacred Law, they must remind him that they are not of man's imagining. I see around me many intelligent brethren, but it is not to them that I feel called on to expatiate on the grand principles on which Freemasonry is founded; but as it has been wisely laid down in our Constitution that on occasions like the present those assembled who are not Freemasons should be addressed. I take this opportunity to say a few words to those who have honoured us by their presence, respecting the origin and tenets of our Order, and I do this certainly not by way of apology or in justification of our proceedings, but rather to show that our duties and professions are not inconsistent with those the Bible inculcates. The Order has existed from time immemorial, but it was organised nearly three thousand years ago by King Solomon and Hiram King of Tyre, assisted by that “cunning man endowed with understanding,” Hiram Abiff. After the completion of the Temple many of those who had been employed in the erection and adornment of that glorious edifice formed themselves into small communities, and being dispersed over the then known world still nursed the science of architecture and guided the erection of many temples, for the service of the Most High, which in grandeur, beauty, and harmony of design have never been surpassed—living and labouring together with one common object in view, the members of each company became to a certain degree bound to each other by the ties of brotherly feeling, dwelling together in love and harmony, and ever ready to soothe and relieve the necessities and afflictions of each other. It is natural to suppose that labouring for years as so many of them did on works dedicated to the worship of God, their hearts were filled with reverence for the Almighty Creator and obedience to his divine commands. The constant practice of the arts and sciences would tend to refine their minds and manners, until by their good conduct, their brotherly love to each other, and their general benevolence they had gained the respect and esteem of others. In the course of time many good and influential men, though not operative Masons, were anxious to become members of the fraternity, and being admitted became in more modern times what we now profess to be, “Free and Accepted Masons.” Although no longer operative, we profess the same tenets and maintain the same principles as our ancient brethren. Our duties as Masons are reverence and obedience to the Most High, brotherly love, charity and truth to our fellow men. On these grand principles has our Order been reared up and limited to no sect, rank or nationality. Masonry from its inherent goodness has become diffused over the world, and endeavours as far as human aid can effect, to promote peace in raising the structure of moral duties, in promoting good feeling toward man, in inculcating courtesy to all, in refraining from allowing difference of opinion to disturb good feeling, in softening the roughness of temper and in flinging a certain ray of sunset over the evening of life when clouds gather around and storms threaten to ruffle it. We wish it to be understood that we do not as Masons arrogate to ourselves the character of being better than other men. There are thousands who have not joined our fraternity who are as good and true as any of us can be, but we believe that the true practice of Masonry has a natural tendency to refine and improve the hearts of all who truly follow its precepts. That it awakens in our minds feelings of brotherly love and universal benevolence, thereby enabling us to become better members of society than we were before. The Bible ever open in our Lodge, teaches us the duty we owe to God and likewise to our fellow men; it inspires us with awe and reverence to the Great Architect of the Universe; it orders us to practice truth, justice, and charity to our fellow men, but we do not attempt to usurp the place of those who minister in holy things or set ourselves above them, but rather seek to follow the guidance of our spiritual pastors and teachers, content that Freemasonry shall be recognised as the handmaid to religion. Let a man's religion be what it will, we do not exclude him from the benefits and advantages of our Order, provided that he believes in the Glorious Architect of Heaven and Earth, and practices the sacred duties of morality. Many thinking and serious Masons object to Freemasonry on account of a few of the brethren not acting up to their professions, but these should remember that the abuse of a thing is no valid objection to its inherent goodness. How many call themselves Christians who are a disgrace, yet ultimately hurt not the Gospel but themselves. A Judas existed among the holy Apostles of Christ. We have no fear for the existence of our Order; it shall endure as it has endured; it has stood as it shall stand, on its own merits; it has resisted the sword of the barbarian and bigot, the persecution of the powerful; it has been enabled to withstand all assaults made on it by virulent and implacable enemies—our Ancient and Honourable Fraternity, founded on strength and stability, is—

“As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swell from the vale and midway meets the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head.”
Men women and children here assembled. Floating over our heads is the meteor flag of England. As subjects of our beloved Queen, I call on you to give three cheers for our Sovereign, a monarch whose benign sway has never been equalled.

In response to his call, three hearty cheers were given for the Queen. Three cheers were called for and given for R. W. Bro. J. A. Henderson, the acting Grand Master.

The brethren repaired by invitation to an adjoining grove where a most liberal supply of refreshments was provided by the ladies of the congregation. Appropriate addresses were given by R. W. Bro. Henderson, Bro. Archdeacon Parnell, Rev. Canon Mulock, Rev. E. P. Crawford, and others. Subsequently the procession was reformed and the Grand Lodge was closed in due form.

BRO. CRAWFORD'S NEW WORK.

We have been requested by Bro. Crawford to state that the name of his book is “The Celestial Science of Speculative Masonry and Theoretical Astronomy.” This long lost science has, we understand, been rediscovered, after a series of years, devoted to antiquarian research. A prospectus of the varied contents of a Pamphlet, to be published thereon, entitled “Original Research,” with two ancient Pictures in illustration, lies at the Masonic Depot, 198, Fleet-street for inspection and names and addresses of subscribers.

Orders received by Bro. George Kenning, 198, Fleet-street London.

GALLANT MEN OF FOWEY.—It may interest our readers to know that the present head of the Cornish House of Jeffrey is a P.M. the Fowey Lodge and P.P.G. Chaplain of Cornwall. Brother the Rev. Dr. Jeffrey is also a P.Z. of the Unity Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and a P.E.C. of the Restormel Preceptory of Knights Templar. Our genial brother is greatly loved and respected in the County of Cornwall, where he has large estates, and where he is famed for his courtesy and bonhomie.

The Grand Lodge of New York has now under its jurisdiction 718 Lodges and 78,050 Freemasons. There were 2954 candidates made Masons last year; 1048 Brethren died; and there are 5036 unaffiliated for non-payment of dues.

We are asked to state that the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hants and the Isle of Wight will be held on Thursday next, August 15th, and not on Tuesday, the 13th as announced in our last week's issue. The alteration in date of meeting is unavoidable.

ERRATUM.—In our Review of the “History of the Lodge of Kelso,” the author's name was erroneously printed “Dixon” instead of W.F. Vernon.

The North Metropolitan Tramways Company has declared a dividend of 8½ per cent., an advance of ½ per cent. on last year. The Echo hopes that the extra ½ per cent. has not been gained by confiscating the £5 deposits of discharged conductors.

The Directors of the Bank of England met on Thursday as usual, but made no alteration in the rate of discount.

The Whitehall Review understands that the Government hope to be able to prorogue Parliament on Saturday, the 17th inst. A later day had been originally contemplated, but the decisive vote of last week is understood to have removed a good deal of intended opposition to votes in committee, and rendered the earlier date possible.

An address of congratulation, accompanied with a handsome clock, was yesterday presented to Mr. and Mrs. H. Watts in commemoration of their golden wedding. M.R. Watts has been for 33 years connected with the Vicar General's office in Doctors'-commons, and has for the same period been an attendant on the Upper House of Convocation.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—ADVT.

OLD LONDON LODGES.

I think it well to say a few words on this head, to which, in common with my excellent friend Bro. Hughan, I have paid some attention for years, (and who on this subject is, I consider, "facile princeps") as one or two points do not seem to me quite clear, at least they want distinct appreciation. I think that though they are very interesting, the lists before 1738 are scarcely to be relied on as actually correct, though I except from this remark "Anderson's List of 1723," and I prefer to make my starting point "Smith's Freemason's Pocket Companion of 1736," and "Anderson's List, of 1738."

On comparing these two lists carefully together, certain facts appear to me to be incontestable, first, that we have for the first time thoroughly accurate lists to deal with; secondly, that the changes are already great and many; and thirdly, that it requires close attention to follow the alterations already effected in the list of lodges.

Let us take the first twenty in 1736, and compare them with the same twenty in 1738, (only two years), and my readers will see what I mean. 1, King's Arms. 2, Bull and Gate. 3, The Horn. 4, The Swan. 5, The Ship. 6, Mr. Braund. 7, Rummier. 8, Union Lodge Devil. (the first special name used, by the way). 9, The One Tun. 10, King's Arms. 11, Queen's Head. 12, The Castle. 13, Bedford Arms. 14, Queen's Head. 15, Bull's Head. 16, Goat. 17, Crown. 18, Crown, Ludgate Hill. 19, Queen's Arms. 20, French Lodge, Swan, &c. Such is the list of the first twenty in 1736.

In 1736 the lodges amounted to 126, including provincial lodges and foreign lodges, thirty in number, leaving ninety-six London lodges, while in 1738 Anderson records 106 London lodges, an increase of ten, as being "satisfactory lodges," whose officers, he adds, "have attended the Grand Lodge or Quarterly Communication, and brought their benevolence to the general charity within twelve months past," and, he concludes, "are here set down according to their seniority of constitution as in the Grand Lodge books and the Engraven List," in this way giving a quasi-official recognition to "Pine's List." But he also takes care to point out what we too often forget to-day, that even then "many lodges," as he expresses, "have by accident broken up, or are partitioned, or else removed to new places for their convenience, and so, if subsisting, they are called and known by their new places, or their signs." All this shows how many difficulties attend on an exact tracing of the old lodges, though I know as well as my readers what success has attended Bro. Hughan's labours in this respect.

The first twenty lodges on the list in 1738 are as follows: 1, King's Arms. 2, Horn. 3, Shakespeare's Head. 4, Bell. 5, Braund's Head. 6, Rummier. 7, Daniel's Coffee House. 8, Red Cross. 9, King's Arms. 10, Queen's Head. 11, Castle. 12, Bury's Coffee House. 13, Queen's Head Tavern. 14, Bull's Head Tavern. 15, La Guerre. 16, Sun Tavern. 17, Mourning Bush. 18, Swan Tavern. 19, Anchor and Baptist's Head. 20, Dog Tavern.

Thus, through the changes mentioned by Anderson, there is already a great difference in the names and great changes in the locale of the lodges. Only three of the four old lodges exist in 1738, No. 2, Crown, being apparently extinct in 1736, according to Smith. Anderson tells us that it was not extant in 1738, but does not say when it came to an end.

But several curious points require attention. In 1736 No. 2 was Horn Tavern, one of the four old lodges, the original No. 4 at the Rummier and Grapes, No. 1 still being the present Lodge of Antiquity. But in 1736 No. 2 is the Bull and Gate, in Holborn, (unless we suppose it one of the changes of the original No. 2), and which disappeared in 1738. No. 3 in 1736 has become No. 2 in 1738, and No. 3, Shakespeare's Head in 1838, is unknown in 1836. No. 4, the Swan in 1736, is the Bell in 1738, though the Swan in 1736 is said to be constituted in 1722. No. 5, the Ship, in 1736 makes way for Braund in 1738, which was 6 in 1736. No. 7, Rummier in 1736, is 6 in 1738, and 8, Union Lodge, founded 1722 at the Devil, as well as 9, the One Tun, have made way in 1738 for Daniel's Coffee House, within Temple Bar, (probably also the Devil) and the Red Cross, Barbican. The King's Arms, No. 10 in 1736, has become No. 9 in 1738, and the Queen's Head, No. 11 in 1736, one of the old lodges No. 3, is No. 10 in 1738. The Castle, No. 11 in 1736, becomes the Castle, No. 12, in 1738, while Bury's Coffee House, No. 12, is changed to the Bedford Arms, No. 13, in 1738, and the Queen's Head, No. 14, of 1736, is Queen's Head, No. 13, of 1738; Bull's Head, No. 15, is No. 14 in 1738. The Goat, No. 16, in 1736, seems to have disappeared in 1738, as well as the Crown, St. Giles, 17; the Crown, Ludgate, 18; Queen's Arms, 19; and to be replaced by Le Guerre Tavern, 15; Sun Tavern, 16; Mourning Bush, 17; Anchor, 19; Dog, 20, in 1738. The French lodge 20 of 1736, is 18 of 1738.

But this is enough for to-day. But how account for these variations? It is well to notice how in 1738, not all lodges apparently, had Master's lodges attached to them.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling medicine has the happiest effect when the blood is overheated and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system; one pill taken shortly before dinner does away with the indigestion, fulness, and flatulency—indications of a weak stomach or disordered liver. A few pills taken at bedtime act as alteratives and aperients; they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them, overcome all acid humors, and encourage a free supply of all the secretions essential to our well-being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse and perfectly regulate the circulation, and bestow a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperatures, which is most desirable for preservation of health.—ADVT.

NEWPORT AND CARDIFF AS SHIPPING PORTS.

This book contains interesting speeches delivered by our well-known Bro. J. C. Parkinson, and other gentlemen with reference to the Newport line of railway, and the proposed extension of the great capabilities of Newport as a shipping port. It is impossible in a review like this, especially when our space is very limited, to go into minute details of such a proposal, but we think it but right to say that in our opinion our esteemed and able Bro. J. C. Parkinson makes out a very good case for such increased facilities of railway communication, alike as regards the general public and commercial requirements. The book is admirably printed, and illustrated by very interesting maps.

THE WINEGROWERS' AND WINE COOPERS' MANUAL. By WILLIAM HARDMAN. Tegg and Co., 12, Pancras-lane.

To the trade this must be a very valuable manual, and to non-traders it is very interesting indeed, for we all of us like to know something of the wines we habitually drink, that being pure affection, or childish asceticism, which ignores all such facts in themselves. Our world would be a very queer world (queerer than it is) if we could persuade ourselves that an utter disavowal of all things earthly were expected of us, that cleanliness was objectionable, and that bad food and adulterated wines were to be as acceptable to us as good food and pure vintages! All this is a very great blunder, having no foundation in true religion, and has greatly retarded the advance both of civilization and mankind. We have read this little book with pleasure, as telling us a good deal we did not know before, and confirming a good deal that we did, and we can fairly say that it is very readable and very well-edited, very well put together, and clear in its statements.

KENNING'S CYCLOPEDIA OF FREEMASONRY

We are indebted to the publisher of the London Freemason, Bro. George Kenning, for a copy of this valuable work recently issued in attractive form under the supervision of R. W. Bro. Woodford, Past Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of England. It covers a wide range of subjects, as will be seen when we state that upwards of 4900 words are treated upon in the work. Intelligently prepared and conveniently arranged for reference, this Cyclopædia will undoubtedly have a large sale in the United States as well as in Great Britain. Copies may be obtained by addressing the publisher, at 108, Fleet-street, London, England. The price of the work is 10s. 6d. sterling.—Freemason's Repository.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.—VISIT TO RAMSGATE.

On Thursday, the 1st inst., such of the girls as remain at the Institution during the holidays, on the invitation of Bro. Edward Cox, a Vice-Patron of this Institution, and accompanied by him, visited the well known and much eulogised sea-side resort, Ramsgate. The children to the number of ten were under the charge of Miss Sheppard, and Miss Triggs, one of the assistant governesses. The party journeyed by the London, Chatham and Dover Railway. On arriving the children were met by Bro. Finch, of Ramsgate, an energetic member of the Charities Committee of the Province of Kent, and were by him escorted to the hostelry of Bro. Eve, (George and Dragon, George Street) the present W.M. of the Royal Naval Lodge, where they were regaled with an excellent repast, kindly superintended by the worthy brother and his amiable wife and daughter. The fare provided was of a most choice description and was done good justice to by the happy party assembled. Dinner over the children at once made for the sands, and during the afternoon enjoyed the sea breeze and the pastimes usually indulged in by juvenile visitors, the expenses consequent upon photography, the temptations to try their "seats on saddles," and other little enjoyments being liberally defrayed by their kind entertainers. To some the pleasure of avoiding a wavelet was a source of intense enjoyment, whilst others were absorbed in searching for shells, starfish, or seaweed. To all the delight was unbounded. Like other things mundane, the day's recreation had its limit, and the chiming of the pier clock denoted that the hour had arrived for again enjoying the liberality of the Ramsgate brethren, whose provision of an excellent tea, brightened by the ad libitum addition of the far-famed Pegwell Bay shrimps, was highly appreciated. This meal over, the children were escorted by the hosts of the day, as also by several brethren of the Royal Naval and Lewis Lodges (who paid them the compliment of a visit), through a great portion of the town and to the station for the return journey, which was happily effected without mar or delay, the school being reached within five minutes after the time arranged. At Margate the party was numerically increased by the advent of Bro. Wootton of that town, accompanied by Meta Brasier, the candidate for election in October next, whose case has excited, and that deservedly, the almost universal sympathy of the Craft. Much interest was felt and manifested on her behalf, and the one prevailing feeling amongst the pupils was the oft expressed wish that she might be successful, and that the friendship that day formed might be, for years to come, strengthened and enjoyed. We hear with much satisfaction that the visit to Ramsgate will not be without an ultimate good to the Institution, two brethren having expressed their intention of becoming Stewards at the ensuing anniversary festival. The camera and lighthouse at the end of the West Pier, Ramsgate, were freely offered by Capt. Braine, the harbour master, for the children's gratification and inspection, but unfortunately the time at command was too short to admit of an enjoyment of the privilege.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.—To the National Gallery will shortly be offered, according to the will of the late Mr. White, Brownlow-st., the well-known collector and dealer in works of art, a magnificent specimen of that rare master of the Flemish school, Gheerardt David van Oude-water, or of Bruges, a follower, if not a pupil, of Van Byck, with distinct reference to Memling, his contemporary, a member of the Painters' Guild of Bruges, which he entered as a stranger on January 14th, 1484, of which society he was Dean, 1501-2. The picture is one of his finest specimens, and was formerly the right wing of a triptych, executed for the altar of St. John the Baptist and Mary Magdalen, in the Cathedral of St. Donat, at Bruges, for Bernardino de Salviatis, illegitimate son of a wealthy Florentine, and Canon of the Cathedral, who is represented kneeling in the foreground, dressed in a black robe trimmed with brown fur, and a large white surplice. He is accompanied by three saints—on the left St. Donat, in pontifical costume; behind the donor stands his proper patron, St. Bernard, in the habit of the Grey Friars; on the right a bishop, supposed by Mr. Weale to be St. John the Almoner, whose costume is exceptionally magnificent, comprising embroidery of the figures of SS. Donat, Bernard, John the Almoner, John the Baptist, Mary Magdalen, and Martin, with shields of arms. The embroidery of his hood represents the adoration of the Magi; he carries a beautiful crook, enriched with statuettes of saints and an angel; the Virgin and Child and an angel are in the scroll. The saint is in the act of bestowing a benediction. Behind is a lame beggar, who extends his bag for alms. The background is a landscape with mountains, a chateau, and trees. The picture, except retouchings on the faces of SS. Donat and Bernard, is in nearly perfect condition, of the most brilliant and pure colour; completely displays the clear, rather hard, and highly polished and laboured character of the painter's manner, with abundance of lustre, and some lack of harmony in the colouration. The heads are extremely pathetic. The picture was acquired from the Cathedral in 1792 by Mr. T. Barrett, of Lee Priory, Kent, at whose sale, in May, 1859, Mr. White bought it for £551. This picture was particularly coveted by Sir C. Eastlake, for the National Gallery, as one of the most interesting of its class.—Athenæum.

The award of medals and certificates (art), as well as of the free scholarships, in the ladies' division of the Crystal Palace Company's School of Art, Science, and Literature was completed last week, with the following result: Water-Colour Painting.—Mr. Goodall's students—silver medal, Miss Eliza Kate Hitchcock, South Norwood; certificate, Miss E. M. Jennings, Penge. Water-Colour Painting.—Mr. Smallh's students—silver medal, Miss Maud Robinson, Norwood; certificate, Miss Janet Munro Bethune, Penge. Modelling in clay.—M. Constant Vinocet's students—certificate, Miss Marion Bedale, Streatham; the scholarship in art, Miss M. Bedale. Judges, Mr. J. B. Burgess, A.R.A., Mr. A. D. Fripp, and Mr. W. F. Woodington, A.R.A. The scholarship in music, Miss A. Blagden, Sydenham; examiners, Mr. E. J. Hopkins and Mr. Brinley Richards. The scholarship in modern languages, literature, &c., Miss Jessie Simmonds, South Norwood; examiners, Rev. Alfred Ainger, M.A., Rev. Chas. Rogers, LL.D., M. Gustave Masson, Professor Albert Hamann, and Professor Cav. G. Volpe.

At the total eclipse of the sun on Monday week many satisfactory observations, drawings, and photographs were made at Denver city (Colorado), where many of the leading American astronomers, as well as Messrs. Romyard, Lockyer, and Penrose from England, went, as being the most convenient place for observations. The eclipse began at 7.18 p.m. Greenwich time, central totality took place at 9.23, and the eclipse ended at 11.10 p.m. The chief object was to obtain a more thorough knowledge of the "chromosphere," or intermediate layer, and of the corona and the atmosphere, the outer and the inner layer, of the sun's envelope. With regard to the observations on Monday, a Reuter's telegram from Denver states that "two protuberances (round the sun, formed of incandescent gases) only were seen, very faintly visible on the western side of the moon. There was an entire absence of the pinkish red flames observed on some previous occasions, and the spectroscope revealed no extra red or violet lines. Professor Norman Lockyer reports that the solar protuberances were fainter and fewer, but that the corona was ten times brighter than in the eclipse of 1871, thus indicating a variation with the maximum and minimum sun-spot periods." (The present is a minimum period.)

ANTIQUITIES AT CYPRUS.—Mr. C. T. Newton proposes to commence excavations in Cyprus as soon as possible, for he believes that Mr. Lang and General di Cesnola have by no means ransacked the island sufficiently. We wish the explorer of Budrum every success, but fear there is not another treasure of Kourium to supplement that which the Government so unwisely let slip when General di Cesnola almost begged them to take it. Mr. Stephen Thompson, whose well-known photographs of Italian tombs and his series of British Museum photographs have proved him especially fitted for photographing antiquities, will shortly leave England for Cyprus, being especially commissioned by Her Majesty the Queen to obtain a series of views of the island for her inspection.

At the international competition of choirs in connection with the Paris Universal Exhibition at the Trocadéro last week, Mr. Henry Leslie's choir gained the first prize, a handsome vase of modern Sevres and a gold medal, by the unanimous decision of the judges, who consisted of many of the most distinguished French and English composers and artists.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 10, 1878.

OUR AMERICAN PILGRIMS.

Under this appellation, archaic and Templar at the same time, our good brethren from America are now on their wanderings, and we wish them heartily all health and happiness, all comfort and convenience, in the agreeable pilgrimage which lies before them. They are at present, we believe, in Paris, and though there they cannot, unfortunately, associate with the French Freemasons as with us, inasmuch as for them France is almost an unoccupied country, Masonically speaking at the present hour, yet there is much that they will truly and greatly enjoy at Paris. He must be a dull or perverse mortal who does not like Paris. We leave out of consideration to-day those numerous questions which always crop up when we mention Paris, social, moral, and special, but we will say this, that Paris has countless charms in every respect for the man of intellect, and the man of taste. No one can loiter in the Boulevards, or stand in the Tuileries Gardens, or drive round the Bois de Boulogne, or walk up to Père la Chaise; no one, we repeat, can visit Notre Dame, Versailles, and the historic streets and art collections of Paris without being alike pleased and struck, fascinated and impressed. And then in addition to this, when we live among French people, we see how they have been misunderstood and often undervalued, and how that really and truly there does not exist on the face of the earth a more industrious, sober, peaceful, home-loving people. If life varies in its outward aspects materially in Paris, as it does, from our English habits, so much so, as to mislead those who are content with the surface of things, no one can live in Paris without liking Paris, just as no one can sojourn for a season in La Belle France without becoming deeply impressed with the higher qualities of the French people. So first at Paris and then on their onward career, we wish our American Pilgrims everything that health and arrangement, good digestion and warm hearts can bring them. We trust that when they return to us in September, en route for their native land, theirs will be both pleasant associations and refreshing memories of their lengthened Pilgrimage.

THE INTERNATIONAL GATHERING.

Our thoughts will still return to that hospitable and successful undertaking. We feel sure, the more we think about it, that thanks to the happy idea of Bro. George Kenning, (may his shadow never grow less), that pleasantest of meetings will be productive of much good in more ways than one to Masonry in England and the United States. That assembly, at any rate, had this one great merit, that it sought to draw together, and did draw together, American and English Masons as brethren and as friends, true and cherished, and that it sought to weld together even closer than before, those links of amity and interest, of sympathy and affection, which if our Masonic principles be worth anything should bind those on this side of the Atlantic with those on the other side of the Atlantic with one Masonic and mystical cable of brotherly union and goodwill. Such assemblies are few and far between in our lives, and there are none of us living, likely, humanly speaking, to see the same again. Let us cherish its memories and rejoice to think that we were permitted to be present. One of our good brethren said that evening that we did not come together often enough, and live in little Masonic circles of our own. That is most true, and is a fact that we may well bear in mind as pointing to salutary amendment and not unwelcome change. The party which was assembled by its kind host will probably never get together again in life, but let it remind us of that union, and friendship, and kindness, and sympathy, and concord, and charity, which if they often seem to desert this nether earth of ours, yet live, or ought to live, at any rate, in goodly strength and grace, in the true Freemason's heart.

RUMOURS.

"Dame Rumour," as the old proverb has it, is a very "lying jade," and just now is very busy in our good Masonic body. Perhaps it is the special season of the year, perhaps it is the hot weather, perhaps it is "many other things," which predispose us to canards, and land us on the fruitful shore of gossip and rumour. But though as the schoolmen would have said of old, "de apparentibus et existentibus eadem est ratio," yet as no evil is without a remedy, pace our good medical brethren—we will prescribe a "little common sense, carefully mixed with prudent reserve," just now, for all our readers and friends. Rumour has it, loudly and whisperingly at the same time, that the heavy hand of the law has fallen on "unscrutinizing scrutineers," and that said worthies don't like it at all, and declare that it is after all only the case of the "pot and the kettle." Rumour has it that we are to be favoured with "piquant revelations" and "striking facts," which, whether they turn out to be short stories or long yarns, will, no doubt, vastly amuse our Masonic body. Rumour has it that some brethren, who think themselves passed over in Grand Lodge appointments, talk too often and too loudly about it, while not a few, who are anxious for the purple, are stated by Rumour to be equally indiscreet as to their hopes and expectations for the future. Rumour has it that there will be a contest for the Grand Treasurership, whenever it takes place, and that a certain distinguished brother is pretty certain of success. Rumour says many other things which we think we need not repeat here, as it is quite sufficient to note the fact that such rumours do exist. We do not ourselves attach much credit to these various items of gossip and small talk, knowing how prone Masons, as well as other people, are to indulge in such little absurdities, and we are inclined on the whole to put them all down to the hot weather and the end of the season, which two things seem to us to account for anything abnormal or peculiar in our Masonic arrangements just now. To one rumour we think that we can give absolute denial, which is the alleged existence of a "Cligue," about which some of our brethren have been taking so much lately, and shaking their heads so emphatically. Those of us who remember our lamented Bro. Aytoun's story of the Cligue in a Scottish borough will agree with us that any such amiable institution in English Freemasonry will equally and speedily come to grief. So, as our brethren are forsaking the metropolis and lodge life, we can safely say, "listen not to idle canards and childish rumours, but go your way and enjoy yourselves as good fellows and good men—north, south, east, and west." When we all meet again in September, if we do, we shall soon find out how little there is of truth, and how much of falsehood, in idle rumours and amusing canards.

OUR DETECTIVE POLICE.

We have never had but one opinion on this subject, though probably in that we differ from some of our readers. We wish the detective force to be a well paid, well educated, well-conditioned body of men, placed in such a position as to be above all external influences, and severed absolutely from all contact with unsafe associations. One of the greatest difficulties of the present police system is the "special agency business," which has no conscience, and no reserve, and apes the habits, and assumes even the name of the police. Some of us may remember a recent case before a police magistrate, where a special agent got off on the first charge, though, happily, safely landed in the second, because he said he was a "special detective." As he did not use the word "police" in the first case, as he was proved to have done in the second, he was only convicted on the second complaint. Nothing can be worse for our police than association of any kind, or understanding of any kind with such persons, and who, because they have once been police officers have no more rights or privileges than any other English citizens; and as the special agent often commits necessarily most illegal acts, and strains the wise and constitutional provisions of our good English laws, the police, a constitutional body, ought in no way to be assenting even by implication to proceedings which are of most doubtful legality, or to arrangements dangerous to the liberty of the subject. We quite agree with the Graphic in regretting the tone of Lord Truro's complaint, though we believe that he means well. That there are black sheep in so large a force is no doubt true, just as there are in all bodies of men, but remembering all that the police go through daily, hourly—their discipline, their courage, their tact, and their good behaviour are highly to be commended, and we much doubt if they are equalled by any other force in the world. When complaints are made of the slowness of detection, or the insufficiency of surveillance, we must always remember, what too many forget, that the English police is under constitutional checks, which are unknown in other lands, and what appears to be tardiness, what assumes the appearance of vacillation, what is termed indecision, are only after all the natural consequences of a respect for and abiding by Law. It is difficult, if not impossible, often in England for the police to interfere when it is perfectly possible and easy for them to do so on the continent, because we only use the police in England to repress and detect crime, and give it no power, (except by special legislation), to interfere with the ordinary life of English citizens. Every allowance ought, therefore, in our opinion to be made for the police, and certainly the way to improve them, to ameliorate their condition, and to advance their efficiency, is not to put forward idle complaints, or repeat childish clamours, too often emanations from that undercurrent of thought and feeling, which on good grounds has often a well-merited dislike for, and apprehension of, the Police.

LONDON VOTES FOR THE CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I think that there now appears to be some prospect of the London brethren waking up to the fact that the provinces by combining together in the shape of Charity Committees to support the candidates for their respective provinces are gaining such power, that in a few years time (unless the London brethren do likewise) it will be a matter of almost utter impossibility to get a London case in; the study for a few minutes of the following figures for the last year will throw some considerable light on this matter.

	Amount Subscribed.	Pensioners.	Proportionate number according to the amount Subscribed.
M.B.L.
London	£6062	69	138
Provinces	£5028	169	100
Boys		In School.
London	£4787	49	75
Provinces	£5313	109	83
Girls
London	£5577	72	102
Provinces	£4891	116	86

By these figures we see, that although London subscribed over £1000 more than all the provinces put together to the Benevolent Institution, we have only got sixty-nine instead of 138 pensioners, or just one half of the number that we ought to have; as regards the Boys' School, the provinces head us by about £500, and we have only got forty-nine instead of seventy-five boys in the school, being twenty-six, or one third of our proper number, to the bad; again, the Girls' School, we head the provinces with nearly £700, and have only seventy-two instead of 102 girls in the school, being thirty, or nearly one third of our proper number, to the bad. It is, therefore, proposed to form a London Charity Union to protect the interests of the London candidates, the rules for which will be something as follows:—The membership will be open to all who vote in the London district, whether Masons or not; the annual subscription 5s.; the association will be managed by a Chairman, two Vice-Chairmen, a Treasurer, two Auditors, and two Secretaries (who will be elected at the annual meeting of the members), and a Committee of forty-five, one third of whom retire annually. The qualification for an officer or Committeeman is, that he should be a Life Governor of one of the three Masonic Charities; a member of a London lodge, and only one member of a London lodge will be on the Committee at the same time; they are to go through the claims of the various London cases, appoint sub-Committees, to make special enquiries where they think it necessary, and then determine which they consider the most deserving and urgent of the London cases; power is also given to them to exchange votes with provinces or individuals.

Many brethren have sent me their names as willing to found such an association, and a meeting for that purpose will be held as soon as convenient, and any brother wishing to attend, who will send me his name and address, I shall be only too pleased to let him know the place, time, and hour.

Yours truly and fraternally,

ALFRED TISLEY,
St. Dunstan's Vestry, Fleet-street, London.

BRO. KENNING'S BANQUET TO THE AMERICAN BRETHREN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Reluctant to trespass on your space, I yet must ask permission to correct the report of the concluding observations addressed by me in response to the toast with which my name was associated. The words I used were "that whether the waters of the Atlantic presented the surface of 'a clear lake glassing softest skies,' or whether they were lashed into fury by storm and tempest, they may be regarded, not as an obstacle to separate, but as a link to unite, the two great English-speaking peoples of the world, whose energies, I hope, may be exercised in illustrating, expounding, and inculcating the principle of 'loyalty' to their respective legitimately constituted governments in practising universal 'charity' and in maintaining and preserving that freedom of thought, speech, and action which is alike the birthright and the distinguishing characteristic of both."

In the words I have italicised your report reads "unity," which in association with the sentence of which it is made to form a part is perfectly meaningless.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,
FREDERICK BINCKES.

BOARD OF GENERAL PURPOSES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can you give me any information as to who the two brethren are who have so far misconducted themselves as to have caused the Board of General Purposes to suspend one from all Masonic functions for two years, and the other a severe admonishment?

I read in your contemporary, the Sunday Times, that one is a P.G. Officer, and the other one of the Secretaries. This latter appears to me very unfair to the Secretaries of the Charitable Institutions. I presume it really means a Secretary of one of the London lodges. Can you set all doubts at rest?

Yours fraternally,

A. P.M.

[We understand that a distinguished Past Grand Officer has been suspended for two years, and that a Secretary of a London lodge has been severely reprimanded.]

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

On Wednesday, the 24th ult., the regular quarterly gathering of the above Provincial Grand Lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Surrey-street, Sheffield. The preliminary lodge was opened up by Bro. Dr. Thomas, W.M., and the officers of the Wentworth Lodge, 1239. When Provincial Grand Lodge entered, the R.W.P.G.M. (Lieut. Col. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart.) presiding, assisted by the W. Deputy Prov. G.M. (Bro. T. W. Tew), and a large staff of Provincial Grand Officers.

Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form, the brethren were called upon to salute the R.W.P.G.M., and afterwards the Deputy Prov. G.M., in ancient form, which call was heartily responded to.

The R.W. Prov. G.M., Bro. Sir Henry Edwards, then delivered the following address:—

Brethren, you may well imagine I find it far from easy, in any corresponding language, to express my deep and grateful sense of the kind and hearty salutation with which, for the third time, you have greeted me in Sheffield. I thank you, officers and brethren of the province of West Yorkshire, for this cordial welcome to Provincial Grand Lodge. It affords me the liveliest satisfaction, personally, to be again invited to preside at these quarterly gatherings. Provincial Grand Lodge has always been received with open arms by the Sheffield and Rotherham Lodges; and our obligations are due to the W.M., officers, and brethren of the Wentworth Lodge, under whose banner we are now marshalled, for the excellence of their arrangements for the summer meeting of the Craft. The Wentworth Lodge is, I believe, an offspring of the Britannia, and was consecrated on the 7th of December, 1868, by our lamented Past Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Bentley Shaw. It has year by year gone on steadily increasing its numbers, until it has now seventy-six members on its roll. The brethren of this lodge have most creditably exerted themselves. During the past three years they have secured a Life Governorship in each of the Masonic Charities. So much interest has been taken in the Sheffield Masonic Hall, that all the present available capital of the Wentworth Lodge has been appropriated towards the cost of this handsome edifice; moreover, many of its members have become Royal Arch Masons. Brethren, I have accepted what I consider virtually a command from his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the office of Provincial Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons for West Yorkshire, rendered vacant by the death of Comp. Bentley Shaw, and I hope to have the honour of meeting the companions of this province in Royal Arch Chapter assembled, in this Hall, some time during the month of October or November. I am glad to be informed, that despite the general depression of trade, on looking over our charity contributions, this lassitude in commercial matters has not had a corresponding depression in your voluntary contributions to the Masonic Institutions. This province, through the energy of its Charity Committee, has still been able to maintain, at the April election of candidates, its old successful prestige. I commend to the consideration of the lodges the circular of the Charity Committee, to raise the sum of £1050 for a presentation in perpetuity to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; and to be called the "Bentley Shaw Presentation." I have headed this subscription with a donation of £50. You are aware this committee has carried out the munificent project of my Deputy, Bro. Tew, and that the W. Yorkshire chair is endowed for the Annuitants' Fund with forty votes, and for the Girls' School with twenty-five votes, in lieu of the votes lost by the death of Bro. Shaw. My Deputy informs me he will be shortly called upon to establish another lodge in Sheffield, which is to be presided over by that veteran Past Master, Bro. Hay; and that two other Past Masters from each of the other two lodges have been invited to become honorary Past Masters of this fourth lodge in Sheffield. This is presumptive evidence that perfect harmony prevails between the several lodges here, and which is further consolidated by the frequent interchanges of visits paid by the respective lodges to one another. May the four lodges maintain this old and beautiful spirit of the Craft by perpetuating this identical concord, the very bond of peace and brotherly love, in having identical bye-laws, identical fees, and identical fellowship. I cannot pass on to another topic without alluding to the death of that lady, whose hospitality, in Stanton-in-Peak, the brethren in Sheffield have frequently enjoyed. I am glad this Provincial Grand Lodge is not deprived of the presence of the Senior Grand Warden to day. There is just another allusion I wish to make, which must, I think, be gratifying to the Freemasons of West Yorkshire; it is the creditable display which this Province makes in the Universal Exposition of the French at Paris; and that the British exhibitors were the first in readiness to display their contributions on the day of opening, the 1st of May. This circumstance must have been gratifying to our Royal Grand Master, the President of the English Section. Perhaps that which most touched the hearts of the French people was to see, at their third Exhibition, not only the representatives of all that was eminent in art, science, industry, commerce, banking, diplomacy, and politics present at its inauguration, and of all that the human mind had produced that was best and illustrious, but also the scions of the great Royal races of the world. Of these illustrious personages none worked with greater zeal, none made himself a more universal favourite, than our Royal Grand Master, the Prince of Wales. Within the last few years an intellectual intercourse has grown up between France and England. The two countries have the same commercial aspirations. We represent the same humanitarian principles which are our joint patrimony, and this Exhibition, in which England displays to great advantage, must be productive of much good to both countries, and lead to the consolidation of a union of interests. This Exhibition, which the French describe as the "Feast of Concord," may it, I say, brethren, be the feast of labour and of peace, and pave the way for the "Kiss of Peace" between the nations of the earth. I hope the era of ameliorations by warfare has closed with the conclusion of the labours of the Congress in Berlin. I hope the world, in our time at least, will see no more of those dreadful crusades which blaspheme the symbols of Freemasonry they have employed, and which work more evil in a year than statesmen can remedy in a generation. Brethren, peace has been restored to the South-East of Europe. This event will be joyfully greeted as the starting point of a new era of development and revival of friendly relations and of trade. A new period of economical and intellectual resurrection will be inaugurated in the East, supported by all the mental and material resources of our time, so full of energetic enterprises. I trust we shall have no further need of Congresses save those like this Universal Exposition of the Arts and Sciences, extending commerce and universal Masonic concord. From my heart I wish that the West Riding, and this Sheffield portion of it, may very largely share in all the glory and in all the blessedness on which our Masonic edifice is built, of brotherly love and harmony, and of a peaceful and improving era. It only remains for me to repeat, brethren, that you have again in Sheffield given your Provincial Grand Master and Provincial Grand Lodge a reception for which I am extremely grateful. The Deputy Prov. G. Master, in returning thanks for the salutation to himself, took occasion to mention that he had received petitions in favour of the establishment of new lodges in Sheffield and Huddersfield, and he hoped the promoters would do the Registrar for the time being the kindness and the favour of submitting a copy of their proposed bye-laws. This he asked in accordance with a custom which had been carefully observed prior to his own appointment to the office he had now the honour of holding, and he should not feel at liberty to depart from the custom, as the rule was a very wholesome one, and any neglect might tend to seriously hamper his successors in office. If this usual custom were followed and the promoters would be good enough to let the Prov. G. Secretary have the papers in due form, he would take care that the petitions were put forward at once with his cordial recommendation, and would take the very earliest opportunity of consecrating the new lodges when duly authorised. The D.P.G.M. also referred to the importance of each lodge sending to the Prov. G. Secretary the returns required by Grand Lodge of the number of subscribing members up to the 30th of June, 1878, with the utmost promptitude. In conclusion, he referred to the proposed Memorial Presentation in memory of the late Bro. Bentley Shaw, and said he hoped that desirable movement would be furthered by what took place at that meeting.

After the roll of lodges and the list of Prov. Grand Officers had been called over, which showed a representation of about 50 lodges in the province, with an attendance of about 130 brethren, the minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed.

By the agenda paper, the next business was the consideration of the proposed alteration and addition to Bye-law 53, which had been adjourned from the previous meeting, but he Provincial Grand Registrar (Bro. Malcolm) on behalf of Bro. Hutchinson (P.P.G. Regis.) who had charge of the motion, stated that after consulting many influential brethren in the province, and taking the opinions expressed by several lodges into consideration, it had been determined to withdraw the resolution on the present occasion, a result which was generally and warmly received by the brethren present.

No other general business being before the meeting, and there being no petitions for relief, an invitation from the Probity Lodge, Halifax, for the next Prov. G. Lodge meeting in October was accepted.

The lodge was then closed.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF DEVON.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of Devon was held on Tuesday, the 30th ult. at the Masonic Hall, Devon-square, in the town of Newton. R.W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. J. Tanner Davy, J.P., P.G.M.M., presided, supported by his officers:—V.W. Bro. the Rev. R. Bowden, P.P.G. Chap., D.P.G.M. pro tem.; W. Bros. Dr. Woodgates, S.G.W.; Major J. G. Shanks, P.P.G.S.W., J.G.W. pro tem.; J. B. Gover, M.O.; T. B. Richards, J.O.; Rev. T. W. Lemon, M.A., P.P.G.C., Chap. pro tem.; R. B. Twose, Treas.; Elliot Square, Reg.; Vincent Bird, Past G.M.O. of England, P.P.G.T., Sec.; J. G. P. Evans, D.C.; R. Blight, A.D.C.; Jno. Masters, S. of W.; R. Pengelly, St. B.; Thos. Searle, Purs.; H. Stocker, S.B.; Jno. Rogers, Tyler. Among the brethren present were also the following P.P.G. and lodge officers:—W. Bros. S. Jones, Past S.G.W. of England; John Du Pré, Past G. St. B. of England; J. T. Shapland, P.P.G.J.W.; S. Jew, P.P.G.M.O.; A. Bodley, P.P.G.J.O.; L. D. Westcott, P.P.G. Treas.; Jos. Austen, Past P.G.S.D. of England; E. Aitken-Davies, P.P.G.J.J.; J. M. Hiffey, P.P.G.J.D.; W. Browning, P.P.G.J.D.; Jno. Oliver, W.M. 215, P.P.G.A.D.C.; J. H. Toms, P.M. and Treas. 100, P.P.G. St. B.; C. Croydon, P.P.G. St. B.; E. J. Knight, W.M. 16, P.P.G.S.B.; Jno. Blackler, W.M. 91; S. D. Nicholls, W.M. 166; Bros. the Rev. F. A. S. Bellamy, Chap. 35; E. Binding, J.W. 16; J. H. Stephens, S.W. 48; H. Bridgman, M.O. 91; J. R. W. Quinn, R.N., S.W. 64; H. Horton, J.O. 35; W. Vicary, S.O. 215; F. Littleton, J.W. 48; J. S. Saunders, S.W. 215; Jno. Stocker, S.W. 15; Jas. Jerman, J.W. 15; Jno. Ingle, J.D. 215; W. Harris, J.W. 215; Jno. Neno, I.G. 76; Jno. Allen, Past S.W. 96; Jno. S. Roach, I.G. 50; Henry Clark, J.D. 15; H. G. Beachey, M.O. 215; E. Thos. Folford, S.O. 15; W. F. Quicke, D.C. 15; F. J. Pratt, M.O. 100; Charles G. Vicary, S.D. 215, and Canynges, Bristol; C. Pope, Sec. 215; Herbert Martin, Reg. 215; Charles Stevens, I.G. 215; Lewis E. Bearne, O. 215; Jno. Haywood, Tyler, 215. The minutes of the last Provincial G.L. meeting, held at Tavistock, Oct. 17th, 1877, were read and confirmed. The Secretary, W. Bro. Bird, reported that all the dues and fees had been paid. There was a balance remaining in hand of £23 2s. 7d. At a meeting of the Board of General Purposes, held at the Masonic Temple, Plymouth, on the evening of July 26th, the accounts were duly audited. Several applications for relief had been received, but, not being submitted in accordance with the regulations, could not be accepted. They had to be deferred. The Board of General Purposes recommended that none of the money at present in hand should be voted by that meeting. The Treasurer, W. Bro. R. B. Twose, read his report in detail, which together with the report of the Board of General Purposes confirmed the Secretary's report. The reports were unanimously received and adopted. W. Bros. S. Jew, J. B. Gover, C. Godtschalk, and L. D. Westcott were reappointed the Board of General Purposes.

The ceremony of the constitution of the new Mark Lodge as the Devon Lodge, No. 215, was then proceeded with. The new Devon Lodge was opened by the W.M. designate, W. Bro. John Oliver. The P.G. Secretary announced to the P.G.M.M. that the W.M. and members desired to be constituted and consecrated in ancient form, and the P.G. Secretary read the warrant from the M.W. the Grand Master of England, the Earl of Limerick, authorising the constitution of the said lodge. In reply to a query from the P.G.M.M., the brethren of the new lodge signified their assent to the appointment of the officers named in the warrant, and nominated Bros. John Oliver, W.M.; John S. Saunders, S.W.; W. Harris, J.W.; H. George Beachey, M.O.; W. Vicary, S.O.; F. D. Bewes, J.O.; C. G. Vicary, S.D.; John Ingle, J.D.; H. Martin, Registrar of Marks; William Vicary, Treas.; C. Pope, Sec.; Charles Stevens, I.G.; John Haywood, Tyler. The Master and members of the new lodge were pledged to obey the laws and constitution of the G.L. of Mark Masters. The P.G.M.M. then declared the Devon Mark Lodge, No. 215, to be a regular and duly constituted lodge. The ceremony of the consecration of the lodge followed. The P.G.M.M. gave the invocation, and the P.G. Chap. pro tem., the Rev. T. W. Lemon, offered up the consecration and dedication prayers. At the close of the consecration of the new lodge, the ordinary business of the P.G. Lodge was resumed. On the proposition of W. Bro. R. B. Twose, seconded by W. Bro. Major Shanks, R.M., Bros. William Vicary, 215, was unanimously elected the Treasurer for the ensuing year, and John Rogers was re-elected Tyler. The P.G.M.M. then invested the following brethren as the officers for the ensuing year:—

GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC.

We take this important correspondence from our contemporary the Canadian Craftsman.

OFFICIAL.

Office of the Grand Master,

Montreal, P.Q., 28th June, 1878.

To the M.W. the Grand Masters, officers, and brethren of all regular Grand Lodges of Freemasons throughout the world, to whom these presents may come, greeting:

Brethren,—It is with profound regret that I feel it my duty to issue the following proclamation:

To all brethren in obedience to the M.W. the Grand Lodge of Quebec, Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons.

Whereas, the Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons of Scotland has granted warrants to form two lodges of Masons at Montreal, in the Province of Quebec, one to be called "King Solomon, No. 622," and the other, "Argyle, No. 625," and

Whereas it has been officially announced that the said lodges are to be erected, constituted, and consecrated by virtue of such warrants, and their officers to be installed on the 24th day of June instant, and

Whereas, by such action, the Grand Lodge of Scotland has unjustifiably and unlawfully invaded the territory and jurisdiction of "The Grand Lodge of Quebec, Ancient Free, and Accepted Masons," in violation of the laws and traditions of the fraternity affecting the establishment and sovereignty of Grand Lodges, and in a manner calculated to interfere most seriously with the welfare and harmony of the Craft in the said province. And

Whereas such action on the part of the Grand Lodge of Scotland has occurred after unconditional recognition by her of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, as having and exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in said province, which recognition she subsequently withdrew without just or lawful cause:

Be it therefore known unto you all, that in vindication of the sovereignty of "The Grand Lodge of Quebec, Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons," and of the inherent rights and prerogatives of our ancient, honourable, and loyal fraternity, and in justice to all those Grand Lodges whose recognition has been extended to her—I, therefore, in virtue of the authority vested in me as Grand Master of "The Grand Lodge of Quebec, Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons," declare and proclaim that the action of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, in granting said two warrants, was and is unfriendly and unconstitutional; that said warrants are irregular and illegal; that the lodges to be formed thereunder will be irregular and illegal lodges; that all Masons named in said warrants are now, and all persons becoming members of said lodges will be, irregular Masons; and I hereby further declare and proclaim all Masonic intercourse to be suspended, and to cease, between this Grand Lodge, its subordinate lodges, and all brethren in obedience thereto, and the Grand Lodge of Scotland; and all lodges and brethren in obedience thereto, and all brethren of the Grand Lodge of Quebec are hereby commanded to hold no Masonic intercourse with any brother in obedience to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, as far as Ancient Craft Masonry is concerned; and this edict shall be and remain in full force and effect, until revoked by the Grand Master or Grand Lodge of Quebec; and it is hereby further ordered that due proclamation of this edict be made to all brethren in obedience to this Grand Lodge; of all which they will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly; also that the same be communicated to all regular Grand Lodges throughout the world.

Witness my hand and the seal of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, at Montreal, Province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada, this 21st day of June, A.L. 5878.

JOHN H. ISAACSON,
Grand Sec. G.L. of Q.
MELBOURNE M. TAIT,
Grand Master.

In order that you may more fully understand the position of this Grand Lodge towards the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and the circumstances which have necessitated the issue of the above proclamation, I have to request your attention to the following statement:

On the 20th day of October, A.L. 5869, the Grand Lodge of Quebec, Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons was duly formed in accordance with the principles and Constitutions of our ancient and honourable fraternity, and has since received fraternal recognition, as an independent, sovereign Grand Lodge of Freemasons, having the right to exercise supreme Masonic authority in and over the province of Quebec, Dominion of Canada, from the following Grand Lodges of the world, viz.:—

Alabama, Arkansas, Argentine Republic, Belgium, Brazil, British Columbia, California, Colorado, District of Columbia, Connecticut, Canada, Dakota, Georgia, Hungary, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Ireland, Kansas, Louisiana, Manitoba, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, New Brunswick, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Nevada, Nova Scotia, North Carolina, Ohio, Prince Edward Island, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Spain, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

At the time of the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec there were several lodges who still desired to remain under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Canada, which Grand Body exercised jurisdiction over the territory now known as the Province of Quebec, when that province and the now Province of Ontario were united under the name of the Province of Canada.

At the same time there were also existing five lodges under warrants from the Grand Lodge of England, and two lodges under warrants from the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

Subsequently the differences between the Grand Lodges of Quebec and Canada were most happily and amicably adjusted, and the latter withdrew entirely any claim to jurisdiction in the Province of Quebec.

Two of the lodges under English warrants, and one under Scotch warrant, took part in the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, but the remaining English lodges, viz.: St. Paul, St. George, St. Lawrence, together with the Scotch Lodge, Elgin, still work under the old warrants, and refuse to acknowledge the supremacy of the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Every effort, consistent with the honour and dignity of this Grand Lodge, has been made to them, to bring about an amicable adjustment of the anomalous state of affairs resulting from the existence of these lodges, but without result.

As one evidence of such effort on the part of this Grand Lodge, I would ask your attention to the following correspondence with Elgin Lodge, and would remark that a similar letter was sent to each of St. Paul's, St. George's, and St. Lawrence Lodges with the same result; these communications being sent at the earnest desire of our brethren, who wished to leave no stone unturned to bring about an amicable adjustment of our differences.

Montreal, 26th May, 1878.

To R.W. Bro. Cohen, Wor. Master of Elgin Lodge, No. 348, S.R.A.F. and A.M.

Wor. Sir and Dear Bro.,—I beg to state for your information that at the last annual communication of this Grand Lodge, held in this city on the 22nd and 23rd September last, 1875, a correspondence had between the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England and the writer on behalf of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, on the subject of the recognition of the latter named body by the former, was read and laid before the Grand Lodge, and following resolution was adopted:

"That the consideration of the acceptance by this Grand Lodge of recognition by the Grand Lodge of England, on the terms as proposed by the latter as set forth in the address of the M.W. the Grand Master, be postponed until the next communication of this Grand Lodge, and that a committee be appointed by the M.W. the Grand Master to confer with the lodges now existing in this province under warrants from other jurisdictions, with a view to effect, if possible, the amicable junction of said lodges with this Grand Lodge, and that said committee report progress to the M.W. Grand Master from time to time, in order that such report may be submitted for the consideration of this Grand Lodge, whose decision in the matter shall be final."

That subsequently, with the view to give effect to the above quoted resolution, a committee was named by the M.W. the Grand Master of the G.L. of Q., consisting of the following:—

R.W. Bro. James O'Halloran, D.G.M.
" " E. M. Copeland, D.D.G.M.
" " M. M. Tait, P.D.D.G.M.
" " I. H. Stearns, P.D.D.G.M.
" " J. H. Isaacson, Grand Secretary.

That the above named, in pursuance of the duty devolving upon them as such committee, have decided to respectfully and fraternally invite a conference with representatives of lodges in this province holding charters under the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland, to consider the important subject referred to in the above mentioned resolution.

I am, therefore, directed to invite your lodge, as being one under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, to at an early period depute one or more of its members to take part in such conference, and I shall be happy to hear from you at an early date in reply to this communication.

I am, Wor. Sir and Bro., yours respectfully and fraternally,
(Signed) JOHN H. ISAACSON,
Grand Secretary G. L. of Q.

Elgin Lodge, F. and A. M.,

Montreal, June 10th, 1876.

John H. Isaacson, Grand Secretary Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Dear Sir and R.W. Bro.—I am instructed by the R.W.M. of Elgin Lodge, A.E. Cohen, Esq., to acknowledge receipt of your communication addressed to him on the 26th ultimo, and in reply to send you the following copy of a resolution passed at the special meeting of the lodge held on the 2nd instant, at which your letter and invitation therein contained were duly considered, viz. :—

"That this lodge, after having considered the communication from the Grand Lodge of Quebec, at a special meeting called for that purpose, on the 2nd June, inst., have unanimously resolved to continue their allegiance to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and that the Secretary be, and is hereby instructed to communicate with the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Quebec to that effect."

After passing such a resolution as the foregoing it was deemed hardly necessary to name a delegation to attend the proposed conference. But knowing the feeling of the lodge in the matter, and should you still desire it to be represented at your meeting, I shall be happy to again lay your wishes before the brethren at their regular communication upon hearing from you.

I am, yours faithfully and fraternally,

(Signed)

W. A. SALSBUURY,

Secretary.

This Grand Lodge afterwards again applied to the Grand Lodge of Scotland for recognition as a legally constituted Grand Lodge, having and exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in and over the Province of Quebec, and received recognition as such, as will be seen by the following correspondence :—

Grand Lodge of Quebec, A. F. and A. M.—Grand Secretary's Office.

Montreal, Canada, January 6th, 1877.

Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, M.W. Grand Master, Grand Lodge of Scotland A. F. and A. M.

M.W. Brother,—I am directed by Jas. Dunbar, Esq., Queen's Counsel, and M.W. Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, A. F. and A. M., to state for your information, and for that of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, that the Grand Lodge of Quebec, which was regularly and constitutionally formed and established on the 20th day of October, 1869 (as has been already heretofore notified to the Grand Lodge of Scotland), has since that date been acknowledged and recognised very generally throughout the globe as a legally constituted Grand Lodge, having and exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in and over the Province of Quebec.

And I am desired to state that the Grand Lodge of Quebec sincerely desires the recognition of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and to be in fraternal intercourse with that grand body; to that end I am requested to address this communication to you, and I am requesting that it may be submitted to your Grand Lodge, with the view of obtaining at an early period the recognition desired.

I have the honour to be, M.W. Sir, your obedient brother,

Signed

JOHN H. ISAACSON,

Grand Secretary.

Grand Lodge of Scotland—Grand Secretary's Office.

Freemasons' Hall, 98, George-street,

Edinburgh, May 17th, 1877.

J. H. Isaacson, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Quebec, Montreal.

Dear Sir and R.W. Brother,—I have to inform you that at their Quarterly Communication, held at Edinburgh, on the 5th of February last, the Grand Lodge of Scotland unanimously resolved to open fraternal relations with the Grand Lodge of Quebec. They at the same time agreed to submit for your approval the name of Bro. Robert Wylie, P.M. of Mother Kilwinning, as Representative here of your Grand Lodge. I shall be glad to receive the name of the brother whom the Grand Lodge of Quebec may be pleased to nominate as Representative from our Grand Lodge.

Permit me to say that the delay which has occurred in sending this official intimation is due to the change that has been effected in this department.

I am, with the most fraternal regards, yours faithfully,

Grand Lodge of Quebec, A. F. and A. M.—Grand Secretary's Office.

Montreal, May 31st, 1877.

D. Murray Lyon, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Scotland, A. F. and A. M.

R. W. Sir and Dear Brother,—I am directed by the M.W. the Grand Master of this Grand Lodge to acknowledge the receipt of your communication to me of the 17th of May instant, conveying the very gratifying information that the Grand Lodge of Scotland had at its Quarterly Communication, held at Edinburgh, on the 5th February last, unanimously resolved to open fraternal relations with the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

M.W. Bro. Dunbar regards this resolution of the Grand Lodge of Scotland as extending to the Grand Lodge of Quebec the recognition asked for by my letter of the 6th of January, 1877, to your M.W. Grand Master, and as its recognition of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, as a legally constituted and established Grand Lodge, having and exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in and over the Province of Quebec.

The Grand Master has much pleasure in acquiescing in the suggestion by the Grand Lodge, of the name of Bro. Robert Wylie, P.M. of Mother Kilwinning Lodge, as representative of this Grand Lodge, near the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and I have the pleasure of forwarding his commission.

I feel assured that the Grand Lodge of Quebec would hail with lively satisfaction the appointment of its present Grand Master, M.W. Bro. James Dunbar, of Quebec City, Queen's Counsel, as the representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, near this Grand Lodge.

An early interchange of the credentials of the representatives of the two Grand Lodges and the continuation of the correspondence now so happily established will be a source of great satisfaction to this Grand Lodge.

I am, R.W. and Dear Brother, yours fraternally,

(Signed)

[R.W. Dear Sir and Brother,—In reply to your favour of the 31st May, I beg to say that I expect to be able to forward our Commission to your M.W. Grand Master, Bro. James Dunbar, immediately after the Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge, on the 6th August next.

I deem it an honour to have had the privilege of being the medium of communicating the resolution of the Grand Lodge of Scotland to recognise and hold correspondence with the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Dear Sir and Brother,—I have the pleasure of forwarding commission in favour of your Grand Master, Bro. Dunbar, and hope the relations that are now ratified may long exist between the Grand Lodges of Quebec and Scotland.

Ever faithfully,

D. MURRAY LYON,

Grand Secretary.

Grand Lodge of Quebec, A. F. and A. M.—Grand Secretary's Office.

Montreal, August 29th, 1877.

D. Murray Lyon, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Scotland, A. F. and A. M.

Dear Sir and R.W. Brother,—I am desired by the M.W. the Grand Master, Bro. Dunbar, to acknowledge the receipt by him of commission in his favour, naming him the Grand Representative of your Grand Lodge, near the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

A more formal acknowledgment of the commission will be made by its recipient at an early period. At the present M.W. Bro. Dunbar is from home.

I am, yours fraternally,

JOHN H. ISAACSON,

Grand Secretary.

After the establishment of such fraternal relations it appeared but right and proper that effect should be given to the recognition so kindly extended, and with that view the following correspondence took place, which, unfortunately, resulted in the withdrawal by the Grand Lodge of Scotland of her recognition and her Grand Representative, and as a necessary consequence in the recall by me of the commission issued in favour of R.W. Bro. Wylie as Grand Representative of this Grand Lodge, near the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

Grand Lodge of Quebec, A. F. and A. M.—Grand Secretary's Office.

Montreal, 4th October, 1877.

D. Murray Lyon, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Scotland, A. F. and A. M.

R.W. Sir and Dear Brother,—Referring to the correspondence which has passed between the Grand Lodge of Scotland and the Grand Lodge of Quebec, relative to the recognition of the latter (a printed copy whereof for your convenience I take the liberty to enclose herewith), and by which correspondence the Grand Lodge of Quebec considered that they have received recognition, as exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in this province, I am directed to respectfully call the attention of the Grand Lodge of Scotland to the fact that there is a subordinate lodge in this city, called the Elgin Lodge, working under warrant No. 348, received from your Grand Lodge, and not recognising the Grand Lodge of Quebec as such supreme authority.

As the existence of this lodge, under existing circumstances, is inconsistent with the exercise of supreme jurisdiction by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, I am requested to suggest to the Grand Lodge of Scotland the propriety of directing Elgin Lodge to take such steps as may be necessary to place itself under the jurisdiction of Grand Lodge.

I am directed to say further that the Grand Lodge of Quebec is firmly of opinion that such a step would prevent any possible conflict of jurisdiction, and so tend greatly to promote harmony among Masons in this province.

I am yours respectfully and fraternally,

Grand Secretary.

Grand Lodge of Quebec, A. F. and A. M.—Grand Secretary's Office.

Montreal, 1st November, 1878,

D. Murray Lyon, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Scotland, Edinburgh.

R.W. Sir and Brother,—I have the honour, by the command of the Grand Master of this Grand Lodge, to forward on the other side, for the information of the M.W. the Grand Lodge of Scotland, a copy of a resolution adopted by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, at its last annual communication, held in this city on the 26th and 27th days of September last, 1877.

I am, R.W. Sir, yours fraternally,

(Signed)

JOHN H. ISAACSON,

Grand Secretary.

The following is a copy of the resolution referred to :—

Resolved,—That in consideration of the recognition of this Grand Lodge—through the establishment of fraternal relations in the interchange of Grand Representatives by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and in view of the fact that there still exists in this jurisdiction a subordinate lodge working under charter of that Grand Body, as well as three subordinate lodges working under charters from the Grand Lodge of England; therefore it is expedient that a definite period be now fixed when those several lodges shall return to their respective Grand Lodges their charters, and receive from this Grand Lodge a duplicate thereof, so that the supremacy of the Grand Lodge of Quebec may be preserved intact, in accordance with the well-understood regulations defining the territorial jurisdiction of Grand Lodges on this continent.

And inasmuch as the interest of the Craft in this jurisdiction requires that no unnecessary delay shall ensue in carrying out this resolution, the Most Worshipful the Grand Master is hereby instructed to cause the same to be communicated forthwith to the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland respectively, with a respectful notification that their several subordinate lodges shall on or before the 1st of January next comply with the terms thereof.

And to these communications the following replies were received :—

Grand Lodge of Scotland—Grand Secretary's Office.

Freemasons' Hall, 98, George-street,

Edinburgh, 15th Nov., 1877.

John H. Isaacson, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Dear Sir and R.W. Brother,—I have to acknowledge receipt of your favours of the 4th ult., and 1st inst.

Your first communication, along with a letter from Lodge Elgin, Montreal, and my reply thereto were laid before Grand Committee on the 30th October. In terms of instructions I beg to enclose a copy of the minute of Grand Committee on the subject, which minute was confirmed by Grand Lodge at the Quarterly Communication on the 5th inst.

Your second communication conveys a demand that Elgin, Montreal, be instructed to transfer its allegiance to the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

I shall present your letter and accompanying resolutions to Grand Committee on the 27th inst.

I am, dear Sir and R.W. Brother, yours faithfully,

(Signed)

D. MURRAY LYON,

Secretary.

The following is copy of minutes referred to, with copy of letter from Grand Lodge of Scotland to Secretary of Elgin Lodge, Montreal :—

A communication was presented from the Lodge Elgin, Montreal, No. 348, dated 2nd October, regarding a proposal to compel that lodge to withdraw from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and place itself under the Grand Lodge of Quebec. Also a letter from Bro. John H. Isaacson, Grand Secretary of Quebec (Oct. 4), in which the following sentence occurs :—"As the existence of this lodge (Elgin) under present circumstances is inconsistent with the exercise of supreme jurisdiction by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, I am instructed to suggest to the Grand Lodge of Scotland the propriety of directing Elgin Lodge to take such steps as may be necessary to place itself under the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge. I am directed to say further that the Grand Lodge of Quebec is firmly of opinion that such a step would prevent any possible conflict of jurisdiction, and so tend greatly to promote harmony among Masons in this province." The following letter by the Grand Secretary was also submitted :—

Freemasons' Hall, 98, George Street,

Edinburgh, Oct. 15, 1877.

Henry Morgan, Esq., Secretary, Lo. Elgin, No. 348, Montreal.

Dear Sir and Brother.—Your favour of the 2nd inst. reached me this morning. I reply in course, in order the more promptly to dispel the fears by which your brethren have been moved in connection with the recent exchange of representatives between the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Quebec.

In opening fraternal relations with the Grand Lodge of Quebec, our Grand Lodge could not have had the slightest intention of recognising any right upon which might be founded a demand for the severance of the tie existing between it and its daughter Lodge of Montreal.

Should such a right be insisted upon, I feel certain that rather than accede to the demand, the Grand Lodge of Scotland will authorise the recall of its commission to its representative near the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Your lodge will enjoy the fullest Masonic protection with attendant privileges so long as it desires to continue its allegiance to its Mother Grand Lodge. Pray assure the brethren of this.

Your communication will be laid before the Grand Committee at their meeting on 30th inst.

I am, faithfully and fraternally yours,

D. MURRAY LYON,

Secretary.

The Grand Committee heartily approved of their Secretary's reply, and instructed that a copy thereof be forwarded to the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

Edinburgh, 3rd Dec., 1877.

John H. Isaacson, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Quebec, Montreal.

R.W. Sir and Dear Brother,—I am instructed by Grand Committee to recall the commission issued in favour of the M.W. Bro. James Dunbar, as Representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland at the Grand Lodge of Quebec. I am also directed to say that, had the withdrawal of our charter from Elgin, Montreal, been made sine qua non to the establishment of fraternal relations between the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Quebec, no such bond would have been entered into.

I am, R.W. Sir and Brother, yours faithfully,
D. MURRAY LYON,
Secretary.

Montreal, 17th May, 1878.

D. Murray Lyon, Esq., Grand Secretary, Grand Lodge of Scotland, A. F. and A. M.

Dear Sir and R.W. Bro.,—I am directed by the Most Worshipful Grand Master to inform you that your communications of the 15th November last, with its enclosures and 3rd December last, were laid before the meeting of the Board of General Purposes of this Grand Lodge, at their meeting lately held, but were referred to the Most Worshipful Grand Master to take such action upon them as he might consider right and proper pending the annual meeting of Grand Lodge.

The Most Worshipful Grand Master desires me to express his extreme regret that the friendly and fraternal correspondence and intercourse which was apparently so happily commenced should have terminated so abruptly, by the recall by your Grand Lodge of the commission issued in favour of the Most Worshipful James Dunbar, as Representative of your Grand Body, near the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

The Most Worshipful the Grand Master has particularly noted the remark in your letter of the 15th October last, to the Secretary of the Elgin Lodge, wherein you say: "In opening fraternal relations with the Grand Lodge of Quebec, our Grand Lodge could not have had the slightest intention of recognising any right upon which might be founded a demand for the severance of the tie existing between it and its daughter lodge in Montreal"—and also the remark contained in your letter of 3rd December last, wherein, after recalling the commission issued in favour of the Most Worshipful Bro. James Dunbar, you state: "I am also directed to say that had the withdrawal of our charter from Elgin Lodge, Montreal, been made sine qua non to the establishment of fraternal relations between the Grand Lodge of Scotland and Quebec, no such bond would have been entered into."

The Grand Lodge of Quebec was established, as your Grand Body may most probably be aware, upon the well recognised principle on this continent, at any rate, that political and Masonic boundaries should be co-terminous, and that the Grand Lodge of Quebec, upon being regularly and constitutionally formed, was entitled to supreme Masonic jurisdiction in this province.

Most Worshipful Bro. Dunbar directed me to state in my letter of 6th January last, 1877, in which recognition by your Grand Lodge was solicited, that since the date of its establishment, "the Grand Lodge of Quebec had been acknowledged and recognised very generally throughout the globe, as a legally constituted Grand Lodge, having and exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in and over the Province of Quebec."

Your Grand Body may likewise possibly be aware that at the Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, held in the month of September, 1876, a resolution was passed of which the following is an abstract:—

Resolved,—That the Grand Lodge of Quebec respectfully declines to accept conditional recognition from any Grand Lodge, and that more especially it is pained to be compelled to decline the recognition tendered by the Grand Lodge of England on the terms in which it is offered."

Resolved,—That deeply deploring everything calculated to create discord or want of harmony among those who should be brethren dwelling together in unity, yet this Grand Lodge, being the equal within its own jurisdiction of any Grand Lodge in the universe within its jurisdiction, cannot in justice to itself recognise the Masonic authority of any foreign Grand Lodge within the limits of the Province of Quebec."

In reply to my letter of the 6th January last, in which Most Worshipful Bro. Dunbar so plainly asked for recognition of this Grand Lodge, as having supreme Masonic jurisdiction in this province, your favour of the 17th May, 1877, was received with the gratifying information that the Grand Lodge of Scotland, at a Quarterly Communication, held at Edinburgh, on the 5th February then last, had unanimously resolved to open fraternal relations with the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and suggesting the name of Bro. Robert Wylie as Representative there of our Grand Lodge.

In acknowledging receipt of this letter, I was directed by Most Worshipful Bro. Dunbar, in my letter of 31st May, 1877, to state as follows:—"M.W. Bro. Dunbar regards this resolution of the Grand Lodge of Scotland as extending to the Grand Lodge of Quebec the recognition asked for by my letter of the 6th January, 1877, to your Most Worshipful Grand Master, and as its recognition of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, as a legally constituted and established Grand Lodge, having and exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in and over the Province of Quebec."

Subsequently, during the summer of 1877, the credentials of the respective Representatives were interchanged.

It appears to the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, that the correspondence discloses very plainly, what Most Worshipful Bro. Dunbar desired, namely: recognition of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, as exercising supreme Masonic jurisdiction in and over the Province of Quebec, and that such recognition was granted, and upon that understanding Representatives were appointed.

It also appears to the Most Worshipful the Grand Master that there is nothing ambiguous about the words "supreme jurisdiction," and that such jurisdiction is entirely inconsistent with the existence of subordinate lodges in this province holding charters from the Grand Lodge of England or Scotland, and therefore the Most Worshipful the Grand Master was most pained to receive your letter of the 3rd December last, recalling so abruptly without Explanation the commission issued in favour of Most Worshipful Bro. Dunbar, and withdrawing the recognition previously extended to this Grand Lodge as supreme authority in this province.

There was no misunderstanding, and you can easily perceive that there could have been none, on the part of Most Worshipful Bro. Dunbar, as to the terms upon which such recognition was asked and accepted. If the Grand Lodge of Scotland had only offered conditional recognition as the Grand Lodge of England did, namely: agreeing not to grant any new warrants within the province, but that the lodge working under the Scotch charter should continue to do so, the Grand Lodge of Quebec could not have made the same reply as she did to the Grand Lodge of England; but although the request for recognition in this case was the same as in the case of England, it was granted by your Grand Lodge unconditionally in the terms asked for; and being so granted the Most Worshipful the Grand Master had reason to suppose full effect would be given to it, and, therefore, I was instructed to write you, as I did on the 4th of October last, that "as the existence of this lodge (Elgin Lodge) under present circumstances is inconsistent with the exercise of supreme jurisdiction by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, I am instructed to suggest to the Grand Lodge of Scotland the propriety of directing 'Elgin Lodge' to take such steps as may be necessary to place itself under the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge;" to which yours of the 3rd December last was a reply.

The Most Worshipful the Grand Master regrets extremely that he is obliged, owing to the withdrawal by your Grand Lodge of its recognition, to recall, as he now does, the commission issued in favour of Bro. Robert Wylie as Representative of this Grand Lodge near the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

I have the honour to be, R. W. Sir and dear Brother,
Yours fraternally.
(Signed) JOHN HELDER ISAACSON,
Grand Secretary.

It was only a few days ago that official information reached me, that the Grand Lodge of Scotland had actually granted warrants for the formation of the two lodges referred to in my proclamation.

This information was obtained from the printed proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, kindly forwarded me by a brother, and from the following announcement and invitation, a copy of which was received by several of the brethren under the jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge:—

"F. AND A. M. OF SCOTLAND.

"To all whom it may concern.
"These are to certify that the Grand Lodge of Scotland having chartered the Lodges "King Solomon, No. 622," and "Argyle, No. 625," at Montreal,—in pursuance thereof have appointed Bro. George A. Baynes, R.W. Master of Elgin Lodge, Montreal, No. 348, R.S., to erect, constitute and consecrate said lodges, and instal their first office-bearers, and set the same to work with good and wholesome instructions.

"By order,
"D. MURRAY LYON,
"Grand Secretary.

"DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In accordance with the above you are invited to attend the Masonic ceremonies at St. Paul's Lodge Room (kindly lent for the occasion), Victoria-street, above the Academy of Music, on Monday, the 29th June (St. John's Day), at 6.30 p.m.

"Montreal, 13th June, 1878.

"Please present this at the door."

I have been credibly informed, and there can be no doubt, that the proceedings referred to in foregoing announcement were carried out.

I respectfully and fraternally, and without any comment, submit the foregoing statement for your consideration, confidently believing that you will regard the conduct of the Grand Lodge of Scotland in issuing said two warrants, and in refusing to consider the propriety of withdrawing any claim of jurisdiction in this province, as unfaternal and unconstitutional, and as calculated to be most injurious to the peace, unity, and prosperity of the Craft therein.

I have formally required the Grand Lodge of Scotland to recall the two warrants in question, and to annul all proceedings taken in connection therewith, reserving to the Grand Lodge of Quebec to take such further action to secure to herself supreme and exclusive jurisdiction in this province as in her wisdom she may think most desirable.

And finally, brethren, I appeal to you to uphold and sustain me, in this my action in vindication of our lawful G. L. sovereignty. The principle of exclusive territorial jurisdiction has been undoubtedly violated in this instance, and I rely firmly upon your assistance to maintain and uphold a principle so essentially necessary to the efficient working and welfare of our ancient and honourable Society.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS

The meeting of the General Committee was held at Freemasons' Hall on Saturday, the 3rd instant. Present Bro. H. W. Hunt, in the chair, Bros. Donald M. Dewar, H. Browse, W. H. Perryman, R. T. Morris, F. A. Adlard, J. W. M. Dosell, Hyde Pullen and E. C. Massey (Freemason). The minutes of the last general Committee, of the 6th ult., were read and confirmed, and those of the quarterly general Committee and of the House Committee were read for information. The report of the Audit Committee was also read and the chairman of this Committee was authorised to sign cheques for the accounts passed. There was only one petition for a candidate (F. W. Steinham) which was accepted, and a sum of £6 for outfit was voted for W. P. Barrett, lately a scholar in the Institution. Bro. Fredk. Binckes, the Secretary, announced that the result already realised of the last festival was a sum of a little over £10,400 and that there was still one list to come in, he believed, for a considerable sum.

CONSECRATION OF THE METROPOLITAN CHAPTER.

The consecration of the Metropolitan Chapter, No. 1507, took place on the 15th ult., at the Metropolitan Club, Pentonville-road. Comp. James Terry, Prov. G.D. of C. of Herts, was the Consecrating Officer, and was assisted by Comps. Joseph Smith as H., and Thos. A. Adams as J.; and the other companions present were Comps. James Willing, Z. designate; J. R. Stacey, H. designate; W. J. Ferguson, J. designate; W. M. Stiles, C. W. Hudson, H. H. Child, B. Swallow, and J. J. Michael. The usual ceremony having been gone through, Comp. Terry installed the three Principals, and the following companions were inducted into the respective offices attached to their names, viz., Comps. W. M. Stiles, S.E.; Hudson, S.N.; and Child, Sojourner. Comp. R. E. Barnes was invested as Janitor. A vote of thanks and the honorary membership of the chapter were by acclamation accorded to Comp. Terry for his services as Consecrating and Installing Officer, which was suitably acknowledged. At the banquet the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly proposed and responded to, and the companions separated after spending one of the most pleasant and agreeable evenings it has been our pleasure to witness.

ROYAL AND SELECT MASTERS.

A meeting of the Grand Master's Council, No. 1, was held at the Masonic rooms, No. 2, Red Lion-square, on Tuesday, the 30th of July. Present: Bros. Rev. G. R. Portal, M.P.G.W.; Hyde Pullen, G.P.C.W.; Frederic Davison, G. Treas.; S. Rosenthal, T.A.M. No. 3; Gen. J. S. Brownrigg; Rev. Ambrose W. Hall; Magnus Ohren; Dr. F. W. Ramsay; S. C. Dibdin; D. M. Dewar; and Ill. Bro. Robert Morris, LL.D., of Kentucky. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, Bros. T. C. Walls and E. B. Bright were introduced and received the various degrees of Most Excellent Master, Royal Master, Select Master, and Super Excellent Master. The other business before the Council having been transacted, the meeting was closed in ancient form, and adjourned to Wednesday, the 30th of October.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE. — Notwithstanding that when the Obelisk was fairly poised on its true centre, it has been raised three feet, it would be very rash to attempt to predict from the present rate of progress the day when there will be no longer any mechanical hindrance in the way of the monolith's being gently swung into a vertical position, and then let fall on its pedestal. Still more precarious would be any forecast as to the date of its public inauguration. Meanwhile, the ingenious artisans from the South Kensington Museum have been busily carrying out Major Festing's instructions with a view to making a full-sized plaster cast of the monument for the national collection. Mr. Bullen, who was sent out by the Museum to India eight years ago, to take a similar cast of the famous Sanchi Tope gateway, is in charge of the operations. Already several scores of plaster moulds have been secured, and so far as the pyramidion and the portion of the shaft above the jacket is concerned the work is most likely now finished. The waist and section of the obelisk below the jacket will be left to be dealt with after the inauguration. On Wednesday evening shortly before seven, Lord Beaconsfield paid an improvised visit to the monolith. Bro. John Dixon received the Prime Minister and showed him over the works. His Lordship stayed about twenty minutes, and was much interested in what he saw and heard.

Lord Tredegar and Sir George Elliot, Bart., M.P., formally opened the new graving dock at Newport, Monmouthshire, on Tuesday, in the presence of several thousand spectators, and in the evening a banquet took place, under the presidency of the Mayor, in honour of the passing of the Bill for power to establish the Pontypridd, Caerphilly, and Newport Railway—a new line which will place the town in direct communication with the South Wales coalfields, and thus contribute greatly to its commercial prosperity.

MASONIC SONGS.—A selection of Masonic Songs, set to popular airs, written by Bro. E.P. Philpots M.D., F.R.G.S., is now ready, forming a handsome volume, bound in cloth, with gilt edges, 3s. She reached a place known as the Falaise de la Mort, and in stooping to pick a flower, her foot slipped and she was precipitated into a hole known as the Barbots, a spot said to have this peculiarity that at the end of forty-eight hours nothing more than the skeleton remains of any beings which fall into it. It contains millions of small insects which devour the body, and which are called by the inhabitants of the district barbots, and are by them held in especial horror. The Duke de Frias met his death under similar circumstances a few years ago.

In digging out the foundation of the site of an old house in Southgate-street, Gloucester, the base of a massive Roman column was lately discovered, about 9ft. below the surface. It consists of a double torus, with base about 5ft. square, the base of the column being 3ft. 3in. A fine piece of tessellated pavement was discovered some years ago near the same spot. Some workmen, excavating for draining purposes in the same city, unearthed the bones of at least twenty persons. About 5ft. from the surface they discovered a cast-lead coffin, containing a perfect skeleton, apparently of a man 6ft. high. The top had been hammered down. The remains are Roman, the place having once been a Roman burial-ground for the garrison of Gloucester.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

NEW CROSS LODGE (No. 1559).—On Saturday last was held, at the New Cross Public Hall, the usual quarterly business meeting of this flourishing lodge. There were present Bros. Walter Simmonds, W.M.; Ernest E. Smith, J.D., acting as S.W.; Louis Beck (W.M. Rothesay), J.W.; H. Green, (P.M. 1274, &c.), S.D.; T. Grummant, D.C., acting as J.D.; W. Cowley, I.G.; Moss, W.S.; F. Walters, P.G.J.W. Middx., Treas.; H. Keeble, P.M., Sec.; A. B. Church, Tyler; T. Metham, Knibbs, Swain, Thornton, H. Metham, Steers, Peverley, Clark, and Priest. The following visitors were also present: Bros. J. Miller, 65; G. Herring, 205; L. Exame, 710; T. R. Maccliff, 913; W. Bull, 1235; D. Smith, 1326; P. Brown, 1326. Lodge having been opened and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, Bro. W. Bull, M.R.C.S., was unanimously elected a joining member. The W.M., through indisposition, was compelled to leave the chair, his place being kindly taken by Bro. F. Walters, who after raising Bro. Priest to the Sublime Degree, conferred the benefits and privileges of Fellow Craft on Bros. Clark and Peverley. Mr. Whiclow, a candidate for initiation, was then admitted, and impressively received in due form into the Order. Bro. Walters acquitting himself with his usual histrionic excellence. This concluding the business of the day, lodge was closed, and the brethren beat a retreat to the banqueting hall, where real good business was done to an excellent repast. The W.M. was faced by jovial Bro. Green, while Bro. Beck reigned jubilant in the south. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having received due honour, the brethren gave themselves up to a musical and vocal evening.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The ordinary monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 6th inst. There were present Bros. J. Black, W.M.; W. Shilton, P.M., as S.W.; T. Bird, J.W.; W. Taylor, P.M.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treasurer; W. F. Lamony, P.M. (Freemason); T. C. Robinson, Sec.; H. Peacock, I.G.; Jos. Hewson, Tyler; C. H. McCall, J. Fearon, J. Towers, J. Pearson, R. Harrison, S. Ferguson, J. Borrowdale, I. Evening, R. Bailey, R. W. Robinson, and E. L. Waugh. After the minutes were confirmed, Bro. E. L. Waugh was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., and the lodge being then reduced, Mr. Henry Ritson, who had been previously balloted for, was initiated into Masonry by Bro. R. Robinson, P.M. Before closing, Bro. W. F. Lamony, P.M., presented to the lodge a large framed chart of the officers from its commencement in 1864, space being left for fifteen years longer. After a vote of thanks to the donor, on the motion of the W.M., the lodge was closed in form.

DERBY.—Hartington Lodge (No. 105).—The usual monthly meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at the Derbyshire Masonic Hall, on Wednesday, August 7th, 1878. Present: Bros. G. Pipes, W.M.; J. O. Manton, as S.W.; W. B. Hextall, J.W.; W. Butterfield, as Secretary; S. Steele, S.D.; C. D. Hart, as J.D.; T. Day, as I.G.; Past Masters S. Pipes, P.P.S.G.D., and J. Worsnop, P.P.G.P., and a number of other brethren, including the following visitors: W. F. Cox, P.M. Hartington, No. 1021, Barrow-in-Furness; G. T. Wright, P.M. 731, and P.P.G.J.W. Derbyshire; J. R. Hudson, 859; J. H. Richardson, 940; and Wm. Johnson. The opening business having been disposed of, the ballot was taken for Mr. Henry Carr, and found clear. The lodge was then advanced to the Second Degree, and Bro. Baxter tested as to his eligibility for the Third; the result of the test being satisfactory, he retired. The lodge was then advanced to the Third Degree, Bro. Baxter was re-admitted, and raised in solemn form. The S.W. afterwards delivered the charge relating to the Third Degree to Bros. Hefford, Arnold, and Baxter. The lodge being lowered by successive stages to the First Degree, the W.M. made the usual enquiries, and the name of another candidate for the mysteries of Freemasonry was submitted. This finishing the work of the evening, the lodge was adjourned until September 4th. It was a matter of mutual congratulation amongst the brethren, that notwithstanding the fact that August was a general "holiday" month, the attendance was a good average one, and although several of the regular officers were absent, taking advantage of the season, the ceremonies had been most successfully performed, auguring a continued prosperity for the lodge.

YORK.—Eboracum Lodge (No. 1611).—This lodge held its regular monthly meeting on Monday, the 12th inst. The W.M., Bro. T. B. Whythead, presided, and was well supported by officers and brethren. Several visitors were present, including Bros. C. F. Matier and C. Foster, of Leeds. Three brethren were raised to the degree of M.M.; Bro. R. W. Hollon, P.M. 236, was proposed as a joining member, and a candidate was proposed for the ballot. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the W.M. said he wished to thank the brethren of the lodge, and especially the S.W. (Bro. J. S. Cumberland), for their support at their very successful gathering to welcome the American Masonic Pilgrims. When, by the courteous invitation of Bro. George Kenning, he had subsequently met the Americans at Freemasons' Tavern, several of them had spoken to him of the very happy memories that would always dwell in their minds of their visit to York, where they had not only been treated most generously, but had met with such a genuine warmth of Masonic feeling that they had felt at once perfectly at home amongst the descendants of the old York Masons. Several presentations were made to the lodge, including a set of valuable photographs of English cathedrals by Bro. J. P. Husband, and a curious old work on the Creeds of the World by Bro. A. T. B. Turner, who were severally thanked for their liberality. At the festive board, round which the brethren met after lodge closing, the grand old Dutch Masonic flag, the property of the lodge, excited much admiration. It has been mounted on a handsome stand of ebony, travelling on wheels, and inlaid with silver bands and shields, bearing suitable Masonic emblems, the name of the lodge appearing in the centre in letters of acacia wood. "Prosperity to the Eboracum Lodge," which has just passed its second anniversary of consecration, was for the first time drank from this loving cup, which bears the date of 1698.

LIVERPOOL.—Duke of Edinburgh Lodge (No. 1182).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this high, prosperous, and well-conducted lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Thursday afternoon, the 8th inst., when there was an unusually large and influential gathering of members and visitors, attracted by the special interest of the occasion, and demonstrating the lodge has not lost any of its excellent position by being transplanted from the suburbs to the town. Bro. J. Williams, W.M., occupied the chair of K.S. at the opening of the lodge, and he was supported by Bros. R. Martin, jun., P.M.; J. Edginton, P.M.; T. B. Myers, P.M.; Captain Williams, P.M.; T. Davis, S.W.; G. Musker, J.W.; W. Brown, Treas.; A. D. Hesketh, Sec.; A. Barclay, S.D.; T. O. Dutton, J.D.; J. O. Rea, I.G.; H. C. Haynes, S.; T. Waring, S.; and P. Ball, Tyler. The members present were Bros. T. Davis, J. P. Parry, T. E. Evans, D. Ritchie, B. Wilson, H. Sawyer, J. Blundell, R. Baines, J. H. Tyson, R. Gall, S. A. Romain, W. C. Higgins, R. Hargreaves, J. Rush-ton, J. Wright, A. Thoms, J. Holden, T. Holden, A. Smith, J. Waddell, E. Paull, T. H. Pence, J. Newport, S. Wilkinson, J. Carlender, J. McIntire, P. J. Beckmann, J. B. McKenzie, I. Roberts, W. W. Chapman, G. Collings, T. Burrows, W. H. Gick, J. Thompson, C. Williams, and others. The list of visitors included the names of Bros. J. K. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; J. Pemberton, P.P.G.S. of W.; W. Leatham, 594; R. Harley, 1473; H. Burrows, I.P.M. 673; J. Devaynes, P.M. 667; J. E. Jackson, P.M. 667, P.G.S.; R. Ing, P.M., Treas. 594; D. Jackson, W.M. 673; A. Morrison, W.M. 1570; R. Rhodes, 477; P. Larsen, P.M. 594; J. Seddon, S.D. 673; T. Falshaw, J.D. 673; W. Healing, P.M. 1004; W. J. Chapman, W.M. 1609; J. W. Williams, W.M. 1356; L. Herman, J.W. 673; A. Woolrich, S.W. 1356, Treas. 1609; W. Cottrell, P.M. 823; J. Le Comber, I.P.M. 594; J. Brackenbury, S.W. 673; W. T. May, P.M. 673; J. T. Callow, P.M. 673 and 1505; J. Bailey, 667; R. C. Yelland, P.M. 1004; J. Hayes, P.M. 249; H. Hunt, P.M. 594, and others. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed nem. con. and afterwards the W.M., Bro. J. Williams, proceeded to install Bro. Thomas Davis as his successor in the chair for the ensuing year, the charges being given by Bro. R. Martin, jun., P.M. This invariably interesting ceremony was so well performed by Bros. Williams and Martin as to elicit the well-merited compliment of a special vote of thanks at the close, proposed by Bro. T. B. Myers, P.M., seconded by Bro. J. Edginton, P.M., and carried unanimously. The following brethren were invested officers for the coming year:—Bros. J. Williams, I.P.M.; R. Martin, jun., P.M., D.C.; G. Musker, S.W.; A. D. Hesketh, J.W.; W. Brown, Treasurer (re-elected for the 10th time); A. Barclay, Secretary; T. O. Dutton, S.D.; J. O. Rea, J.D.; H. C. Haynes, I.G.; T. Waring, S.S.; T. Holden, J.S.; J. H. Tyson and F. Wright, Assistant Stewards. On the motion of Bro. T. B. Myers, P.M., seconded by Bro. J. Edginton, P.M., Bro. Peter Ball was unanimously elected Tyler of the lodge in room of the late Bro. Monk, who had died since the last meeting and whose decease was greatly regretted. Bro. J. Skeaf P.G.O., presided at the organ during the ceremony, being ably aided in his musical efforts by Bro. T. B. Myers, P.M. After business the brethren banqueted in the large dining room under the presidency of Bro. T. Davis, the newly installed W.M. who pointedly proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. During the after-dinner proceedings the W.M., presented a handsome P.M.'s jewel, set with brilliants, to Bro. J. Williams, I.P.M., as a token of the esteem of the brethren. The proceedings were of a pleasant nature, capital songs being given by Bros. Edginton, Hobart, Ratford, Wilkinson, Musker, Myers, &c. The annual picnic in connection with the lodge took place at Eaton Hall, Chester, on Thursday last, and was attended with considerable success. The train left Lime-street Station, Liverpool, about 10.30 a.m., arriving at Chester at 11.25 a.m. Dinner was provided at the Grosvenor Hotel at 12 noon prompt, and barges were provided at Mr. Dodd's 23, The Groves, near the Suspension Bridge, at 2 p.m., to convey the members and their friends to Eaton Hall, arrangements having been made to admit the party to the grounds free of charge. The barges were timed to leave Eccleston Ferry at 5.15 p.m., to convey the party back to Chester, where tea was provided at the Grosvenor Hotel at 7 p.m. The special train was announced to leave Chester at 8.40 p.m. for Lime-street Station.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—The fourth regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Abercorn Hotel, Great Stanmore, on Wednesday, the 7th inst., when the following brethren were present: Bros. G. T. Tidcombe, W.M.; Ebbs, S.W.; Marshall, J.W.; Veal, Sec.; Roy, S.D.; Long, J.D.; Meek, I.G.; Vincent, I.P.M.; Heldon, P.M.; Garrod, P.M.; Middleton, Tyler; Pontchalon, Smith, Thompson, Hancock, Johnson, Squire, and W. F. Middleton. The lodge was opened in the First Degree by the W.M. at 3.15. The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the ballot was then taken for Mr. F. Blackman, Mr. C. L. Biggs, and Mr. D. Schmidt as candidates for Masonry, and having been approved, the two latter gentlemen were in due course ably initiated by the W.M. Bro. Benskin, W.M. 404, was also balloted for and accepted as a joining member. Bro. W. Hancock, on the lodge being opened in the Second Degree, and proving himself efficient in the usual questions, was sent forward for preparation, and the ceremony of raising, which had stood over from last meeting, was (on the lodge being opened by the W.M. in the Third Degree) very ably performed by the I.P.M. On the W.M. making the usual enquiries, the Secretary read letter of resignation from Bro. Hunt, I.G., which was received with great regret, and Bro. Meek was duly invested by the W.M. to the vacant office. Several small matters having been disposed of the lodge was closed at 6.15. The usual banquet followed, and passed off satisfactorily.

Red Cross of Constantine.

COCKERMOUTH.—Dykes Conclave (No. 36).—This conclave held its annual assembly on Wednesday, August 7th, in the rooms of the Skiddaw (Craft) Lodge. The members mustered at noon, when there were present Em. Sir Knights Edward Tyson, M.P.S.; W. F. Lamony, P.S., H.P. (Freemason); W. Shilton, P.S.; Sir Knights I. Mandle, V.E., M.P.S. elect; R. Bailey, S.G., V.E. elect; T. Bird, J.G.; W. H. Lewthwaite, Treas. and Org.; I. Evening, Reg.; J. Gardiner, Pref.; W. Lamony, St. Br.; H. Moncrieff, Steward; and several others. After the conclave had been opened, the minutes of the assembly held at Cockermouth, in April, were read and confirmed. Bro. Jos. Hewson, Tyler of Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002, was then accepted as a candidate (serving knight), and being admitted, was installed, proclaimed, and invested as Knight of the Order by the M.P.S. on the throne of C., the High Prelate also delivering the historical oration. Sir Knight R. Bailey, V.E. elect, was next presented, and all below the priestly rank having retired, a college was opened, when he was duly consecrated Viceroy for the ensuing year by the M.P.S. Sir Knight T. Mandle was next presented as M.P.S. elect, and all below the Eminent and Perfect grade retiring, a senate was opened, and the new M.P.S. was enthroned by Em. Sir Knight W. F. Lamony, P.S. The senate and college were next severally closed, and, on the main body of the Sir Knights being re-admitted, the officers for the year were invested as follows:—Sir Knights W. Armstrong, S.G.; Jas. Black, J.G.; J. R. Banks, H.P.; W. H. Lewthwaite, Treas. and Org.; Jas. Gardiner, Rec.; W. Lamony, Pref.; Jos. Abbott, St. Br.; W. F. Lamony, Orator; H. Peacock, H.; H. Moncrieff, Almoner; I. Evening, Steward; J. Melmore, D.C. Sir Knight Jos. Hewson was elected Sentinel, and invested as such. The Treasurer then submitted his balance sheet, which showed a very satisfactory statement, there being a surplus of over £2 in hand, with all the prospective year's dues to receive. The conclave was finally closed in F.U.Z. Subsequently the Sir Knights were invited by the new Sovereign and Viceroy to partake of an elegant luncheon, at Sir Knight Peacock's, the Rampant Bull. A most harmonious afternoon was spent, under the presidency of the two Principals, the toasts including "The Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England;" "The Earl of Zetland, M.I. Grand Sovereign of the Order;" "The Earl of Beattie, M.P., M.I. Past Grand Sovereign;" "The Members of the Grand Imperial Council;" "Col. Whitwell, M.P., Chief Intendant General for Cumberland and Westmorland;" "The Newly-Enthroned Sovereign, and Prosperity to Dykes Conclave;" "The Past Sovereigns of Dykes Conclave;" "The Newly-Consecrated Viceroy," and others.

The orthodox "fire" was used for the first time in connection with the principal toasts. Sir Knight W. H. Lewthwaite presided at the pianoforte, and the proceedings were enlivened by the vocal efforts of Sir Knights W. F. Lamonty, G. Brash, J. R. Banks, W. Lamonty, and J. H. Hewson; whilst Sir Knight E. Tyson contributed an agreeable variety in the shape of a couple of capably-delivered recitations. The company separated shortly after six o'clock, with the Sentinel's toast. There can now be but little doubt that Dykes Conclave has entered on a new era, and that a most successful and promising one. For three or four years from the outset the concern languished, and had all but died away; but the determined attitude of half-a dozen members kept the conclave on its legs, and the great bulk of outstanding arrears and dues having been collected, a fresh start was made. There are now fifty members on the roll, in good standing, too; several hopelessly ornamental drones, who were charmed with the novelty of the thing at first sight only, having been struck off, through non-payment of subscriptions. Dykes Conclave, also, is the only one working in Cumberland and Westmorland now, Kenlis, No. 20, at Kendal, being practically defunct.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND AND THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC.

As we have published the correspondence on this subject from the Craftsman in our last Freemason, we think it right to reproduce the official reply of the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

"The Committee having considered the communication from the body styling itself the Grand Lodge of Quebec, dated 17th May last, and a 'Proclamation' by its Grand Master, dated 21st June last, begs to report that the Grand Lodge in agreeing in February, 1877, to acknowledge Quebec as a Grand Lodge expressly reserved its jurisdiction over its lodge, the 'Elgir,' at Montreal, in the event of that lodge desiring to continue its connection with Scotland. This qualified resolution the body at Quebec has refused to accept; and it has imperatively demanded that the Grand Lodges of Scotland and England shall within a given period recall the charters of their respective lodges in the Colony, and that these lodges shall thereupon apply for new charters from it.

"The Grand Lodge of Scotland when it passed the resolution in question was not informed of the claim advanced by Quebec to absolute and exclusive jurisdiction within the Province of Lower Canada. In its application of January 6, 1877, for recognition, it simply 'sincerely desired recognition of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and to be in fraternal intercourse with it.' Grand Lodge in disposing of the application was thus not aware of Quebec's pretensions, and that its demand was not only for recognition but also for renunciation by Grand Lodge of its hitherto undisputed jurisdiction over its own daughter lodge at Montreal, and that too against the wish of that lodge, which was in existence long before the formation even of the Grand Lodge of Canada itself.

"Had the body at Quebec frankly stated its demands in its application, the present difficulty would not have occurred, for Grand Lodge would have refused its recognition on such conditions. It had from the first been of opinion that a Grand Lodge at Quebec was unnecessary, and it was only induced to accord its qualified recognition on the representation that the Grand Lodges of Canada and England had given theirs. But it now appears that the latter Grand Body had also qualified its recognition in terms similar to those of Scotland, and that the Quebec body, with characteristic modesty, had refused its acceptance.

"In such circumstances the resolution to recognise Quebec to any extent has fallen, and that by its own act. It has thus no cause of just complaint, for Scotland is under no obligation to recognise it, and Scotland in declining to do so has exercised its undoubted right. The terms on which it offered recognition are those that have in every other similar case been exacted and readily agreed to. They are only insisted on in places where daughter lodges desire to retain their connection with their mother Grand Lodge, and when, through time, that desire dies out, Scotland readily renounces her jurisdiction in such localities.

"The Committee desires to remind Grand Lodge that in recognising the Grand Lodge of Canada similar conditions were agreed to by that Grand Body, and that the closest alliance and harmonious intercourse have throughout existed between the two Grand Lodges.

"We are not told on what ground Quebec pretends to have a more extended title than that of the Grand Lodge of Canada. It succeeded from that Grand Lodge, and by importunity succeeded in getting it to relinquish in its favour its jurisdiction over the Province of Lower Canada. But the relinquishment of that jurisdiction did not and could not convey the jurisdiction of other Grand Bodies which it did not possess. The Grand Lodge of Canada conferred no right other than its own; and if the right to govern the English and Scotch lodges belonged to the Grand Lodges of those countries it still remains with them.

"The body at Quebec having declined to accept of the recognition of Scotland on the terms offered it, it is not in its eyes a lawful Masonic power, and the Grand Lodge of Canada, having ceased to exercise jurisdiction in the province, the district has become open territory, and is now in the same position as it was prior to the formation of the Grand Lodge of Canada. In consequence, the Grand Lodge of Scotland has authorised the formation of two other lodges at Montreal.

"Among the documents submitted to the Committee, there was a copy of a letter written by the Past Grand Master of Scotland, the deceased Earl of Dalhousie, in which that noble brother expressed his opinion in a question with the Grand Lodge of Missouri, which claimed a right to object to an American citizen, resident in Scotland, being admitted to the Craft in Scotland, that it was wrong in that pretension, but his Lordship added that if the Grand Lodge of Scotland had proposed to erect a lodge hailing under her banner in Missouri (a foreign State), that would have been an invasion of its jurisdiction which could not be justified. This opinion is at variance with the practice of several European Grand Lodges; but the Committee accepts it as correct. There, however, is no analogy between the two cases. The noble Past Grand Master rightly assumed in making his remarks that the Grand Lodge of Scotland admitted the genuineness of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, and that it had exclusive jurisdiction within its bounds. But the Grand Lodge of Scotland denies that the body of Quebec is a genuine Grand Lodge, and that it has such jurisdiction there.

"The Grand Lodge of Scotland does not know of any Masonic power exercising at present jurisdiction in the Province of Quebec other than itself and the Grand Lodge of England.

"In conclusion, the Committee has to remark that the pretended Grand Lodge of Quebec founds its claim to independence on the erroneous principle that any number of Masons is entitled to absolve themselves of their oaths of allegiance to their mother Grand Lodge, and to constitute themselves into a separate Grand Lodge; and it claims exclusive jurisdiction over a part of the Queen's dominions on the ground that 'Political and Masonic boundaries should be continuous.' It forgets in advancing the latter proposition that on that ground it should itself have no existence. The province of Quebec is not a sovereign State like one of those forming the United States of North America. It is merely a province of Canada, a dependency of the British Crown.

"The Committee, in the circumstances above stated, has to recommend that Grand Lodge should take no further notice of this matter, unless the pretended Grand Lodge at Quebec chooses to imitate its readiness to accept of the qualified recognition which this Grand Lodge and that of England have expressed their readiness to accord.

"As regards an application by the Scotch daughter lodges at Montreal for the creation of a Provincial Grand Lodge there, the Committee recommend Grand Lodge to grant the prayer of this petition, in order that its lodges may be placed in as advantageous a position as those of England, which have long had a District Grand Master presiding over them, and as the lodges have suggested Bro. Dr. George A. Baynes for the office of Provincial Grand Master, the Committee recommend his appointment; and further, it suggests that a cordial vote of thanks should be accorded to that distinguished brother for his loyalty to Grand Lodge under trying circumstances."

MASONIC SERMON

Preached before the Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons of Surrey, at Dorking Church, by Bro. Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, P.M., P.G.C., and P.P.S.G.W., on Tuesday, July 16th, 1878, the R.W. Bro. General T. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., Prov. Grand Master.

Jeremiah, Chapter xxii., v. 39:

"And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them and of their children after them."

We can imagine the Prophet from the court of his prison house (where Zedekiah, King of Judah, had shut him up) pouring forth in that beautifully poetic language for which he was famed, all the predictions of God's anger against His people Israel, telling them that the Lord, "great in council and mighty in work had His eyes open on all the ways of the sons of men; to give them according to their ways and according to the fruits of their doings," and shewing them how they had been brought out of the Land of Egypt with a mighty hand and a stretched-out arm, into a land flowing with milk and honey, and how they had possessed it, but had not obeyed God's voice, nor walked according to His laws; and how for all this they should be led into captivity in Chaldea and delivered into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon; and then, turning to the more merciful character of God, he tells them that the Lord would not retain His anger for ever, but would bring them again into that place; cause them to dwell safely, and promising that "they should be His people, and that He would be their God," adding in the words of my text, "And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them and of their children after them." And these words, brethren, I consider especially suitable to this day's gathering when I see before me a mixed congregation, some drawn hither, no doubt, by the unwonted occurrence of a Society of Freemasons assembled in their Parish Church at the annual gathering of their Provincial Grand Lodge, to be addressed by their Chaplain upon the general principles and duties of our Order, hoping perhaps to gather from the crumbs that fall, or rather are "cast like the bread upon the waters," some insight into those mysteries which from time immemorial it has been our custom to keep secret from the uninitiated or outer world; and sincerely do I trust that the Great Architect of the Universe will bless what I am about to say, so that your hopes may not be disappointed, but that you who are not Freemasons and you who are may go away impressed with this great truth, that however we may choose to encircle our teachings with a cloud of mystery, that cloud has a silver lining; for our obligations contain nothing inconsistent with civil, moral, or religious duties. Be assured of one thing, that the society is founded on the purest principles of piety and virtue, and is replete with valuable privileges. I have said that I consider the words of my text eminently suitable to our Masonic body, and this day's service. For God in His mercy has given us one heart and one way, and the true Mason will fear Him for ever—for his own good, and he will bring up his children to love and fear Him also. There was one who came to seek and save the lost—one (the greatest prophet who ever walked the earth) who told His disciples that charity might be defined in a single sentence: "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and thy neighbour as thyself." And of Masonry I may say that the same blessed teaching applies most nearly. And they but little understand what genuine Freemasonry is who neglect to exercise these all-saving virtues. Why, at his first entry into our body the young aspirant is asked whether he puts his trust in God in danger and in difficulty, and he binds himself to succour a brother's infirmities and relieve his wants; to remember him in his prayers, to keep his lawful secrets as a sacred trust, and if he can help it not to allow the breath of slander to go forth against him. Is not this to love our neighbour as ourselves? and think not that this is all, think not that his neighbour ceases to be his neighbour if beyond the circle of our brotherhood. No! our obligation embraces all; it is the Good Samaritan's feeling (wide as the universe, and I trust lasting as eternity); it is to pour the oil of consolation upon the stricken conscience, to bind up the wounds of sin and infirmity, to care for the afflicted in deed as well as in word. This is to show mercy, this is to love your neighbour as yourself, and this teaching stands first and foremost in our Order. I feel sure that my Masonic brethren will go with me in what I have thus far said of the character of our society. And now a few words to them as Masons, and here I feel a difficulty—for when I look upon the many eminent members of the Craft, who to-day have left their homes to gather round our leaders in this important province, I feel how little I have to offer for their instruction, and how much instead I (Masonically) need to learn of them. As they, therefore, know so well the duties to which they have bound themselves, I will only endeavour to refresh their memory with a few remarks upon the teachings, the principles, and the moral symbols we possess—and may the many excellent things which you, my more immediate brethren, have already learned, be ever manifested in their allegorical lights, may they be blazoned forth to dignify and adorn the science. Would you, by example, teach morality, do it by referring to the Past Master's jewel. Would you inculcate equality, take the S. Warden's for your emblem; or integrity, let the J. Warden's jewel be your symbol. Each reads a Masonic lesson. Carry your thoughts back to that all glorious time when our great prototype, King Solomon, stood before the Ark of God, and when the children of Israel were assembled unto him, not (we are told) to be numbered for multitudes and when the priests brought the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord into the Most Holy place, even under the wings of the Cherubim, and when the trumpeters and singers, as with one accord, lifted up their voices, and thanked the Almighty Creator, saying He is God, "For His mercy endureth for ever;" and then when the temple was filled with the glory of the Lord, and Solomon rising up said, in a loud voice, "The Lord has said he would dwell in thick darkness, but I have built him a house where he may shadow forth his glorious lights." Go back in mind, I say, to that glorious time, and let it teach you how the light of God's countenance has shined upon the dark places of this earth, and although the beautiful temple built for His praise has long since crumbled into dust, remember that God is still with us, and that where two or three are gathered together in His house He is there—be it in a sacred house like this, or be it under the fair vault of Heaven, He is there to hear our prayers (wafted to Him by our precious Saviour), and to answer our call when we call aright. And, although He does not show Himself, He is still as present with us as when the Shem-mich of old spoke to the Israelites and our ancient brethren out of the cloudy pillar from the mercy seat. In all your dealings let the square emblematically guide you to be upright, just, and true. Let the level lead you to rejoice in a brother Mason's good fortune, and if ever angry thoughts arise within your bosoms, let the compasses symbolically lead you to keep your passions within due bounds. These are some of the symbols of our Order, and by acting upon them you will not only be at peace within, but you will show to the outer world the true spirit that animates a Mason's heart. Practise, my Masonic brethren, these virtues, both in your inner walk at home, and in your outer pilgrimage among the children of men, so that they may know you by your fruits which they behold, even as we know each other by secret signs and tokens. Practise (I say) these virtues, and the Great Architect of All will, as my text says, "Continue you in one heart and in one way, that you may love and fear Him for ever, for your good; and for the good of your children that come after you." You all know that our system was founded on brotherly love, relief, and truth, or "Charity," and this is what I want to impress upon the minds of my non-Masonic hearers, for I know that there exists in the outer world conflicting opinions as regards the great principles of the Order. They do not really take in the true meaning of the word charity. Considered in the light of almsgiving, we call it relief, as in the asylums for our boys and girls and aged brethren in poverty, but this is not all; there are other virtues connected with our teaching, virtues which an inspired writer has beautifully brought before us in 1st Cor., c. xiii. "Faith and Hope," a Faith which will end in sight, and Hope which will end in enjoyment, and a charity which is greater than these, greater than Faith, which unites us to our Saviour; greater than Hope, which raises the believer's heart from earth to heaven. Yes; greater than either, because it makes us more like God; for God is love. This brethren, is the way in which we Masons look upon charity or brotherly love, not to the exclusion of a due feeling for the temporal wants of others, as shown in our excellent Institutions. The heart must be cold indeed who is insensible to this kind of charity. The blessing of the poor and penniless wherever scattered over the face of earth or waters, the widow's gratitude, the old man's thanks and the orphan's greeting, are returns which it may not be wrong to covet. It is no small thing to make such hearts leap for joy, and surely ours may beat in unison. And now I would put your charity, so far as almsgiving goes, to a practical test. It is the annual custom of Provincial Grand Lodge to meet, as we have done to day, collectively to join in common prayer and thanksgivings for past mercies, and to ask God's blessing for the next Masonic year; on these occasions an opportunity is given to testify our gratitude in a substantial form. For this purpose a collection is made, for any local charity that the vicar may select, as a small thankoffering, for his kindness in allowing us to worship in this sacred and beautiful building to-day. The charity to which he proposes to devote your gifts is the National School of the parish, and I need enlarge but little upon this to secure your sympathy. As a stranger, I cannot say much upon the financial or general position of the school; but this much I think I can say, that the education here given embraces the children of the poor in general; comprising within its teachings Sunday-school, day-school, and infant school. And in a large parish like Dorking it is a pleasure, in these days of simple sectarian education, to see an establishment directly under the care of the clergy, who from their sacred office are surely best suited to fill a child's mind with those great truths which will lighten for him the labours, trials, and duties through which he will have to pass. In short, the child is here taught those religious truths which it most concerns him to know, and which hereafter will be the most fruitful source of his happiness, and also such subjects of knowledge are instilled into him as are best suited to his capacities, and to his probable future state in life; but this is a subject that may be enlarged upon to almost any extent. I don't forget that time is drawing on, and that I am requested not to keep you too long. I will therefore merely say that I feel sure the object for which your alms are asked embraces all that is required for promoting among the rising generation of this town such an education as will lead them on in that earthly walk which Masons should love well—a "walk with God." I therefore, leave the charity with you, trusting that as Freemasons you will show by your liberality that you really desire to promote what is good, by deed as well as by word. And now, my brethren, a brief conclusion. We read in the "Book of Ruth" that when Boaz came from Bethlehem and said unto the reapers "The Lord be with you," that they answered him and said, "The Lord bless thee." Amid your earthly tasks, when fortune frowns, or unkind words darken your life's journey, may the Lord be with you to cheer your hearts. Many a storm may sweep o'er your earthly path, many a grief may be yours; yet in all let your souls rise in prayer to God, and you will find the dreaded cloud end in sunshine on the morrow. Reap the fields where our blessed Saviour has scattered broadcast His Most Holy Word to guide and comfort you. Reap them, although it be midst toil and heat; be diligent in seeking Him who came to save you, and then the Lord will bless you. Your lives will soon be past; young and old alike must fall. God has likened us to the grass and flowers of the field, now bowed to the earth with care and trouble, now all sunshine again with joy and gladness. Learn then a lesson from the inanimate things of creation; remember that as the grass and flowers yield their life, so man yields up his soul; the world the field, the mower death. Love in truth, love in strength; and let this feeling arise from thoughts upon that higher life which Jesus came to bring by pouring out His blood. And then when like shrouding mists the ice of death shall steal upon the winter of your soul with all its dread feelings, at the Resurrection morn the vapours will roll away, and sunlight burst from heaven and fill your souls with life, and love, and joy. Live then for this (not only that your name may be cherished in the memory of the loving hearted), but that when life's frail flower lies broken, you may hear the Great God Himself saying to you—Well done!

CONSECRATION OF THE HERWARD MARK LODGE.

The consecration of the Herward Lodge, 227, took place at Bourne, Lincolnshire, on Tuesday, the 13th inst., and thereafter Bro. the Rev. Dr. Ace was installed as W.M., and appointed and invested Bros. W. H. Radley and Chamberlain as his S. and J. Wardens.

Bro. Dr. Ace was afterwards installed as W.C.N. of a lodge of Royal Ark Mariners, attached to the Herward lodge of Mark Master Masons.

The consecration was performed by Bro. Dewar, Grand Asst. Sec., at the request of the D.P.G.M. of the province, and the same brother afterwards installed the W.M. and W.C.N.

A bust of Izaak Walton has been unveiled in St. Mary, Stafford, by the Earl of Lichfield, who presided subsequently at a luncheon. The Dean of Lichfield (Dr. Bickersteth) gave an address on the occasion on "Honour."

H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught remains for the winter at Woolwich, where his battalion is again stationed. The Duke brought his command to London during the absence of the Guards at the summer manoeuvres, when it was quartered at Chelsea, performing sentry duty in the metropolis for a month or so.

THE RESTORATION OF ST. ALBAN'S ABBEY.

(Communiqué.)

A somewhat curious controversy has arisen as between Lord Carnarvon, our distinguished Pro G.M., as President of the Society of Antiquaries, and Lord Cowper on the one side, objecting to the raising of the nave roof of the Abbey, and Mr. B. Hope and Sir Edmund Beckett on the other.

Lord Carnarvon objects to the proposed restoration on the following grounds:—

"Of course, I am quite aware that a high-pitched roof at St. Alban's would not be a novelty, and at the first blush I can quite understand that the length (almost excessive) of the nave might seem to demand the restoration of a feature which was removed, as I have seen it stated, in the fifteenth century. But, on the other hand, it must be remembered that the accidental substitution of flat roofs throughout has ended by giving singular magnificence to the only really fine feature of the exterior, the central tower. A high-pitched roof would, I fear, greatly impair this effect—especially as the tower has no longer the altitude which William de Trumpington gave it; and if one is added in the nave others will be required for the transept and choir. Nor can it be said that the proposed changes would improve the effect of the interior, for I assume that no one, even in this age of extensive church restoration, can contemplate an alteration of the flat ceiling. I would also, with all respect, press upon the committee the consideration as to the amount of new work which this proposal must involve, together with the obvious risks of the new work not being in harmony with the old. The western gable, with the parapets on either side, will all have to be new or altered, a change involving not only considerable cost, but doubtful, perhaps, in effect when the change is completed. The features which have been introduced into the building since the high roof was lowered have rendered such a roof incongruous. The consensus partium cannot be restored. As a work of art the exterior of St. Alban's can never be made beautiful; but if it is left in its present condition, it will continue to be interesting in the highest degree as evidence of successive additions and alterations in successive generations of men and centuries of time. To impair that evidence by changes so serious as those now in contemplation would be, I fear, a great mistake, redeemed by no counterbalancing advantages, and, as far as I can learn, opposed to the judgment and taste of some, at least, of the highest critics."

Lord Cowper's objections are, to our mind, so beside the question, and so utterly unworthy of themselves to a very distinguished body of men, that we pass them by. Mr. A. B. Hope has, we venture to think, partially, at any rate, successfully answered Lord Carnarvon in the words which follow. He adduces as a canon—that where there is absolute material evidence of the existence of any former feature of a building—evidence sufficient to make its restoration mathematically certain—and where the reason for the original existence of that feature is equally certain, and is such as abstractly to approve itself to our reason, then its restoration may be safe:

"Let us apply these tests to St. Alban's. The first stands good, because the old existing tower still carries the 'weatherings' of the roof. Weatherings, as I must explain to those who have not studied architecture, are those supports (something between ledges and grooves) on a tower which receive and support the roof which abuts against them. Where they exist the angle of that roof is given, and the evidence of its proportion and outline as designed by the architect is perfect. A weathering as completely shows that such-and-such a roof was intended to stand there, as a skull shows the existence of a brain. Circumstances may have prevented the roof being made, but its making was intended, or those weatherings would never have been provided."

The evidence for the second test is, he says, inferential, not material, but it is just as real:

"When a mediæval or any other rational architect designs a building he does so with a purpose, and each portion of it has its practical use and also its artistic correspondence with the other members—at all events, that was once the rule. The practical use of a high roof was, of course, to carry off the rain, but the artistic value consisted in its forming an essential element in whatever system of proportion the design embodied. If there be any building in the world in which the reason of that proportion to which a high roof contributes is self-evident, it is in the nave of St. Alban's, with its enormous, if not (now that the moderating high roof has disappeared) inordinate length. The question of the retention of the old painted ceiling inside is quite independent. That is a relic of old art which it would be almost sacrilegious to disturb, while it can probably co-exist with the high roof outside. Conservative restoration bids it to remain. I have written thus strongly, because the time has come to make a protest against that mawkish sentimentalism which tries to avoid the trouble of thinking by howling for the ruthless and unintelligent preservation of everything which happens now to exist in an old building, merely because it is existing there. That is, as I have before had to describe it, a gospel of decay and death."

Sir Edmund Beckett, in a characteristic letter in the Times of the 8th, replies to the President of the Society of Antiquaries, and we confess we think makes out a good case. It seems to us quite clear that if you are to restore at all, you must restore up to the "original idea," and not weaken it or dilute it by any of the "fancies" or "fads" of the hour. Architecture is a strict science, and though we admit the evil of hyper-restoration, what can we say of "compo-Gothic," or churchwarden's alterations, from which a better taste has delivered us, but that they constitute the abasement and disgrace of the art architectural? As Freemasons, lovers of the old buildings raised by the operative guilds, we think that all restorations, while they are purely conservative, should also be scientifically constructive, and we object, with Sir Edmund Beckett and Mr. Hope, to that most mistaken view of committees, societies, and pseudo-architectural critics, which degrades the true mission of this renovating and restoring age into a childish compliance with long-standing barbarities, or a hopeless ignorance of the first principles of the restorative art. In the highest interests of the architectural art, and the real restoration of St. Alban's Abbey, we regret that so distinguished a brother as Lord Carnarvon should seem to throw in his lot with obstructiveness or retrogression of any kind, and especially in ecclesiastical architecture. In our opinion, the Committee for the restoration of St. Alban's Abbey has been quite right in its views, and successful in its operations, and we hope that, yielding to no mistaken weakness, influenced by no shallow cry, and thwarted by no perverted prejudice, that body will persevere in restoring St. Alban's Abbey to its legitimate position, as a very noble specimen of architectural art and ecclesiastical symbolism. We are quite sure that this partial outcry against restoration is both unsound and untenable, and is not likely to make way with any who really understand what proper architectural restoration is, and can achieve, in these, our days.

Since these words were penned we are happy to hear that the subscribers, by two to one, have determined to raise the nave, as proposed. Let us hope that this mistaken controversy will now cease.

FREEMASONS' DINNERS.

My good friends, the Freemasons, or at least a section of their mysterious body, the Red Cross Knights, have been feasting again, as I learn they celebrated their anniversary last Wednesday, at the Rampant Bull, Cockermouth, where, as a matter of course, the good things would be diversified and quite up to a gourmet's palate. The Masonic body are being continually twitted by outsiders on their inordinate love of eating and drinking, indeed, I have heard it said that that is the true secret of the ancient Order. Now, "John Peel" is not one of the knots in the "Mystic Tie," but he is charitable enough to think that the Freemasons in the matter of feasting are not a bit worse than other societies, or even as bad as some. Take our cricket and bowling clubs as a sample. There never is a match, but a dinner or lunch is indispensable; and quite right, too—it is a distinguishing trait of our English character. Douglas Jerrold once said that he believed if England was all but destroyed by an earthquake, and only a dozen natives were left, they would manage to meet amongst the ruins, and celebrate the event by a dinner. Somebody else, also, is reported to have once remarked that the sure way to the bottom of an Englishman's pocket is to give him a good dinner. That argument, at all events, holds good amongst the Freemasons, for, last year, at the successive festivals of their three great charities, no less a sum than close upon £40,000 was collected at the dinner tables. This, too, goes on every year, and I think will at least compare with any other society that has to "raise the needful" at the social board. In justice to the Cockermouth Masons, also I should explain that, from inquiries I have made, there are only two dinners during the twelve months in connection with the two Masonic bodies in the town.—West Cumberland Times.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

We have been requested to publish the accompanying circular of that body. We wish we could have any hopes that matters would mend in that jurisdiction; as it is, it is jeopardising its acknowledgment as a lawful Masonic body.

O. de Paris, le 1er Août 1878 (E.V.). Aux Puissances Maçonniques Étrangères, Aux Ateliers placés sous leur direction, Aux Ateliers de l'Obéissance du Grand Orient de France. S.S.S.

TT. CC. FF.

L'Assemblée générale du Grand Orient de France à laquelle sont tenus d'assister les Présidents ou les Délégués de tous les Ateliers de sa Correspondance, se réunira dans la seconde semaine du mois de Septembre prochain.

Cette session sera, comme d'habitude, terminée par un Banquet fraternel qui aura lieu le samedi 14 Septembre, à l'Hotel du Grand Orient de France, 16, Rue Cadet.

A cette époque, l'Exposition universelle, encore en pleine activité, aura sans aucun doute amené à Paris, de divers points du Globe, un grand nombre de Frères-Maçons, et le Conseil de l'Ordre, d'inspirant des souvenirs de la Fête célébrée en 1867, dans une circonstance semblable, a pensé que c'était là une nouvelle et heureuse occasion de resserrer les liens qui unissent les Membres de la Famille Maçonnique. Il convie donc les Frères-Maçons de tous les Orients et de toutes les Obédiences à se joindre aux Frères-Maçons du Grand Orient de France pour donner à cette Fête de la Fraternité un caractère universel.

Le Grand Orient de France, TT. CC. FF., à l'espoir que son appel sera entendu, et il se réjouit, dans une réunion comprenant des Frères-Maçons des différents rites, de pouvoir offrir à ces Frères le témoignage de sa vive et fraternelle sympathie.

Agréez, TT. CC. FF., l'assurance de nos sentiments d'estime et d'affection fraternelle.

Au Nom du Conseil de l'Ordre.

EBB AND FLOW.

We have in Masonry, as well as in all similar associations, what may be termed an ebb and flow of apparent prosperity. We have times when everything seems to be on the high tide; when work is rapidly coming in; when applicants are numerous and persistent. Then the lodge is well attended, a deep interest is manifested, and a general good feeling prevades the whole. There are also times when we seem to be on the ebb tide of prosperity; when, from various reasons, there is but little work to be done; candidates for our mysteries are few in numbers and far between. Then the interest of many begins to wane. They who before were interested only in the novelty of our ceremonies, and excited by the large amount of work being done, become lukewarm; their attendance upon the lodge is exceedingly rare. Slight and frivolous reasons will suffice as an excuse for staying away; the payment of dues is neglected, until at length they become a burden, and then follows exclusion from membership or suspension, thus increasing the already too large list of non-affiliates throughout the country. Many of our lodges are now in something of the condition I have just portrayed. During our late civil war, and for a number of years subsequent, the incoming tide ran high. Candidates were numerous and urgent—often times anxious for us to waive, by dispensation or otherwise, those safeguards so wisely thrown around the ballot by our constitution. Every lodge was crowded with applicants: special communications were necessary, and of frequent occurrence, and all were largely attended. Ask any brother the question "How is your lodge prospering?" and the prompt reply would be, "Splendidly; we were never doing so well before." Now, circumstances are changed. Hard times and stagnation in business of all kinds have materially affected our Institution, and prevented many from knocking at our door for admission; while the great influx of other societies with high sounding titles, holding out inducements both novel and attractive, has had a tendency to draw away some who would otherwise have sought admission into Masonry. In consequence, comparatively little work is now being done, and not a few of our lodges are realising that lukewarm condition I have alluded to; yes, many are getting despondent over the general apathy which seems in a greater or less extent to prevail. This ought not to be so, nor do I believe there is any good reason for it. That a lodge is doing a large amount of work is not always a sign of real, genuine prosperity. In the rapid increase of members we are less liable to guard with care our outer door, so that the unworthy find little difficulty in gaining admission. Such is the experience of all lodges, as is apparent to every thinking, observing mind. It is at such times of seeming prosperity that we hear from every Grand East, and from every watchman on our walls, notes of warning and words of caution. "Guard well your ballot box; watch well every avenue of admission, and see that none but the worthy are admitted," is the admonition, and well is it for that lodge which heeds the warning, for to many have found, after the excitement has passed, and they have come to their sober, good sense, that there are those among them whom they could wish had not been accepted; those who will prove not only a load to carry, but a source of trouble and discord so long as they remain. This supposed strength has proved to be weakness.

This is a question which interests us all. I answer, make your lodge inviting and attractive, and your regular meetings interesting and instructive. A neat, comfortable, well ventilated hall, has much to do in bringing out members. No one likes to leave his own pleasant home to attend a lodge held in a dirty, slovenly hall, and if he does so, it is only because a sense of duty impels him. Then see to this as the first thing; have you hall well swept and dusted, the spittoons cleaned, the aprons washed, the regalia and jewels put in order, hang appropriate pictures and paintings on the walls, and photographs of your members also. All these add to its beauty, and tend to make the lodge more attractive. Then see to it that your officers are proficient and accurate in the work and lectures; practise them in the manner of the application, so that when degrees are to be conferred, they may be prompt and ready. And do not confine yourself to the officers, but give all who desire an opportunity to become equally proficient, and you will never be at a loss for skillful workmen. But do not dwell too long at a time upon ritual. Vary your instructions by explaining the meaning of the ceremonies—the lessons intended to be conveyed by the various symbols used; draw the brethren out to express their ideas and opinions upon them, to discuss the principles of Masonry; the nature of the ballot, its secrecy and independence, and the duty and responsibility of every brother in regard to it. Request them to prepare and read a paper upon any of these subjects, or any other connected with the prosperity of the lodge. In this way you will not only interest your own members, and draw them out to attend lodge meetings but you will make of them something more than mere ritual Masons. They will become intelligent ones, and be more apt to exemplify in their daily lives the pure principles of our Order. Then others, seeing their zeal and devotion, will be induced to attend, while the world will certainly know that a "Mason is one to whom the burthened heart may pour out its sorrows, to whom distress may prefer its suit; whose hand is guided by justice, and whose heart is expanded by benevolence." Then there will be no lack of applicants. Good men and true, seeing these results, will readily apply for admission, and seek to enroll themselves among the brotherhood, while the selfish and unprincipled will be restrained or rejected. There will then be no lack of work, and no want of genuine abiding interest, and the future prosperity of our Order will be insured.—Freemason's Monthly.

Masonic and General Tidings.

An oration on the "Beauties and Claims of Freemasonry" will be delivered in the large hall of the Surrey Masonic Club, Camberwell, this (Saturday) evening, at eight o'clock p.m. precisely, by Bro. William Darley, P.M. No. 158, and late Assessor to the Honourable Board of Trade. Members of the club and Masonic friends are invited to attend.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Diseases of the Bowels.—A remedy, which has been tested and proved in a thousand different ways, capable of eradicating poisonous poisons from ulcers and healing them up, merits a trial of its capacity for extracting the internal corruption from the bowels. On rubbing Holloway's Ointment repeatedly on the abdomen a rash appears, and as it thickens the aching irritability subsides. Acting as a derivative, this unguent draws to the surface releases the tender intestines from all acid matters, and prevents inflammation, dysentery, and piles, for which blistering was the old-fashioned, though successful treatment, now from its painfulness fallen into disuse, the discovery of this Ointment having proclaimed a remedy possessing equally derivative, yet perfectly painless powers.—[ANON.]

Rebukes.

AN APPENDIX TO CONTRIBUTIONS TO NATURAL HISTORY, AND PAPERS ON OTHER SUBJECTS. By JAMES SIMSON. New York, James Miller.

As Masons, whose business it is to pursue the hidden mysteries of nature and science, we gladly welcome the contributions of any students to these great subjects, either alone or in conjunction, and whether those students be members of the Craft or no.

We are not bigoted or tied down to old ways and opinions, simply because they are old ways and opinions, nor do we reject new works or results of thought simply because they are new works or results of thought; but we must say that, on the well-worn principle of "never throwing dirty water away till we have clean," we are chary of giving up old ideas for new ones, lest we may chance to find our new ideas turn out like 'The Member's' statements, "both new and true," but with the trifling drawback, that "the new are not true, and the true not new." Rather do we prefer to cleave to the old and trusty ways until the greater advantage of the new has been fully demonstrated.

We feel it necessary to state this our principle at the outset of our notice of the little work that has been submitted to us, as it may, perhaps, save us from the wrath of its evidently impulsive author, whose pugnacious motto is:—

"Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in,
Bear it, that the opposer may beware of thee."

The book, then, having been submitted to us for review, we intend to deal with it fairly and honestly as towards the author, as towards his opponents, and as towards our readers amongst the Craft, and the public at large.

Taking first, then, the article "Mr. Frank Buckland and the Viper," we must say that at the first blush Mr. Simson seemed to have the right entirely on his side, for although Mr. Buckland has acted with great propriety in asking for a considerable amount of proof before he can feel it right to accept as probable, or even possible, such an apparently abnormal phenomenon as the ingress and egress of the young of the viper into the body of the mother through the mouth, we still do not think that he is justified in simply pooh-poohing as ridiculous the statement, backed up by such testimony as Mr. Simson adduces. Doubtless if any person had stated in the last century that he had seen in Australia an animal which was possessed of a pouch in which it carried its young after birth, he would have been set down forthwith as a purveyor of "traveller's tales," but it is a fact nevertheless. Why then we ask should a somewhat similar fact be relegated off-hand to the limbo of impossible monsters? If true of the kangaroo why not of the viper? We must then say in all fairness that the burden of disproof lies with Mr. Buckland, and that this disproof must be thorough and demonstrated to be an impossibility by actual and searching anatomical examination, and not merely disposed of by that eminent naturalist's ipse dixit.

But here our coincidence with the views of Mr. Simson ends, for we can conceive nothing in worse taste than his personal attacks on Mr. Buckland and his fellow naturalists. Turning the other article on a similar, or rather in reality the same subject in another dress, styled "Mr. Buckland and White of Selborne," we cannot for the life of us imagine why Mr. Buckland is not at liberty to re-publish "White" in any manner he may please, leaving, of course, the reading public to be the ultimate judges of his choice; their approval or otherwise of his views and mode of treatment being testified in the manner usual amongst such reading public generally.

Turning to Mr. Simson's first article, "John Bunyan and the Gipsies," we can only resort with a "tu quoque," and condemn him in the way he does Mr. Buckland, for expecting the public to take off-hand his crude and unproved assertion that John Bunyan was a Gipsy, as a demonstrated truth.

Amongst others Mr. James Wyatt comes in for condemnation for stating a very reasonable idea in "Notes and Queries;" now, we must say, that knowing Mr. Wyatt well as one that has spent a greater part of his life in the Town of Bedford, a mile distant from Elstow, Bunyan's birthplace, we attach more importance to Mr. Wyatt's knowledge than to Mr. Simson's surmise. We ourselves lived on the spot for many years and were familiar with the story of Bunyan's life, and we must say we never heard a single person advance anything not only that would favour but even that would for a moment give countenance to Mr. Simson's (as we consider) unsupported statement, the gist of which seems to be that—Bunyan was a tinker—many Gipsies are fond of tinkering—ergo all (or at least most tinkers are, or were, Gipsies—and ergo John Bunyan was a Gipsy.

Turning, lastly to Mr. Simson's article "Endowment of Research," we must confess that, whilst we are utterly unable to trace any connexion between the article and its title, after reading his terrible denunciation of his opponents—"Indeed, George Borrow, Frank Buckland, and Charles Waterton, may be described without offence (!) as three impulsive, headstrong, ex-cathedra-talking dogmatists, incapable, when left to themselves, of constructing an argument of a complex nature, or of giving a satisfactory exposition of an intricate subject that could stand scrutiny. To train a thirteen-inch bomb on them in that respect, would be superfluous, for a thimblefull of 'sparrow-hail' would suffice,"—we are not at all surprised at the Scotsman's estimate of his book—"The volume is altogether a literary curiosity, presenting a combination of bigotry and egotism, such as it would not be easy to parallel;"—for are we at all astonished at the verdict, of which he so bitterly complains, passed upon himself by "a London journal."—"We can stand all this pretty well, but we are up in arms when George Borrow . . . is taken to task in a cold-blooded manner for all sorts of misleading statements, and is to be proved altogether an incompetent and misleading guide on the subject. This is too much for our equanimity, and we honestly confess that we are weak enough to prefer George Borrow's stories to Mr. Simson's arguments"—and we must further acknowledge that we most cordially join in the Reviewer's ironical "parting shot," which is—in short, the world is full of blockheads, but there is one wise man left, and his name is Simson.

Waltum in Darbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

OLD LONDON LODGES.

I go on to-day with another batch. In 1736, the lodges from No. 20 to No. 40 are as follows:—21, Anchor and Baptist's Head, Chancery-lane. 22, Swan, Fish Street-hill. 23, Half Moon, Cheapside. 24, Swan and Royal Oak, White Cross-street. 25, Punch Bowl, and Ladle, Greenwich. 26, Brett's Coffee House, Charles-Street. 27, Crown and Sceptre, St. Martin's-lane. 28, a lodge at Bath. 29, a lodge at Bristol. 30, a lodge at Norwich. 31, a lodge at Chichester. 32, a lodge at Chester. 33, a lodge at Chester. 34, a lodge at Carmarthen. 35, a lodge at Gosport. 36, a lodge at Conington. 37, Sash, Moorfields. 38, Three Tuns and Bull's Head, Cheapside. 39, Swan and Rummer, Finch-lane. 40, St. Paul's Head, Ludgate-street. 41, Vine, Holborn. 42, Salutation, Billingsgate. 43, King's Arms, Strand. 44, The Swan, Long Acre. 45, White Hart, Bishopsgate-without. 46, Mount Coffee House, 47, Three Crowns, Stoke Newington. 48, A lodge at Salford. 49, Castle and Leg, Holborn. 50, A lodge at Madrid. 51, A lodge at Gibraltar. 52, A lodge at Warwick. 53, Hoop and Griffin, Leadenhall-street. 54, Rose and Crown, Greek-street, Soho. 55, Richmond lodge, Suffolk-street. 56, Crown and Anchor, Short's Gardens. 57, Red Lion and Ball, Red Lion-street. 58, a lodge at Oxford. 59, a lodge at Scarborough. 60, Three Tuns, Billingsgate.

Thus it will be noted, of the lodges from 21 to 60, in 1736, 15 are Provincial and Foreign lodges, leaving 34 London lodges.

In 1738, the following list seems to cover all these London lodges. 21, Half Moon, Cheapside. 22, Swan and Cocoa Tree, Whitecross-street. 23, White Horse, Wheeler-street. 24, Forrest's Coffee House. 25, Sash and Cocoa Tree, Moorfields. 26, Sun, Hooper's Square. 27, Sun, St. Paul's Churchyard. 28, Angel and Crown, Whitechapel. 29, King's Arms, Strand. 30, Swan Tavern, Long Acre. 31, Swan and Rummer Tavern, Finch-lane. 32, Mount Coffee House. 33, Globe Tavern, Fleet-street. 34, Fisher's Coffee House, Burlington-street. 35, Hoop and Griffin, Leadenhall-street. 36, Royal Oak, Seven Dials. 37, Old Man's Coffee House, Charing Cross. 38, Anchor and Crown, King-street. 39, Star and Garter, St. Martin's-lane. 40, St. George, St. Mary Axe.

Thus it will be seen that 21 in 1736 has become No. 19 in 1738; and No. 29 in 1738 seems to be the same as No. 23 in 1736; while No. 23 in 1736 becomes No. 21 in 1738, and No. 24 in 1736 is the same as No. 22 in 1738. No. 25 in 1736 has changed in 1738 into 23, and 26 in 1736 seems to have disappeared. No. 24 in 1738 is the same as 27 in 1736 as I have before pointed out. Nos. 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 35, 36 are Provincial lodges, but which are said to retain their numbers on the list according to their date of constitution. This fact deserves to be remembered. In 1738, No. 25 answers to No. 37, 1736; while No. 26 in 1738 cannot be traced in 1736. No. 27 in 1738 answers to No. 40 in 1736, while 28 in 1736 cannot be traced. No. 29 in 1738 is apparently the same as 41 in 1736, Nos. 30, 1738, is the same as No. 44, 1736; and 31 in 1738 is identical with 39 of 1736.

This one fact shows us how much attention has to be paid to these numbers and how erratic they are.

No. 32 in 1738 is the same as No. 46 in 1736; while No. 45 in 1736 appears to be missing in 1738. No. 38, in 1738 is identical with 47 in 1736 though No. 34 in 1738 is evidently identical with 49 in 1736. I may observe here that in 1736 Nos. 40, 50, 51, 52, are again foreign and provincial lodges. No. 35, in 1738 is the same as No. 53 in 1736; and No. 36 in 1738 appears to answer to No. 54 in 1736, No. 55 in 1736 is the same as No. 37 in 1738 and No. 38 of 1736 is, I apprehend, the same with No. 56 in 1736. No. 39 in 1738 is the same as 57 of 1736; while No. 40 in 1738 answers to No. 60 in 1736. Nos. 58 and 59 in 1736 are provincial lodges.

I hope in another note to finish the London Lodges of 1738, but I stop here to day for fear of wearying my readers. MASONIC STUDENT.

OLD MASONIC BOOK.

Bro. Frederick J. Hibbard, of this city, has sent us a valuable copy of an old Masonic work, for transmission to our Grand Lodge Library. The title-page reads: "The Freemason's Companion, or Pocket Preceptor, compiled for the use of the Craft. By John Phillips, P.M., of Lodge No. 2, and Chief J. of the H.R.A.C. No. 52. Philadelphia: Printed by Bartholomew Graves, No. 40, North Fourth street, 1805." Brethren do well who make their Grand Lodge Library the depository of rare and curious Masonic works.—Keystone.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

Exhibition Souvenirs continue to be the rage in Paris, and while humble visitors content themselves with a penny medal, a twopenny fan bearing a plan or picture of the buildings, or a pen, paper-knife, or tiny opera-glass, containing microscopic views, wealthy Parisiennes wear the "Exhibition Bracelet," a gold circlet, ornamented by a representation of the Trocadéro in bas-relief, and pierced with innumerable holes, through which can be seen minute pictures of the gardens and the animals illustrating the four quarters of the globe.

The eminent geologist the Rev. W. B. Clarke, died at Sydney, of natural decay, on the 16th of June. He was a Suffolk man, born in 1798, and ordained by Bishop Bathurst in 1821. In 1839 he left his Dorsetshire vicarage and emigrated to Sydney. He retired from clerical work in 1870. The Sydney Morning Herald says of him:—"In 1819, while at Cambridge, he wrote a poem on 'Pompeii,' in competition for the Chancellor's gold medal, and his essay was considered second only to that of Thomas Babington Macaulay, to whom the prize was awarded. He was one of the eight compilers and contributors to the 'Mitre Hymn Book,' and he was one of the joint editors of the Cambridge Quarterly Review during his residence at the University. His contributions to the science of geology and mineralogy would alone fill a library. Perhaps his largest and best known work was that entitled 'The Southern Goldfields,' which contains an exhaustive description of the auriferous deposits throughout Australia. This work was written in consequence of Mr. Clarke having been commissioned by the Government to visit and report upon the principal gold-producing localities in the colony. Some two or three years ago Mr. Clarke was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of England—an honour which has been so rarely conferred upon colonial 'savans' that Mr. Clarke valued it perhaps more than all the other distinctions he had won, especially as the honour was conferred upon him by the unanimous and spontaneous action of the society."

Two American brothers, named Andrews, have crossed the Atlantic in the "Nautilus," a sailing boat, whereof the dimensions are—length over all, 10ft.; breadth, 6ft. 7in.; and depth, 2ft. 3in. She draws 6½in. of water. They left City Point on the 7th of June, and reached Mullion Cove on Wednesday last. The men say they had never been to sea before, but had coasted in fishing-boats. One, the elder, is by trade a pianoforte-maker; and the younger, Walter, a joiner.

One of Her Majesty's grandchildren has recently appeared in print as an author, or, at least, translator. Her Royal Highness Princess Victoria, eldest daughter of the Grand Duchess of Hesse, has published a translation in German of a Sermon to Children, preached in Westminster Abbey by the Rev. T. Teignmouth Shore, Hon. Chaplain to the Queen. The work, which is published in Darmstadt for a charitable object, does the greatest credit to the Royal and youthful translator.

The Department of Oriental Antiquities of the British Museum has just obtained, by purchase, some interesting cuneiform inscriptions, in a series of small contract tablets, dated in the reign of Mithridates II., or Artabanus II., one of the Arsacid Kings of Babylon. These tablets are of very great importance, on account of their being dated with the dual system of both the Seleucidæ and the Arsacid æras, and thus fixing by indisputable authority the starting points of both these epochs. Of the seven tablets obtained, there are three that bear the double calculation of dates—the earliest being "Month Sedat (11) 18th day in the 154th year—which equals the 218th year of Arsakâ—King of Kings." There are also in the series two in the 155th or 219th year of Arsakâ—and four which bear only the date of the years reckoned from the revolt of the Seleucidæ. The revolt of the Seleucidæ took place in B.C. 312, and by these tablets we find that 84 years after, or in B.C. 228, that the revolt of Arsaces took place, and the Arsacid epoch commenced. The lesser date, therefore, 155th year, will give us the year B.C. 93, which falls in the reign of Artabanus II., the sixth of the Arsaces, or Mithridates II., These tablets, with the exception of one dated in the reign of Ptolemy, which is in the museum at Zurich, are the latest examples of cuneiform writing known. They are contract tables relating to loans of money, and their material is very coarse and the writing careless. It is also to be noticed that, with very few exceptions, the contracting parties are designated by Semitic names, indicating, apparently, that this mode of record was confined almost solely to the conservative Semitic merchants of Babylon.—Academy.

The exhibition of the works entered for the National Art Competition was opened to the public on Tuesday, the 13th inst., in the Exhibition Galleries on the west side of Exhibition-road, South Kensington. The exhibition consists of about 1400 works selected from 138,045 works sent out from 142 schools of art throughout the kingdom, for the annual examination at South Kensington. The subjects of the competition are:—Figure drawing and modelling, painting in oil and water colours, and design especially as applied to manufactures. The prizes awarded are gold medals, silver medals, bronze medals, prizes of books, and the Princess of Wales's scholarships, which are awarded to the two female students who take the highest prizes on the year in the national competition. Besides these distinctions, which are awarded by the Science and Art Department, several valuable money prizes are given annually in connection with the national competition for specified subjects of design, the principal of these being the Plasterers' Company's prizes for designs for plasterers' work drawn in monochrome or modelled in plaster.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 17, 1878.

THE VISIT OF THE PRINCESS OF WALES TO THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

Though this gracious act of patronage and personal interest in our useful Institution has not, owing to illness, taken place this summer, yet we are glad to be permitted to call attention to a most interesting "Communiqué" elsewhere, by which it will be seen that H.K.H. the Princess of Wales, full of interest for the School, hopes to be able to pay a private visit on some future occasion to the School. The correspondence will be read with great satisfaction by our brethren, since for that gracious and charming Princess, who so adorns the Court and Royal Family of England, as loyal Freemasons, devoted to our Grand Master, and always glad to support the Throne, we entertain, in common with our fellow-countrymen, the most heartfelt sentiments of admiration, attachment, and respect.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The last Quarterly Communication of this important body was a very stormy one, and much confusion, unpleasantness, and personal feeling appear to have prevailed, things always blameable in Freemasonry, and which as order-loving, peace-preserving English Masons, we feel bound heartily to deprecate and deplore. If the "East Anglian" newspaper be correct, not only did a great deal of disorder, personal allusion, and frequent interruptions occur, but at one period of the proceedings 100 brethren, mainly from the West of Scotland, and Glasgow, specially, left Grand Lodge in a body, a very regrettable proceeding per se. And when we are told in addition that these 100 brethren met elsewhere, passed certain fiery resolutions, and advocated even the erection of a second Grand Lodge in Scotland, we feel bound at once to express our most unfeigned regret at such an untoward state of affairs. We think it our duty to remind those of our Scottish brethren who form this "Centum" of "non-contents," how very un-masonic as well as how unwise, is any such proposal of a schismatical Grand Lodge, and how all such persistent opposition to the Grand Lodge of Scotland is in our opinion, neither marked by Masonic wisdom or Masonic feeling. Supposing for a moment that a "Western Grand Lodge" could be formed, it would not be recognised by the Grand Lodge of England, and the brethren hailing from it would be "schismatical Masons," and refused admission in English Lodges. We trust that calmer counsels may prevail and wiser views come back with "morning light," and above all we hope sincerely, and we feel bound to express openly our earnest anxiety in this respect, that none will fan the flames of discord, but that all efforts will be made in the interests of unity, conciliation, and peace, to put an end to a state of things derogatory to the dignity of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and disastrous—simply disastrous—to the best interests of Freemasonry in Scotland. Nothing can or will be a subject of deeper regret to all true Freemasons if on real or fancied grounds of "grievances" of any kind, any of our worthy but excitable Scottish brethren should seek to make a schism in Scottish Freemasonry, as such a step, we make bold to say, can only aggravate difficulties, and must end in the downfall of Scottish Freemasonry itself. As Freemasons ours should always (even under provocation) be words of peace and counsels of moderation, and he is the best friend to Scottish Masonry who seeks to compose rather than exaggerate existing differences, who labours zealously as a loyal Freemason to smooth the way for mutual concessions, mutual accommodation, the prevalence of brotherly love, harmony, and concord. We will hope for the best, as we shall regard with the most lively regret any continuance of the present ungenial, uncourteous, and un-masonic state of things. If our good brethren from Glasgow think they have any cause of complaint and rally round their motto "Let Glasgow flourish," surely as Scottish Freemasons they will also bear in mind that excellent old adage, "Let peace prevail." So mote it be.

OUR WANDERING FREEMASONS.

Praed begins one of his well-known stanzas with the enquiry, "where are my old companions gone?" and adds, "I've none to share my beaker," a state of things which just now, at the close of the London and Masonic season, is wonderfully descriptive of metropolitan Masons and Masonry. The same gifted writer, in a famous "refrain," called "Good Night to the Season," which many have tried to imitate, but none so far successfully, thus moralizes on the inevitable state of affairs, which our closed houses and deserted streets, to say nothing of our lonely cats, so affectingly proclaim year by year.

"Good night to the season! 'tis over,
Gay dwellings no longer are gay,
The courtier, the Mason, the lover
Are scattered like swallows away.
There's nobody left to invite one,
Except my good uncle and spouse;
My mistress is bathing at Brighton,
My patron is sailing at Cowes,
For want of a better employment,
Till Ponto and Don can get out
I'll cultivate rural enjoyment?
And angle immensely for trout."

Yes, so it is, the Oasis of London existence has suddenly become a desert. We look in vain for kindly faces and stalwart forms, the tall and short, the lithe and the fat, the brethren of blondest visage, and the brother of blackest whisker are all vanished, not into "thin air," but "gone—gone—gone," as Shakespeare or some one put it, from our "longing sight." They have left London by various trains, in different directions, and are at the moment we write, (sultry and forlorn) luxuriating in straw hats and cool attire, with uproarious children, or making themselves especially accommodating to their better halves. Some are in Scotland, some in Norway, some at Kissingen, some at Homburg, some at Chamouni, some at Interlaken, while some adventurous unmarried youthful brethren have joined one of Messrs. Cook's expeditions to Cyprus. We say nothing here of that numerous and motley crowd which fills Cullercoats, Redcar, Scarborough, Whitby, Weymouth, Ramsgate, Margate, Brighton, Ryde, and numerous other most "pleasant places," and have given themselves up to the hearty enjoyment of a well-earned holiday. A large detachment of enthusiastic and artistic brethren is just now at the French exhibition, astonishing "commissaires de Police," to say nothing of the "garçons" of the "Restaurants," and the smiling "dames de Comptoir," with a so-called "patois," which if strictly conversational and personal and after the "vocabulary," is neither very classical nor yet very grammatical French. Still they are gone, and we, the inhabitants of this little village are left behind to rejoice in silence and solitude. As Judson says to Billiter, "yes, thank you, I am very well, indeed, never better, and very quiet. My dear wife is with her mother at the sea-side, and the children, and I am doing bachelor. I am getting very well indeed, I assure you." Does any one doubt it? We wish then, our wandering Freemasons all health and happiness, good digestions, and good tempers, and all the merited satisfaction of atemporary sojourn amid pleasant scenes, with agreeable companions. To our unmarried brethren we would say make the most of your opportunities and appreciate the "goods" the Gods provide you with so liberal a hand. Perhaps that charming dress of Emma, or that pretty bonnet of Edith, or that neat ankle of Jane may make you resolve on the matrimonial plunge, and therefore "make hay while the sun shines, young man." Who can tell when you will have "showery weather?" And then as to our married brethren what shall we—can we say to them but this? "Associated with the wives of your bosoms, in the most becoming of summer dresses, and surrounded by blooming olive branches, of much noise and astounding appetites," what more we boldly ask is there, for to the man, the Briton, and the Freemason, to desiderate on this queer and suffering earth of ours? If they are not contented they are the most ungrateful of mortals!

THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC AND THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

We have looked into this very serious question, arising out of the long correspondence we published on the subject last week, and we think it well for many reasons, to draw the attention of our readers to the matter. The Grand Lodge of Quebec is a modern "swarm" from the Grand Lodge of Canada, and has within its jurisdiction two English and one Scottish Lodges, which profess to keep up their connexion with their Mother and Constituting Grand Lodges. Upon this first point there is no doubt whatever, Masonically, legally, and internationally, that no right is clearer by the unchanging common law of Masonry than that of a lodge to adhere to its original constituting authority, if it so desires and determines. It may be more convenient, more uniform, and more symmetrical, to have one territorial authority, but "right is right," and no Grand Lodge can take away, by any self-asserting resolution of its own, such an undoubted Masonic privilege from a lawfully constituted lodge, just as no Grand Lodge has a legal claim or special authority to ostracize or condemn a private lodge because it prefers the old to the new jurisdiction. And for the best of all reasons, that the lodge had a Masonic life before the new Grand Lodge had it, and as that Grand Lodge had nothing to do with granting life to the private lodge, so it cannot take it away from it, or in any way, by known Masonic law, interfere with its lawful existence. Above all, it cannot seek to coerce it into recognition of its authority by any "peine forte et dure," by the "major" or "minor excommunication." The Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Quebec are clearly wrong, by Masonic law and precedent, in claiming any such position or authority, and it is utterly "ultra vires" to demand of any private lodge the surrender of its charter or the cessation of its union with the Mother Grand Lodge which originally warranted it. In this respect it is quite evident to us, that the two English lodges and the one Scottish lodge, in the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, have all Masonic law and equity, and international precedent on their side, and must be sustained in their undoubted and undeniable rights by the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland. Let us take an illustration of this position. Let us suppose that the Grand Lodge of Maine, United States, had, when Montreal was unoccupied territory, Masonically speaking, chartered a lodge in Montreal, does any Mason pretend to contend, that the Grand Lodge of Maine would allow its daughter lodge to be forcibly separated from it? Certainly not, it would claim the well-known and acknowledged right of prior occupation and original constitution. The matter is so plain that it is hardly worth while pursuing this branch of the subject further. But when we come to the second branch of the subject, we confess that we are not quite so clear. It seems to us a very debatable question, whether the Grand Lodge of Scotland is justified (even on its own arguments) in not only chartering two new lodges, but appointing a Provincial Grand Master in the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. The position of the Grand Lodge of Scotland is this. A concordat of recognition as between the Grand Lodge of Scotland and the Grand Lodge of Quebec has fallen through, and, therefore, it sets up a "Reviver" of its previous right of occupation. But can it legally do so by Masonic law? Like Lord Eldon, we "greatly doubt." The Scottish Grand Lodge, like the English Grand Lodge, recognized the Grand Lodge of Canada fully, and, (saving the rights of private lodges), withdrew from territorial jurisdiction. Does the failure of a negotiation for union with the Grand Lodge of Quebec, alter this acknowledged state of things? And supposing that the Grand Lodge of Scotland can refuse to acknowledge the Grand Lodge of Quebec, can it resume its own claim of "prior occupation?" Has not that been ceded to the Grand Lodge of Canada? These are questions we hope the authorities of the Grand Lodge of Scotland will not lose sight of, as they are very important in themselves, and gravely affect that most serious of all considerations, the independence of national Grand Lodges, and the interference with lawful territorial jurisdiction. We have not forgotten that some Canadian Masons have questioned the creation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and no doubt a good deal might be said on the legality of its secession and its position. But regarding it now as a "fait accompli," and as we have not raised that objection in England, we think it better "quieta non movere." We fear that what we have said will not please either side in the controversy, (not an uncommon event), but we have spoken as we always do, thoughtfully, honestly, and as "amici curiæ."

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL. (Communiqué)

Some arrangements were made, (as is well known to many of our brethren), in the earlier period of this year, for the purpose of opening the new buildings of the Girls' School, at which ceremony it was hoped H.R.H. the Princess of Wales might be induced to be present. Communications were opened by Bro. Lieut.-Colonel Creaton, as Chairman of the Building Committee, through Bro. Lord Suffield, with General Sir Dighton Probyn, and subsequently with Mr. Holzman, when H.R.H. most graciously acceded to the request, and promised to honour the opening ceremony with her presence and that of her Royal husband. Unfortunately, as is well known also, sickness supervened of a very serious character, and Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton, on the part of the Building Committee, had reluctantly to point out the inadvisability, under the circumstances, of the ceremony taking place at the time originally appointed. The following correspondence, which we print with great pleasure, as it will be greatly appreciated by the Craft, has since passed between Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton and Mr. Holzman, Private Secretary to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales. Bros. J. Nunn and J. A. Rucker were associated with Bro. Lieut.-Col. Creaton in this agreeable duty.

Royal Masonic Institution for Girls,
St. John's Hill, Battersea Rise,
July 30th, 1878.

May it please your Royal Highness.

Madam,—

We have been deputed by the Building Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls to offer to your Royal Highness this humble testimony of their loyalty and devotion. We had hoped to have been permitted to present this key of gold, (a facsimile of the master key of the building), to your Royal Highness in person, when you graciously deigned, in answer to the request of the Committee, to promise to inaugurate the new buildings of the Girls' School. But as that great pleasure has been denied us, owing to the prevalence of sickness in the School, we beg to express the hope, that your Royal Highness will condescend to accept at our hands to-day this humble tribute of the thankfulness of all the members of the Institution, the gratitude of the Committee, and the attachment and affection of the Craft to which we belong.

We have been further instructed to solicit of your Royal Highness the gracious permission to designate the new buildings, recently completed, as the "Royal Alexandra Wing," a request which we trust your Royal Highness will, with your wonted kindness, accede to.

With every fervent wish for your health and happiness, and that of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, our Grand Master, the Patron of the School, we beg to subscribe ourselves, on behalf of the Building Committee, your Royal Highness's most humble and devoted servants,

J. CREATON, Chairman.
JOSHUA NUNN.
J. A. RUCKER.

Marlborough House, Pall Mall, S.W.,
August 5th, 1878.

Dear Sir,—

I have been directed by H.R.H. the Princess of Wales to acknowledge the receipt of the letter, signed by you in conjunction with Messrs. J. Nunn and J. A. Rucker, transmitting on behalf of the Building Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls a facsimile in gold of the master key of the buildings, at the opening of which Her Royal Highness had hoped to assist.

The Princess of Wales sincerely regretted that, owing to the prevalence of sickness in the School, the proposed ceremony had to be abandoned, but Her Royal Highness trusts that at some future time she may be able to pay a private visit to the Institution.

In the meantime, it affords Her Royal Highness great pleasure to accept the key, and to accede to the request that she would permit the new buildings, recently completed, to be designated as the "Royal Alexandra Wing."

I remain, dear Sir,

Yours very faithfully,

M. HOLZMAN.

Lieut.-Colonel Creaton.

Though all will deeply regret that the public visit of H.R.H. has not been accomplished, under auspices so pleasant, and at a gathering of such importance to the School, we feel ourselves highly privileged in being permitted to state, that Her Royal Highness most considerately proposes to pay a private and special visit to the School.

Original Correspondence.

LONDON VOTES FOR THE CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The proposition of Bro. Tisley, as contained in your number of the 10th inst., is more specious than sound. It smacks strongly of "The Charity Organization scheme." However forcibly Bro. Tisley may put his case, the fact will remain that it is an "election within an election," "an imperium in imperio," with the probability that the Committee who are to determine the choice of candidates are personally unable to obtain more than the merest minimum of votes in support of a candidate. I cannot augur any success to the efforts of your correspondent. The London brethren who support Town cases are not likely to submit the chances of their candidate's election as pupils, to the selection or rejection of any standing, intervening, committee. The provincial brethren who support cases are, as a rule, interested in the welfare of candidates whose parentage is well-known to them and their interest and exertions are solidified, and not (as so frequently occurs in London cases, property so called) divided, at times infinitesimally. I do not observe that Bro. Tisley suggests any mode of meeting the objection which would certainly be made by such brethren as can command a multiple of votes against the selection of candidates as recipients of the joint suffrages of the association by individual expression instead of by a record proportionate to the number of proxies contributed. The probabilities of success would be without doubt materially strengthened by entrusting the selection of candidates to the general body of members rather than to a committee. As now propounded the scheme seems very much like "casting a sprat to catch a whale."

Yours truly and fraternally,

H. L.

[We entirely disagree with our brother. Indeed we do not profess to understand his objection. It seems thoroughly impractical.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read with great interest Bro. Tisley's communication in the last number of the Freemason.

The small number of London candidates as compared with those of the provinces who have latterly obtained the benefits of our Masonic Institution leads me inevitably to the conclusion that this state of affairs arises either from apathy or want of organisation amongst the London subscribers.

The former hypothesis I dismiss from my mind as incredible. The latter then appears to be the only one affording an explanation of the phenomenon.

Organisation does, I believe, already exist to a limited extent amongst some London subscribers, for it is well-known that a few distinguished members of the Craft have by long services and liberal contributions acquired an amount of influence sufficient by combination at any time to ensure success to the candidate who may be fortunate enough to enlist their sympathies.

But the general body of subscribers are not so circumstanced, but have individually comparatively little influence, and for want of co-operation amongst them we often find candidates for admission to our Schools, who have perfectly legitimate claims on our consideration, appearing at four, five, or six consecutive elections, finally becoming ineligible on the score of age, while the fruitless expense and consequent disappointment to their friends is really lamentable.

All this cannot, in my opinion, be annihilated by any amount of co-operation, nor do I think it desirable that open competition should be entirely avoided, but a step in the right direction will have been taken when some of the London subscribers have so combined that their influence, which is now so frequently lost can be used, for the benefit of those candidates who have bona-fide claims for their support.

I await a further development of Bro. Tisley's proposed scheme, and trust he will shortly be prepared with a code of rules which will command the approbation of a large number of subscribers.

In the meantime I am, dear Sir and brother, yours faithfully,
A. E. G.

THE CORNISH BRETHREN AND TRURO CATHEDRAL.

We take the following correspondence from the Western Morning News:

To the Editor of the "Western Morning News."

Sir,—I was surprised that Bro. Emra Holmes was not set right by some older members of the Craft at the P.G.L. meeting at Redruth on Tuesday, when he gave notice that at the next meeting he should move that a grant be made to the Truro Cathedral Fund. Surely he ought to have been told that Freemasons do not pay money to P.G.L. for them to give grants for the building of a State Church Cathedral, or, indeed, for the erection of a building belonging to any denomination. If the proposed grant be made, any brother may with as much reason ask for a grant towards the building of a Roman Catholic College or a Jews' Synagogue. Freemasonry is a charitable institution, but I have yet to learn that the P.G.L. would be exercising that virtue by assisting in the erection of a State Church Cathedral. If the P.G.L. would send a grant to Mr. Bolitho, or some other gentleman well-known in the West of Cornwall, where considerable distress has for a long time existed, they would set a fine and telling example to that numerous band of ladies and gentlemen who think they are praising God by subscribing so many thousand pounds to build a cathedral while scores, ay, hundreds, of their fellow creatures in the county are wretched and almost starving.—Yours fraternally,

A FREEMASON.

(To the Editor of the Western Morning News.)

Sir,—Will you let me say, in reply to my Brother "Freemason," that to the best of my belief I did not give notice that at the next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge I should move that a grant be made from the funds of the Provincial Lodge towards the Truro Cathedral.

I stated that since our last lodge a very important meeting had been held at Truro, to consider a scheme for the erection of a cathedral there; and, thinking that the Freemasons might assist, I proposed at the next annual meeting to bring the matter before the brethren. I then handed in to the Provincial Grand Secretary the formal notice in writing, which was, to the best of my recollection, couched in the following terms (and which was, I suppose, taken as read):—"Bro. Emra Holmes gave notice of motion that at the next meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge he would move, 'That in view of the erection of a cathedral at Truro for the diocese of Cornwall, a committee be appointed to solicit subscriptions, and that the Province of Devonshire be invited to assist, so that a lasting memorial of the Freemasons of Cornwall and Devon may be erected in the new edifice.'" Time did not allow of my explaining my object and desires as I could have wished, but I hope to have an opportunity of doing so next year, when I trust "Freemason" will attend, and oppose my motion if he thinks fit.

Whilst it is not my present intention to ask for a grant from Provincial Grand Lodge funds, I should certainly not oppose any other brother who chose to do so; and I join issue with your correspondent at once when he disputes the right of Grand Lodge so to appropriate its funds if it sees fit.

"A Freemason" speaks so authoritatively on the subject that I should (had I known less about it) have taken it for granted that no body of Freemasons could do anything so monstrous as to contribute towards the building or restoration of a State Church Cathedral, whatever that may be; but as I happened some years since to be present at Gloucester when the beautiful reredos given by the brethren of that province to the cathedral was unveiled in the presence of 600 brethren by the Provincial Grand Master, Lord Sherborne, I may be pardoned if I dispute his dictum. The Freemasons of Worcester put a beautiful stained glass window into their cathedral, and the brethren of Durham have done the same in their own noble Minster. The Freemasons of Bristol, headed by their estimable Prov. Grand Master, the Earl of Limerick, laid the foundation stone of the new nave to their cathedral, and restored at their own cost the Lady Chapel of St. Mary, Redcliffe, the noblest parish church in England. The Gloucester Masons restored the west front of Bath Abbey at a cost of £3000—all honour to them; and I do not despair, knowing the Masons of Cornwall as I do, of seeing my brethren in this province put their shoulders to the wheel, in spite of the bigotry and intolerance of a few men, who surely do not know what Freemasonry is, and raise an enduring monument in the first English Cathedral built since the Reformation, to the glory of the Great Architect of the Universe, and a worthy memorial of the Freemasons of the nineteenth century.

Your obedient servant,

EMRA HOLMES.

Fowey, Cornwall, 8th August, 1878.

Sir,—I have duly perused a letter signed "Freemason" respecting the proposed grant to the new cathedral at Truro as per notice of Mr. Emra Holmes. It will be well to remember that it is but a notice, and will doubtless share the fate of a similar proposition made in Grand Lodge on behalf of St. Pauls Cathedral, &c. The Society of Free and Accepted Masons (as your correspondent observes) is not sectarian, and, therefore, any such use of the funds in Cornwall will not be tolerated by the members. No blame is attached to the authorities, for it was but a notice of Mr. Holmes' intention to make a proposition some twelve months hence, which will, we know, be met by a direct negative, and we feel certain will not soon be renewed. Another brother may, if he likes, give notices to propose a grant on behalf of the new Baptist Chapel at Redruth, or to aid the Wesleyan Chapel at Hayle, the Jews' Synagogue at Falmouth, or the Roman Catholics at Camborne, but we anticipate few would be found to second any such propositions, and should Mr. Holmes not withdraw the notice in question he will not at least complain of any apathy as to the matter when the vote is to be taken.

Plymouth, 10th August, 1878.

Sir,—I think it right to state that, when, at the meeting at Redruth, Mr. Emra Holmes intimated to me his intention to give notice of a motion with reference to the cathedral for the next annual meeting, and asked if I saw any objection to his doing so, I certainly did not understand that his idea was to propose a grant from the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and I am very glad to see that the explanation given by him in your edition of Friday agrees entirely with my own impression.

I could see no objection to his giving such a notice as that which, as he states, and as I believed, it was his intention to give, but, even at the risk of exposing myself to the charge of "bigotry and intolerance," I must say that I should greatly doubt the propriety of expending any portion of the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge for the object proposed.

I refrain from expressing myself more strongly, because, in the event of such a proposal being mooted, precedents may be quoted of which I am ignorant; but Mr. Holmes has evidently no intention of making such a proposal, and I shall be surprised if we hear anything more about it.

Yours obediently,

MOUNT EDGCUMBE,
P.G.M. of Cornwall.

Cotehele House, August 11th, 1878.

THREATENED MASONIC DISRUPTION.

We take the following sensible letter from the North British Daily Mail of August 12th:—

Sir,—The Mail of Tuesday last contains an account of the meeting of Grand Lodge, held on the previous day at Edinburgh, and gives an explanation of the Masonic "situation" which, besides being inaccurate, is partial both as regards the extent and the character of the information conveyed. To correct this, to some extent at least, it may be well to inform such of your readers as take an interest in the matter, that the dissension which unfortunately exists in the Grand Lodge is not of recent origin, as your report would seem to indicate. For years, many years, the Grand Committee of the Grand Lodge was, by the law as then in force, composed of the Masters of the lodges in the Edinburgh district, eighteen in number, with a like number chosen by Grand Lodge from its membership—thirty-six in all. Owing to this arrangement it was felt, not only in Glasgow, but throughout the Craft in the provinces, that the metropolitan as opposed to the provincial influence was too great, the Grand Committee being the executive, and, so to speak, the factotum of Grand Lodge. Dissatisfaction, aggravated by the commission of gross irregularities, in respect to cash and otherwise, by certain of the officials of Grand Lodge, was the result; and this went on until the beginning of the present year, when the constitution of the Grand Committee was altered, the brethren composing it being now, in deference to the wish of those who had been dissatisfied, elected by Grand Lodge from its members, irrespective of the locality in which the lodges that they represent are situated. In justice to the much-maligned Edinburgh brethren, it should be stated that the change was not opposed by them, and was adopted unanimously, and was hailed with general satisfaction as paving the way for harmony and prosperity, the irregularities referred to having been effectually put a stop to previously. When the new Grand Committee came to be formed in February last at the meeting of Grand Lodge, it turned out, to the surprise of many, that the Edinburgh, or as it might more fittingly be called, the Grand Lodge influence, instead of being neutralised, was rather increased, a large majority of those elected holding to the mode of conducting Grand Lodge affairs which had prevailed under the old regime. It should be mentioned that, on the occasion of the election of the new Grand Committee, a great amount of organising and manoeuvring to influence the election was most improperly carried on by self-constituted leaders both in Edinburgh and Glasgow, but it is not probable that this had much effect either one way or another upon the result of the election. Disappointment were now added to dissatisfaction on the part of a number of the brethren in and around Glasgow, and the opposition which had hitherto been carried on upon points of principle became factions—whatever the majority did being met with "contradiction for its own dear sake;" and a determined effort was made by the leaders of the opposition, who organised a large body of their supporters to assist at the meeting of Grand Lodge in May in overturning the proceedings of the Grand Committee, in which they were so far successful. From what then transpired it became apparent to the Craft throughout the country that it was time to do something to put a stop to this scandal, and accordingly the members of the Grand Lodge from the east, west, north, and south, turned out in large numbers and from great distances, at the meeting on the 5th instant, to uphold the supremacy of Grand Lodge, and, if possible, bring about a more satisfactory state of affairs.

Your reporter must have been misinformed as to the expenses, travelling or otherwise, of partisans being paid, as such was not the case to any extent, the contest having assumed a new character, being not between Edinburgh and Glasgow, or the east and west, but between Glasgow on the one hand, and the rest of Scotland from Aberdeen to Dumfries, and from Ayr to Dunbar, on the other, and the upshot was that, when those who had gone out to win found themselves outnumbered, they left the meeting in a body. The points on which diversity of opinion exists, not being of public interest, need not be introduced here. One of them, however, being alluded to by your reporter—the appointment of Grand Master at the ensuing election—it may not be out of place to say that the high character of Bro. Henry Inglis, of Torsonce, and his eminent services to the Craft for nearly a quarter of a century, entitled him to the highest honour which the Grand Lodge can bestow. This is universally felt and admitted by the Order, both at home and abroad, and no considerable section in Glasgow or elsewhere thinks differently. The formation of a new Grand Lodge in the West of Scotland, which, according to your report, was freely talked of, is not such an easy matter as many seem to imagine. Apart from the totally inadequate nature of the present circumstances to justify such a step, it would be impossible for such a body to receive the recognition of other Grand Lodges, without which it would be worthless, and to that extent a delusion and a snare.—I am, &c.,

NO FACTION.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The General Committee met on the 14th instant, when Bro. Col. Cretton, presided. There were also present Bro. S. Rawson, J. Marsh Case, G. Bolton, J. G. Stevens, W. F. Nettleship, Thos. Cubitt, C. J. Perceval, Jas. Willing, jun., W. Hale, Jno. Bellamy, C. F. Hogard, Charles Lacey, and others.

The death was reported of Bro. Samuel Tomkins, the Treasurer, and one of the trustees of the Institution.

The Chairman reported that tenders had been received for building the gardener's lodge at Croydon, that that of Mr. Martin Taylor had been accepted; that the corner stone had been laid on Tuesday, and that the buildings would be completed in about ten weeks.

The death of one annuitant was reported, and four petitions were received and placed on the list.

LONDON CHARITY UNION.

A meeting was holden in the Freemasons' Tavern, on Thursday, August 15, under the presidency of Bro. Lieut.-Colonel Cretton, for the purpose of forming a London Charity Union, in order to support London Masonic Charities, the furtherance of the claims of the London candidates for the Charities, and the interchange of votes with Provincial Charity Committees.

A resolution to form a "London Union" was unanimously agreed to, and the meeting adjourned to Wednesday, August 21st, at five o'clock, at Freemason's Tavern, to consider the bye-laws and appoint a Committee.

All brethren interested in the subject are invited to attend the adjourned meeting.

Obituary.

BRO. ROBERT BAGSHAW.

We regret to have to announce the death of that worthy old Mason, Bro. Robert Bagshaw, Deputy-Lieutenant for the County of Essex, and P.G.M. and P.G. Supt. of the Province of Essex, who expired at his town residence, 42, Gloucester-sq., on Wednesday. He formerly represented Harwich in the Liberal interest, at the same time as his father, when the borough returned two members.

Occupying, as Freemasonry does, a prominent position among the recognised institutions of the land, and which has for its ultimate end the amelioration of the condition and elevation of mankind, it is to be expected that the combined efforts of the Fraternity would be directed to the final accomplishment of this laudable undertaking. Founded on the purest principles of morality, and enforcing its tenets, as Freemasonry does, by precepts based upon and deduced from the Divine law, we have sufficient grounds to foster the hope of great results from the united efforts of those whose lives "linked together by an indissoluble chain of sincere affection." Viewed simply in the sight of a social institution, it has claims upon society which call for serious thought and calm investigation. But if we would understand and appreciate its true mission, our thoughts must take a wider range and grasp those nobler objects which are the legitimate offspring of the great principles on which the institution rests. The foundation of every virtue is truth. To be good and true, is the first lesson which Masonry teaches. To know, and do the truth, is the grand end proposed; and when this shall have been accompanied, then, and not until then, will the true mission of the institution of Masonry have been fulfilled.—Grand Master Carley of Mississippi.

In accordance with an order issued by the Duke of Bedford a fortnight ago, all Sunday trading is henceforth to be prohibited at Covent-garden Market. The reason for the introduction of the new rule is said to be that a rather noisy set of people were attracted to the market, and that the decorum which should be observed on Sunday was occasionally disregarded, but the natural wish of the superior officers that their subordinates should have as little as possible to do on the Sabbath Day also influenced them largely in asking for the alteration.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WORCESTERSHIRE.

On Wednesday, the 7th inst., there was a grand gathering of Freemasons in Worcester on the occasion of Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart., M.P., being installed Right Worshipful Grand Master of the Province, he having been appointed to that office by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., in the room of R.W. Bro. Albert Hudson Royds, resigned. Many members of the Craft from other provinces attended, the muster-roll being a very numerous one. The W.M. and members of the Worcester Lodge (No. 280) had issued an invitation to brethren from a distance to partake of refreshments at the new Masonic Hall on their arrival in the city, and prior to the commencement of the day's proceedings.

The brethren assembled at 11.30 at the College Hall, adjacent to the Cathedral, the use of which had been kindly granted by the Dean and Chapter.

Among those present were Bros. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.D.G.M.; past and present officers of the province. E. M. Masfield, D.G.M.; J. Barber, P.D. P.G.M.; W. H. Jones, P.G.S.W.; H. Singbourne, R. Edgar, C. E. Pipe, J. Dixon, W. Manton.

Lodge having been opened in the Third Degree by Bro. T. H. Lewis, W.M. of the Worcester Lodge (280), the Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. W. Masfield, and the Provincial Grand Officers entered the lodge, and having been received with the customary honours, the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in form at 12.30. The minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge having been read and confirmed, the muster roll was duly called over, when it was found that all the lodges in the province were represented.

The Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master then requested seven Provincial Grand Officers to attend the installing Master, R.W. Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master of England who then entered the lodge, assumed the chair, and was saluted with royal honours. The Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of England then deputed seven Installed Masters of the seven senior lodges of the province to introduce the Right Worshipful Bro. Sir E. A. H. Lechmere, Bart., M.P., the Provincial Grand Master designate for the Province of Worcester. Sir Edmund having been introduced, was presented to Lord Skelmersdale for the benefit of installation in due form by the Worshipful Bro. W. Masfield, D.P.G., the senior Past Master of the Harmonic Lodge, No. 252, the senior lodge in the province. The Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of England then called upon the Provincial Grand Secretary to read the Right Worshipful Bro. Sir Edmund Lechmere's patent of appointment, and also a summary of the ancient charges. The Provincial Grand Master designate having given his unqualified assent thereto, a Board of Past Masters was opened, at which he was duly obligated to the faithful discharge of the duties of his office, and invested with the insignia of a Provincial Grand Master. H was then duly installed in the chair by Lord Skelmersdale, with the usual honours.

The ceremony of installation having been concluded, the Provincial Grand Treasurer's accounts having been audited, were received and adopted, and Bro. C. C. Whitney Griffiths, P.M. 280, P.P.S.G.W., who has been Provincial Grand Treasurer for some years, was again unanimously elected to fill that important office.

The R.W. Provincial Grand Master then appointed and invested the Provincial Grand Officers for the ensuing year as follows:—

W. Masfield, P.M. 252	...	Prov. D.G.M.
A. F. Goodson, P.M. 1097	...	Prov. S.G.W.

J. Stanley, 529; J. Smith, 280	...	Prov. G. Tylers.

The R.W. Provincial Grand Master appointed to hold his next Provincial Grand Lodge at Stourport.

The business of the lodge was not concluded until 2.30; and shortly afterwards the brethren formed in procession and walked from the lodge-room (along the cloisters) to the Cathedral, the sacred edifice being entered at the western doors, which handsome structure was one of Sir E. A. H. Lechmere's gifts to the Cathedral. The service commenced soon after three o'clock, there being a large congregation in the nave, whilst the Freemasons were accommodated in the choir, in which the service was performed.

The sermon was preached by the V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, M.A., Past Grand Chaplain of England, Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Suffolk.

A collection was made after the service in aid of the Worcester Infirmary and Dispensary, and realised £30. The brethren returned in procession from the Cathedral to the College Hall, and the Provincial Grand Lodge was closed in the usual form. A banquet afterwards took place at the Shirehall, Sir Edmund Lechmere, Provincial Grand Master, presiding.

CORNWALL

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall was held on Tuesday, the 6th inst., in Redruth, and the Freemasons of the town joined heartily in the desire to give to the Grand Lodge a thoroughly hearty and cordial reception.

The weather throughout the greater part of the day was anything but favourable, but in spite of this the inhabitants turned out in thousands to witness the usual procession of the brethren through the streets, some of which were gaily decorated with flags and evergreens, while outside Tabb's Hotel there was an elaborate triumphal arch erected in honour of the interesting occasion. Additional interest was given to the proceedings by reason of the announcement that Bro. the Earl of Mount Edgumbe, Provincial Grand Master of Cornwall, intended to dedicate the new hall of the Druids' Lodge, which has been erected at a cost of about £1500, to Masonic purposes, and there were not less than 450 brethren present from various parts of the county.

The interesting and impressive ceremony of dedication commenced shortly after ten o'clock in the morning. The new lodge room was crowded to excess, and a large proportion of the brethren were unable to gain admission. On taking the chair the Prov. Grand Master was received with the usual honours, and after this the anthem, "Behold, how good and joyful a thing it is, brethren, to dwell together in unity," was admirably rendered by an excellent choir composed of members of the lodge. The W.M., Bro. Treseder, then presented to the Prov. Grand Master, Bro. John F. Penrose, the chairman of directors of the Masonic Hall Company, and Bro. Hicks, the architect of the building, remarking of the former that he had not only distinguished himself in the Craft but had won for himself a name in the lodge which would command the admiration of the brethren for generations to come; and of the latter that he had done his work, as an architect, like a true and faithful Mason.

His Lordship said it was a great pleasure to him to receive these introductions. He knew that Bro. Penrose had taken a great deal of pains and devoted considerable time and attention to furthering the objects of the new hall, and this method of erecting lodges was one which he thought was very much to be recommended to the Craft generally. (Hear, hear.) He also complimented Bro. Hicks upon the skill and fidelity which he had exhibited in the erection of the building, and he hoped it would long remain to be an ornament to the town, and a credit to those who would hold their meetings within it. (Applause.)

Bro. Penrose, in reply, thanked the Prov. Grand Master for the honour which he had done the brethren in coming amongst them that day to dedicate the lodge. No better evidence of the progress which Masonry was making could be had than the number of buildings of that character, which were springing up in every large town in the province. So far as the Druids' Lodge was concerned, the increase had been very marked indeed. In the year 1869 the lodge numbered only thirty-eight members, but after that there was a very great desire evinced by many estimable men in the town and neighbourhood to become members of the fraternity, and as the result of that their numbers had increased to over a hundred, so that they had become one of the largest, and he ventured to think one of the most important lodges in the province. (Hear, hear, and applause.) With this increase in their numbers it became necessary to provide additional accommodation, and the appeal which was made for this purpose was nobly responded to. They raised in the lodge nearly a thousand pounds, and the remainder was obtained by means of debenture bonds, so that they might fairly say that the entire building was paid for. (Hear, hear.) It was such a building as he hoped would enable the high principles of the Order to be promulgated for many years to come. (Applause.)

After a few remarks from Bro. Hicks, from whom the Prov. Grand Master received the plans of the building, the dedicatory ceremony was performed in the usual manner, the P.G.M. being aided by the officers of Grand Lodge, the D.P.G.M., the P.G.S.W., and the P.G.J.W. carrying the elements of consecration. A circuit was made round the lodge, and then the Prov. Grand Master, halting in the east, was presented by the D.P.G.M. with a cornucopia of corn, which the former scattered over the floor, accompanying the action with some suitable words. The same thing was done, in turn, with the chalice of wine and the cruse of oil, and the choral responses added materially to the effectiveness of the ceremony. An anthem was sung, and the interesting proceedings were brought to a close.

His Lordship said he thought some remarks ought to be made about the excellent character of the musical and other arrangements of the lodge for carrying out the ceremony. He did not know that he had ever seen better. (Applause.)

The brethren then marched in procession to the Druid's Hall, where the annual business of the province was transacted. Bro. the Earl of Mount Edgumbe again presided, and a very large attendance included Bros. Sir Frederick Martin Williams, Bart., M.P., Deputy Prov. Grand Master; W. J. Hughson, P.G.S. Deacon of England; E. T. Carlyon, Prov. G. Secretary; R. John, P.P.G.D.C.; Rev. G. L. Church, P.P.G.S.W., and P.P.G. Chaplain; Emma Holmes, P.P.G.R., and P.P.G.D.C. of Suffolk; S. Holloway, P.P.G.J.D.; C. Truscott, jun., P.P.G.S.B.; J. F. Childs, Prov. G.R.; E. D. Anderson, P.P.G.J.W.; J. Vivian, P.P.G.S.B.; R. R. Rodd, P.P.G.S.W.; J. R. Crewes, Prov. G.S.; Samuel Moyle, P.P.G. Steward; G. Barnett, P.G. Pursuivant; R. A. Courtney, P.P.G.D.C.; W. Foxwell, Prov. G.S.; W. Guy, P.P.G.D.C.; J. W. Chegwidan, P.P.G.D.C.; J. Dennis, P.P.G.S.; W. E. Michell, P.P.G.S.B.; J. J. Hawkins, P.G.J.D.; H. Cochrane, P.P.G.D.; J. Crombe, P.P.G.D.; J. Burgess, P.G.S. of Works; E. Aitkin Davies, P.P.G. S. of W.; W. Tregay, P.P.G. S. of W.; the Rev. F. T. Wintle, P.P.G. Chaplain; J. H. Levin, P.J.G.D.; R. H. Heath, P.P.G.O.; T. Taylor, P.P.G.S.D.; D. H. W. Horlock, P.G.S.W.; P. F. Simcoe, P.G.S.; C. G. Archer, P.P.G.S.; W. Nancarrow, P.G.S.; Rev. W. H. Bloxsome, P.P.G. Chap.; J. Hall, P.P.G.J.W.; E. Milford Cock, P.P.G.S.; J. F. Penrose, P.P.G.S.D.; J. Paull, P.P.G.S.D.; H. Bale, P.P.G.S.D.; F. Harvey, P.P. G. Sup. of W.; J. Hill, P.P.G.S.; E. The minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge were read and confirmed, after which

Bro. R. John read the report of the Provincial Grand Secretary, which stated that the number of lodges in the province was twenty-seven. There had been 149 initiations during the past year, as compared with 155 in the previous year, while of joining members there had been 47 against 40. The total number of members at the present time was 1676, while in the previous year the number was 1467, showing an increase of 209. (Applause.) Bro. Carlyon also reported that the returns had come in more regularly than heretofore, and he expressed a hope that the Secretaries of the various lodges would be careful to observe great punctuality in this respect, as it saves much trouble to the Prov. Grand Secretary for the time being. He was sorry to say that comparatively few returns of the attendance of Past Masters of the various lodges had been sent in. This should be carefully attended to, so that the Provincial Grand Master might know more accurately who the deserving brethren were.

The Prov. G. Treasurer's report, which was taken as read, showed a credit balance of £101 4s. 11d.

Bro. Chirgwin read the report of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund, from which it appeared that the amount received during the past year from the various lodges in the province amounted to £164 4s. 6d. Last year the amount was £154 14s., showing an increase of £9 10s. 6d. There was a balance in hand on the 31st of December of £176 8s. 10d., and there had been received in interest and subscriptions £254 6s. 3d., making a total of £430 15s. 1d. The capital invested amounted to £2650 13s., producing an annual income of £119 9s. 7d. During the year the balance had increased £220 9s. 19d. (Hear, hear.) There were at present four annuitants on the fund, each receiving £20 a year, and there was also one educational grant of £15 per year. A petition had been received on behalf of Mary Martin Osborne for an educational grant, and the voting had resulted in a very large majority in favour of a grant of £15 a year for four years. (Applause.)

Bro. Hughan presented a report having reference to his management of the votes for the London Masonic Charities on behalf of the province. The report said:—"It is now ten years since we undertook to manage the votes for the great Masonic charities, and we hope that during that period we have so conducted the proceedings as to place the appointment of a successor in the hands of the province without any fear that the interests of the lodges in Cornwall have suffered at our hands. We shall be most happy to afford assistance to the brother appointed as to the character and extent of his numerous duties. Since the last Provincial Grand Lodge we arranged for the collection and polling of votes for five Masonic elections, the girls and boys in October, 1877, and April, 1878, and the aged Freemasons and widows in May of this year. A lad was nominated for the April election on behalf of St. Anne's Lodge, No. 979, East Loos, but at the last moment it was found that he was exactly one month too young. This was unfortunate, as 31 candidates were elected, being from twice to four times the number of ordinary elections. The mother is an applicant to-day for aid from the Provincial Grand Lodge, and we hope that her son will shortly be elected, to receive the benefit of the Local Educational Fund. Having therefore no candidates from the county for either the girls or boys, we were able to aid our sister province, which has succeeded in securing her candidates. We are always most anxious to be of use to the province of Devon—(hear, hear)—and we are pleased to note that the feeling is thoroughly reciprocal.—(Applause.) At the election last May, for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, we brought forward the widow of a Past Master of St. Martin's Lodge No. 510, Liskeard, and had the pleasure of seeing her name in the list of successful candidates for £32 a year for life.—(Applause.) Sixteen were to be elected, and our Cornish candidate was fifteenth on the list, with 809 votes, the highest polling 1245. Two more were elected to fill vacancies caused by death since the voting papers were issued. We should state that the credit of the province is so good that we declined the loan of over 700 votes, and we may also state the equally agreeable fact that at the present time we have no candidates for either of the institutions; all our liabilities have been paid, and the province is receiving from the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and "Girls," about £220 annually. (Applause.) We have been receiving as a province considerably more than our donations until this year, when our esteemed Prov. G. Master acted as Steward, the province nobly responding to the extent of £450, and with other donations raising the total to £560, the second in amount of the provinces in England, Hertford being the first with £633. (Applause.) As we are weak in "Girls" votes we trust to see a similar sum raised for that institution shortly. (Hear, hear.)

The report was adopted, and

Bro. Hughan subsequently proposed that the sum of £50 should be given from the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls. He stated that a brother present had offered him the sum of twenty guineas if he would undertake the Stewardship of that institution, and if he could obtain a certain sum on its behalf. That would go with any amount which the Provincial Grand Lodge might vote, and besides this another brother had given a cheque for twenty guineas, and a third had promised a similar sum for the Royal Masonic Institutions for Boys and Girls. (Applause.)

The resolution was seconded by Bro. Bloxsome, and carried unanimously.

At noon business was suspended in order that the brethren might attend the parish church.

The Rev. J. M. Morrell, curate, read the prayers, and Dr. Barber, of "Mount Sinai" Lodge, read the lesson. With beautiful effect the choir sang the anthem, "Behold how good and joyful," composed for the occasion by Bro. Heath, who accompanied on the harmonium. Mrs. J. W. Everett (née Heath) brilliantly sang the charming solo for contralto, and Bro. Johns the effective solo for bass.

Composer and choir are alike to be congratulated on the result. The sermon was preached by the Prov. Grand Chaplain, the Rev. F. T. Wintle, vicar of Beer Ferrers, who founded an eloquent sermon on St. Paul's exhortation to the Galatians: "Bear ye one another's burdens" (Gal. xi. 2), the subject being the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God. God has ordained, he said, that we shall not live for ourselves alone, and that we cannot exist utterly apart from all others of like being with ourselves; and more, that our happiness and welfare in this life depend very much indeed upon others, and most often very much more upon what is done for us than what we do for ourselves. We have to traverse beyond the code of mere morality to find the tie that really links us together, and in God's ordination of mutual dependence shall we find it. And while we, as Freemasons, do not claim to be a religious society, in the common acceptations of the word, yet we are religious in the closest interpretation of it, as reflecting upon the intentions of the Great Creator, and acting upon them. So that we find ourselves keeping clear of dogmatism, and working for the good of each other, beneath the rule and guidance of the Great One, who is the Fountain of all religion in that comprehensive sense which sanctions philanthropy in whatever especial manner it may manifest itself. Religious, too, in that sense which a good man of God thus expressed, and which all Masons will recognise as attaching closely to their intention and purpose, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." And in regarding true philanthropy as our object, we find it incompatible with anything short of an acknowledged belief in God, because, in fulfilling it, we are fulfilling a law—not the utterance of human sentiment, nor the conclusion of unaided thought, apart from all revelation of God, but a law higher than human, emanating from the counsels of the Deity Himself, to which He had given a foremost place in the Volume of Sacred Law, and which, in the new dispensation, was revealed by the mouth of the Incarnate Son to embrace, in conjunction with the greatest law of all, love to God Himself, all laws and all prophetic enunciations of the old dispensation. Then, if we claim for ourselves, as members of a great brotherhood, a world-wide reputation, we have a righteous claim to the public esteem, when the principles upon which we work are strictly in accordance with Divine law. From the very throne itself in our own country, since the Heir Apparent is our Grand Master, down through all the gradations of rank and wealth, embracing every profession and numberless variety of occupation, men of letters, art, and science, within our ranks, it is impossible to conceive a society, bound together with such an object, that of true philanthropy, which can lay claim to greater respect, especially as all Masons know our ranks are not recruited haphazard, but with due care as to fitness of character and an avowed belief and trust in God. Very lamentable, then, must all feel that decision to be which has compelled us to withdraw from fellowship and Masonic relationship with our continental neighbours and national allies; but if Masonry, as we understand it, can only properly exist by an expressed recognition of God as the Ruler of mankind, and the Giver of that law which essentially binds us together, the world outside our Order will hold us blameless for keeping aloof from those who have renounced this principle, however humane their intentions may profess themselves to be. And nothing has more redounded to the honour of the Craft than its determination to sever, at great cost of pain to ourselves, from connection with those who have adopted principles which savour, at least, of doubt, if not of open infidelity. The very foundation of unity is undermined if that stay and prop be ruthlessly withdrawn which supports the whole fabric, and keeps it bound together by an indissoluble band. What stronger protest can there be against infidelity than such a gathering as this? We know, historically, to what terrible issues secret societies have led; how constitutions have been undermined and uprooted, lands deluged with blood, and defiled with crime of the deepest hue; but do we ever find that history can say that such leagues were other than imbued most perniciously with atheistical tenets; nay, does not the rejection of truth lie at the very root and foundation of all such compacts, unrighteous because they have no truer perception of justice, ungodly for they have no truth? But let a society have its secrets, but withal an open, undisguised acknowledgment of a true belief in God: then it will become a bulwark of what is right, a strong upholder and defender of the constitution, not the ghastly spectre of riot and revolution, striking terror by its very name; far rather the handmaid of peace and order, the promoter of good, the benign hand of fellowship to those who need. And it is a very strong link in our chain that we take this annual occasion for attending public worship; and a very strong protest against any union which does not assent to a belief in Almighty God as the prime corner-stone of its foundation, as well as a powerful recognition of the supreme government of the Eternal Ruler of the universe, beneath whose guidance and direction alone any effort for the professed welfare of mankind can hope to flourish or succeed. I dare plead, brethren, to-day for unity, as the highest grace that can adorn us: difference of condition, of opinion, of language there may be, so that there be oneness of purpose and unconditional belief and trust in God, no fear that the unity of Freemasonry will be disturbed, or that its benevolent objects will suffer, or that the main end and object of the brotherhood will be diverted from its hitherto straight course. And if we find the worth and the charm of our Order to be in our brotherhood in its widest comprehension, surely there can be no greater or holier tie when that brotherhood is compacted by a bond which refers its prime unity to the one God.

The offertory amounted to £15 1s. 1d., and the Grand Lodge on its return resolved to give one-fifth to the rector, two-fifths to the Masonic Charities of the province, and two-fifths to the Miners' Hospital.

On returning to the Druid's Hall, and prior to business being resumed, the Prov. G. M. briefly alluded to the satisfactory increase there had been during the past year in the number of Masons in the province. The lodges now numbered twenty-seven, and a warrant for another had been applied for, but owing to some technical delay it had not yet been received from Grand Lodge. The result so far showed that Masonry was progressing, and was popular in the province.—(hear hear)—but he hoped it did not show that the lodges were too greedy about receiving new brethren into their ranks without considering what they were. He believed at any rate that this was not the case in the majority of the lodges, and that the advice which he had given on former occasions in reference to this was in accordance with the feeling of the brethren at large. (Hear, hear.) He was glad to know that during the year three more lodges had opened halls of their own—(applause)—viz., at Chacewater, Lostwithiel, and Redruth, and it now remained that out of twenty-seven lodges in the province, there were only five or six which had rooms either in an hotel or in some way in connection with an hotel. He sincerely hoped that ere long these few exceptions would cease to exist, and that everywhere the brethren would do all in their power to follow the excellent example which other towns had set them. Referring to the late Bro. Augustus Smith, who was for so many years Provincial Grand Master of Cornwall, his Lordship said it had been suggested to offer to Mr. Derrien-Smith a portrait of the deceased brother. One half the cost would be defrayed by private subscription, and he thought the brethren would agree with him that a small sum might well be voted by the Grand Lodge, otherwise the compliment would be simply a compliment from those individuals who had subscribed towards the painting (Hear, hear.) It was not a copy of the original picture, but had been painted by Mr. Lane, of Plymouth.

It was unanimously resolved that the sum of £15 should be devoted for the purpose from the Grand Lodge funds.

A motion by Bro. W. Tweedy, Provincial Grand Treasurer, "that a yearly sum of £3 be voted out of the Provincial Grand Lodge funds towards the rent of the Masonic Hall, Truro, in consideration of their occupation of the same for provincial purposes," met with a good deal of opposition, but it was strongly supported by Bro. Sir F. M. Williams, Bro. T. Webber, of Falmouth; Bro. John, Bro. Carlyon, and others, and eventually it was carried by a large majority.

Bro. W. Tweedy was elected as Treasurer, Bro. Chirgwin, as Secretary, and Bro. Crwes, as Assistant Secretary of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund for the year ensuing, and Bros. E. D. Anderton, and E. M. Cock were elected as auditors.

As auditors of the Provincial Grand Lodge accounts Bros. F. W. Dabb and R. A. Courtney were elected, and Bros. Chirgwin, of Truro; Harvey, of Hayle; and Childs, of Liskeard; together with the Prov. Grand Treasurer and Prov. Grand Treasurer, were appointed as the Committee of Relief.

It was resolved that the collection at the church should be divided in the proportion of two-fifths to the Miners' Hospital at Redruth, two fifths to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund, and one fifth to the rector of the parish.

The Prov. G.M. next appointed and invested his officers as follows:—

Sir F. M. Williams	D.P.G.M.
J. F. Penrose, 589	P.G.S.W.
C. G. Archer, 789	P.G.J.W.
Rev. J. T. Wintle, 893...	P.G.S. Chap.

F. H. Pool, 450	P.G.S.B.
W. A. Gerry, 121	P.G. Org.
W. Pascoe, 1006	P.G. Purst.
W. Rooks, 131	P.G.A.P.
J. Thomas, 589, J. Stephens, 1151,
J. Q. James, 318, A. Elford, 977,
R. Ccath, 510, and G. B. Pearse, 450,	P. G. Stewards,
W. Polkinhorne, 589,	P. G. Tyler,

This concluded the business of the Grand Lodge, but before it was closed Bro. Emra Holmes gave notice that at the next meeting he should move for a grant towards the erection of the Cathedral at Truro.

The business of Grand Lodge was brought to a conclusion shortly after four, and an adjournment was made to Bro. Tabb's hotel, where the banquet was spread. The banquet was held in the Ticketing Room, and was of the most recherché and sumptuous character. The tables were most handsomely and profusely decorated with flowers, principally from the conservatory of Bro. J. Hocking, jun., and the greenhouses of Mr. Smith, florist. The R.W. the P.G.M., the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, presided, supported by the R.W. the D.P.G.M., Sir Frederick Martin Williams, Bart., M.P., the Wardens filling the vice-chairs. About one hundred and fifty were present.

The P.G.M., proposing "The Queen and the Craft," said: One of the first things we all learnt in Masonry was that Masonry extended over the whole surface of the globe, and that the sun is always at its meridian with respect to it. The same thing may almost be said of Her Majesty's dominions. Whilst Masonry is a bond among all men, I think it must be also an additional bond between men of British extraction to feel that in every quarter of the globe, in every latitude, and in almost every longitude, you will find Masons, who, whenever they meet together, drink as their first toast, "The Queen and the Craft." (Cheers.) And without being considered trenching in the slightest on politics, may I be allowed to echo once more the hope which was expressed so loudly and so clearly in the House of Commons, on Saturday, that the recent events may, under the blessing of the Great Architect of the Universe, conduce to the peace of the world and the welfare of Her Majesty's dominions. (Loud cheers.)

The P.G.M. next gave "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, G.M. of England," remarking that it was a great pleasure to all who took an interest in H.R.H. to see him doing anything that made him popular not only in England, but in other countries. (Hear, hear.) The Prince of Wales had been following his illustrious father's footsteps, by busying himself about the great international work of the Paris Exhibition, and from all he (his lordship) had heard, there was but one opinion as to the indefatigability which he had shown and the tact and judgment displayed in the work at Paris, and which had secured for him among Frenchmen extreme popularity. (Hear, hear.) It was only one more proof of that ability to make himself popular and beloved which he exemplified in his position as G.M. of England. (Loud cheers, "God bless the Prince Wales" and Masonic honours.)

Bro. Anderton proposed "The Pro G.M. and the G.L. of England," and spoke in eulogistic terms of the Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale, and quoted the election of such zealous and worthy Masons of the county as Sir Frederick Martin Williams and Brother Hughan to Grand Lodge honours as one of the best possible proofs of the excellent ruling of Grand Lodge. (Cheers.)

Sir Frederick Martin Williams, received with enthusiastic cheering, endorsed all that had been said in praise of the Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale, and said Masons in Cornwall felt specially proud of the Grand Master as their own Duke, and joined all England in the hope that he would be long spared to preside over the Grand Lodge in the very admirable way he did at present.

Bro. J. F. Penrose, Prov. G.S.W., amid loud cheers, proposed "The R.W. the Prov. G.M. of Cornwall." No one could have been present at the interesting ceremony of the dedication without being struck with the perfect way in which it was done (cheers), nor have followed the G.M. into the Provincial Grand Lodge without remarking his firm but gentle way of ruling. He felt that no province in England could boast of so good a Grand Master as Cornwall had (loud and continued cheering); and he would ask them to drink his health, in the hope that his presidency of the province would be as long as it had so far been pleasant and profitable. (Cheers.)

The toast was drunk with musical and full Masonic honours.

The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe, received with hearty cheers, said: Brethren, I must thank you for the very cordial and fraternal way in which you have received me to day; and I thank you further for the manner in which you have mustered on this occasion. I cannot but take a deep interest in watching how brethren assemble at these meetings, and it is a satisfaction to me to see them well-attended from all parts of the province. That certainly has been the case to-day; and I also have to thank you for the support you always give me in the chair. My great object has been and always will be, without wasting time, not to allow any subject to be hurriedly carried through without sufficient consideration. (Hear, hear.) Of course, in such a large assembly as ours, there will be considerable differences of opinion, but hitherto they have never led to hard words or heart-burnings; and I hope that that will long continue. As long as I hold office, I shall be most happy to receive any communication from any part of the province concerning any subject of interest to the province, so that it may be brought on for discussion if necessary. And, if I can do anything to promote harmony and make Masonry real and truly Masonic in all its aspects, I shall always be happy to be at the service of the brethren. (Loud cheers.)

The Prov. G.M. mentioned that he had received three applications for the holding of the Provincial Grand Lodge next year, and that he had decided in favour of Lostwithiel. (Cheers.) He knew that Lostwithiel had had a meeting later than other towns, but there was a new room to be dedicated; it would be very convenient for the great bulk of the Masons; and it was a town in which he formerly had some personal interest, and he should like to hold a meeting there next year. (Cheers.)

Bro. Thomas (The Glebe), proposing "The D. Prov. P.G.M. and other Officers of Prov. G.L.," referred, in eulogistic terms, to the warm heart and open hand of Sir Frederick Martin Williams, whom he described as the noblest specimen of the Order Cornwall had ever produced. (Enthusiastic cheering.)

Sir Frederick M. Williams, acknowledging the compliment, said, whether in office or not, it would always give him unfeigned pleasure to assist the noble Earl, their worthy Grand Master, and, whatever he had done for Masonry, he could assure them it had been a labour of love. (Cheers.) It had given him very great pleasure to witness the dedication of their beautiful hall, and the Druids' Lodge had his very best wishes for its success. (Cheers.)

Bro. Tweedy, whose name was also associated with the toast, thanked the brethren for electing him for the eleventh time to the office of Prov. Grand Treasurer. He hoped, at the next meeting, to give a financial history of the lodge, so far as it was revealed in the book in his possession. (Hear, hear.) It went back to a time when the total income of the Prov. G.L. was the arbitrary contributions of £2 10s. subscribed by six lodges.

The Earl of Mount Edgcumbe: As the representatives the Prov. Grand Lodge, and on their behalf, I have or thank the W.M. of this lodge very cordially for the handsome manner in which we have been received here to-day—(cheers)—and to propose his health, and success to the lodge, and to their working in the new hall. (Renewed cheering.) I do not think it would be any injustice to any lodge to say I never saw a reception better done than it has been done here. (Hear, hear.) Whether you take the arrangements that have been made for the convenience of members, the manner in which the musical portion of the ceremony was conducted, the manner in which the dedication was assisted by those who had to take part in it, or the manner in which the banquet has been served—I think everything has been as well done as it could be done. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) In my opinion, it is a very good system lately adopted of having a cold instead of a hot dinner—(hear, hear)—for it has been said on previous occasions that nothing was cold but the soup and nothing was hot but the wine. (Laughter.) I would here say what I had intended previously to say, that the task of appointing officers of the Grand Lodge is always a difficult and very complicated one, for I have, as it were, to provide for six horses in five stalls. (Hear, hear.) It will be of assistance to me if the returns of Past Masters are made more regularly; and, if any lodge or brother thinks he has been passed over, all I can hope is that I shall make up for it on some future occasion. (Cheers.) Now let us drink success to the Druids' Lodge and its W.M. (Loud cheers.)

Bro. Treseder, responding, said he could not so flatter himself as to accept the entire compliment that had been paid, but must, in simple justice, scatter it over his brethren universally, as they had worked "one and all" to bring about the success—(cheers)—and whilst the Prov. Grand Lodge had thanked them for their courtesy and kindness shown, he felt bound to thank the Provincial Grand Lodge for having honoured Druids' Lodge with a visit in 1878. They had looked forward to the day with great expectations, and all he could say was that their highest hopes had been more than realised. (Cheers.) They rejoiced beyond measure that their lodge stood upon a freehold dedicated to Masonry that day, and, above all things, that they could present a temple reared to an object so worthy as Masonry (loud cheers), never ceasing in its efforts to help the widow and the fatherless, and striving to carry out the grandest motto that could adorn a man—doing justice and loving mercy. (Cheers.)

The Rev. G. L. Church, P.P.G.C., after giving expression to his opinion that this had been one of the handsomest provincial meetings that had ever been held in Cornwall, proposed "The Visitors," remarking on the cordial welcome that ever awaited them, whether they visited Provincial Grand or private lodges. (Cheers.)

Bro. Tweedy, Prov. G. Treas., proposing "Our Masonic Charities," as evidence of their vitality and substantiality, as far as Cornwall was concerned, referred to the considerable fund that the G.M. was able to present on the occasion of his Stewardship, to the excellent beginning Bro. Hughan had made for his Stewardship, and to the satisfactory amount the province had accumulated for its own special charities. With reference to the last-mentioned, they went on increasing year by year to such an extent that before long he believed they would have to re-arrange the matter, and give votes to previous contributors without calling on them to make further contributions; for he feared if they went on as they were it might have a tendency to induce brethren to look forward to the fund as a certainty (no, no), and tend to make Masonry not quite the institution they wished, but assimilate it more and more to a benefit society. (Hear, hear.) At some future meeting, he might propose that the matter be referred to a committee for a report thereon. There was a chance of the fund being overdone, for the subscriptions at present exceeded the expenditure by £50 or £60, whilst the demand did not seem to increase in anything like the same proportion. (Hear, hear.) He only hoped that if their contributions were no longer needed for this fund, their sympathy and help would not cease, but be diverted into channels more in want of it. (Cheers.)

The Tyler's toast, "Our Poor and Distressed Brethren, wherever dispersed, however distressed, speedy relief to them," then brought the day's business to a conclusion, one that will long be remembered in the annals of the Druids. If ever proceedings illustrative of the Cornish motto, "One and All," received an illustration, it was on this instance; from the commencement to the close everything worked most harmoniously and in order, not a single hitch occurring to mar or delay the proceedings. The brethren of the Druids' had evidently resolved to make the meeting in every respect a success, and they are fully entitled to the hearty thanks and congratulations which, on behalf of Provincial Grand Lodge, the Prov. G.M. so cordially tendered them.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Votes of the Governors and Subscribers are earnestly solicited on behalf of META BELL BRASIER.

The following letter, which appeared in the Freemason of the 20th July, will fully explain the merits of the case.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."
 Dear Sir and Brother,—

I trust that you will give space for the following letter, in aid of a girl named "Meta Bell Brasier," whose case is so unique and exceptional that no words from me would be needed to draw attention to it, as any body thoroughly reading the details cannot fail to understand and appreciate; but as a rule, the circulars are only carelessly glanced at and then thrown into the fire or waste paper basket; I wish to attract the notice of your readers to a case whose claims only require to be known to receive the support of those whose votes are disengaged. Indeed, so great is the claim, that in my opinion, other claims which have one or more chances, might fairly lay in abeyance to secure her election. I know, or rather feel, that as a rule, you might reasonably decline a letter for any particular case, but I do believe that you could afford to insert this on behalf of a candidate whose position stands almost if not quite alone. I beg to state that I was, and am, unacquainted with any of the family, but when the case was pointed out to me by one who had known the father and family well and for many years, I at once saw the great need of every exertion, as there are only three vacancies at the ensuing election, so I temporarily gave up a case which could better afford to wait.

The case is as follows: The girl's father was initiated into Freemasonry in 1853, died in May, 1878, leaving six daughters unprovided for, the youngest of whom is the subject of my letter, and should she not succeed in the ensuing election, her age will preclude her from another attempt; now, the great claim consists in these facts, that our brother was a subscribing member for over twenty-five years, that he was a constant subscriber to, and took an active interest in all the Institutions, and, brethren, this is the only chance we have of showing in a small way our appreciation of one who so ably performed his work and assisted the Craft during his life, let it not be said that the Craft generally failed to render so small a tribute to one so worthy of our remembrance.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
CHARLES JOHN PERCEVAL,
 V.P. of all the Institutions.

ROYAL SAVOY LODGE (No. 1744).—An emergency meeting of this young lodge was held at Ashley's Hotel, Covent Garden, on Tuesday, Aug. 13th, Bro. Willing, W.M., in the chair. Also present Bros. Adams, P.G.P., as S.W.; Clemow, J.W.; Treadwell, I.P.M.; Stiles, Sec.; Jones, S.D.; Hyland, J.D.; Cook, I.G.; Holt, W. S.; Armstrong, Deller, Barham, Sillis, Smith, and many others. Visitors, Bros. Dunlop, Dawson, J. Jones Bowyer, Daniel, Stock, &c. The brethren assembled in good time and Bro. Maby was raised, Bros. Hixon, Philpot, J. W. Smith, Howcroft, Lloyd, and Nicol were passed, and Mr. James Smith initiated in a very impressive manner. In fact, the able way the officers performed their respective duties was most satisfactory, the lodge being so young. The brethren (about forty) adjourned to dinner, which gave every satisfaction, everything provided being of the best, and, English waiters having been substituted for the foreign ones, a most enjoyable evening was spent.

GIBRALTAR.—Inhabitants Lodge (No. 153).—It having been unanimously decided by this lodge to remove its quarters from Engineer Lane to the more commodious, better situated, and more airy buildings belonging to Bro. C. T. Armstrong, near Scud Hill, South, this was done, and the brethren met to consecrate the room on the 5th inst. Bro. James Contoy, W.M., was in the chair, supported by Bros. J. J. R. Morgan, P.M.; Beale, P.M. 325, I.C.; J. Cunningham, I.P.M.; R. Jackson, W.M. 325, I.C.; and W. J. Stanley, W.M. 278, F.C. The lodge was opened in ancient form, and raised to the requisite degree for the consecration. It was regretted that both the D.G.M. and D.D.G.M. were absent through unavoidable circumstances, as also, P.M. Bro. W. J. Henry through sickness, but P.M. Bro. Morgan came forward with his usual promptitude and love of the cause and performed this most impressive ceremony in a style worthy of its importance, giving a most interesting explanatory lecture thereon. At the conclusion the W.M. proposed and Bro. Cunningham, I.P.M., seconded a vote of thanks to Bro. Morgan, P.M., which was carried by acclamation. The lodge was, notwithstanding the great heat of the weather, numerously attended, there being a number of visitors among the number. Afterwards two candidates were admitted to the mysteries of the E.A. Degree by the W.M. with his well known ability, and six others, as joining members or candidates, were proposed, which augurs well for the lodge in its new rooms. Subsequent to the lodge being closed the brethren adjourned to the comfortable refreshment room attached to the lodge, where they were regaled with a repast in Bro. Davis, the Steward's, able style. The cloth being removed, the usual loyal toasts were drunk, then that of "The Visiting Brethren," responded to by Bro. Beale, and to the healths of Bros. C. T. Armstrong and Cunningham for their valuable assistance in preparing the rooms. The brethren separated about the small hours, having spent a pleasant and harmonious evening.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners Lodge (No. 241).—The usual monthly meeting of the members of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 13th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street. Bro. James Winsor, W.M., occupied the position of K.S., and he was supported by Bros. Councillor George Peet, I.P.M.; J. I. Knight, P.M.; R. Brown, P.M.; Chudley, P.M.; G. Broadbridge, P.M., D.C.; Robinson, P.M.; T. H. Sheen, S.W.; T. Salter, J.W.; Dr. McGeorge, P.M., Treas.; Williams, Sec.; J. Latta, S.D.; T. Whitehead, J.D.; and J. Pendleton, I.G. The ceremony of raising to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. was most ably performed by the W.M., and a very pleasant evening was afterwards spent by the members and visitors.

PRESTON—Concord Lodge (No. 343).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 15th of August, at seven o'clock, in the Assembly Room of the Bull Hotel. The following brethren were present: Bros. A. Beattie, W.M.; Hall, S.W.; Roe, J.W.; Fazackerley, Secretary; Elton, I.P.M.; R. Robinson, P.M.; Cockshott, P.M., and others. There were also present Bros. Elton, W.M. 113; Jones, W.M. 333; Cottam, P.M. 113; Capt. Whitehead, P.M. 113; Greaves, P.M. 113, and P.P.G.O. E.L., and others. The lodge was opened in due form; the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. James Croasdale, and he was duly initiated into Craft mysteries. The lodge having been opened in the Second Degree, Bro. W. J. Monk, a candidate for raising, was duly and regularly raised to the Sublime Degree. The lodge was then closed down to the First Degree, and, after "Hearty good wishes" from several visiting brethren, was closed in solemn harmony at 7.30 p.m. The brethren then adjourned to a cold collation, served up in good style, and after the usual loyal toasts, "The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., and the Princess and Family," which were heartily and loyally responded to amidst capital "firing." "The Newly-Initiated Brother" was duly toasted by the W.M., also "The Visitors," both of which were received with that enthusiasm so well-known in Masonic assemblies. "The Health of the W.M." was ably proposed by Bro. Capt. Whitehead, who responded briefly for the honour done him. The Tyler's toast brought a very enjoyable evening to a termination.

KESWICK.—Greta Lodge (No. 1073).—The ordinary monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday evening last, in the County Court Room, when there were present Bros. W. Lamonby, W.M.; R. P. Hunter, J.W.; W. Wilson, S.C.; W. Thornton, as S.D.; W. Hodgson, J.D.; J. Armstrong, I.G.; W. Gaspey, M.C.; C. Thompson, Tyler; J. Titterton, T. Usher, T. Mayson, Jos. Wales, and F. Jackson. The visitors were Bros. W. F. Lamonby, P.M. 1002 (Freemason); James Frederick Clark, Unias Pama, No. 17, Brazilian Constitution. After the minutes were read and confirmed, the W.M. exchanged places with Bro. W. F. Lamonby in the West, and Bro. Francis Jackson, having given proof of his proficiency, was duly raised to the degree of M.M. The lodge being reduced, Bro. J. Titterton was presented with his Grand Lodge certificate, and, after closing, the brethren separated in love and harmony at half-past nine.

SUDBURY.—Stour Valley Lodge (No. 1224).—The annual meeting and installation of the new W.M. of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall at the Literary Institute, on Friday, 16th inst. The Very Worshipful Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Deputy Provincial Grand Master for the Province of Suffolk, and Past Grand Chaplain of England, was duly installed as W.M. by Worshipful Bro. W. H. Lucia, Grand Sword Bearer of England, and Prov. Grand Sec. Suffolk, who performed the very interesting ceremony in a very efficient and impressive manner. This is the fourth time that Bro. Martyn has been appointed to the chair in the Stour Valley Lodge, and the reception given to him on this occasion must have been highly gratifying to our distinguished brother. The W.M. appointed his officers as follows:—R. E. Jones, S.W.; S. Spurgin, J.W.; E. R. Boulter, S.D.; G. Murrells, J.D.; H. Welham, P.M. Steward; W. H. Smith, D.C.; G. H. Inman, I.G.; J. F. Hills, P.P.G.J.W., Treasurer; F. Wheeler, Prov. G.R., Sec.; and H. M. Sholl, Tyler. The visitors present were Bros. Chennell, W.M. 88, Cambridge; S. H. Wright, 516, Stowmarket, P.P.G.J.W.; W. Chisnall, W.M., and F. Grimwade, S.W., 332, Hadleigh; Geo. Thompson, P.M. 1009; T. F. Lucia, W.M., 1008; Rev. E. J. Griffiths, W.M. 1592; W. Armstrong, I.P.M. 1592, and P.P.G.J.D.; Robt. Thompson, J.W., 1008, and P.P.G.S.B.; H. J. Barnard, 1008; and H. Tarrant, 1592. After the initiation of Evelyn Gray, Esq., of the Indian Civil Service, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Rose and Crown Hotel, where Mrs. Hansell had provided a most elegant banquet. There was a fair attendance, and under the genial chairmanship of the newly-elected W.M., and the generous hospitality of the brethren of the Stour Valley, a most happy and enjoyable evening was spent.

WALTHAM NEW TOWN.—King Harold Lodge (No. 1327).—The installation meeting of the above lodge was held at the Britannia Hotel, on Thursday, the 15th August. There were present, Bro. Joseph Tydemman, P.P.A.G.P. Essex, the W.M., in the chair, Bros. A. Malcolm, P.G.P. Herts, S.W., and W.M. elect; Thomas Reilly, I.P.M., P.P.G.P. Herts; Samuel Jacobs, J.W.; West, P.M., P.P.G.S.D. Herts, Treasurer; J. R. Young, P.M., P.P.A.G.D.C. Herts; Charles Lacey, P.M., P.P.G.J.D. Herts; William Gilbert, P.M., P.P.G.J.W. Herts; Joseph Gaskell, P.M.; Fred Drummond, P.M.; William Bradstock, Secretary; James Knight, S.D.; John Fisher, J.D.; Pritchett, P.P.G. Org. Herts, Organist; John Noyes, D.C.; John Robinson, I.G.; George Eversfield, W.S.; John Lumsden, W.S.; W. Steadman, Tyler; Bull, Lewis, Newman, Woolley, Cox, Creed, Blackmore, Holdsworth, Walker, Kent, Wiggs, Fuller, Calvert, Day, and Price. Visitors: Bros. Manning, W.M. 1172; Jones, J.D. 174; Searle, 1604; Ingersoll, 1237; Smith, 754; Maller, P.M. 754; Bassett, P.M. 212; Edwards, 1675; Clark, 754. The lodge was opened, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for two gentlemen, which proved unanimous in their favour, after which Bro. Day was passed to the Fellow Craft Degree, and Mr. John Woollard was duly initiated. Some other business was transacted, when the W.M. vacated the chair in favour of Bro. P.M. West, the Installing Officer, assisted by Bro. P.M. Lacey. The W.M. elect was presented for installation by Bro. P.M. Young, and after the usual preliminary ceremony, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Andrew Malcolm, the W.M. elect, was duly installed as W.M., the ceremony being most efficiently rendered by Bro. West, assisted by Bro. Lacey. The W.M., after receiving the usual salutes, appointed and invested his officers as follows: Bros. Tydemman, I.P.M.; Jacobs, S.W.; Knight, J.W.; P.M. West, Treas.; P.M. Reilly, Sec.; Fisher, S.D.; Noyes, J.D.; Robinson, D.C.; Eversfield, I.G.; Lumsden and Price, W. Stwds. A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Bros. West and Lacey the Installing officer. The W.M. presented a P.M. jewel, to the I.P.M., Bro. J. Tydemman, as a mark of esteem and respect, and in consideration of the able and zealous manner in which he performed the duties of W.M. during his Mastership. Bro. Tydemman returned thanks in suitable terms. The sum of five guineas was also voted to be presented to Bro. Tydemman to purchase a Life Subscription in one of the charities. Bro. Tydemman in returning thanks expressed the very great desire he had to further the interests of the charities, and volunteered to represent the King Harold Lodge at the next festival of the Girls' School, to which Institution he would pay the money voted. The business of the evening being concluded, the lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet. After the cloth was removed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and the I.P.M. gave the toast of the evening, which was a happy and prosperous year of office to the W.M., who responded in an eloquent speech. The visitors were then toasted and responded, after which the initiate, officers and Tyler's toasts brought a pleasant evening to a close. The evening was enlivened by some excellent harmony.

PAIGNTON.—Torbay Lodge (No. 1358).—A the annual meeting of this lodge Bro. James F. Chinnock was installed as W.M., and afterwards appointed and invested the following as his officers:—James Greenfield, P. P.G.J.D., I.P.M.; F. Palk, S.W.; Rev. N. Platt, P.P.G. Chap., J.W.; Rev. R. Bowden, P.M., Chap.; W. Rossiter, Treas.; W. W. Ellis, Sec.; A. W. Palk, S.D.; C. Perrett, J.D.; B. Fullwood, D.C.; T. Brooks, Org.; S. R. Higham, S.S.; J. Wreyford, J.S.; W. Sawyer, I.G.; and W. J. Tozer, Tyler.

Royal Arch.

METROPOLITAN CHAPTER (No. 1507).—The first meeting after the consecration was held Thursday, 15th inst. at the Metropolitan Club, King's Cross; Comps. Willing, M.E.Z.; Adams, P.Z., P.G.P.H. (owing to the absence of Comp. Stacy); Ferguson, J.; Stiles, E.; and others. The minutes of the consecration having been read and confirmed, a ballot was taken for Bros. Douglass, H. Stiles, Edmonds, Gilbert, jun, Claire and Beattie, which being declared unanimous, they were severally introduced and exalted in a most exemplary manner, as was proved by the attention paid by the candidates to the ceremony. Although this was the first meeting the working was very good, as might naturally be expected with the able tuition of the veteran P.Z., Comp. Thos. A. Adams, whose name is a household word in Freemasonry. A ballot was taken for the P.S., which was declared unanimous in favour of Comp. John Douglass (of the Standard Theatre). A telegram was read from Comp. N. Hudson, regretting his inability to attend. The companions adjourned to the banquet, which gave every satisfaction, the manager of the club, Bro. Cox, having exerted himself to his utmost to please the companions. We heartily congratulate the members of the Metropolitan Chapter on this their first meeting, and feel sure if the companions emulate the working of their officers the chapter will become in a short time as great a success as the Metropolitan Lodge. We were pleased to notice the worthy Comp. Stiles, Scribe, E., quite recovered after his recent severe illness.

CHATHAM.—Royal Kent Chapter of Antiquity (No. 20).—The companions assembled in convocation at the Sun Hotel, on Wednesday, 14th inst., for installing the Principals elected for the ensuing year. The ceremonies were performed by M.E. Comp. Rev. Robinson, M.A., P.G.H., assisted by M.E. Comps. Moore, P.Z., and J. Hunt, P.Z. The esteemed Comps. T. Wyles, was first, Humphrey Wood, second, and F. W. Edwards, third. The investment of officers then took place, and the selection gave every satisfaction to the companions. We are pleased to state that Comp. George Wattson was called to the front, and presented with a very handsome P.Z. jewel, studded with emeralds and rubies, by way of appreciation of his services rendered for several years. It must also be gratifying to those who have taken so much interest in Masonic charity that ten guineas donation has been sent to the Boys' School. The chapter being closed, the companions adjourned and partook of a splendid banquet, provided by Comp. Willis, which gave every satisfaction. Among the companions present were Comps. B. Thorpe, P.G. Treasurer; H. White, Dr. Butler, 1174; J. Redman, Burfield, Griffin, Spencelayh, Claringbull, Drawbridge, and many others of distinguished merit.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Chapter (No. 1051).—A regular meeting of the Rowley Chapter was held on Monday last, the 19th instant, at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Lancaster. The Principals' chairs were occupied by Ex. Comps. F. Dean, M.E.Z.; W. Hall, H.; H. Longman, J.; who were supported by the following officers and companions: Ex. Comps. J. Daniel Moore, M.D., P.G.S.B. of the Supreme Grand Chapter of England; E. Simpson, P.Z., P. Prov. G.S.B., Treas.; Comps. W. Duff, E.; James Ellershaw, N.; J. J. Crokell, P.S.; Richard Stanton, and H. Hartley, Assist. Soj.; G. Kelland, P.M.; A. K. Allanson, Janitor, and others. The chapter having been opened, the muster roll called, and other business transacted, Bro. Walter William Wilde, of the Morecambe Lodge, No. 1561, was unanimously elected as a candidate for exaltation in the lodge, and with Bro. George C. Barker, of the Rowley Lodge, No. 1051, were duly and regularly exalted to the Royal Arch Degree by Comp. Dr. Moore, he having been requested by the M.E.Z. to take the chair of First Principal for that purpose, the lectures having reference to the history, symbolism, and mysticism of the degree being delivered by the Principals. Two candidates were proposed for exaltation, and there being no other business before the chapter it was closed in due form.

Mark Masonry.

MARYPORT.—Whitwell Lodge (No. 151).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, the 15th inst., in the Masonic Hall, Eaglesfield-street, Maryport. There were present: Bros. J. H. Banks, W.M.; W. Armstrong, S.W.; P. Dodgson, J.W., as M.O.; T. Mandle, I.P.M.; Jos. Nicholson, P.M., Treas., as S.D.; Jas. Gardiner, P.M., as S.O.; G. W. Thompson, J.O.; J. Adair, Sec.; W. F. Lamonby, Chaplain (Freemason); H. Peacock, as J.D.; R. Brown, as I.G.; J. Smith, Org.; R. Harris, Tyler; Jos. Abbott, and others. After the minutes were read and confirmed, Bro. T. Milburn, Lodge of Perseverance, No. 371, who had been previously balloted for, was admitted, and duly advanced to the honourable degree. Bro. Peacock was then presented with his Grand Lodge certificate. Before the lodge was closed a discussion arose on the legality of members advanced in lodges worked under the Grand Chapter of Scotland, having to be re-advanced. It seems that hitherto a Scotch lodge has been worked in Maryport, and the custom has been with Whitwell Lodge to make re-advancement a sine qua non for admission as joining members. The bye-law as to joining members, however, has never been altered to meet this case, and Bro. Lamonby, who brought the question forward, held that, under the present reading of the bye-law, it was illegal not to admit Scotch Mark Master Masons under the same provisions as those of foreign jurisdiction, i.e., by paying extra fee for registration and certificate. He, however, had no sympathy with so hard and fast a line, even if the bye-laws were so framed as to meet the case in a legal manner, and, in order to test the legality of such a procedure, he gave notice of motion that the bye-law as to joining members be altered, so as to exclude the admission Scotch Mark Masons, unless re-advanced. If that alteration were agreed to next month, he should be much surprised if the Provincial and Grand Lodge authorities confirmed it, and he should further be delighted if a direct negative were moved by some other member. The Scotch Mark Lodge referred to, in Maryport, is, we believe, the last of the Constitution that has not come under the English regime, and, from all accounts, it is now in extremis.

The brethren who, on the evening in question, parted with Bro. Harris, the respected Tyler of Whitwell Lodge, as also Perseverance (Craft) Lodge, No. 371, in full health and vigour, little thought that, in the space of a few short hours, his mortal connection with his brethren would be severed in so awful a manner. On the morning of the day following lodge night (Friday week) Bro. Harris, whilst in pursuit of his avocation, fell off a railway truck and was literally cut in two, death, of course, being instantaneous. He leaves a widow and family of young children.

SURREY MASONIC CLUB.

A meeting was held in the large hall of the Surrey Masonic Club, Camberwell, on Saturday evening last, to hear an oration on "The Beauties and Claims of Freemasonry," delivered by Bro. William Darley, P.M. No. 158, and late Assessor to the Honourable Board of Trade.

The orator was accompanied by the Rev. Dr. Robert Morris, LL.D., of Kentucky, who had kindly undertook to address the meeting also, and Bro. Hyde Pullen, P.G. S.B. These brethren were conducted to the platform by the indefatigable Honorary Secretary of the Club, Bro. James Stevens, who introduced to the meeting Bro. Hyde Pullen. This brother, he said, had, with his accustomed urbanity, consented to act as chairman on the occasion.

Bro. Hyde Pullen thereupon assumed the chair, and introduced Bro. Darley to his audience.

The following is the substance of Bro. Darley's address: Ladies and gentlemen, and brethren: It affords me infinite pleasure on the present occasion to stand as a humble representative of one of the first institutions upon which the sun ever shone. Wherever the sun rises, wherever the sun sets, it sheds a beneficial influence upon society with which it has come in contact, so that millions in the past have felt the blessed effects of Freemasonry, so that in the present day there are millions who bless the day they were ever associated with it, and generations yet unborn will rejoice under its auspices for the blessings which it will confer upon posterity. I am not dismayed when the tide gets low, well knowing that there shall be a rise. In different times in the history of Freemasonry we find that it has had its abuse and violence, the fury of its enemies, the fire of persecution, the anathemas of the Papacy, and the infidelity of its false friends; but amidst the whole it stands like some bold rock uninfluenced by the storms which play around its head, and unimpaired by age. Freemasonry, what is it in its present acceptation? In its modern acceptation it is recognised as a peculiar system of morality veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbols. Some look upon it as a multifarious association of all grand speculations; but when we look back into the vistas of the past and see what it has done, and contemplate the effects it has a tendency to produce on society, we are ready to believe that it had its rise in the heart of the Great Architect of the Universe before the morning stars sang together or ever the sons of God shouted for joy. For its great objects are the extension of philanthropy brotherly love, relief, and truth are its basis and its noble principle. We have no hesitation in saying that while we are all loyal and patriotic, and stand up for our Queen and our country as Englishmen, I have no hesitation in saying that of all loyal subjects Freemasons stand first; they not only boast of that position, but are recognised by those who hold the highest positions in society, from royalty downwards. There is truth in that assertion—

Kings, dukes, and lords
Have laid by their swords,
Our mysteries to put a new grace on,
And have ne'er been ashamed
To hear themselves named
With a free and an accepted Mason.

And now let us consider the circumstances of the Order, not only in this country but throughout the world. We look back into past years and we find that there are men who have stood prominent in our society, and in the extension of the arts. We have in architecture the name of Sir Christopher Wren, and we have as far as literature is concerned, or poetry, one of the brightest in the person of William Shakespeare. In addition to these we have men who have been instrumental, not only in extending the science of Masonry itself, but who have also been eminent in all the arts and sciences. We look into the papers of the present day, and read of the doings of men who assemble under the auspices of what is called social science. Now we know of no better social science than that of Freemasonry; it awakens our sympathies for one another, and is therefore one of the best of sciences, not only conducing to their welfare, but, acting on the heart, it leads them to feel that they are brethren, leads them not to look at the poor man's coat or the rich man's mantle, but to look into the countenance of a man and, assured that he has the approbation of his lodge, and that he stands well in the estimation of his brethren. That is the social principle that should influence every heart, and it is that must dawn upon the world before the millennium shall arise.

The speaker next referred to some who had erred in Freemasonry, but contended that the system should not therefore be condemned; it was the principle, not the men—the measures, not the representatives, that they were dealing with. "You might as well," he added, "because a doctor makes a mistake condemn the science of medicine."

After making some remarks on the working tools, the orator said it was gratifying to know that Masonry had been instrumental in supporting civil and religious liberty. "While," said he "the Papacy would have kept us down and sent us to the lower regions, it is gratifying to know that there has been one within those realms who had given the people freedom of conscience—Garibaldi, who had worked for the freedom of mankind and the glory of God.

As regards the influence of Freemasonry, the speaker said that there were so many incidents that had come under his personal notice, and under the notice no doubt of those present, that it was hardly necessary for him to recite any in order to satisfy the minds of any of those before him as to the principles of Freemasonry. He, however, narrated a few of his experiences, of which the following is a sample:—

A brother from America was in a vessel that had been in a six weeks' calm; during that time no wind, a heavy rolling sea, short of provisions, and did not know what to do. He sent the mate aloft to look out for the first sail. In the course of time he discovered a vessel in the horizon and made for her. "What ship's that? Where for?" "From America, for Liverpool, short of provisions." "We have a great number of passengers, and no spare stores," and the ship held on her course. Up went our flag, and before it reached the mast-head, the other vessel wore round and came within speaking distance. "Send boat alongside." "What are you most in need of?" "Everything, we have had a six weeks' calm." Thereupon they produced provisions to fill the boat, so much that there was scarcely room for them to row; so much that they were obliged to ask them to stop throwing in any more. The mate went on deck, "Please make out my bill, because my master is very particular." "Not a word, my man." So we help one another; I have done it myself—I have taken the clothes off my back and given them. I was told "There is a brother afflicted." "I will go to see him." I went before I returned home. The door was opened by a female. "Is so-and-so at home?" naming him. "He is just gone." "Just gone out?" "No, just dead." "Indeed," I said, "just dead." "You cannot come in." "I must come in." I went in. Six little children were there. I said to the eldest "Tell me your circumstances." The little fellow did not like to expose their poverty, but the place was bare of everything, and I pressed him, and he then told me that with the long illness of his mother and father everything had gone and they had nothing but what they stood upright in. "Tom, you go down to such-and-such an outfitter's, tell them to rig you out, and get shoes for your sisters, and I'll see if I can't get hold of some ladies to rig the girls out too." The ladies took the case in hand, and brethren took the case in hand, and every one of the children were provided for. Such is Masonry.

The speaker proceeded to urge the high and serious character of Freemasonry; that its fundamental principles were religious, moral, and benevolent, and that it was unfitting that the lodges of such a society should be conducted in the places where they are mostly held at present, instead of such halls as that in which he stood, which did honour to all connected with it. He congratulated the audience on having such a magnificent building to raise the moral prestige of Freemasonry, and to maintain the dignity and high character of the Order. Although there were defects among them they had their ornaments also, namely, the Charitable Institutions. He was proud of the charity and benevolence of the brethren, as exhibited in their endeavours to extend the influence of those institutions, but he deplored, what he asserted as a fact, that £100,000 a year was expended by the brethren in refreshment, and he suggested that they should limit the quantity that they were in the habit of drinking, by which means there would be at least £10,000 a year more to contribute to the happiness of the widows and the orphans. The speaker brought his oration to a close with a reference to the eminent brother, Dr. Morris, who was about to address them. As regarded the future of the Surrey Masonic Club he anticipated a rise in the tide, and trusted that the day would soon arrive when all the lodges in the neighbourhood would be gathered within its walls.

[The foregoing is a fair abstract. A verbatim report was impossible, the speaker's words being rendered indistinct by the reverberation of his powerful voice through the large unoccupied space of the hall.—Ed.]

Bro. Hyde Pullen: In introducing Bro. Dr. Robt. Morris to you I may tell you that years and years, many, many years ago, there was a kind friend of Bro. Morris who came to me and sought me out simply as a Mason; he came to me and introduced himself as being known to Bro. Dr. Morris, and simply as a brother come from a good and worthy brother in America. I, of course, received him in all kindly feeling. I exerted myself in every way for this young Freemason. I was then only a young Mason, but I had acquired sufficient of the Masonic quality to receive him in all brotherly kindness. That was the case in that distant time, and it was upon that occasion that I heard of Bro. Dr. Morris, that I listened to the panegyrics of Bro. Dr. Morris, that I listened to the praises of this good brother (who I regret has now passed away) of Bro. Dr. Morris. I can yet assure you that the fraternal feeling between Bro. Dr. Morris and myself has been existing all these years interwoven in our hearts, and on meeting again it was not merely shaking the hand, it was wringing the heart. Brethren, this is the brother I have now to introduce to you. Need I say more?

Bro. Dr. Robt. Morris: Mr. Chairman, ladies, and brethren, I have listened with very great pleasure to the discourse which we have heard from the orator. I have just had a very great pleasure, and I am confident that we shall all read the report of his oration with as great pleasure as we have listened to him. When my good Bro. Stevens invited me to join you this evening I consented, and not only consented, but was delighted at the opportunity of coming. I had heard something of this Surrey Hall, I had heard of the struggles that were necessary to get such an enterprise on foot. How much effort and energy it must have taken to get it to its present extent! I can only wonder that the directors have succeeded in bringing it to this point. I do not wonder at the difficulties; I only wonder that you have succeeded so far. In my long and diversified experience as a Mason I have seen such enterprises tried scores of times only to fail; I have too scores of times seen them a great success. I am going to predict that those who stand here five years hence will see this the centre of Masonry for five miles round. It is for the interest of the brethren now to take hold of this enterprise, to strengthen the hands of those who have done the hard work and make this a great success. That was not, however, what I came to say to-night, I came to say this. The brother gave us some very interesting incidents of his own experience.

The man who stands before you with faded eyes and wrinkled face began more than thirty years ago, and has been going from one Grand Lodge to another, and from one country to another. I was the first man to organise the first lodge in the city of Jerusalem, my flag has fluttered in almost every breeze that moves the atmosphere of the world. I am not speaking in the way of boasting, but after so much experience I mean to say that Freemasonry is the same in every country under the heavens of God. I stood in the city of Jerusalem with one brother, a Mahomedan, one Jewish brother, one an Armenian, Arabs, Franks, Italians, English, and Americans. In that company seven languages were spoken vernacularly; probably twice that number could have been spoken. We exchanged sentiments, and I assure you that our notions were the same. Some of these Masons had been made Masons in Egypt; I was made three thousand miles more west; some in Scotland, some in France, some in Italy, and yet their aims and purposes were precisely the same. Well, I acknowledge of that day's experience I never saw anything like it before. It is easy enough to say here in England—you may take in Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, and France almost the same; but when I take you into Egypt, Syria, Asia Minor, India, China, Japan, and so round the globe, it is remarkable to find Masonry the same everywhere.

And what is the great secret of Freemasonry? How often I have been asked that question, especially by the ladies! It is not a difficult question to answer. The great secret does not consist of its forms and ceremonies; it lies in the breast of man, and is defined by the word charity. And you English Masons (and I say it to your praise) have systematised charity better than elsewhere in the whole world. We have built Masonic halls, published newspapers, but nowhere in the world is the holy law of charity so practical as here. It does seem to me that you London people are moved by the very Spirit of God in the way of charity. I saw an hospital devoted to diseases of the eye. I said, How is it supported? By charity. There are hospitals for the lungs; for all diseases to which human nature is subject, all supported by charity, holy, noble, divine charity. Is it not extraordinary? There is nothing in the world to compare with it.

I went to a charity concert to hear a lady sing, an old friend of mine, you have all heard her name (Madame Hersee), and listening to the singing this idea occurred to me how charity moved so many hearts, and as I sat I scribbled some verses on my programme. They are not worthy of being called a poem, but, with the permission of our venerable and excellent Chairman, to whom I propose to dedicate them, I will ask leave to read them. They are called "The Beautiful Masonic Arch." You know the keystone is th at topmost stone of an arch which, fitted in, keeps the whole structure firm. Well, charity occupies that place in the Masonic system, and charity is the theme of the verses I composed, and which I affectionately dedicate to Bro. Hyde Pullen.

The success of this enterprise will be the establishment of a great charity system in this part of the city. Permit me then to give an incident in my own experience in relation to Masonic charity. Of course, one who travels so much as I do is not much at home. A couple of years ago an old man lay dying who belonged to my lodge, the Master and Wardens and some of the brethren standing round the bed. He asked, in a whisper, "Do you know if Robert Morris is at home? Do you think he would come to preside at my burial to-morrow? Tell him I want him to come and bury me." I must tell you that in our part we make a great deal more of Masonic burials than you do here. In country places brethren will come from far and near to attend the last funeral rites of a brother. So when he was dead they asked that I would go the next day and preside. I said "With great pleasure," and in one sense it was a pleasure. I went, and a great many of our people were present. We went to the house to take the dead body to the grave, and we were surprised to find that all the house contained was scarcely sufficient to make any display of the poorest kind. We went back to the lodge room and arranged to have a lecture for the benefit of the widow. Within a week from when we met we had a lecture. It was a stormy night, and ladies came some of them 20 miles to attend that lecture, but not to hear the lecture so much, but to give something to the widow. The amount was not extraordinary that we raised for her, but in that country, where our expenses are small, it was enough to support her for, perhaps, a whole year. Thus it is always; the very life and soul of Freemasonry all the world through is charity. I recollect that in a lodge in Smyrna, where there was one Englishman, one Greek, one Turk, one Armenian. I learned the next day that it is the custom when the lodge is closed for the night for the Treasurer to hand over all the money to the Committee of Charity, and they are expected to distribute it before the next lodge night, so that when the lodge meets again they are ready to take what may be collected to be given to the poor.

The presence of some ladies to-night suggests to me a thought which to you may be new. We pay a great deal of attention to the ladies, so do you here, so do good Masons everywhere; but in America we confer degrees upon the ladies; Freemasons' wives, daughters, and sisters are entitled to receive at our hands private and most interesting instruction, which is as it should be, for Masonry is intended for the benefit of the ladies. Now these ladies' degrees are a great advantage. When I get to New York you might suppose I would be at home, but I have a thousand miles further to go to reach Chicago, where my daughter lives, and then 500 miles further to go before I get home to my wife. Now and then our ladies travel a great deal, and they often go alone. It is nothing uncommon for a lady to get into a car to go a thousand miles. Our cars, you know, are open right through, and the passengers are all together, so it is impossible for a lady to be insulted there. It happens frequently that some distress occurs, and in such cases a Master Mason's wife or sister makes herself known to the Freemasons, and in that manner gets the benefit of their assistance. And when I tell these ladies that there are 100,000 ladies who have had degrees conferred upon them—it is a fact. They have signs and passwords, and are able to make themselves known to Freemasons. I am not going to tell you what they are; I have no notion of such a thing. It is not the Masonic part of Freemasonry that the ladies receive, but it is a species of adoption; it makes them the sisters of Freemasonry, and they are able to get the benefits.

Having concluded his address, Bro. Dr. Morris recited a poem which he had written twenty or twenty-five years ago, and which, as he said, Bro. Stevens had made popular in this country. The piece is entitled "The Level and the Square," and is doubtless known to most of our readers.

Bro. Hyde Pullen: I can scarcely be required to ask you to give a cordial vote of thanks to our good Bro. Darley. (Applause.) I am sure that the sentiments which he has called forth will be repeated again and again to good Bro. Morris, and in asking your vote of thanks I do not know which I should put foremost, so I will ask that those who heard both brethren will hold up both hands and give a vote for both brethren. Bro. Pullen regretted that this Surrey Masonic Hall was not supported in so spirited a manner as it deserved to be supported; there could be no more appropriate place than this for the Masonic gatherings of the district. He trusted that brethren would come forward and support the Surrey Masonic Club, and to set them an example, which he hoped would be numerous followed, he requested Bro. Stevens, the Secretary, to enrol his name on the list of subscribers.

In responding to the vote of thanks, Bro. Darley also gave in his name as a member of the club.

Bro. Dr. Morris having expressed his acknowledgments, Bro. Stevens proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman for the able manner in which he had presided, which having been seconded, was carried by acclamation.

Some time ago the Prince of Wales resolve to make the experiment of introducing grouse on a moor at Sandringham, and instructed the head keeper at Aberfeldie to collect a number of young birds for that purpose. In compliance with this order Mr. Duncan, the keeper, reared a number of birds from the egg and caught others in the brood. Four large hampers of these birds were despatched from Dredde for Sandringham in charge of the keeper.

Obituary.

BRO. SAMUEL JAMES HARVEY.

We record with deep regret the death of our Bro. Samuel James Harvey, late of Camberwell Road, which sad event took place on Monday, the 5th inst.

Although by no means an old Mason, our late brother's services to the Craft were neither few nor small. Initiated about seven years ago in the Royal Jubilee Lodge, he speedily gave token of that zeal and assiduity in the service of Freemasonry which was the distinguishing characteristic of his Masonic life. A diligent student of the Ritual, and a constant attendant at the two lodges of instruction held at the Surrey Masonic Hall, he soon became known and recognised as an authority second only to the well known and deservedly popular Preceptor of those lodges. He became a joining member of the Peckham Lodge, and from the high estimation in which he was held he soon afterwards received promotion to office therein. In his mother lodge, the Royal Jubilee, he likewise accepted office, and at the time of his death held the position of Junior Warden. He was a founder and first Master of the Skelmersdale Lodge (1658), which was established in the spring of last year; and, greatly owing to his zeal and devotion in the furtherance of its interests, the young lodge soon attained to a high degree of efficiency, and gave tokens of vigorous and healthful life.

In Royal Arch Masonry our late brother held office in the Royal Jubilee Chapter, he having been elected to the position of P.S. on the night of his exaltation.

After a long and painful illness, endured with exemplary fortitude and resignation, our brother entered into his rest with the peace and calmness which a blameless life secures. His body was interred in Forest Hill Cemetery on Friday, the 9th inst. and very many of those whose brother he had been attended there to pay the last sad tribute of respect to departed merit.

ALPINE SELFISHNESS.

As many of our brethren are travelling in Switzerland we think it well to publish this useful letter from the Times of August 19th:—

Sir,—I am writing to you at this most glorious spot at 5 a.m. I have had no rest, after two or three days of hard mountain work, since before 4. It has been due to the abominable and unnecessary noise made by two persons in the adjoining room and one overhead in a wooden house, with thin wooden floors and thinner wooden partitions, and no carpet. There are at least 100 beds made up every night. My first inclination was to leave my room to expostulate myself, but on reflection I thought that might lead to still more noise, and that if you would kindly assist me to blow off a little of my superfluous indignation in your columns it might do much more good, not only to myself, but to others as well. In this hotel, as in many others at this time of year, the occupants are about seven-tenths British; but my remarks equally apply to the rest, whether speaking our own tongue or not. To enjoy the Alps, of course, it is inevitable to begin the day any time after midnight, according to the expeditions to be taken, and, as a very old Alpine man, I should be the last to discourage them. But, sir, would you impress upon travellers that it would be much more considerate, before beginning their walks, if, on being awakened in the small hours of the morning, they would not holla to their companion, whether wife or friend, to get up; would not roll out of bed on to their heels like an avalanche; would not put on their clump boots in a few minutes and begin their climbing at once; would not go on talking as loud as if they wanted to produce an echo; would not go out to their neighbours' rooms hammering to see if they are getting up, banging the doors after them; and, finally, would not all go down the whole of the bare stairs with as little regard to noise as if they were on a moraine or a railway platform? I think if they would forego doing any of these things and consider they are in the same house, and that a sort of papiermaché one, with dozens of other people, delicate, elderly, and otherwise, they would enjoy their travels quite as much, while not laying themselves out to the charge of unpardonable selfishness.

While suggesting this for the consideration of my own countrymen, I only wish travellers of other countries would do everything but inwardly digest it as well. About 4 a.m. lately, at another wooden house, one or two Germans in the next bedroom added to the other things the nuisance of a song.

Your obedient servant, R. W. J.

Mürten, Switzerland, Aug. 15th.

P.S.—This letter is probably too long for insertion already, but, if it is not, may I add that, though I write it in regard to papiermaché houses in Switzerland, somewhat of the same remarks apply to English and other hotel life? Whether in regard to pitching out of shoes, or banging of doors on going to bed after 10 p.m. or getting up before 8 a.m., or in other inconsiderate ways, a great social and selfish evil exists; and this ought not to be where citizens of the same world are thrown, of necessity or pleasure, into the same place of public resort for a night or longer.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS can be confidently recommended as a domestic remedy for the ailments of all classes and conditions of people. Young and old of both sexes may take this medicine with the certainty of deriving benefit from its use, when disorder or disease is making them miserable. Holloway's Pills are unrivalled for their purifying, aperient, and strengthening properties. They remove indigestion, palpitation, and headache, and are especially serviceable in complaints peculiar to females. Each box is wrapped with printed instructions for the guidance of invalids who will readily understand, from carefully studying them, the best way of recovering health. Masonic and General Tidings.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgcombe (Lord Lieutenant), G.M. of Cornwall, has decided to hold the Provincial Grand Lodge for 1879 under the wing of the St. Matthew's Lodge, Lostwithiel, when the new Masonic Hall for that lodge will be dedicated.

Faithfull Lodge, No. 229, Mark Master Masons, was consecrated last (Friday) evening, at Coker-mouth, by Bro. Colonel Whitwell, M.P., R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Past Grand Warden of England. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

The R.W. Bro. J. H. Neilson (P.M. 620 Dublin), Representative of the Grand Orient of Egypt, P.S.G.W., &c., was elected an honorary member of the ancient Lodge of "Love and Honour," No. 75, Falmouth, on the 12th inst., on the proposition of the W. Bro. W. F. Newman, J.P., P.M., P. Prov. G.D., seconded by Bro. R. Carter, P. Prov. G. Organist. The only other honorary members are the R.W. Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.M. 131, P.S.G.D. England, P.S.G.W. Egypt, elected in 1867, and the Right Hon. and R.W. Bro. the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, G.M. of Cornwall, elected in 1877.

The Coffee Public-House Association, 40, Charing Cross, announce that they are enabled by one of their members to offer a prize of £200 for an essay on the providing, on an adequate scale, of halls or other places of resort and recreation for the working classes, the arrangements to include the sale of refreshments, but not of intoxicating drinks, so as to supply the requirements of the people in that respect, and to realise a profit to meet at least current expenses. The object of the donor of the prize is, not only to draw general attention to this subject, but also to elicit suggestions as to the agency by which an undertaking of such magnitude may be most suitably and effectively carried out. The date fixed for sending in manuscripts is March 1st, 1879.

Mr. John Rankin, a young gentleman of Kilmarnock, has just completed a journey to London and back on a bicycle. He left Kilmarnock on the 23rd of July, and reached the metropolis on the 1st of August, after having made a stay of two days at Sheffield, part of a day at Birmingham, and part of a day at Coventry. The distance of 439 miles was thus run in about six days, making allowance for stoppages. Mr. Rankin left London for home on the 5th of August, taking the east coast route, and reached Glasgow on Saturday evening, thence going to Kilmarnock that night by train. The longest run in one day was from Morpeth to Edinburgh, the distance travelled being 112 miles.

A new Provincial Magazine, entitled "Bicycling," has been published at Newcastle-on-Tyne. It bears the appropriate Shakespearean motto, "Then may I set the world on wheels," is edited by two amateur bicyclists, and contains a variety of bicycling information.

A Statue of Lamartine has been inaugurated with considerable festivities at Mâcon, his native town.

The "Vega," the Swedish ship which has just started on an Arctic expedition, is a vessel of 500 tons. The engines are constructed on the so-called Wolff's system, of 60-horse power, and consume ten cubic feet of coal in the hour. As there are some 12,000 cubic feet of coal in the hold, the vessel will be able to steam some 5000 to 6000 miles at a stretch; but from Tromsø to Behring's Straits the distance is at most 4000 miles, and at the station of Yenisei a fresh supply will be shipped, thus in any case securing a sufficiency of fuel. The crew have christened the vessel "The Floating Tower of Babel," as no fewer than nine different languages are spoken on board. The crew counts a compliment of thirty-seven men all told, with provisions for two years, including about 7000lbs. salt beef, 4000lbs. salted pork, 3000lbs. smoked ham, 3000 preserved rumpsteaks, 9500 portions of other preserved meats, and immense quantities of onions, potatoes, greens, coffee, tea, and, naturally, of spirits. Three days a week fresh (preserved) meat is to be served out; and to preserve the crew against scurvy, there is a large supply of lemon juice, pickles, and horseradish.

Ninety-two inspectors and sergeants of police, who have been studying as pupils in the classes of the Ambulance Department of the Order of St. John, under Surgeon Major Shepherd, received on Monday afternoon, at Scotland-yard, their certificates of proficiency in the first treatment of the injured. Captain Harris presided.

THE URBAN CLUB.—On Friday the 16th inst., Mr. Robert Stothard, son of the famous Royal Academician, presented the society with an oil painting, his own work, "Going to a Tournament," a knightly scene in ancient Smithfield, including views of the old Hosier-lane, and of the gardens of the Bishop of Ely. The painter of this work of art, now in his 82nd year, was warmly thanked by the club through Bro. Charles Horsley, the chairman on the occasion. During the evening a series of glees were given by Messrs. John Hodges, Moss, Kenningham, and De Lacy, of St. Paul's Cathedral. The club room was crowded.

The Royal Handbell Ringers were honoured, by command of the Prince of Wales, to give a campanological and musical entertainment on board the Osborne, off Cowes, on Monday evening. The company included the King and Queen of Denmark and Princess Thyra. By means of awnings the quarter-deck was converted into a concert-room. The programme consisted of selections from various composers, classical and otherwise. Afterwards the Prince sent for Bro. Duncan S. Miller, the conductor, and requested him to explain to the King and Queen of Denmark the peculiarities of the bells and the art of ringing them.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday evening at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. M. Clabon, P.G.D., President of the lodge, presided. Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., Senior Vice-President, and Bro. James Brett, P.G.P., Junior Vice-President, occupied their respective chairs. There were also present Bros. John Hervey, G.S.; H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary; A. A. Pendlebury; W. T. Howe, G.P.; S. G. Foxall, P.G.P.; H. T. Garrod, P.M. 749; W. Mann, P.M. 186; S. Rawson, P.D.G.M. China; C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.P.; C. P. Cobham, 957; Erasmus Wilson, S.G.D.; Thos. Cubitt, P.G.P.; Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; John Boyd, P.G.P.; Capt. N. G. Philips, P.G.D.; Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, S.G.D.; J. M. Case, P.G.D.; Griffiths Smith, P.G.S.; C. Atkins, P.M. 27; R. W. Williams, P.G.S.B. Middx.; W. Dawson, W.M. 186; E. H. Hewett, P.M. 235; W. Weston, P.M. 1536; F. Drummond, P.M. 217; Andrew Malcolm, W.M. 1327; Geo. Corner, P.M. 1139; F. B. Williams, W.M. 1538; F. W. Levander, P.M. 1415; G. P. Bitten, W.M. 183; J. H. Rowe, W.M. 167; T. Deane, W.M. 77; W. S. Killen, W.M. 483; A. Middlemas, W.M. 1641; Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, P.M. 697; A. W. Woodley, W.M. 700; F. Adlard, P.M. 7; L. Cornelissen, W.M. 1441; J. H. Watts, P.M. 1201; A. White, W.M. 1076; T. W. Allen, P.M. 733; W. R. Phillips, W.M. 975; E. Terry, W.M. 1319; G. P. Whitham, W.M. 22; G. Bolton, W.M. 147; L. B. Pullin, W.M. 180; J. Nicholson, W.M. 59; S. Rosenthal, P.M. 435; Hugh Cotter, W.M. 654; W. H. Cohen, W.M. 1298; R. Wyatt, P.M. 1365; E. Kidman, W.M. 1586; H. Potter, P.M. 11; S. B. Phillips, P.M. 173; E. M. Haigh, P.M. 1541; J. H. Thompson, W.M. 1707; J. Douglas Mathews, W.M. 657; J. Tydeman, P.M. 1437; W. Allan, W.M. 1158; Dr. F. W. Ramsay, W.M. 1691; E. L. Stidolph, W.M. 1540; James Cowan, W.M. 1572; G. Fisher, W.M. 1332; Henry Rogers, W.M. 898; John Coe, W.M. 1339; E. C. Massey, W.M. 1297; C. B. Payne, G. Tyler; and H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason).

The agenda paper for the next meeting of Grand Lodge was first settled, after which the brethren confirmed grants to the amount of £290, made at last Lodge of Benevolence.

Of the new cases there were fourteen on the list, out of which two were dismissed. The remaining twelve were relieved with £203, consisting of one £40 (£40); two £25 (£50); two £20 (£40); two £15 (£30); four £10 (£40); and one £3 (£3).
Lodge was then closed.

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

On Thursday, 15th inst., a meeting, convened by a notice signed by Bros. A. F. A. Woodford and A. Tisley, was held at Freemasons' Tavern, to discuss a proposal for forming a Metropolitan Masonic Charity for furthering the claims of London candidates for the Masonic Charities. Bro. Col. Creton presided, and there were among those present Bros. Woodford, Tisley, J. White, S. Rosenthal, E. Letchworth, J. H. Watt, J. G. Marsh, Erasmus Wilson, Dr. Hogg, Hyde Pullen, J. H. Southwood, A. E. Shadwell, Thos. Massa, and E. C. Massey (Freemason).

Letters were read from many brethren who were unable to attend, but concurred in the object of the meeting.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, in response to a call from the chair, explained the object of the proposed association. He said that in consequence of similar societies being formed in the provinces, some of the provinces had obtained a very large voting power, which had now become so great as to contrast unfavourably with the voting power of the London district, where brethren had hitherto practised the system of unorganised voting. The effect of this unorganised voting was frequently that a great many more votes were recorded for a candidate than would have secured the election, and, perhaps, the next London candidate failed in consequence, whereas, if organisation had existed, and the votes had been properly apportioned between the candidates, both might have been successful. He disclaimed any intention of blaming the provinces for their action and their meritorious exertions—he recognised and admired their organisation, and admitted that he was one of the organizers of the Charity Committee in the province of West Yorkshire. At the next election for the Girls' School there were eight London cases and twenty-one provincial cases, and nine were to be elected. One provincial case was certain of success. If they had proper organisation they could carry two London cases. But West Yorkshire alone had three candidates and the other provinces had twenty, and without proper organisation in the metropolis the London candidates would not secure their legitimate position. A committee would be able to tell the exact number of votes that would render an election certain, and would apply surplus votes to another deserving case, whereas, as London voting was at present carried on, there was altogether a waste of voting power to secure the empty honour of heading the poll. It was not too much to say that in the hands of a competent committee the whole of the deserving London cases could be secured. All he wanted was to meet the provincial organisation with a similar friendly organisation in London. By means of such an association the election of all deserving London candidates might be a certainty, whereas now it was very doubtful, and would soon be an impossibility.

Bro. A. E. Gladwell read some statistics, showing in the Girls' School, from the report, March, 1878, that London had subscribed £5577, and the provinces £4891; while the number of girls in the Institution was—London girls 72, provincial girls 116; whereas the equitable proportion would be London 102 and provinces 86.

From the Boys' School report, 1878, London contributed £7487, and the provinces £5313; but the number of boys from London was 49, and provinces 109; but the equitable proportion would be London 75 and provinces 83.

To the Benevolent Institution London had contributed £6012, and the provinces £5028. The London candidates elected were 69 and provinces 169; but the equitable proportion would be London 129 and provinces 109.

Bro. Gladwell read also an abstract from the reports of the Girls' School for five years, from 1873 (close of 1872). In the Girls' School 46 London girls, and 76 provincial. In 1873 London contributed £5700, and the provinces £4000; when the provincial candidates elected were 17, and London candidates 12.

In 1874 London contributed £3951, and the provinces £3883; when London elected 13, and the provinces 18.

In 1875 London contributed £5076, and the provinces £3748; when London elected 8 girls and the provinces 19.

In 1876 London contributed £6218, and the provinces £3942; when London elected 9 girls and the provinces 19.

In 1877 London contributed £5577, and the provinces £4891; when London elected 15 girls and the provinces 20.

Bro. Woodford, in reply to a question by Bro. Erasmus Wilson, said he believed that if at the present moment every province had not its Charity Committee the exceptions were very few. All the provinces as a rule had a Charity Committee, and these acted in connection with other provinces, and the consequence was that when they came up to London, two provinces like West Yorkshire and West Lancashire acting together, they could secure the election of their candidates. London, therefore, must do something to assist its candidates. A Provincial Charity Committee is composed of a member from each lodge in the province; that would not be possible in London on account of there being so great a number of London lodges, but they would be able to provide that London Masons could be fully represented.

Bro. Dr. Hogg thought the object too narrow, and suggested that the operations of the Society should not be confined to London cases, but should extend to all the most deserving cases on the list.

After some further conversation, Bro. Erasmus Wilson called attention to the fact that there was no motion before the meeting.

It was then moved by Bro. Perceval, and seconded by Bro. Falkner, "That it is expedient to form a London Masonic Charity Union," which was put by the Chairman, and carried unanimously.

Bro. A. F. A. Woodford next read a set of bye-laws which had been drawn up for consideration, and Bro. Wilson moved that in order to give the brethren an opportunity of fully considering these bye-laws before proceeding to discuss and settle them the meeting should be adjourned till Wednesday, the 21st inst., at 5 o'clock, at the same place, which, having been seconded, was put and carried unanimously.

The meeting was brought to a conclusion by a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

The second meeting of this Association was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Tavern. Col. Creton presided. Bros. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford and A. Tisley (Prov. Secretaries), Hyde Pullen, E. C. Massey, G. Bolton, George Faulkner, C. J. Perceval, J. G. Marsh, J. H. Southwood, Thomas Massa, Charles Lacey, John White, S. Rosenthal, John Newton, Dr. F. W. Ramsay, and H. Massey (Freemason), also attended.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, in opening the business of the day, said that at the last meeting it was suggested that the rules of the Association should be considered at the present meeting, and it was also suggested that they should be carefully looked over, in order that, as certain salient points which came out of the discussion were not agreed in by all the brethren, means could be devised to reconcile the views of all. Since that meeting he had seen Bro. Erasmus Wilson, who had taken great pains with the rules, and had suggested certain alterations which seemed admirable. Bro. Letchworth also had suggested one alteration which he (Bro. Woodford) thought all the brethren would agree would simplify the rules, and make clear what the object of the Association was. There was one alteration suggested by Bro. Erasmus Wilson in which all the brethren would agree. Although "What's in a name?" was a very proper question, Bro. Erasmus Wilson thought the name of "Union" had a sound which might grate on the ears of the brethren of the metropolis; and he proposed that instead of the word "Union" being employed in this Society the word "Association" should be used. Bro. Erasmus Wilson thought that some people might imagine it was a Masonic Trades Union, and that some objection would be raised on that ground. He (Bro. Woodford), therefore, would now put it to the brethren that the name of the Association should be "The London Masonic Charity Association."

The proposition was agreed to.

Bro. Woodford then read the rules of the Association.

A discussion then took place on the bye-laws seriatim, and which resulted in their being unanimously adopted, with a few alterations.

Bro. Southwood said that before passing from the rules proper he wished to mention one subject. It was in allusion to the obligation of members of the Association pledging themselves to send their voting paper, to the Association. He had talked the matter over with Bro. Woodford, and he quite saw with that brother the difficulty to be encountered—that while they could impose no penalty on a brother or member of the Association who violated his honourable obligation, he thought it would be just as well to affirm in the rules something to the following effect: "That every member of this Association, by virtue of his membership, pledges himself to place at the disposal of the Committee all his votes for the Metropolitan Masonic Charities." It was a rule that every member could either assent to or dissent from before he became a member; but he saw before anything of the kind was done they would be in this difficulty, that some brethren who felt very weak over a particular case would use their influence with the Association to support the weak case, and so soon as they had got a very strong case, which, by a little more assistance, added to the large accumulated power which some brethren personally possessed, they would work independently of the Association, and the past services of the Association would be lost sight of. He would like to hear from Bro. Lacey, who was one of the oldest of the veterans in connection with Masonic work, what his experience was of such a case. In working out the objects of the Association it was of great importance that the members should have the experience of those brethren, who for many years had done practical work. He was not isolated in his view, for Bros. Rosenthal and Newton had the same idea that he had, that some means should be taken to protect the Association.

Bro. Charles Lacey said he should be very happy to respond to his esteemed brother. He could assure him that from his little experience of Freemasonry, more especially with regard to the Institutions, which he prided himself he had taken some little interest in, he certainly must endorse the opinion of Bro. Southwood with respect to brethren pledging themselves to aid the Association, because he took it that that was the ground which the Association had to work upon. The capital was the number of votes that could be concentrated. Unless they get the brethren to pledge themselves to aid the Association by the strength of the privileges they were entitled to in connection with the three Masonic Institutions he feared that the Association would be working as it were without capital. There was indeed no doubt that if the Association undertook, which we are sure it would earnestly and heartily, to assist those who were seeking admission into the Institutions, it would ask itself the question what capital it had to work with. It had to look to the members of the Association one and all to concentrate their votes in order that it might carry out what it proposed to do. Therefore, he thought that it would only be fair and equitable that those brethren who came to the Association to assist them in their good work should pledge themselves to bring their votes and concentrate them to assist the Association. Therefore he thought it should be one of the rules that any and every brother who volunteered to become a member of the Association should promise that he would also bring the Association what influence he had in voting power for the Institution, because that brother would be misleading the Association and the Association would be misleading the candidates unless they had something in the shape of votes to support them in their assertion that they would carry the candidate forward, and aid in obtaining admission to the Institution. He thought a member should volunteer to hand over his votes to the Association.

Bro. Woodford observed that no doubt it would be very desirable, but how could it be done? Could they or, could any body of men—could Bro. Perceval, or Faulkner, or Southwood, or Rosenthal be forced to hand over his voting papers to the Association? In the provinces they did not attempt that. They passed a general resolution to the effect that all brethren were invited to send in their voting papers to the Charity Committee. If this Association attempted to do anything of the kind suggested they would be told that they were dictating to brethren, and that would prevent brethren joining the Association. By leaving it under a courteous request that "all voting papers placed at the disposal of the Committee shall be left in the hands of the Secretaries, to be registered and disposed of as the Committee shall subsequently decide," the difficulty would be got over. Of course it would be one of the main duties of the Secretaries to endeavour to obtain from the Life Governors of the Institutions their voting papers, but it must be done by a civil request, as a fraternal wish on the part of the Association, and a fraternal act on the part of the brethren asked, and not one which by the rules a brother pledged himself to. He was quite certain, as there was much jealousy in this respect, that a rule pledging a brother would keep out a great number of the very best men. No doubt it would be very desirable to secure the votes by a rule, but as it could not be done in the provinces it could not be done in London.

Bro. Faulkner said that registering the votes would show that they were given to the Association.

Bro. Newton did not see that it was Bro. Lacey's intention that a brother should pledge himself to give his votes to the Association.

The Chairman said he thought it was tantamount to it. He was afraid it would not answer.

Bro. Rosenthal was glad some one adopted his view. Bro. Woodford had mentioned the provinces. He (Bro. Rosenthal) had some experience of Yorkshire and Lancashire brethren as well. Bro. Henry Smith, of West Yorkshire, had told him that that province carried all before them; and did as they liked because they had the votes. If they did not work together they never would carry out their object; but they worked together and got all their children into the Institutions.

The Chairman said no doubt the members of the Association would send their votes; but the Association must not say they must pledge themselves to do so.

Bro. Woodford said if Bro. Lacey would kindly draw up a bye-law that he thought would meet the case it would be considered. It was left out of the rules because they had thought the thing could not be done. If Bro. Lacey drew a bye-law they would see whether it was feasible.

Bro. Lacey said the very fact of a brother volunteering to become a member of the Association he took it for granted would be a guarantee for his throwing in what influence he had.

The Chairman observed that no doubt nineteen out of twenty would, only it must not be made one of the rules of the Association.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

Bro. Newton supposed that every mem would have an opportunity of inspecting the register. be

The Chairman said yes.

Bro. Woodford said that Bye-law 2 dealt with the subject of giving the votes as delicately as it could. The Association said, "We think you ought to give in your votes, but we cannot force you, we ask you. We invite you by a friendly circular, to place your vote in the hands of a Committee who select two or three of the strongest cases to support."

Col. Creaton was then appointed Chairman of the Association, Bros. Erasmus Wilson and the Rev. Dr. Brette as Vice-Chairmen, Bros. C. J. Perceval as Treasurer, and the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford and A. Tisley as joint Secretaries. The following brethren were appointed as Committeemen, with power to add to their number:—Bros. Rosenthal, Southwell, Dr. Ramsay, Letchworth, Newton, Lacey, Hyde Pullen, Marsh, Faulkner, Murlis, Baldwin, Massa, J. A. Farnfield, John White, G. Bolton, Dr. Jabez Hogg, Hubbuck, Willing, and Mallett.

Bros. Gladwell and Watts were appointed Auditors.

Bro. Perceval wished to draw attention to one subject. The provinces subscribed £15,232 to the Masonic Institutions, and London £16,400. In exchange for this the provinces got 394 candidates elected, and London 230. London did not get more simply because the London brethren did not combine. He would try to put these facts in a letter, to be published, stating the grievance and the remedy. It was very simple. The brethren had only to see how the provinces worked. There were several minor lodges and one or two Grand Lodges. The minor lodges sent to the centre lodges when they got a candidate to return, and they felt morally certain they would be returned either at first or second election. If not, they sent to a neighbouring province to assist. That was all very well up to a certain point, but it became un-Masonic when the merits of the individual cases were not considered—when the child or widow of a brother Mason, who had borne the burden and heat of the day, was passed over for those of a brother of yesterday. It was the case also sometimes that a brother who had paid for years to his lodge, and had benefitted all the Institutions, was passed over for a brother who thought that when he had paid his fees for entrance he had finished his Masonic duties. These were considerations that required the particular attention of the Association.

Bro. Woodford said that it was proposed at the end of this meeting to have a Committee meeting, for the subject Bro. Perceval was mentioning was more properly a subject for a Committee.

A vote of thanks to Col. Creaton for presiding was then passed, and the brethren resolved themselves into a Committee meeting, which, after transacting some business, adjourned.

A monument in memory of the late Lord Lytton has just been completed, and will shortly be removed from the studio of Bro. J. Forsyth, the sculptor, to its destination in the nave of Worcester Cathedral. Soon after the death of the lamented nobleman a number of his friends and neighbours, headed by the Earl of Dudley, Bro. Sir E. Lechmere, M.P., Lord Hampton, and Canon Melville, formed themselves into a committee for the purpose of raising a suitable memorial, and the present work is the result of the friendly subscriptions thus obtained. The design, by the late Sir G. Scott, is that of an altar tomb, in the manner of early 14th Century Gothic, on which reposes a recumbent statue of the deceased in white marble. The figure, draped in the robes of a peer, is suggestive of perfect repose, and bears on the countenance an artistic, and at the same time truthful resemblance to the lineaments of the departed. The head inclines slightly to the left side; the left arm lies full length by the side; the right hand rests upon the breast, holding a scroll or parchment with seal attached, in token of his office of custos rotulorum of Worcestershire. Four kneeling angels ornament the corners of monumental marble. The tomb is executed in alabaster and different coloured marbles, and is enriched with a series of arch-headed panels, supported by Rose-antique marble columns and carved capitals. Shields emblazoned with armorial bearings illustrating the genealogy of the Lytton family, arranged by Mr. Tucker, Rouge Croix, of the Herald's College, occupy the panels. On either side is a crisped panel deeply moulded, filled with bas reliefs, illustrative of the Entombment and the Resurrection. A Latin inscription, borne on a brass band extending round the tomb, gives the name, titles, and official position of the deceased, with dates of his birth and death. The monument is 9ft. long, 4ft. wide, and 6ft. high. It is intended to harmonise with the beautiful pulpit presented to Worcester Cathedral by the Earl of Dudley, executed by the same sculptor as the present statue, Bro. J. Forsyth, of Baker-street.

The Exhibition of Works entered for the National Art Competition was opened on Tuesday week in the Exhibition Galleries, South Kensington. They number about 1400, which have been selected from 138,045, sent up from 142 Schools of Art throughout the kingdom. The subjects of the competition are figure drawing and modelling, painting in oil and water colours, and design especially as applied to manufactures. The prizes awarded are gold medals, silver medals, bronze medals, prizes of books, and the Princess of Wales' Scholarships, which are awarded to two female students who take the highest prizes of the year in the national competition.

We are requested to state that by a curious error, the article that appeared in the Daily Telegraph, on the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, is credited to Bro. W. J. Hugahan, in the Masonic Review for August, published in Cincinnati, Ohio. Bro. Hugahan merely forwarded the article to the Editor, Bro. the Rev. Thos. J. Millish, and suggested its being reprinted in the pages of that excellent paper.

SIXTY-EIGHTH REPORT OF THE SWENDENBORG SOCIETY, BRITISH AND FOREIGN. Depository, 36, Bloomsbury-street, W.C.

This is the Sixty-eighth Report of a Society, instituted in 1810, for the purposes of disseminating the peculiar doctrines and views of Emanuel Swedenborg. Some of our readers may be aware that there is a so-called Masonic Swendenborgianism, which professes, as we understand, to deal with the mystical reveries of him, whom some one has termed "a dreamer of dreams," and after whom it is named. That Swedenborg was a Freemason is more than doubtful, indeed, it is pretty certain that he was not, but that his aspirations after and panoramic representations of a new Jerusalem—"caelestis Jerusalem"—found favour with the mystic school of Martinism, in France, in the last century, and was thence introduced into England, as a soi-disant Masonic-Swendenborgian system, is a matter of history. The peculiar views of the Swedenborgians are, of course, "forbidden fruit" for our neutral pages, and in so far as they can be understood by the uninitiated, they represent, under any circumstances, a phase of mental philosophy which it is beyond our power, as Freemasons, to notice or discuss.

Bound up with this Report, we find "A Hindoo Gentleman's Reflections respecting the Works of Swedenborg and the Doctrines of the New Jerusalem Church," which as the work of a cultivated and educated Hindoo, will have a special interest to the members of the Society. We Masonically can only allude to them that they—"are."

We doubt, as we have often said before, the propriety of mixing up Freemasonry, "simple in its simplicity," alike in its teachings and its views, with the abstruse reveries of the mystics, or the fancies and dreams of metaphysical abstractions.

Mysticism has always played a part, alike in the old Hermetic sodalities, and the Theosophic school of Masons of the latter part of the last century—wisely or unwisely, is not the question here. We are only dealing with facts and whether we go back to Swedenborg or St. Martin, to "Boehme" or Meyer, we find undoubtedly a "mysticism" of teaching which has by some been claimed as Masonic, though clearly without warrant or reality.

We are not going further than this, as we by no means ever desiderate what is called "dogmatism," in matters in which freedom of thought and liberty of conscience properly prevail. But let us not forget that subjective theories do not and never can constitute objective truth to men or Masons.

CHAMBER'S INDEX TO NEXT OF KIN. Fourth Edition, Edited by EDWARD PRESTON. Allen, 11, Ave Maria Lane.

This very useful work has come before us, and we think it only our duty to our readers and the public to call attention to its undoubted utility and importance. It contains 50,000 names of persons advertised for, and though some of the advertisements are no doubt "fishing advertisements," as they are termed, and put in for special purposes; many, probably the great majority are "bona fide," and represent a vast mass of money unclaimed, because unknown. Mr. Preston states in his preface one fact which will startle others, as it has startled us, the more so as we have heard of a lower figure, namely, that the unclaimed funds in the Court of Chancery amounted in 1876 to £70,000,000! Is not 70 a misprint for 7? That a large sum of money belongs to families of which they are ignorant is no doubt most true, and therefore we feel bound to praise, as we believe, an honest effort to afford information on topics so personally interesting and materially important to many.

MASONIC MAGAZINE.—Some pleasing poetry and fiction agreeably relieve the Masonic matter which is, doubtless, full of interest to the initiated, and will be found acceptable to the general reader. The tone of the periodical is high, and some of the essays are marked by much thought and acumen.—Brief.

FRENCH TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

One of the most interesting and instructive departments of the Exposition is that devoted to the illustration of the working and results of the system of French popular education both in Paris and in the provinces. The foreign visitor who observes with admiration throughout the country the evidences of the general artistic and technical skill of the French workmen of every class will see in this Education Department of the Exposition the key to the secret of that success. And he will also, if wise, read in it a lesson for his own countrymen. The models of the French schools, the tables of their statistics, the plans of their buildings, and especially the abundant technical and artistic products of the pupils' industry, and the numerous series of scholastic apparatus of all kinds—these must strike intelligent foreigners with surprise, if not with humiliation also, at the comparative imperfection of other countries in this important department. One of the United States Commissioners to the Exhibition remarked, last week, that, in common with his countrymen generally, he had previously supposed the United States to be foremost in the world in its system of popular instruction, but that he is now compelled to acknowledge the great superiority of France, even over America, in this direction.

Englishmen will do well to study this portion of the Exposition most carefully. Members of School Boards, heads of colleges and schools, and members of municipal bodies specially interested in the improvement of technical and practical education in their own country, may derive great advantage from the exhibits in this department. When will the corporation of London be able to match the interesting educational results here displayed by the sister municipality of Paris?—Times.

A correspondent of the Paris Journal reports the discovery of treasure in the village of Andria, within the territorial district of Naples. According to the account given, in the village alluded to there exists an ancient ducal palace, which formerly belonged to the noble house of Andria, after which it is called. It is owned at present by the Spagnoletti, and the actual possessor just now happened to procure an old plan of the castle. Looking over it curiously, he noticed a door marked where in reality none existed. Not satisfied to leave this fact uninvestigated, he ordered the wall to be broken through at the place indicated on the plan, and behind the brickwork an iron door was found. This was forced, and access was immediately gained to a small chapel, in which was deposited an old chest containing the treasure, which is estimated to be worth about 1,800,000*fr.* (nearly £72,000.) It consists principally of gold coins of the time of Ferdinand IV. and precious stones. The whole is supposed to have been deposited there for safety by the Duke of Andria when he emigrated to Germany at the time of the French invasion of Italy.

ST. ALBAN'S ABBEY.—The Rev. Scott F. Surtees, writing from the Rectory, Sprotbrough, Doncaster, to the Times, sends the following extract from Dr. Lubke's "Ecclesiastical Art in Germany," translated from the fifth edition by L. A. Wheatley:—"The system of the vaulted Basilica came into use in Germany, as it appears, for the first time towards the end of the 12th century, and it is in Rhenish buildings that the vaulting of the whole nave is first found. The cathedral at Mentz was apparently vaulted after the burning in the year 1081 A.D. The cathedrals at Spire and Worms followed. About the same time (1093-1156) arose the Abbey Church at Laach. The rest of Germany, for the most part, persisted in the flat roofed Basilica. . . . After these new discoveries has been made in architecture everything was prepared for a new style, and this was the Gothic."

Mr. R. Winslow, of 15, Strand, showed three supers of London honey, from a hive in a room 60ft. from the ground, at the exhibition of the British Bee Keepers' Association held last week at South Kensington. The hive was worked at the address given, and Mr. Winslow terms the produce "chimney-pot honey."—City Press.

Sir J. T. Lawrence has given notice in the House of Commons of his intention to move next Session that it is desirable, in the opinion of the House, that the whole or part of Kew Gardens should be opened to the public at 10 a.m. on week-days, and that there is nothing in the work of maintenance or in the special objects of the Gardens to justify the exclusion of the public from them until 1 p.m.

In a narrow street close to Bedford-row many a passer-by who, in his youth, had a "stool" in one of the legal firms in the neighbourhood, has observed an old-fashioned shop with many choice engravings in the window, and has longed for the time—"looming in the future"—when his improved position in the office should enable him to enter the dingy portals—always closed, its owner being absent for the past 12 years—and make himself famous in the eyes of the collectors by becoming the possessor of some of the rare things therein. But the youth has arrived at maturity, has become possessor of the means to purchase, but his efforts to do so have been fruitless. The same choice prints have remained in the window. As an answer was required for repeated inquiries, all were told, "Nothing will be sold until the owner returns." Two collectors of prints, whose homes are on the other side of the Atlantic, finding that there were in this collection prints they coveted, took the long journey across in the hope of acquiring them, but without success. The same answer met their inquiries. A wealthy man in London sent £10,000 for two paintings in the collection. That was refused. Other pictures equally valuable are there—rare works, whose pedigrees are well known, and whose qualities are not questioned. The owner has not come back. He has gone, it is to be hoped, where he will find beauty in perfection, not in the abstract, as in his possessions here. The gems of art that he has so strangely accumulated will be reset. It is believed that, after the labour of cataloguing the property has been accomplished, it will be placed, about January next, before the public in the rooms through which it seems the fate of most works of art to pass at some period or other.—Builder.

On Wednesday a trial of self-delivery reapers and self-binders came off at Penrith. Rain having fallen all the previous night and the crop being a heavy piece of oats, the qualities of the machines were put to a severe test. The binders of Mr. McCormick and Mr. Walter A. Wood were tested by the dynamometer, the draught being 3cwt. 3 qrs., and 3cwt. 1 qr. respectively. The prize was awarded to the machine of the heavier draught, McCormick's. In the class for self-delivery reapers eight machines competed. The "Simplex" of Messrs. Howard, Bedford, took a draught of 1cwt. 3 qrs. only, and after a second trial with the well-known American machine of Walter A. Wood, was awarded the first prize in its class, the three next to it in point of draught being W. Anson Wood, Picklesy, Sims, and Co., and W. A. Wood, whose machines all took a draught of 2cwt. 1 qr., the heaviest being Messrs. Brigham's "Excelsior," 3cwt.

ENGLISH MASONRY AND ATHEISTS.

It will be seen by a letter from our Editor to Bro. Hubert, which appears in another column, that a statement has apparently been made on this subject, which will be received with astonishment and indignation by all English Masons. It seems, indeed, at the first blush of the thing, almost impossible that any true distinguished French Masons can have made so very silly, and so very untrue, a statement; and out of charity to them, we refrain from publishing their names, as forwarded to us, to-day, hoping that there may be possibly some misunderstanding on the subject. The allegation is—made on the authority of two of the leading French Freemasons, as we read our correspondent's letter—that "Atheists can be admitted Masons in England now, easier than in any other country." Anything more ridiculous in itself, or more untrue as a statement, we have never in our life perused, and if we could believe that the brethren quoted really used such preposterous words, we should deeply grieve, alike for their ignorance of and their injustice to English Masons and English Masonry. We venture to say in the Freemason, (as our Editor says for himself elsewhere), that no Atheist can be admitted, as such, in any English lodge, except by mistake or misadventure, and we are quite sure of this, that the fact of a candidate being a known Atheist would render him absolutely certain to be blackballed in any English lodge into which he seeks admission. Nay, we go further. Any W.M. allowing an avowed Atheist to be initiated in English Masonry, if it could be proved he knew the fact to be a fact, when acting as W.M., would, we are certain, be suspended by Grand Lodge. We cannot, therefore, profess to understand, with the known animus and practice of English Masons on this subject, how any French brethren can have formed such an idea of English Masonry, much less put such an idea, (so absurd), into words. It is possible that some candidates who were truly Atheists have been admitted into English lodges, (though we doubt even this), but then it was, if it was so, both by a "suppressio veri" and a "suggestio falsi" on their part. They did not avow their proclivities at the time, rather they sought carefully to conceal, and carefully succeeded in concealing, their real views; but if they were honest men, English Masonry was, and could be, no home for them, inasmuch as it distinctly and openly, and pointedly from first to last, repudiates anything approaching even to Atheism and Atheists, whether stupid or clever, whether secret or open. English Freemasonry, (like English Freemasons), never hesitates to proclaim its unchanged and unflinching belief in the true and ever living God, Most High. We are, therefore, tempted to imagine and to hope that there is some misinterpretation of hasty words, or, perhaps, that the great heat of Paris just now, and the excitement of the Exhibition, (which we are happy to hear is a success), have caused some of our good French brethren to lose somewhat of their habitual moderation of thought and speech, and their knowledge of men and things. Or, perhaps, after all, the whole affair is only a little joke played off by some facetious French brother on a good colonial John Bull. As we said before, if any French brethren of position, education, and authority, either secretly held or put forward publicly any such opinions of English Masons and Masonry, we shall most deeply deplore the fact, because it suggests to our minds inevitably certain considerations affecting the real state of Masonic affairs in France, which are alike painful to realize, and humiliating to accept.

OUR AMERICAN BRETHREN.

Some of our American brethren are already about to cross the "little mill pond," and we cannot let them depart, even in instalments, without a hearty shake of the hand, and some sincere expressions of good will and Masonic sympathy. Their visit to England has been as much a pleasure to ourselves as to them, and we beg to assure them, that in the hearty welcome of the "International Gathering," which our publisher so sagaciously planned and so successfully achieved, we as English Masons meant what we said, and we hope they believed us, and believe us still. Though we have bidden farewell to them in person, we linger with them still in kindly companionship, and we trust in the providence of T.G.A.O.T.U. that they may have a safe and prosperous voyage home to their native land. We shall probably not meet again as brother Masons on this "nether scene," in warm-hearted personality, and the sympathy of a loving friendship can only be preserved in the spirit, but cordial regards and pleasant souvenirs will abide with us, as we trust with them, for the rest of our Masonic pilgrimage. Among that pleasant band of friendly visitors to our shores perhaps to particularize names may be both somewhat difficult if not invidious. Yet we feel sure we are echoing the opinion of all our English brethren present at that famous gathering when we say that amid many genial associates, no truer Masons, no more sincere friends, no better men can be anywhere met with than Charles Meyer and Daniel Sutter, whose pleasant presence and kindly words will long be cherished by the English Masons who learned to know them and to like them. And so we bid them heartily and Masonically farewell to-day, in all of genuine regard and true Masonic feeling, trusting that if we are not destined, humanly speaking, to meet any more "in the flesh," ours may be mutual memories and mutual associations of friendship and brotherhood, of liking and goodwill!

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

A very sensible letter in the Glasgow Evening Mail, which appeared in our last impression, so confirms the views we have thought well to express on some recent questions of debate in respect of this distinguished body, that we make no apology to our readers for recurring to the subject to-day. Our words last week were words of peace, as our readers will remember, and such they still most surely are. All we have read and heard since convinces us how prejudicial to Scottish Freemasonry any such continued agitation must be, and how unwise and how un-masonic any suggestions of a second Grand Lodge, if ever made. The questions at issue can surely be settled by the members of the Grand of Scotland, without excitement or wrangling, without acerbity, without personality, and without above all, appealing to the profane world without, or letting it into the secret of divisions and dissensions within. Let our good friends across the border remember Napoleon the First's advice, "to wash their own dirty linen at home, and do not let us hear of any more comment by the non-masonic Scottish press on the personalities and divergencies of Scottish Freemasons in the Scottish Grand Lodge. It is no doubt true that Scottish Freemasonry is just now passing through a crisis in its history, and has the inevitable effect of many years of un-masonic procedure to contend with. It has also weaknesses peculiar to an unsound and vicious system, in our humble opinion, to amend and remove. But all this can be done calmly, peacefully, Masonically; and the authorities deserve all consideration and all support in their arduous and responsible duties. With the administrative ability of our distinguished Bro. D. Murray Lyon, there can be no doubt but that the Grand Lodge of Scotland will speedily emerge from its various complications, and we feel sure that we are expressing the unanimous opinion of English Masons when we avow, as we do openly to-day, for the Grand Lodge of Scotland all Masonic sympathy and all fraternal good will.

THE LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

It will be seen by a statement in our last impression, and by a more detailed report in this, that a movement has begun in London to organize and develop the "voting power" of the voters for the London district, in a way never before attempted or achieved. This action of the London voters for the Masonic Charities has long been felt by those who interest themselves in such matters, to be a "necessity of the case," and the only wonder is that it has not been done before. The most successful organization of the Provincial Charity Committees renders now the return of London candidates for the various Charities often very problematical and very difficult, and therefore an attempt has been, in our opinion, seasonably and wisely, made to alter the existing state of things in this respect, and some of our London brethren seek, not unnaturally, to take a "leaf" out of the provincial "book," and to form a standing committee for the purpose of receiving and using voting papers voluntarily offered to it by the voters of the various Charities on behalf of the London candidates, on certain distinct principles of action and selection. Too much praise cannot possibly be awarded to those skillfully organized Provincial Charity Committees, which have for some years so successfully managed the cases for the provinces at the elections, but there can be no valid reason why London voters for the Charities should not avail themselves of the same elastic privileges, and the same easy and common-sense organization. We anticipate the greatest good from this movement in every way. A great deal of information will be disseminated about the Charities; more general interest will be excited in them; and that waste of London voting power which now goes on, that frittering away of metropolitan strength which is now prevalent, will be checked and controlled. In the hands of a carefully selected and competent committee, all really deserving cases will be watched over and furthered, and successfully carried; while many a deserving applicant, who, under the present state of affairs can hardly hope to succeed, will run a much fairer chance of getting on the list of the successful ones. Of course there are some difficulties in the way, and some especially affecting the metropolis. One is, what may be termed without offence to any, "individualism." We wish to achieve personally what it is now proposed to do by a Committee. Many will not like to delegate to a Committee, however distinguished, duties which they have discharged so often and so efficiently for London and provincial clients. But such a personal view, however amiable in itself, ought not to weigh against the general good and the actual need of so beneficial a change. Another difficulty is the "claims of competing candidates," which appear paramount to some minds, but have not the same effect on others. It is now proposed to submit at London all cases to a careful and critical Committee in order to select the strongest cases. Thus we are inclined to think, that by a process which has been found to work well in the provinces, absolutely weak and unsuitable cases will also in London be passed over in favour of a "distressing case," which conforms to all our rules, and claims, and rightly claims, our sympathy and our support. But in saying this, we neither wish to interfere with individual liberty of action, or to promote the crotchets of a reforming school amongst us. We have always contended, that by the proper action of a Provincial Charity Committee, just as now by the efforts of the new "London Association," due attention should be given to the cases and claims of provincial as of metropolitan candidates, and that thus we shall seek honestly to support "a distressing case," which has a "fair claim on our charity," alike in conformity with the dictates of true benevolence, and the laws of our useful Institutions. But further than that we have never pretended to go, and we do not go to day. We reject now, as we have always rejected, because logically and practically absurd, "the most distressing case theory," simply because we hold it to be hyper-sentimentalism in the abstract, and an utter impracticability in the concrete. But we rejoice to think and to note, that by a professed voluntary association, and under conditions which, we believe, will command general approval and support, (if not now, eventually), a Committee of London brethren will seek carefully to sift the London cases, and give organized support to any cases which are now, and must be under present conditions, unsuccessful, but which have, nevertheless, every claim on the warm and generous aid of metropolitan Masons.

A LETTER TO BRO HUBERT, PARIS.

Dear Bro. Hubert,—

A worthy brother from Ontario, Canada, has called at the office of the Freemason to inform us that he had recently seen you at Paris, and that you are very anxious to be enlightened on a very important point affecting English Masonry. It is, to use his words in a letter now lying before me, as regards the admission of "Atheists" into English Masonry. I should have thought that "à priori," from your well-known acquaintance with our English habits of thought and practice, and from your residence in England, that you would require no information from me or any one else on any such subject. But still as there are reasons given in Bro. Robertson's letter why you should just now ask for a "disclaimer" from me on the subject alluded to, I take the earliest opportunity afforded me of reassuring you, (if you need reassuring), on the matter before us.

It seems, according to Bro. Robertson, that "two" very distinguished French brethren, high in position, (whose names I for the present keep back), have thought well publicly to state that Atheists can be admitted Masons in England now easier than in any other country. It is of this statement that you are stated, dear Bro. Hubert, to wish to have a denial. I can therefore only assure you, as an old English Mason, initiated in 1842, (you can count my years of membership), that such an assertion is absolutely untrue, and is either a proof of what Monseigneur Dupanloup would call "Invincible ignorance," or, alas, that I should have to say it, "wilful mendacity." Surely a more childish and more unscrupulous assertion never was made by any one, or one which betrays an entire want of acquaintance with English Masonic sentiment and practice on the subject. No French Mason, whatever his rank may be in the Order, can have a right to make such a false charge against English Masons, inasmuch as when he makes it he either does not know of what he is talking, or is governed by an impossibility of recognising the "abstract importance of truth."

I, on the contrary, most unhesitatingly and distinctly declare, and in this statement I shall be supported by countless English and American brethren, that no known Atheist, (except by some mournful carelessness), can be admitted into English and Anglo-Saxon Masonry. And, therefore, in reply to "two" distinguished "French brethren," who are alleged to have made so rash, so foolish, so untrue a statement, (with what motive I do not profess to understand), I can only declare to you, that any such assertion is a most unjust calumny on English Masons and Masonry. I am, indeed, in great hopes that there is some mistake in the matter, and that there has been an unintentional and misinterpretation of certain remarks, more or less excited, perhaps, in a momentary discussion.

If such, however, be the deliberate opinion of the two distinguished French brethren named, you and I must mutually grieve over their "delusion" on the subject, and we shall both feel that it betrays a state of feeling alike significant and most deplorable.

If then you want a "Denial" from me, I truly offer it to you to-day, as I know you will both receive it, and audit it, as coming from

Yours most fraternally, dear Bro. Hubert,
THE EDITOR OF THE "FREEMASON."
Bro. Kenning, the sole proprietor of the Freemason, quite agrees with me in these remarks.

At the regular meeting of the Centenary Lodge of Fortitude No 131 Truro on the 13th inst., the R.W. Bro. J. H. Neilson was formally received and saluted as a Representative of the Grand Orient of Egypt, and Past S. G. W. of that Grand Lodge. Although a member of the lodge, the W.M. and members were determined on this his first visit, to do him all possible honour, and the "Grand Honours" were given most heartily to our distinguished brother.

ADMISSION OF MEMBERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A question of considerable interest to the Craft has been raised in one of our most important provinces under circumstances which it is to be hoped are somewhat rare. For some years past it has been the practice of a lodge in a small town within the province of which we write to initiate into Masonry numbers from a town twenty miles distant, which, with its neighbourhood, embraces six lodges for a total population of about 80,000 inhabitants. This course for obvious reasons, for some time formed the subject of complaint, and several years since was noticed at headquarters by the adoption of a series of resolutions, with the object of "enforcing more stringent rules as to the admission of candidates into the Masonic Order." These included the following, which was recommended by P.G. Lodge to all lodges in the province: "That every brother of each lodge be requested not to propose for initiation a candidate residing at a distance from the place in which the lodge is held until the most searching enquiries have been made and satisfactory reasons given why he was not proposed in a lodge in the town in which he resides or one nearer to his place of residence." The practice complained of is not known to have in any degree decreased consequent upon this resolution; and the small lodge has now become so numerous as to be in danger of losing its individuality, not to say that, whilst the imported brethren find it inconvenient to attend lodge, which must, for their convenience, be held in the afternoon, those who form the lodge proper find it equally inconvenient to attend in the afternoon, and equally desire to meet in the evening. In these circumstances the émigrés have applied to the Prov. Grand Master to recommend the grant of a warrant to them to hold a lodge in the town to which they belong. Asking the senior lodge there to support their application, it not only refused to do so, but petitioned the Prov. Grand Master not to grant the request on the following grounds:—That the six lodges already existing in the town and neighbourhood where the petitioners for the new lodge reside, afford ample opportunities for meeting all the legitimate requirements of Masonry; that so far as the opposing petitioners are aware, and believe, many of the petitioners were received into a lodge which had not conformed to the before-quoted resolution of Prov. Grand Lodge; and that to grant a new warrant under such circumstances, by practically counteracting the power of black-balling, would be to imperil the distinctive character of Freemasonry has hitherto held. The signatories to this petition, which was hurriedly got up and dispatched, embraced Past or Present Masters and other officers of each of the six lodges, and—simply in order to indicate their character and social position—it should be added included an ex-mayor and present alderman of the town, its sheriff, town clerk, borough treasurer, and officer of health, several of its leading men (including a Past Master of more than forty years' standing, and some town councillors and others holding official position). The Prov. Grand Master, who, it may be stated, resides between fifty and sixty miles from the locus in quo, it is whispered at first refused to recommend the grant of the warrant, lacking the recommendation of a lodge in the objective town, but this being forthcoming, has intimated that he has recommended the grant of the warrant, the objectionable course of initiating candidates at a distance from their residences without previous enquiry having, "it is understood" (sic) ceased. How far the spirit, as distinguished from the letter, of Prov. Grand Lodge resolution has been observed by the lodge which seeks to extend its borders, is shown by enquiry on the spot, revealing the appointment of a standing committee of its own members resident in the town which protests against the whole proceeding and practice, it being naively added that "it is believed that such an appointment has resulted in the most beneficial effect. What, then, is the conclusion to be drawn from action previous to this appointment? and what need is there of further testimony as to the utter viciousness of the practice of initiating members from a distance from the initiating lodge, without special cause being shown for their not joining lodges in their own locality? All the circumstances considered, it is no matter of surprise to hear that the subject is not to be allowed to rest where it is now.

CAUTION.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is a matter of notoriety in this flourishing province that while the rank and file appear in black, with white gloves, and the majority in full dress, out of respect to the Provincial Grand Lodge, the P.G.M. and his principal officers are usually attired in walking costume of various hues.

This may appear a very small matter, but when brethren travel from all parts of the province in hot weather, and in the customary, but ancient suit of black, it is not asking too much, that the principal officers should either appear in the same costume, or else announce that it may be dispensed with, and clothing suitable to the season substituted.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
OBSERVER.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

At a meeting of the above, held at Basingstoke, the P.G.M. strongly affirmed that he would not appoint a brother to a Provincial Office unless he attended to be invited.

At the meeting held at Southampton on Tuesday, the 15th inst., he appointed several brethren who were absent from various causes.

Comment is superfluous, especially as there were over 200 brethren in attendance to select from.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, faithfully yours,
CONSISTENCY.

We have been requested to publish the following correspondence:—

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

To the Editor of the Scottish Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

My attention has been directed to a letter in the North British Daily Mail, of 12th inst., signed "Faction," which contains statements that may mislead many of the brethren. It is stated—"The contest being not between Edinburgh and Glasgow," &c., "but between Glasgow, on the one hand, and the rest of Scotland," &c. The contest is between a certain party of brethren in Edinburgh, who have had for years the control in the Grand Lodge, with results disastrous to the honour and financial position of Masonry in Scotland, and the provinces, whose money has been so fraudulently dealt with. Glasgow being the province nearest to Edinburgh, and which pays the largest amount of money into the Grand Lodge, naturally comes prominently to the front in the struggle to put the Grand Lodge in a state to support the honour of the Craft, and retain the confidence of the provinces. This, and this alone, is the object aimed at by the brethren of the West, in which they have the support of brethren in all parts of Scotland.

I am, dear Sir and brother, yours fraternally,
W. MONTGOMERIE NEILSON,
Queenshill, Aug. 13th. P.G.M. of Glasgow.

To the Editor of the Scottish Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I belong to a lodge that sends its own proper representatives to Grand Lodge, consequently, at our last meeting, we were favoured with an account "viva voce" of the recent proceedings of Grand Lodge. Most heartily did we congratulate ourselves on the fact that we are not represented by proxy in that august assembly, else we might have run the risk of being a party to the degrading of the Craft by ignoring, as was done, the rudimental and fundamental principles on which the grand super-structure has been built. He must be a very contemptible individual—in truth, no man and no Mason—who would stoop to be an abettor of the conduct which seems to be characteristic of some of the moving spirits of that grand Edinburgh Masonic forum. It is time that all good and true Masons were bestirring themselves so as really to feel their responsibility individually and collectively. Let the present vital matters be subject of mutual intercourse inside the lodge-room, and of united consideration and action by sister lodges in the provinces. For surely we shall not be so base as to stand idly and silently by, and see the dignity of the Order trailed in the dust, see the result of the labours of disinterested men ignobly scouted at and scorned, and see ourselves, in our representatives, scoffed at and condemned by interested intriguers and ignominious sycophants.—Yours fraternally,

SPE.

Ayr, 13th August, 1878.

To the Editor of the Scottish Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is believed that a universal feeling of admiration for the personal and Masonic character, and of gratitude for the services of the Grand Master, Sir Michael Robert Shaw Stewart of Ardgowan and Greenock, Baronet, pervades the whole Craft, and a meeting of certain members of the Order has been held, at which it was resolved to give effect to this general opinion, by respectfully requesting the Right Honourable Lady Octavia Shaw Stewart's acceptance of a testimonial, in acknowledgment of the high respect in which her husband, the Grand Master, is held, and of the distinguished services he has rendered to Masonry.

It is proposed that the testimonial should be a bust—executed in duplicate—one to be placed in the Freemasons' Hall to perpetuate Sir Michael's connection with the Craft; and the other to be presented to Lady Octavia Shaw Stewart; or otherwise, that the testimonial should be of such a character as would secure in Freemasons' Hall a lasting memorial of Sir Michael, and at the same time retain a place in his family. The selection of the testimonial to be left to Lady Octavia.

The Committee beg to request a subscription from you towards the testimonial, which may be sent to either of the Treasurers at Edinburgh, or to me, or any of the Local Treasurers of the fund.

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM OFFICER, S.S.C.,

Past Senior Grand Warden, Hon. Sec.

Edinburgh, 13, Frederick-street, 25th July, 1878.

Ardgowan, Greenock, Aug. 7th, 1878.

To the Editor of the Scottish Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is only within the last few days that I have become fully aware of the proposal to recognise specially my services, such as they have been, to the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

I beg leave very respectfully and gratefully to request that the proposed presentation be not made.

Anything that I may have been able to do for Grand Lodge has been more than sufficiently acknowledged by the personal kindness I have always received from the Craft in general, and by the support and confidence which have been given me by the members of the Grand Lodge; and it would, under all circumstances, be a matter of regret to me that any other reward or acknowledgment should be made to me or to my family.

If, as I now understand, the Masons of Scotland consider that a bust of their present Grand Master is worthy of a place in Grand Lodge, it would afford me great pleasure to present such a bust to the Scottish Masons.

I am very grateful for the kindness intended to be shown to Lady Octavia and myself, but I request that you will make known my decided wish to the members of the Committee, without delay, and assure them, now that my term of office is drawing to a close, that I shall never forget the fraternal consideration which has been extended to me during my five years' occupancy of the Masonic throne.

I am, dear Sir, yours fraternally,

M. R. SHAW STEWART,
Grand Master.

A POINT OF PROCEDURE.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the event of any circumstance occurring during the time a lodge is holding its regular meeting which prevents the business which has been placed on the notices issued to the brethren being completed—say, for instance, an initiation—has the W.M. power to "call off" the lodge for so long a period as a week, thereby adjourning the meeting for that time?

Your opinion on the above question will be esteemed a favour.

I enclose my card, and remain, fraternally yours,

A P.M. and HON. SEC.

[Certainly not. The W.M. can only order the S.W. to call the brethren from labour to refreshment for a reasonable time. There is no adjournment in English Masonry.—Eo.]

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

The Grand Lodge for this province was held at Southampton on Thursday week. A local committee, consisting of the Prov. Grand Secretary (Br. J. E. Le Feuvre), the Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies (Bro. Morris Miles, P. M.), and the Worshipful Masters of the four lodges in Southampton, viz., the Royal Gloucester (Bro. C. John Phillips), the Peace and Harmony (Bro. W. H. Martin), the Southampton (Bro. R. J. Walker), and the Twelve Brothers (Bro. R. S. Pearce), had provided the Philharmonic Hall for the reception of Grand Lodge, and appropriately decorated it, Bro. W. Waters, P.M., in this respect rendering valuable service. There was a very full attendance, the whole of the 28 lodges in the province being represented, and the Portsmouth and Southampton brethren appearing in noticeable strength. Some 250 brethren being assembled in the hall, wearing their Masonic clothing and collars and jewels of office, P.G. Organist (Bro. Westley) played a march during the entry of the Prov. Grand Master (Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.), who was attended by the Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Bro. W. Hickman), and from 40 to 50 Present and Past Prov. Grand Officers, wearing the purple, who formed a double line extending the whole length of the hall.

In the absence of the two Grand Wardens, Bros. H. M. Emanuel and G. Lancaster, both of Portsmouth, occupied their places. Grand Lodge having been duly opened, the usual reports were received and adopted, the Treasurer's account showing a balance in hand of £256 9s. 1d., after payment of £80 in relief 110 guineas to the Boys' School, and 100 to the Indian Famine Fund, and ten guineas each to the Girls' School and the Benevolent Institution. Bro. Mark E. Frost, of Portsmouth, on the proposition of Bro. F. Hare (Southampton Lodge) seconded by Bro. E. Booth (Royal Gloucester), was unanimously re-elected Prov. Grand Treasurer for the year. Among the grants made was one of £50 to the widow of a deceased brother belonging to a Portsmouth lodge, who formerly held high Masonic office in India. In reporting upon the Charities Committee, the P.G.S., to show how successful the plan had proved of the brethren in the province thus concentrating their power, mentioned that in 1872 they succeeded in securing the election on the charities of a boy and a girl; in 1873 of a boy, a girl, and a widow; in 1874 of a boy, a girl, and an aged brother; in 1875 of a boy, a girl, and two aged brethren; in 1876 of a girl, two widows, and an aged brother; in 1877 of two girls, a widow, and an aged brother; and this year of a boy, a girl, and a widow. A proposal by Bro. Main to transfer the moneys and securities of the province to the Capital and Counties Bank in the names of the Provincial Grand Master, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and the Provincial Grand Treasurer for the time being was lost. Bro. Wyatt, of the Albany Lodge, Newport, gave notice that at the next Provincial Grand Lodge meeting he would move the appointment of a committee for the purpose of revising the bye-laws of the Provincial Grand Lodge. The Prov. Grand Master then appointed his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—

W. Hickman	D. Prov. G.M.
E. W. Rebbeck	Prov. G.S.W.
Dr. A. Platt Wilks	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. S. Scott	Prov. G. Chaplain.
C. G. Brown	Prov. G. Chaplain.
G. Dymott	Prov. G. Reg.
Mark E. Frost	Prov. G. Treas.
J. E. Le Feuvre	Prov. G. Sec.
Lear	Prov. G.S.D.
G. F. Lancaster	Prov. G.J.D.
Harrison	Prov. G.S. of W.
John Adams	Prov. G.D. of C.

E. Low	Prov. G.A.D. of C.
G. Bond	Prov. G.S. Bearer.
Benham	Prov. G. Purst.
Batchelor	Prov. G. Org.
Way, Pring, Whale, Tasker, and Pack	Prov. G. Stewards.
Biggs and Exell	Prov. G. Tylers.

The G.S.W. not being present to take his collar, the P.G.M. said, though his selection would hold good this time, it must not be taken as a precedent. Bro. J. Legg, W.M. of the United Services Lodge, Portsmouth, was offered one of the Grand Stewardships, but respectfully declined its acceptance. At the close of the investment of officers, the Prov. G. Master, in the name of the brethren, presented to Bro. Mark E. Frost, the P.G. Treasurer, a purse containing 200 sovereigns, together with a silver inkstand and tray, two candlesticks, and a paper knife. He remarked that Bro. Frost had been a Mason twenty-seven years, and during that time he had rendered most valuable assistance to Freemasonry. He had twice held the position of Master of the Portsmouth Lodge, No. 487, and had also twice held the same important position in the United Brothers Lodge, No. 1069, to both of which lodges, and indeed to all the lodges in the neighbourhood, he had rendered services which were invaluable. Although, perhaps, Bro. Frost was known more intimately by the brethren of Portsmouth and the district, he was still known all over the province as a most active Mason, and one who was always ready to do anything in his power to advance the best interests of the Craft. (Hear, hear.) The testimonial of which he would ask Bro. Frost's acceptance was subscribed for in the province, and he (the speaker) was very much gratified at having the opportunity of presenting it at that Grand Lodge meeting. There was always something very pleasant about recognising the merits of an old and tried Mason, inasmuch as old associations and pleasant reminiscences extending over a number of years that had flown by were again presented to the mind. All who knew Bro. Frost were aware how assiduously he had applied himself to the task of carrying out in their integrity all the glorious principles of the Order, and would agree with him that no testimonial it was in their power to present could sufficiently recompense him for the services he had rendered. (Loud applause.) Bro. Frost, in recognising the compliment, said he could not find words to express his gratitude for the kind expressions used towards him, but he assured them he accepted their testimonial in the same kind spirit in which it was given. It was true he had been a Mason for a great number of years, but the handsome present just made him was an ample recompense for all his labours, although the labour of a Freemason was a labour of love, and he assured them that he would hand down that testimonial as a mark of the esteem in which he was held. (Applause.)

This concluding the business, the lodge was closed in due form.

The brethren then adjourned to the Victoria Skating Rink, kindly lent for the occasion by Bro. Jonas Nichols, where Bro. Dartnall, of the High-street, Southampton, had spread an excellent cold collation, which was supplemented by a supply of champagne, placed on the tables by the entertaining lodges in the town. The rink was, as usual, tastefully decorated with flowers and small flags, disposed from brackets around the supporting iron pillars, some large flags, loaned by Bro. J. Blount Thomas, having been arranged behind the cross table at the head by Bro. W. Waters, and the rink band, under Mr. D. Crook, attended and performed a selection of operatic and other music during the dinner and between the subsequent speeches. The Prov. Grand Master occupied the chair, and was supported by the Dep. Prov. G.M. and other Grand Lodge officers, the total number of brethren present being about 120. The repeat concluded, the Right Worshipful Chairman gave in order "The Queen and the Craft" and "The M.W. the Grand Master of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," remarking upon the recent visit of the Prince to Southampton, and saying he wished it had been possible that the ceremony taken part in by H.R.H. should be conducted with Masonic honours. "The Pro-Grand Master of England, Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon; the Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Skelmersdale; and the Officers and Past Officers of Grand Lodge" was the next toast, and it having been heartily drunk, the Dep. Prov. Grand Master proposed "The Health of the Right Worshipful the Grand Master of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight," eulogising Bro. Beach for the manner in which he invariably performed the duties of his high office, and for his readiness at all times to place himself at the disposal of the several lodges in the province. He was always ready and willing to place his time at the disposal of the various lodges, and the manner in which he invariably conducted the ceremonies had won general encomiums from the brethren. His manner was genial and courteous, and he so carried out his duties as to secure the highest respect and affection at the hands of all the brethren with whom he came in contact.

The Provincial Grand Master, in responding, said it always afforded him the greatest possible pleasure to come amongst the brethren whenever it was possible for him to do so, and he could assure them that during the time he had held his present position he had met with nothing but kindness and consideration. He ventured to say that during his tenure of office Freemasonry in the province had been very prosperous, a circumstance which was in no small degree due to the efficiency of Bro. Hickman and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers, who had all worked with a will and as skilled and excellent Masons in the performance of their various duties. Those duties were not so light as might at first sight appear. Matters came continually before them for decision, for no matter how amicable the brethren might be, there were times when points of difference arose which it was necessary to submit to the Grand Lodge of the Province for settlement.

As far as he was concerned he assured the brethren that he never gave any decision until he had thoroughly gone into the matter under consideration. One matter suggested itself to his mind, on noticing Bro. Binckes, the Secretary of the Boys' School, present, namely, the manner of electing the officers in connection with the Masonic charities. It was only right that all the brethren in the provinces should have an opportunity of voting in the election of the officers, and he hoped that ere long some steps would be taken to introduce a scheme by which the brethren might vote without being put to the expense and inconvenience of going to London. He concluded by proposing "The Health of the W.D.P.G.M. of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, Bro. W. Hickman, P.A.G.D.C. England," saying that in Bro. Hickman he had an efficient and able coadjutor, who was ever ready to render all the assistance he could. Bro. W. Hickman acknowledged the compliment, and, speaking of the chairman, said all cases involving questions of Masonic law and constitution which came before him he had thoroughly investigated before coming to a decision.—The Chairman gave "The Wardens and Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge," coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Frost, who responded.—Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre, Prov. G.S., proposed the next toast, "The Worshipful Masters, Officers, and brethren of the lodges in the province." It was a great gratification to him, as P.G.S., that these lodges were all working to the same end, and trying to carry out the principles they professed—the principles of brotherly love and charity. They were exceedingly fortunate in having to preside over them one so able as their chairman, who gave due consideration to every communication and representation that was made to him. He strongly advised the members of the various lodges to take care only to receive persons into their ranks who would be likely to do honour to the Craft, and not to keep solely in view the object of increasing their numbers, and in conclusion expressed his gratification that the Provincial Grand Lodge had been held this year in the good old town of Southampton. (Applause.) Bro. Faulkner, P.M. of the Cowes Lodge, and C. John Phillips, as W.M. of the senior entertaining lodge (the Royal Gloucester), responded, the latter, alluding to a remark from the P.G.M. as to the difficulty of distributing Grand Lodge honours, suggesting that when the exigencies of the case were such that but two of the Masons in the entertaining lodges, out of six in the town and neighbourhood, received Grand Lodge honours it was but fair to expect that the rule of the lodge should be strictly enforced, that only those in attendance should receive those honours. (Hear, hear.)

"The Masonic Charities" was next given, and acknowledged by Bro. Binckes. Bro. Morris Miles, P.M., as Secretary of the Southampton Masonic Benevolent Institution, also acknowledged the toast, and as Prov. G. Director of the Ceremonies for the day, and one of the Entertaining Committee, cordially thanked Bro. Nichols for the gratuitous use of the rink for that gathering. The meeting then separated.

In connection with the above, the W.M. of one of the entertaining lodges writes us as follows:—P.G. Lodges being moveable bodies, it may be of service to some brethren to give them a hint, by way of warning, based on our experience. To provide the banquet we contracted with one of the best known caterers in Hampshire to supply a cold collation at 7s. 6d. per head, "including a pint of wine." This "pint" some of us afterwards found to be the trade term for half a bottle. Content, the majority seemed to be, to accept that designation, and placing two wine tickets together, to secure a "bottle" of hock, claret, or sherry. Others, however, were somewhat more exacting, and one brother, who appeared profoundly versed in the mystery of how many ounces formed a pint, and how many a "bottle" of wine, on finding that he could not secure his "pound of flesh," roundly accused the entertaining lodges of having obtained money from him under false pretences. I leave your readers to judge alike the justice and the reasonableness of that not very Masonic accusation, by saying that the four entertaining lodges placed on the tables fifty bottles of Moët's and Perrier Jouvët's champagne, between exactly 120 brethren, to supplement the following bill of fare, with "a pint of wine" to each brother for 7s. 6d.:—Mayonnaise of salmon, lobster salad, dressed crabs, roast lamb, roast chicken, tongue, ham, veal and ham pies, pigeon pies, roast beef, spiced beef, galantine of veal, wine jelly, strawberry cream, French pastry, liqueur jelly, Crystal Palace puddings, fruit tarts, and dessert. The moral of this communication is that you will never satisfy some men, and that inexperienced brethren should not trust to technical trade terms in regard to a wine supply, but place beyond cavil what is the intention of their caterer, even though, as in our case, that would seem obvious enough, remembering that the ordinary hotel price of a bottle of wine is 5s., which would leave 2s. 6d. for the dinner and its provision and serving.

Bro. Thomas Brassey's able lecture on "A Colonial Naval Volunteer Force," delivered before the Royal Colonial Institute on June 7, has been republished in pamphlet form by Messrs. Longmans, Green, and Co.

A sea serpent has been captured at Penguin. It is described as fourteen feet long, and fifteen feet deep inches the widest part of the body. It has a mane twenty in. long, and the skin is like "polished silver." The creature is now on view.

Mr. F. Fowler, an American, essayed to walk from Boulogne to Folkestone on Tuesday in a kind of water boots shaped like canoes, and about eleven feet in length. The experimentalist propelled himself by means of a long paddle. He accomplished about eleven miles of his task when, in consequence of the roughness of the sea, he got into the pilot boat and landed at Sandgate.

HEREFORDSHIRE MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

Freemasons are in duty bound to do all they can, by precept and example, in order to increase the donations and subscriptions to the several Masonic Charities, and we have much pleasure, therefore, in recording that the Masons of the small province of Herefordshire have just buckled on their armour for this good work. As many provinces are still without a charity scheme for the support of the Masonic Institutions, we think an account of the preliminary proceedings of the Herefordians will be of interest—and we hope suggestive too—in lodges and provinces where hitherto but little has been done by way of obtaining personal votes for our Charities.

The first step was the proposition in the Palladian Lodge (120), Hereford, that a Masonic charity scheme should be established—the general nature and object of the association having been first explained—and the names of assenting brethren were enrolled.

The W.M. (Bro. W. Earle) afterwards called upon other Masons in the city and obtained their concurrence, and having received from the Secretaries of four lodges in the province lists of their members and of non-subscribing Masons in their locality, sent to each brother a copy of the following circular:—

THE ROYAL MASONIC CHARITIES.

Palladian Lodge, No. 120.

Hereford, August 1st, 1878.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You are aware that the Province of Herefordshire stands far behind other provinces in those charitable exertions necessary for the maintenance of these Charities, so much so, that whenever we have attempted to secure the election of a candidate, we have been dependent mainly on the generous assistance of other provinces, which we have been unable adequately to repay.

We feel it our incumbent duty to endeavour to remedy this state of things, and to give proper expression to the principles we profess. We, therefore, the undersigned members of the Palladian Lodge, have mutually pledged ourselves to each other to become "Life Subscribers" to one or more of the Charities, on the plan set forth in the annexed rules.

This plan has been found very efficient in the adjoining Province of Gloucestershire, and in other provinces, and we believe it will commend itself to your approval, as you will observe that every subscribing member will obtain a life subscribership.

To give our brethren the opportunity of uniting with us in this good work, we have resolved on calling a meeting of the lodges, and we earnestly invite you to favour us with your presence and support at a public meeting to be held in the Palladian Lodge Room, Green Dragon Hotel, Hereford, on Friday, the 9th of August, 1878, at four p.m. precisely, when Bro. Thos. Jowitt, D.P.G.M., will take the chair.

The business before the meeting will be:—

To adopt the rules herein stated, or such other rules as may be then agreed upon.

To elect a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary, and Committee.

To receive subscriptions from brethren present and absent.

If you should be unable to attend, may we request the kindness of your reply, addressed to Bro. W. Earle, Castle-street, Hereford, and we hope it will contain your consent to become a member.

We are, dear Sir and brother, yours truly and fraternally,

The rules referred to in the circular are given below.

On the 9th August the meeting was accordingly held in the lodge room of the Green Dragon Hotel, Hereford, under the presidency of Bro. Thos. Jowitt, D.P.G.M. for the province, who was supported by Bros. Orlando Shellard, P.P.G.S.W.; J. E. S. Hewitt, Prov. G.J.W.; J. C. Gregg, P.M.; John Bodenham, P.M.; Henry Gurney, P.M.; W. Earle, W.M.; Grenville Myer, I.P.M.; J. Marchant, J.D.; Joseph Thomas, S., and other Masons.

The President introduced the object of the meeting, and made an urgent appeal to the brethren to support the proposed scheme, and to do all in their power to induce others to join it, and, having mentioned that letters had been received from Bros. the Rev. John Buckle, P.G.S.W.; H. C. Beddoe, Treasurer of the Palladian Lodge; Major Griffiths T. Smith, J.W.; Wm. Thorne, S.; G. St. Garraway, and others, warmly approving the proposed scheme, and regretting their inability to be present at that meeting, he called upon Bro. Wm. Earle, the W.M. of the Palladian Lodge, to propose the first resolution.

On rising to do so, Bro. Wm. Earle said that before making the proposition entrusted to him he should like, for the information of the younger brethren present, to give a short sketch as to the nature, extent, and cost of the great Masonic Charities, three of which they hoped to benefit by the proposed association; and he proceeded to say that, in addition to numerous lodge and provincial charities, the funds of which were raised and dispensed in their several localities, there were four great Masonic charity organisations, all centred in Freemasons' Hall, London, and ably managed by separate Boards and officers. The first was the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, for the relief, by a single donation, of cases of temporary distress, and which institution extended its aid to all Freemasons, and to their widows and children. The grants so made varied in amount from £3 to £200, and were voted by the Board of the Institution after a thorough local investigation, the facts of each case having to be vouched for by the lodge which endorsed the application of the petitioner. This institution annually dispensed about £6000, and its funds were almost entirely supplied by the yearly contribution from each lodge of 2s. per member. I mention this institution, continued Bro. Earle, that my sketch may be complete, although our proposed scheme does not, and indeed cannot, in any way relate to it; but it is in aid of the three institutions I am now about to refer to that we hope to do more than the very little we have hitherto done. Of these three, the first in importance is the Institution of Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, which has an asylum at Croydon for about 30 inmates, and at the present time grants annuities to 145 aged Freemasons, and 146 widows of Freemasons, the males receiving £40 and the females £32 a year. These annuitants are scattered over the whole of England, and in the city of Hereford we have now one recipient from each fund. Next comes the Boys' School, at Wood Green, in the North of London, where 211 sons of Masons are clothed, maintained, and educated; and, thirdly, we have the Girls' School at St. John's Hill, Battersea Rise, which provides in like manner for 200 daughters of Freemasons. To both schools orphans and also the children of distressed Masons are admitted, and the Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations show that the education received by the pupils equals that of the best private schools, whilst the laws and reports of the establishment prove the excellence of the dietary and general arrangements. On leaving school small grants of money are made to the pupils, and situations are invariably open for them in the places of business and homes of Freemasons; the object being to place each child in as good a position in life as that which the father occupied. Annuitants are elected yearly, and children to the schools twice a year, by the subscribers' votes, the payment of £5 5s. to either institution giving to the donor two votes a year for life. The amount annually required for the support of the three institutions is £30,000, which they expend in nearly equal proportions; and for the large sum of £10,000 each institution is mainly dependent upon the annual contributions of the lodges and brethren. The published reports show that Herefordshire gives but 38 votes to both schools—not half the number it ought to supply. Bro. Earle concluded by saying that he believed the Masonic charitable institutions were good, and that their funds were justly and wisely administered, and that he had, therefore, much pleasure in proposing the following resolution:—

That an Association, to be called "The Herefordshire Masonic Charity Association," be formed, and that its object shall be the increase of the number of Life Subscriberships to the Royal Masonic Charities.

The President then read each of the suggested rules, which were separately discussed, and ultimately the following rules were adopted (we print them in extenso, because they have been settled by an able lawyer, assisted by brethren who have had much experience in the formation and management of similar associations):—

RULES.

1. The Association shall be called "The Herefordshire Masonic Charity Association," and its object shall be—the increase of the number of Life Subscriberships to the Royal Masonic Charities.

2. The Association shall consist of Freemasons, subscribing not less than one guinea per annum, and lodges and chapters subscribing not less than £2 2s. per annum.

3. All moneys subscribed shall become the property of the Association.

4. The Association shall be under the management of a committee consisting of a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary, and four other members, to be elected annually, and one member of the Association to be nominated by each lodge in the province. Two Auditors shall be appointed, who shall examine the accounts previous to each general meeting.

5. Each member shall, on admission, pay 2s. 6d. towards a fund for working expenses, and if the sum so contributed in any year be insufficient, the deficiency shall be subscribed by the members for that year, and be paid at the next general meeting.

6. Lewises (being minors) and ladies shall be allowed to become subscribers, but shall not be entitled to any voice in the management.

7. The first general meeting of the members shall be held in November, 1878, at Hereford, and afterwards annually in the month of July, at such place as the committee for the time being shall appoint.

8. At each annual meeting a statement of accounts shall be submitted, and a ballot shall be taken amongst the subscribers for the priority of presentation to as many Life Subscriberships as the amount of the fund then in the hands of the Treasurer will allow, subject to the following regulations:

(a) The Charity shall be selected by the successful member, and the sum paid to it by the Treasurer, either in his name or that of his nominee.

(b) Each member subscribing shall have one chance in the ballot for every annual subscription standing to his credit in the Treasurer's book at the time of the ballot, but shall be entitled only to one nomination in respect of each subscription.

(c) Each successful member shall give a promise, in writing, to continue the payments of his subscriptions, to the Treasurer, for the time being, until the full amount of the life subscription, together with any proportion of working expenses due from such member, is paid, and shall not be eligible for another nomination on account of such subscription.

(d) Every member whose subscription is not paid up previous to, or at the annual meeting, shall be excluded from the ballot at that meeting, and any member twelve months in arrear shall forfeit all monies paid in, and cease to be a member of the Association.

(e) The general meeting shall have power on the recommendation of the Committee to vote the right of selection to any member without ballot, and any member who has paid the amount of five annual subscriptions and the proportion of working expenses due from him, without drawing successfully, shall be entitled to a nomination in priority as Life Subscriber without ballot.

9. Any question arising upon these rules shall be referred to the Committee, whose decision on the matter submitted to them shall be final.

10. The rules shall be altered only by vote of two-thirds of the members present at a general meeting, and no proposal for alteration shall be entertained, unless twenty-eight days notice thereof be given, in writing, to the Secretary, who shall insert such proposed alteration in the circular calling the meeting.

11. The Chairman shall have a casting vote at every meeting in case there is a necessity to exercise it.

12. A special general meeting may be convened by the Secretary at any time upon a requisition signed by the President, Vice-President, or by five members, specifying the objects thereof, and the subjects to be taken into consideration—fourteen days' notice to each member must be given of such meeting.

13. The Committee shall meet in Hereford not less than fourteen days before each general meeting.

In conformity with the rules, the following Committee was then appointed:—Bros. Thomas Jowitt, President; Rev. John Buckle, Vice-President; H. C. Beddoe, Treas.; Wm. Earle, Sec.; and Orlando Shellard, J. E. S. Hewitt, J. C. Gregg, and H. Gurney, members of Committee.

The Committee will be completed by the appointment of an additional member from each of the four lodges in the province.

It was announced that 40 shares in the Association had already been taken.

A cordial vote of thanks to Bro. Jowitt for his very able presidency brought this successful meeting to a close.

Herefordshire unfortunately has but four lodges, with only 110 subscribing members, and yet with a little exertion and proper organisation an association has been formed with every prospect of contributing at least 50 guineas a year to our charity funds. Surely by the like means much may be done in other Provinces.

Lodges having something like 100 members may well have a charity scheme without the incorporation of other lodges, and in lodges of this size much may be said in favour of its own separate association.

An argument against these associations is the loss which may occur if a brother who has obtained a vote should die after paying a portion only of its cost or if from other causes his subscription should cease; but the three Institutions have suggested and are carrying out a simple plan whereby losses of this description are avoided.

ANNUAL PICNIC OF THE NEPTUNE LODGE, No. 1264.

Of all the pleasant days' runs into the country taken by the brethren of Liverpool lodges (and there is no doubt the majority of these are pleasant, being in the nature of "refreshment" after labour) there are none attended with so much delightful excitement and pleasurable experiences as those which have been annually held in connection with the Neptune Lodge, No. 1264, a lodge which deservedly holds a high and honourable position in the province of West Lancashire. The picnic of 1878, which took place on Thursday, the 15th inst., was no exception to the general rule, and as the weather was charming, and the company numerous and determinedly set on enjoyment, there was nothing to mar the full measure of the amusements.

The scene of the picnic was the Birkdale Hotel, near Southport, pleasantly situated by the sea, and all the arrangements must have thoroughly commended themselves to those who were present, the presiding genius and moving power of the whole picnic machinery being Bro. Joseph Korn, W.M., who was indefatigable in his efforts to promote the happiness of the large company assembled under the banner of the "Old Neptune."

The first section of the ladies and brethren, who numbered about 100, left Tithebarn-street Station shortly after 9 o'clock, arriving at Birkdale about twenty minutes past ten, and the amusement arrangements for the day were commenced without delay. The second contingent started between eleven and twelve o'clock, and reached the scene of festivities in due course.

The call for dinner was duly announced at 12.30, when about 120 sat down to a most sumptuous banquet, provided in a style which reflected great credit upon Mr. Pilson, the manager. The repast was presided over by Bro. Joseph Korn, W.M. (supported by the brethren and ladies), in a manner which did credit to the Neptune Lodge.

After dinner the W.M. gave "The Queen," and the National Anthem was sung by Bro. Walton.

The W.M. next proposed "The Prince and Princess of Wales," and the song "God bless the Prince of Wales," was well sung by Bro. Linaker.

Bro. Burgess, P.M. 1325, in eloquent terms gave "The Health of the W.M.," who responded in a few well-chosen remarks.

Bro. Joseph Wood, Treas. 1094 (Freemason), next gave the toast of "The Ladies," and in doing so said their presence always added lustre and brilliancy to every assembly, and certainly nowhere more than at a picnic.

Bro. Hammer, W.M., responded in a short speech, as brevity in speaking was the order of the day, all being wishful to allow the ladies to get to their amusements, which they at once proceeded to do on the lawn, when every conceivable game was brought into play both for ladies and brethren during the afternoon, the W.M. exerting himself to the utmost to make every one at home.

At six o'clock tea was laid out in a tent on the lawn. When ample justice was done to this repast the ladies and brethren adjourned to the large room in the Hotel, where the remainder of the toasts and songs was gone through.

The W.M. proposed "The D.p. G.M., the Prov. G. M. and Prov. G. Officers," which was responded to by Bro. J. Wood.

The W.M. proposed "The P.M.'s," which was responded to by Bro. Cotter, W.M.

"The Absent Seafaring Brethren" was responded to by Bro. Captain Campbell in a very humorous speech.

"The Picnic Committee" was next proposed from the chair, for the very able way it had been carried out, and responded to by Bro. Hughes.

The W.M. next proposed "The Neptune Lodge," and enlarged upon the qualities of the good ship.

As the ladies had played such a prominent part in the day's proceedings, their healths were again proposed by Bro. Burgess, W.M., in very flattering terms.

The next toast, in which all agreed cordially, was "The Health of the Management," for the very creditable way in which the day's proceedings had been carried out. Mr. Pilson, being called in, thanked the brethren for this mark of their appreciation and kindness. The day's proceedings were now drawing to the end, and the toast "To all Poor and Distressed" brought it to a close.

The whole party now made for the train, which left at 9.15, and arrived in Liverpool at 10.15, all being fully delighted with the day's outing.

AUTUMN GRIEVANCES.

Autumn is the time for the airing of grievances. People who are not holiday making, and who are, unite in finding fault with something or somebody. Editors are overwhelmed with complaints from all parts of the world. "Paterfamilias" is disgusted with the incivility of the porters on the Northern of France Railway; "Justitia" asks why people are to submit to the imposition of facchini at Naples; "Once bitten, twice afraid," solemnly warns tourists against the hotels in Rome; "Tumbler" demands why the authorities don't put railings along the cliffs from Dover to Folkestone; "Mal-de-Mer" complains of the windy weather in the Channel, and ironically asks when the Straits tunnel will be built; "A Tourist" complains of the prices of the hotel-keepers up the river, and threatens them with bankruptcy, by declaring that he shall cease to patronise them in future; and so on, ad finitum. The ladies not to be outdone in the race, lift up their silvery voices to swell the tumult, and complaints, many and grievous, are daily piled upon our table. From one fair damsel comes a piteous wail, blended with righteous indignation, anent the stupidity of the over-rated French glove-makers. Would you believe it? Her twenty-four button gloves, just sent direct from Paris, are one size from the wrist to the elbow. "Do they suppose," cries she, "that her wrist is as thick as her elbow?" She was compelled to put "gussets" in herself. Another young lady asks, "Where are the dressmakers?" in such a defiant tone that we feel quite frightened, and hasten to reply in diplomatic terms, lest we should incur a personal visitation, that we really are very sorry, we wish we could make dresses, and we would do it for nothing, except the reward of a seraphic smile. "No dressmakers to be had!" cries our correspondent (as if we could help that!) "What is the world coming to?" Another, a housewife, sternly utters a note of warning about the dearness of meat, and sends a grim list of prices, as they are, and prices as they were when she went to house-keeping, which must have been a good many years ago, judging by that list. How we bless the impersonality of the English editor, or we should no more have dared to add that observation than we should venture to tell a lady she was too old to dance, or hint that she was not a Venus de Milo in point of beauty! Then comes a petulant letter about the rude behaviour of young men in places of public resort—Westbourne Grove, and Regent Street, and Piccadilly—which complaint is rather late in the season, as such young men as there are now in these resorts are quite beneath the notice of a young lady who dates her letter from a fashionable West End Square—and how is it that she is still in town, by the way? But what does she say: "The young men walk arm-in-arm, three abreast, and stare at every one." Every lady, we presume, at least every pretty one. Well it is very ill bred to "take the stage" in this fashion; but the modern gilded youth has not the courtly manners of its ancestors; though to be sure my Lord Rochester carried off a young lady in the middle of Whitehall, and that was worse than staring. Our correspondent must console herself. We knew a lady who when people stared said, "I always flatter myself they find something worth staring at."

As to the complaints of servants, we have said nothing, because they rattle down upon us in a breathless shower, as the wooden balls showered on the head of Betsey Prig; and besides they are a constant quantity. All the year round servants are the most wicked, slatternly, unprincipled, ugly, dirty, impudent, unbearable—our pen must stop. We leave the ladies to continue, for if there is one thing of which the British lady wears not, it is in enlarging on the enormities of Mary Jane.—West London Express.

LETTERS FROM OUR OWN IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

NO. I.—INTRODUCTORY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

At this season of the year, when you require (as I know well, for I have been behind the scenes) a considerable amount of "padding," even for the usually well-filled columns of the Freemason, I think it not amiss to occupy your space with some of my lucubrations. Large gooseberries and tripartite births will not interest your readers, and, therefore, it has forcibly struck me that I might well seek, with your kind permission, as they used to say of old "liberate animam meam," or as our Scottish friends would put it, to "make a deliverance" on sundry topics of Masonic interest which have for some time served to stir my bile, or rouse my susceptibilities. And accordingly I come forward as a Masonic reformer in "petto," to hold forth, "de omnibus rebus et quibusdam aliis," in the cheery pages of the Freemason, and if, like all reformers, from Masaniello down to the Iconoclast, mine probably, and properly will be only "monkey's allowance," that is to say, "more kicks than halfpence," be it so. I shall only shrug my shoulders with philosophic indifference. Imitating Martius Curtius, I am quite prepared to engulf myself in so good a cause, and no better arena can I find for my "happy dispatch" than the now popular columns of the Freemason.

I propose, then, in subsequent communications, to point out some prevalent weaknesses and shortcomings affecting our English Masonic lodges, and that profession of English Masonry in which we all take such a patriotic and fraternal pride.

If in the remarks I am privileged to make I shall seem to deal too harshly with amiable frailties, and if I appear to others too cynical or too ecstatic, if my pen be held to be dipped in gall rather than honey, let them call to mind that "Diogenes" has his privileges on the "press" now, as in his "tub" of old, and that his "occupation" would indeed be "gone," if he would only say "smooth things," if he only allowed himself to dilate with "bated breath" or "simpering smiles" on "evils many and corruptions great."

But a truce to heroics and "high falutin." I trust that when your readers peruse these letters of mine, in all the irrepressible distinctness of the Freemason's type, they will not have much cause of complaint "anent" them. Mine is a fraternal, and I think a well-meant attempt to point out, (I feel sure in no ungentle spirit), some little inconsistencies and anomalies which injure our Masonic profession and practice, which weaken our legitimate influence as a most useful and beneficent Order, and are "spots" in our "fasts of charity."

Such as they are, whether approved of or not, I shall, dear Sir and Brother, seek to elaborate them under your auspices, hoping, nay feeling assured that you will discover in them, one and all, little to criticise and nothing to repudiate.

Believe me, dear Sir and Brother, yours very fraternally,
YOUR OWN IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

Among the most instructive developments of modern civilisation are the international exhibitions which, commencing in London in 1851, under the inspiration and auspices of the late sagacious and public spirited Prince Albert, have been succeeded by more extended and comprehensive ones, closing with our own glorious Centennial.

The French Exposition of 1878 embraces in its scope the productions and results of every industry, art, and science, as well as their processes and modes of operation. This is done not merely for the purposes of competition and in the distribution of prizes, but also and more especially with the object of passing in review, under the scrutiny of the most accomplished experts and men of science, all of the fruits of the skill, industry, and exact condition and the comparative merits or defects of the industrial development of each nation and of each description of article or process could be set forth. The progress which such examination indicates of the exhibits, and to describe the highest standards of excellence, is my aim while in Paris.

From the commencement of the industrial epoch which dates from the London Exhibition of 1851, the profound significance and value of such exhibitions as this have been realised by the people and governments of civilised nations. Their beneficent influences are many and widespread; they advance human knowledge in all directions. Through the universal language of the products of labour the artisans of all countries hold communication; ancient prejudices are broken down; are fraternised; generous rivalries in the peaceful fields of industry are excited; the tendencies to war are lessened; and a better understanding between labour and capital is fostered. It is gratifying to note that these great exhibitions are planned and executed in the interests of the mass of the people. In the present instant those industries, products, and organisations designed to promote the material and moral well-being of the people are made prominent, and the underlying animating spirit and impulse of the whole plan are for the advancement, prosperity, and happiness of the people of all nations. One of the most salutary results is the promotion of an appreciation of the true dignity of labour, and its paramount claims to consideration as the basis of national wealth and power.

Such exhibitions have become national necessities and duties, and as such it may be expected that they will be repeated again and again hereafter.—New York Corner Stone.

Mulum in Barbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

OLD LONDON LODGES.—No. III.

In 1736 No. 61 was King's Arms, Cateaton-street; No. 62, a lodge at Northampton; No. 63, Bear and Clarion, Butcher Row; No. 64, Rose, without Temple Bar; 65, St. John's Hill, Chichester, (said to be constituted in the reign of Julius Cæsar); 66, Red Lion, Canterbury; 67, Castle, St. Giles's; 68, Vine, Long Acre; 69, Boy and Grapes, Bloomsbury Market; 70, a lodge at Lyme Regis; 71, Rose, in Cheapside; 72, a lodge in Bengal; 73, another at Lincoln; 74, University Lodge, Bear and Arrow, Butcher Row; 75, Rainbow Coffee House, York Buildings; 76, Queen's Head, Old Bailey; 77, Black Lion, Jockey Fields; 78, a lodge at Bury St. Edmund's; 79, vacant; 80, a lodge at Macclesfield; 81, another at Bury St. Edmund's; 82, Three Tuns, in Newgate-street; 83, Three Tuns, in Smithfield; 84, Freeman's Coffee House, Cheapside; 85, King's Arms, Russell-street, Covent-garden; 86, King's Arms, Southwark; 87, a lodge at Leigh; 88, another at Wolverhampton; 89, Rummer and Horse Shoe, Drury-lane; 90, Au Tours d'Argent, Paris; 91, the Sun, Fleet-street; 92, Antwerp City, Threadneedle-street; 93, Goose and Gridiron, St. Paul's Churchyard; 94, Oxford Arms, Ludgate-street; 95, Horn and Feathers, Wood-street; 96, White Horse, Ipswich; 97, a lodge at Exeter; 98, Duke of Lorraine, Suffolk-street; 99, Leg, Fleet-street; 100, George, in Butcher-row; 101, Crown, in Upper Moorfields; 102, Royal Vineyard, St. James's Park; 103, Ship, without Temple Bar; 104, a lodge at Derby; 105, a lodge at Bolton-le-Moors.

In 1738 the following is the list of the London Lodges: 41, Fountain Tavern, Snow-hill; 42, Bacchus, in Greville-street; 43, Vine Tavern, Long Acre; 44, Bacchus, Bloomsbury Market; 45, Globe Tavern, Old Jewry; 46, Punchon Coffee House, York-buildings; 47, Queen's Head, Old Bailey; 48, Black Lion, in Jockey Fields; 49, Two Angels and Crown, in Little St. Martin's Lane; 50, Three Tuns, Newgate-street; 51, Three Tuns, in Smithfield; 52, Old Antwerp Tavern, Threadneedle-street; 53, Fountain Tavern, Southwark; 54, King's Arms, Southwark; 55, Horse Shoe and Rummer, Drury-lane; 56, Sun Tavern, Fleet-street; 57, King's Head, Tower-street; 58, King and Queen, in Rosemary-lane; 59, Oxford Arms, Ludgate-street; 60, King's Arms Tavern, Dorset-street; 61, King's Arms Tavern, Piccadilly; 62, Hoop and Griffin, Leadenhall-street; 63, Crown, Upper Moorfields; 64, Royal Vineyard, St. James's Park; 65, Royal Standard, in Leicestershire.

Thus it will be noted that No. 61 in 1736 has become 42 in 1738, and 63 in 1736 has been changed into 41, though I do not profess to explain the metamorphosis.

No. 64 in 1736 seems to have disappeared in 1738, while 67 in 1736 has become 44 in 1738, and 68 in 1736 43 in 1738. No. 71 in 1736, and 74 in 1736, seem to be "Non Sunt" in 1738—a curious evidence of the shortness of lodge life in those days; 75 and 76 in 1738 are respectively 46 and 47 in 1738. It may be that 45 in 1738, Globe Tavern, is identical with the 71 of 1736, and that there is a mistake in the alleged date of consecration, and I think it is very likely to be the case. No. 77 in 1736 is 48 in 1738, while 49 in 1738 cannot be traced, curiously enough, in 1736. No. 82 in 1736 is the same as 50 in 1738, and 83 in 1736 answers to 51 in 1738. No. 84 in 1736 seems to have been changed into 52 in 1738, and 85 in 1736 to 53 in 1738. No. 86 in 1736 is the same as 54 in 1738, just as 89 in 1736 is identical with 55 in 1738. No. 91 in 1736 is the same as 56 in 1738, while 92 in 1736 is the same as 57 in 1738, and 93 in 1736 is the same as 58 in 1738. No. 94 in 1736 is the 59 in 1738 and the 95 of 1736 has become the 60 of 1738. The 98 of 1736 has become the 61 of 1738. The 99 of 1736 is apparently the 62 of 1738, while 100 to 1736 seems to be wanting in 1738. The 101 of 1736 is the 63 of 1738, and the 102 of 1736 is the 64 of 1738. The 103 of 1736 has become 65 in 1738.

MASONIC STUDENT.

OLD LONDON LODGES

Like the "Masonic Student," I have been a diligent investigator of old Masonic Lodges for many years, and have accumulated a large number of notes, which time alone will enable me to utilize and arrange in order.

The early lists are very confusing indeed, for evidently much latitude was permitted to the engravers from 1723, and it is not until 1770 that order reigns supreme, though even from that period, perfection was but slowly attained.

The changes in the numeration was the chief cause of the confusion as the relative positions of the lodges were frequently considerably altered, and quite a fanciful series of arrangements prevailed from time to time. The periods of change were 1740, 1756, 1770, 1781, and 1792, during the last century under the "Moderns"; those for the "Ancients" being at all times and seasons.

In the list of Cole's of 1763 (Masonic Magazine) No. 239 was held at Exeter, in that of 1774 it is numbered 48; 247, South Carolina, became 101; while 246, London, became 200, and with several other lodges we find the numbers radically altered. There were sometimes reasons for this doubtless, but the difficulties attending the study are none the less real. In the older lodges the differences are occasionally still more strange, and it is only by the discovery of a few of the missing lists that of late years some have been adjusted.

"Masonic Student" alludes to several of the numerical alterations in the first twenty lodges of A.D. 1736 register. With all our care we were once caught "napping" by Bro. R. F. Gould, P.M. 92, as we had failed to notice the fact that the relative numerical positions of 8, 9, and 10 of Constitutions 1738 were reversed a few years later, 8 remaining at 8, 9 becoming 7 and 10, being altered to 6. These were respectively the 9, 10 and 11 of the lists of 1730—4 of Pine.

The original number one and number four having remained in 1738, and became in fact one and two. Original number two was the first to succumb, and number three did not wait long in following such a poor example.

Original No. 4 was once struck off, but out of compliment to Bro. Payne, P.G.M. was reinstated, and strange to say, though from 1738 Constitutions it was ranked as second until the "Union of 1813" it afterwards had to assume its original number of four, at which it still remains; No. 1 having to take rank as number two, the present numbers one and three having their position from 1813 because of belonging to the "Athol" Constitution—I give a few of the changes of the first twenty lodges from an early date, as a matter for curious study.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

THE CONSTITUTIONS OF 1746.

I am anxious to know if any brother has a copy of this issue, which was printed and sold by J. Robinson, at the Golden Lion, in Ludgate-street, in the vulgar year of Masonry 1746.

It is in fact, as Bro. Hughan has pointed out, a "replica" of the edition of 1738, in another size, being on large paper, with the reproduction of the frontispiece of 1733.

PATENT POTASH SOAP
(Registered).
FOR USE IN COLD OR WARM WATER,
Is the Best and most Economical Soap for Laundry and General Purposes ever produced. It is warranted not to contain anything that will injure the most delicate material; at the same time it Cleanses, Purifies, and Whitens Linen in a superior manner at Less Cost, with Less Labour, and Less Wear and Tear to the Fabric than any other Soap.

One Pound of this Soap is equal to two of best Yellow Soap in its cleansing properties. It is admirably suited for use in any description of Washing Machine. The Family Wash can be accomplished in half the time, at half the cost, and in a very superior manner, without any possible injury to the clothes. Fuel is saved, the annoyance of steam in the house is abolished, and the clothes are Cleansed and Purified better than with any other Soap. The Patent Potash Soap dissolves and discharges the dirt from the linen with very little rubbing, and requires no Soda, Washing Powder, or Bleaching Powder whatever. For Woollens, Flannels, &c., it is invaluable, and for Coloured Goods it preserves and revives the most delicate colours. After one trial no other Soap will be tolerated. It is an excellent Soap for the Toilet, the Bath, and for Shaving.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Votes of the Governors and Subscribers are earnestly solicited on behalf of

META BELL BRASIER.

The following letter, which appeared in the Freemason of the 20th July, will fully explain the merits of the case.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I trust that you will give space for the following letter, in aid of a girl named "Meta Bell Brasier," whose case is so unique and exceptional that no words from me would be needed to draw attention to it, as any body thoroughly reading the details cannot fail to understand and appreciate; but as a rule, the circulars are only carelessly glanced at and then thrown into the fire or waste paper basket; I wish to attract the notice of your readers to a case whose claims only require to be known to receive the support of those whose votes are disengaged. Indeed, so great is the claim, that in my opinion, other claims which have one or more chances, might fairly lay in abeyance to secure her election. I know, or rather feel, that as a rule, you might reasonably decline a letter for any particular case, but I do believe that you could afford to insert this on behalf of a candidate whose position stands almost if not quite alone. I beg to state that I was, and am, unacquainted with any of the family, but when the case was pointed out to me by one who had known the father and family well and for many years, I at once saw the great need of every exertion, as there are only three vacancies at the ensuing election, so I temporarily gave up a case which could better afford to wait.

The case is as follows: The girl's father was initiated into Freemasonry in 1853, died in May, 1878, leaving six daughters unprovided for, the youngest of whom is the subject of my letter, and should she not succeed in the ensuing election, her age will preclude her from another attempt; now, the great claim consists in these facts, that our brother was a subscribing member for over twenty-five years, that he was a constant subscriber to, and took an active interest in all the Institutions, and, brethren, this is the only chance we have of showing in a small way our appreciation of one who so ably performed his work and assisted the Craft during his life, let it not be said that the Craft generally failed to render so small a tribute to one so worthy of our remembrance.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
CHARLES JOHN PERCEVAL,
V.P. of all the Institutions.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

ALEXANDRA PALACE LODGE (No. 1541).—On Saturday last this young but prosperous lodge held a most interesting meeting, over which Bro. Haigh, the very efficient W.M., presided, assisted by his excellent working officers—viz., Bro. Lee, S.W.; Bro. Daniel, J.W.; Bro. Larchin, S.D.; Bro. Kensington, J.D.; Bro. Denison, I.G.; and Bro. Palmer, P.M. The lodge was attended by a numerous and distinguished number of visitors and members. The initiation of Messrs. Jarman, Heridge, and Clark into Masonry was performed by the W.M. in his usual impressive manner, as was the passing of Bro. Boyle, and the raising of Bros. Burrow and Brookman. After the very arduous labours of the lodge, the W.M., his officers, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall to welcome about thirty ladies, who had been specially invited to the banquet. At the conclusion of the excellent dinner, provided in Bros. Bertram and Roberts' usual elegant style, Bro. Ward rendered grace "for these and all Thy mercies," in the most effective manner, his splendid voice and execution being highly appreciated by the company. The usual loyal toasts being followed by that of "The Grand Officers," was ably and appropriately responded to by Bro. Buss, the courteous and obliging Assistant Grand Secretary. Bro. Palmer, P.M., in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," took occasion to dilate upon the prosperous state of the lodge, and to thank the W.M. and the other brethren who had been so assiduous in promoting so agreeable and pleasurable a meeting. The W.M., in his eloquent reply, strongly urged the cause of the several Masonic Charitable Institutions. Bro. Stacey, in proposing the toast of "The Ladies," felt convinced that this meeting augured well for an annual invitation to the ladies. Bro. Rubenstein replied in a very happy vein on their behalf. The pleasures of the evening were much enhanced by the excellent singing of Miss Edith Daniel and Mrs. Shipway, as also by Bro. Ward, Miss Bennett and Mrs. Shipway giving with much eclat many concerted pieces on the pianoforte; Bro. Dyte, P.M., Treasurer, and Bro. Gush rendering good services as Stewards.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Israel (No. 1502).—The last quarterly meeting of this lodge before the annual installation took place on Monday evening, the 19th August, at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. There were present Bros. Alexander Jones, W.M.; S. Schonstadt, S.W.; Rev. H. D. Marks, J.W.; Maurice Hart, I.P.M. and Hon. Sec.; R. Robinson, P.M., D.C.; S. J. Waring, S.D.; S. J. Henochsberg, J.D.; M. P. Tueski, I.G.; J. Saber, S.S.; W. G. Veale, Org.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. Among the private members present were Bros. A. J. Henochsberg, P.M.; H. S. Tobise; L. Courtenay, S.W. 1609; A. Hart, W.M. 724; B. Levy, L. Barnett, H. M. Silver, A. Isaacs, B. Woolf, J. Lazarus, M. Baum, A. Zolki, M. H. Edwards, E. J. Frazer, J. R. Grant, D. Gabriel, sen., H. Goldbard, H. Henochsberg, Sol. Jacobs, A. Levy, E. S. Myer, A. Rabau, L. Simmons, E. Scott, B. D. Smaje, &c. The visitors included Bros. J. L. Bowes, P.P.G.J.W. Cumb. and West.; Barnett, W.M. 249; J. Heyes, P.M. 249; McLaren, 1380; Ballard, P.M. 724; Henry Leslie, 1609, &c. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, and the ballot taken for a candidate, the W.M. initiated Messrs. Ansell and Ehrenfeldt into the mysteries of the First Degree. The tools were impressively explained by the J.W., and the ancient charge admirably delivered by the S.W. The J.D. on behalf of Bro. Wright (from whom a letter of apology for non-attendance was read in consequence of family sickness) presented Bro. Wright's account of his stewardship at the festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls in May last. A cordial vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Wright for so faithfully representing the Lodge of Israel on the occasion. The brethren then adjourned to the banqueting hall for supper, and during the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. The toast of "The Fund of Benevolence in connection with the Lodge of Israel" (one of the chief glories of its constitution) was received with especial enthusiasm, and when Bro. R. Robinson, P.M., who submitted the toast, made an appeal to the benevolence of the newly-initiated brethren (Bros. Ansell and Ehrenfeldt) they both gave practical proof of the truth of their reply to the "charity test" by contributing liberally to the excellent institution. During the evening Bro. Isaacs sang "The Old Arm Chair," with fine taste and feeling. Bros. M. Hart, P.M., and W. G. Veale, Organist, delighted the brethren with the fine old duett "The Minute Gun at Sea;" Bro. L. Courtenay, S.W. 1609, recited with pure and telling dramatic effect, "Poor Mary, the Maid of the Inn;" Bro. H. Henochsberg gave a humorous refrain suitable for the seaside season called "Bathing;" Bro. the Rev. H. D. Marks sang "The Village Blacksmith" with much effect; and by special desire Bro. M. Hart contributed "Nancy Lee" to the general harmony of a pleasant evening. The brethren separated shortly after 10 o'clock, amply satisfied both with "labour and refreshment."

Royal Arch.

PORTSEA.—Royal Sussex Chapter (No. 342).—An emergency meeting of this old chapter was held on Monday, the 26th inst., for the purpose of exalting candidates into this Supreme Degree, a necessity in consequence of the considerable work which this chapter has to perform, under the successful management of its zealous and enthusiastic officers. There were present M.E. Comp. A. Riddell, Z; G. A. Green, H.; R. Twiney, J.; E. S. Main and S. R. Ellis, P.Z.'s; J. Willmott, P.S.; and many other officers and companions; likewise visiting Comps. Clay and J. Clark, the much esteemed and able Principal Sojourner of the Havant Chapter, 804. Only one candidate attended, but the ceremony was most creditably performed; the rendering of the instructive and interesting lecture as well as the important work of the Principal Sojourner deserving high commendation. After the chapter was closed the companions adjourned to the banquet room and duly honoured the usual toasts. There was no banquet, as the Principal and companions endeavour to restrict excessive Masonic dining as much as possible. Much innocent amusement was occasioned over the refreshments from the honest rivalry existing between the respective Principal Sojourners belonging to Havant and the Royal Sussex Chapters, which has resulted in both companions being now regarded as second to none in this province in discharging this important office.

Ancient and Accepted Rite.

On Thursday, the 22nd inst., the usual meeting of the Cornwall Chapter of Rose Croix met at the handsome and well appointed Masonic Hall, Public Rooms, Truro, when there were present Ill. Bros. Col. Peard, 30°, P.M.W.S., acting M.W.S.; W. J. Hughan, 31°, P.M.W.S.; Chas. Truscott, jun. 30°, 1st Gen.; and the following Sov. Princes: Ex. and Perfect Bro. W. Mason, R.; A. Luke, and Herald; J. J. Taylor, Capt. of Guard; T. Hocking, Organist; W. Rooks, Outer Guard; R. Carter, W. M. Rogers, Capt. Simcoe, T. Hart, S. H. F. Cox. The chapter was duly opened by Col. Peard, when Very Ill. Bro. General Doherty C. B., 33°, Deputy Inspector General for the W.S. district, was announced as in attendance. The gallant officer was received with due honours under the Arch of Steel, and the business of the chapter was then proceeded with. The minutes were read and confirmed, and the ballot taken for Bro. Albert Elford, P.M., Prov. G. Steward, who was unanimously elected, and being present was duly installed and perfected a Knight of the Pelican and Eagle and Sovereign Prince, Rose Croix, 18th degree, the intermediate degrees having been previously communicated to the candidate by Ill. Bro. Hughan. Ill. Bro. Emra Holmes, 31°, P.M.W.S. of the Victoria Chapter, Ipswich (who was present as a visitor), was proposed as a joining member of this chapter by Col. Peard, and seconded by Bro. Hughan, who took occasion to remark that although Bro. Holmes might not be known to some of the brethren present, he might say that he had been a correspondent of his (Bro. Hughan's) for years, and he was an enthusiastic supporter of and writer on the High Degrees, particularly the Order of the Temple and the Ancient and Accepted Rite. Bro. Hughan also moved that a vote of ten guineas should be given to the Charities and placed on his list, as he had undertaken a Stewardship, having received large subscriptions from several brethren. Our learned brother said that it was said that the High Degrees swallowed up money that ought to go to the Charities, and that the brethren who joined these degrees did not properly support those Institutions. He found, on the contrary, that the brethren who belonged to the High Degrees were the best supporters of the great Masonic Charities. Bro. Hughan's motion was agreed to nem. con. Ill. Bro. Gen. Doherty addressed the brethren in complimentary terms, and said that he was pleased to observe that when brethren could not attend they mostly sent a written excuse explaining the reason of their absence. In some chapters he could name this was not done, and he thought it was but a small matter for members to write a note of explanation when they were prevented attending. The brethren then separated, the chapter being closed, and there being no banquet.

INSTRUCTION.

WHITTINGTON LODGE (No. 862.) At the meeting on Wednesday 28th inst., at the Red Lion, Poppins

Court, Fleet Street, Bro. Thompson, W.M.; Hallam, S.W. Drury, J.W.; Long, Preceptor; and others were present. The ceremony of Initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., after which he vacated the chair to Bro. Alcock who then very ably performed the ceremony of installation some of the Sections of the 1st Lecture were then worked by the brethren. Bro. Collinson of the Mother Lodge was elected a joining member, and Bro. Hallam the W.M.; for the ensuing week. A vote of thanks having been accorded to Bro. Alcock for his able working the lodge was closed.

SUPREME COUNCIL 33rd DEGREE NEW ZEALAND.

The second anniversary of the Supreme Council for New Zealand was celebrated at Dunedin, on Friday, June 14th. The representatives of it resident there, together with the members of the "Sphint" Rose Croix Chapter and Templar Priory of Otago, were entertained at the Grange by Ill. Bro. J. Hyde Harris, 33°, L.G.C. Several toasts were proposed, and all responded to most heartily. They comprised "The Queen and Craft," "Supreme Council 33° and Grand Orient of Egypt," "The Supreme Council of New Zealand," "Absent and Honorary Members of same (coupled with the name of Bro. W. Officer, 33°, Edinburgh)," "The Memory of the late Ill. Bro. Thiel, 33°," "The Members of the Rose Croix Chapters under the Supreme Council of New Zealand," "The Priory of Otago," "Our good Host."

An especial compliment was paid to the name of Bro. Officer, in speaking of him as one who, notwithstanding his onerous business engagements in the old country, had yet bestowed much time and attention upon Masonic matters in general, besides evincing a warm interest in the Supreme Council of New Zealand, by using his influence in promoting and furthering its establishment and success.

The brethren separated after having passed a most agreeable evening, and one of a nature tending to bind the members together in the bonds of that fraternal feeling which has ever been the ornament of the Craft.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this Institution, met on Thursday at Freemasons' Hall, Col. Creation, V.P., in the chair. There were also present Bros. A. H. Tattershall, E. H. Finney, R. B. Webster, James E. Peters, Thomas W. White, E. R. Shervill, Arthur E. Gladwell, Thomas Massa, H. Browne, F. R. W. Hedges, Sec., H. Massey (Freemason.)

The Secretary's proposal that the Guarantee Society be accepted as his surety for the £500 was accepted.

Bro. Brown gave notice of motion for next meeting that the Institution pay the premium.

Two children were accepted as candidates for the election in April next.

The Chairman gave notice of motion for election of four children instead of three at the October election. He also gave notice of motion for the Quarterly Committee in October, "That a Sub-Committee of five brethren be appointed to consider and report to the Quarterly Committee in January next, on the advisability of revising the Laws of the Institution."

A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the proceedings.

CONSECRATION OF THE COLERIDGE LODGE, No. 1750.

The ceremony of the consecration of this new lodge took place at Clevedon, near Bath, on Saturday, the 17th inst. The lodge room is at Sandringham House, and has been fitted and furnished in the most complete manner, the decoration of the room having been successfully carried out by Mr. Hewlett, of Clevedon. The ceremony of consecration was most ably performed by the V.W. Bro. Else, D.P.G.M., and the officers of P.G.L. of Somerset. Bro. W. Ling, P.M. 1199, was installed W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bros. T. Barnes, P.M. 108, and W. F. Langworthy, 1199, Wardens.

The following were amongst the brethren present: Bros. R. C. Else, D.P.G.M. Somerset; A. W. Adair, P.P.G.M. Somerset; E. Payne, P.G.D., P.G.T.; F. R. Prideaux, P.G.S., P.M. 291, P.P.G.D.C.; S. Bryant, P.P.G.S.W. Somerset, T. Barnes, P.M. 108, P.P.G.S.W. Bristol; H. W. Batton, 291, P.M., P.G.D.C.; George Knight, 291, P.M., P.P.G.S.D.; J. Mountevens, 1199, P.M., P.P.G.A.P.; W. M. The ceremony having ended, the brethren, who completely filled the lodge room, dined at the Royal Hotel, the number sitting down being fifty-three.

After dinner the usual Masonic toasts were proposed and duly honoured, and numerous were the wishes expressed for the success of the new lodge.

CONSECRATION OF THE LODGE OF OBEDIENCE, No. 1753.

The Grand Lodge of Freemasons of the Province of Devon was held on Monday, the 26th inst., at Okehampton, and the principal feature of the meeting was the constitution and consecration of the above lodge. For some time past a number of Freemasons living in Okehampton and the neighbourhood have felt the want of a lodge for the district, and a few set about to get the desired object, the result being that a lodge was on Monday opened with the usual ceremony and honours, and Bro. William Brodie, W.M. 1254, was installed its first Master. The day was observed in Okehampton as a general holiday, and the pleasant festivities will live in the recollection of those who took a prominent part in the day's proceedings. Heavy showers fell during the day, but although it marred the enjoyment of individuals, it did not seriously interfere with the ceremonies. Brethren attended from great distances to take part in the duties of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and the procession was witnessed by a large number of the inhabitants and visitors. Fortunately no rain fell during the march of the procession, which was headed by the band of the First Devon Militia, under the conductorship of Bro. George James. The band also played during the banquet, between the showers, in the square in front of the White Hart Hotel.

The Committee of Petitions met at the Town Hall at 10.30, by the courtesy of the Mayor, W. Ponsford, Esq., and the representatives of the various lodges attended for the purpose of discussing and deciding on the different claims upon the funds. £85 was voted, on recommendation, for apportionment to Masonic charities. On the motion of Bro. S. Jones, P.M. 112, P.P.G.S.D., the sum of fifty guineas was granted from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and it was agreed that the sum should be added to Bro. S. Jones list, as Steward; and the sum of £50 was voted to the Fortescue Annuity Fund.

The Provincial Grand Lodge met at the Schoolroom, North lane, at 12.30, and the following Provincial Grand Officers and brethren were present:—Bros. Rev. John Huyshe, P.G.C., P.G.M.; L. P. Metham, D.P.G.M.; Fredk. W. Williams, P.S.G.W.; Walter Hylton-Jolliffe, P.G.J.W. 1205; J. Edward Curteis, P.M. 189, P.P.S.G.W.; W. The lodges having been assembled under their respective banners, it was notified to the Provincial Grand Master and his officers that the P.G. Lodge was duly formed, and on his entering from the robing-room, the P.G.M. was received by the brethren with the customary Masonic honours. The lodge having been opened, the P.G. Secretary announced to the P.G. Master that the W.M. and members of the "Lodge of Obedience," No. 1753, desired to be constituted and consecrated in ancient form. The P.G. Secretary read the warrant from the Most Worshipful the Grand Master of England, H.R.H. Prince of Wales, by whom the warrant was signed, and the P.G.M. called on the brethren of the new lodge to signify their assent to the officers named in the warrant.

The Deputy Provincial Grand Master—Bro. L. P. Metham—delivered the following oration:—Brethren,—"The word "Oration," as applied to the address I am about, in obedience to the command of our revered Provincial Grand Master, to make, implies greater preparation and study than I have been able to devote to it. Neither do I propose to speak at all on the general question of Freemasonry, but to confine myself simply to consider the important duties and obligations which the founders of this lodge will, from to-day, be called upon to discharge, if they are really and truly the sincere Masons they profess to be. We welcome our new sister, the "Lodge of Obedience," into our family circle, and congratulate the brethren on the so far successful issue of their efforts. Brethren of Lodge "Obedience," the selection of the name by which your lodge will hereafter be known to you foreshadows your desire and intention to obey the Constitutions of the Order, and to be guided by the principles so constantly poured into your ears and instilled into your minds by the pure teaching of Freemasonry. Be true to those principles, and we shall ever look back to the ceremony of to-day with pride and pleasure—I leave you to consider what will be our feelings if you are unfaithful to them. Worshipful Master elect,—On your selection to-day of officers to assist you in governing your lodge, and on your own conduct, not only in the chair, but out of it, for the coming year depends its success or failure. You have no errors of predecessors to undo or to be the excuse for neglect or shortcoming. The first page of the minute-book will bear your signature; take care that nothing recorded there shall ever bring the blush of shame to your own cheeks, or those of your members and successors. To you is committed the guardianship of the honour of the Craft, not only in Devon, but throughout the world. See that you protect it, and hand it unsullied to your successors. Be careful—most careful—that your officers are men of probity, intelligence, and of true Masonic feeling. Admit none to participate in our secrets whose antecedents will not bear the strictest investigation, or who are not of a genial, kindly disposition, so that no unseemly wrangles may be introduced into the lodge. Take care that none are admitted who have only curiosity or a convivial spirit to plead as a reason. Take care, too, that every candidate is above the suspicion of being actuated by selfish or mercenary motives; that the initiation fee is truly his own after the payment of his just debts and due provision made for all who are dependent upon him. To do otherwise would be to connive at fraud and also be a cruel robbery of defenceless women and children. In the decision of every trespass against our rules you will remember that "it is not meet that every nice offence should bear its comment," therefore you will judge with candour, admonish with friendship, and reprehend with mercy. But you must be firm to mark what is done amiss in every matter which really merits reprobation, or which is likely to bring disgrace on your lodge or the Craft at large. Be zealous to defend a brother if unjustly assailed, and consider the interests of the Craft to be inseparably connected with your own. "Whatever your hand findeth to do, do it with all your might;" be diligent and upright in business, and in all that concerns your duty as a citizen. Be prompt to obey the voice of charity, not only in alms-giving, but in extending comfort, counsel, and consolation to every one of your fellow-creatures in the hour of need and affliction. Thus will you exact and receive from the outer world reverence and regard for our noble institution, and furnish the best answer to those who question the need for its existence. Thus will you paraphrase the words of a great living statesman—"Our brotherhood is no mean heritage, but it is not an heritage that can only be enjoyed—it must be maintained; and it can only be maintained by the same qualities that created it—by courage, by discipline, by patience, by determination to do and to defend the right."

The P.G.M. pledged the Master and members of the new lodge to obey the laws and constitution of the Grand Lodge, and the P.G.M. then declared the "Lodge of Obedience," No. 1753, to be a regular and duly constituted lodge. Bro. Brooks, R.A.M., Torquay, presided at the organ.

The ceremony of consecration was next proceeded with, the lodge being placed in proper position, and covered with white satin. The ode, "Hail, Universal Lord!" was sung, and the P.G. Chaplain delivered the opening invocation, and afterwards read a portion of Holy Scripture. The first prayer was said by the P.G. Master, all the brethren kneeling and chanting, "So mote it be." Amidst solemn music the lodge was uncovered, and the second prayer was said, during which the P.G. Chaplain placed the sacred name upon the lodge. Next followed the ceremony of consecrating the lodge with corn, wine, and oil by the P.G. Master and his Grand Wardens, the P.G. Chaplain reading portions of Holy Scripture during the three perambulations. During the offering up of the Prayer of Consecration by the P.G.M., the W.M. and Wardens of the Lodge of Obedience deposited the working tools of the Three Degrees upon the lodge. The chants "Glory to Thee, most High God," "The Father Everlasting," "As it was in the beginning," &c., followed, and the P.G. Chaplain offered up the Prayer of Dedication. The P.G.M. then seasoned the lodge with salt, the P.G. Chaplain preceding him with burning incense and reading from the Bible. The final benediction was delivered by the P.G.M., and the brethren gave the "Grand Honours."

At the end of the consecration, Bro. William Brodie, W.M. of No. 1254, the Master designate of the Lodge of Obedience, was duly installed as its first W.M., and he appointed and invested his officers for the ensuing twelve months as follows: Bros. B. Barber, I.P.M.; Wm. Pidsley, S.W.; J. W. Boon, J.W.; the Rev. C. W. H. Holley, Chaplain; R. T. Relf, Treas.; G. W. Gould, Sec.; A. J. G. Waters, S.D.; J. J. Ball, J.D.; A. Paddon, I.G.; J. Coombe, Tyler.

The appointment of Stewards and other minor officers was postponed to the next lodge. Bro. Samuel Jones, P.P.G.S.D., was the Installing Master.

The other business of the P.G. Lodge was then proceeded with.

On the motion of Bro. J. E. Curteis, P.P.G.S.W., the following resolution, passed at the Provincial Grand Lodge held at Exeter on the 29th of January, 1874, was rescinded, viz:—

"That in the opinion of this Provincial Grand Lodge, it is not advisable to increase the number of Masonic Charitable Institutions, for the following reasons:

"(a) The existing Charities are very far from being adequately supplied with funds.

"(b) The means of particular lodges in this province are already taxed to the highest extent sanctioned by the Constitutions, and the revenues of the Provincial Grand Lodge admit of no material augmentation.

"(c) Though it is perfectly consistent with the principles of Masonry that means should be provided for the relief of brethren who have fallen into unmerited misfortune, yet it is by no means consistent with those principles that the Order should assume the form or the attributes of a benefit society."

The reports of the Secretary, Treasurer, Treasurer of the Fortescue Annuity Fund, and the Committee of Petitions were received and adopted, and the P.G.M. appointed the following brethren the Provincial Grand Officers for the next twelve months, viz:—

Hon. Walter Hylton Jolliffe, P.M. 1285 Prov. G.S.W.

Bros. J. Way and V. Bird were appointed Auditors for the ensuing year.

A procession was formed after the Provincial Grand Lodge closed, and the brethren walked from the schoolroom to the White Hart Hotel, where the meetings of the lodge will be held, in the usual order.

A noticeable feature in the decoration of the schoolroom and in the procession was the beautiful hand-worked silk banner, belonging to Semper Fidelis Lodge, Exeter, which was given by Bro. J. Horswell.

The banquet was held at the White Hart Hotel, the Provincial Grand Master presiding, and there were about 120 brethren present. The catering of Bro. John Ball was perfect in every way, and gave entire satisfaction. The tables were adorned with roses and other flowers, kindly sent by Mr. James Walters, of the Mount Radford Nursery.

CONSECRATION OF FAITHFULL LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS.

The Faithfull Lodge, No. 229, of Mark Master Masons, making the seventh in the province of Cumberland and Westmorland, was duly consecrated and dedicated by Colonel Whitwell, M.P., R.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Past Grand Warden of England, in the Masonic Hall, Station-street, Cocker-mouth, on Friday evening, the 23rd inst. The visiting brethren, of whom there were quite a numerous and brilliant party from the neighbouring lodges, were as follows:—Bros. Col. Whitwell, M.P., R.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master; G. J. McKay, W.M. 195, P.G.S.W., P.G. Steward England; Jas. Gardner, P.M. 151, P.G.J.W.; J. Nicholson, P.M. and Treas. 151, P.P.G.S.W.; T. Mandle, P.M. 151, P.G.J.D.; T. Usher, P.M. 147, P.P.G.S.O.; P. de E. Collin, P.M. 151, P.G. Sec.; G. Dalrymple, W.M. 216, P.G.J.D.; W. Lamony, 147, P.G. St. Br.; J. R. Banks, 151, P.G. Steward; James Harper, P.M. 216; D. Crowden, J.D., 147; J. W. Robinson, S.O. 151; R. Brown and T. Weatherston, Lodge 151; J. J. Robinson, R. Wilson, W. Tremble, W. Kennedy, J. Ramsay, and F. Whittle, Lodge 216. The lodge having been opened by Bro. Gardiner, assisted by other officers, pro tem., the R.W. Consecrating Officer was announced, and, on entering, was received with grand honours. Having taken the chair, the petitioning brethren of Faithful Lodge, No. 229, were arranged in order, as follows:—Bros. W. F. Lamony, Chaplain 151, P.P.G.A.D.C. (Freemason), W.M. designate; R. Robinson, 147, S.W. designate; W. H. Leuthwaite, 151, J.W. designate; Capt. F. R. Sewell, Reg. Marks 151; R. Bailey, Lodge 147, and H. Peacock, Lodge 151. The three officers designate are all Past Masters of Skiddaw (Craft) Lodge, No. 1002.

The ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with, down to the oration, which was delivered by Bro. W. F. Lamony, as Chaplain of Lodge 151, as follows:

Right Worshipful Sir, W. Master, Past Masters, Wardens, and Brethren—In delivering what is popularly denominated an oration, at the dedication and consecration of all Masonic edifices, though in my case but a humble attempt at an address, it is first my duty to explain the why and wherefore our Mark Master Masons at Cocker-mouth conceived the idea to inaugurate a lodge appertaining to that honourable degree in Masonry, a degree that everyone who has been advanced to, is ready to admit has few rivals, in beauty of conception or simplicity of purpose. As you are aware, there are several Mark Masons in the town, members of lodges at a distance, it will scarcely be expected that those members could attend to the duties of their lodges, or obey summonses, in as regular a manner as in the case of there being a lodge at a convenient distance from their dwellings. With the nucleus I have already referred to, and the promises of brethren not as yet members of the honourable degree, we are led to anticipate that Faithfull Lodge, No. 229, will this evening be launched on a prosperous voyage. Let me also explain the origin of the title of our new lodge. It is named in memory of a departed Craftsman, one to whom, it will be, in the recollection of most of you, Masonry at Cocker-mouth, at least, owes a debt that can scarcely ever be paid, and one also who was the first Mark Mason in Cocker-mouth being a member of Cumberland Lodge, No. 60, at Carlisle. You will therefore readily perceive that our nomenclature is most appropos. In glancing cursorily at the history of this honourable degree, it is claimed by Oliver and the great majority of our Masonic writers that the Degrees of Mark Man and Mark Master Mason were instituted by King Solomon, at the erection of the temple, for the principal purpose of detecting impostors. Each operative was required to inscribe his own mark upon his handiwork, and, by that means each man's mark being known to the principals—it was easy to discover who were imperfect and false workmen, and reward or punish them accordingly. Quite recently I had the rare opportunity to look to one of the earliest editions of the Craft Constitutions of England, as compiled by Anderson and Entick, and published in the year 1767. In the chapter devoted to the "State of Masonry from the Foundation to the Consecration of the Temple," one cannot but be struck with the remarkable application of some of its passages to our English Mark system of the present day. We read that upon the death of King David, and the succession of King Solomon to the throne, the affection Hiram, King of Tyre, had ever maintained for the father prompted him to send a congratulatory embassy to the son, expressing great joy to find the regality continued in the family. When these ambassadors returned we are told that King Solomon sent a letter to King Hiram in these terms: "King Solomon to King Hiram, greeting. Be it known unto thee, O King, that my father David had it a long time in his mind to erect a temple to the Lord, but being perpetually in war, and under a necessity of clearing his lands of his enemies, and make them all his tributaries before he could attend to this great and holy work, he hath left it to me in time of peace, both to begin and to finish it, according to direction as well as the prediction of Almighty God. Blessed be His great Name for the present tranquillity of my dominions! and, by His gracious assistance, I shall now dedicate the best improvements of this liberty and leisure to his honour and worship. Wherefore I make it my request that you will let some of your people go along with some servants of mine to Mount Lebanon, to assist them in cutting down materials to mend this building, for the Sidonians understand it much better than we do. As for the workmen's reward or wages, whatever you think reasonable shall be punctually paid them." Hiram, we are told, was highly pleased with this letter, and returned the following answer: "Nothing could have been more welcome to me than to understand that the government of your blessed father is devolved by God's Providence into the hands of so excellent, so wise, and so virtuous a successor. His Holy Name be praised for it. That which you write for shall be done with all care and goodwill; for I will give order to cut down and export such quantities of the fairest cedars and cypress trees as you shall have occasion for. My people shall bring them to the seashore for you, and from thence ship them away to what port you please, where they may be ready for your own men to transport them to Jerusalem. It would be a great obligation, after all this, to allow us such a provision of corn in exchange as may stand with your convenience, for that is the commodity we islanders want most." King Solomon is said to have been much gratified with this answer of the Tyrian king, and, in return for his generous offers, ordered him a yearly present of 20,000 measures of wheat, and 20,000 measures of fine oil for his household; besides the same quantity of barley, wheat, wine, and oil, which he engaged to give Hiram's Masons, who were to be employed in the intended work of the Temple. Hiram was to send the cedars, firs, and other woods upon floats to Joppa, there to be delivered to whom Solomon should direct, in order to be carried to Jerusalem. He sent him also a man of his own name, a Tyrian by birth, but of Israelitish descent, who was a second Bezaleel, and honoured by his king with the title of father, and in the Second Book of Chronicles, chapter second, ver. 13, is called Hiram or Hiram Abiff, the most accomplished designer and operator upon earth, who in Solomon's absence filled the chair of Deputy Grand Master, and in his presence was the Senior Grand Warden, or Principal Surveyor and Master of the work, and general Overseer of all artists, as well of those whom David had formerly procured from Tyre and Sidon, as of those Hiram should now send. Thus did Hiram, King of Tyre, send to King Solomon the cunning workman called Hiram Abiff. Leaving the Scriptural ages, we find ample evidence, if any were needed, that Mark Masonry was coeval with operative Craft Masonry. No better proof of that could be produced than in a visit to the magnificent piles of the architects' genius, so abundantly scattered over this kingdom of ours; for who has not seen the Masons' marks on the crumbling stones of the Abbeys of Melrose, Jedburgh, Kelso, Roslin Chapel, and other imperishable monuments of the Masons' craft? Turning to Mark Masonry, in a speculative sense, the Grand Lodge of England and Wales and the Colonies, organised so recently as the year 1856, has progressed to a remarkable extent, as there are now no fewer than 230 lodges under the banner of Grand Lodge, and, what is better, those numerous lodges, many of them what are called "Time Immemorial," originally worked under Scotch auspices, are, with one or two solitary exceptions, all united and cemented into a solid and compact whole—the regime of the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England, Wales, and the Colonies. An evidence of the value of consolidation is nowhere better proved than in the history of the Provincial Mark Lodge of Cumberland and Westmorland. The Grand Lodge in this province was opened at Carlisle in 1863, and for nine years was alone, till, on the opening of a lodge at Keswick, and the formation of a Provincial Grand Lodge in 1872, when lodges sprang into existence at Maryport and Kendal, followed, this year, by others at Whitehaven and Frizington, and to-day is consecrated the Faithfull Lodge, making the respectable total of seven in our happy little province. The Mark Grand Lodge of England, therefore, having assumed an importance inferior to no other, but, in fact, superior to all others of what sceptics delight to style "side degrees," I am led to re-echo the sentiments so ably expressed in this province only two months ago by an eminent brother of the Order, that it is high time the Grand Craft Lodge and Supreme Grand Chapter of England acknowledged the Mark Degree. Our beautiful ritual—indeed, the whole teaching of Mark Masonry—is as totally separate from sectarianism as Craft Masonry or the Royal Arch. In conclusion, brethren, may the all-seeing eye of the G.A.O.T.U. look down with His divine favour on this new temple, now about to be consecrated and dedicated to His service. May the great moral virtues of Faith, Hope, and Charity be indelibly impressed on our minds and engraven on our hearts—that faith in the G.A.O.T.U. which shall lead us to confidently entertain the hope of ascending into His heavenly temple, after a life well spent in the exercise of benevolent and charitable actions to our suffering fellow creatures. May we endeavour to improve our remaining space of life so that, when summoned hence to receive our wages, we may take our situation in those blessed regions where all is eternal bliss and light, and then, with the firm but humble confidence that inspired the Craftsman of old, we can fearlessly exclaim, "Thanks be to God, I have marked well."

The beautiful ceremony, most ably and impressively performed, was then continued unto the close, when the Consecrating Officer declared the new lodge dedicated to the purposes of Mark Masonry. Colonel Whitwell, M.P. was assisted by several of the W.M.'s and P.M.'s present and the incidental music was under the direction of Bro. Lewthwaite, J.W. designate, P.G. Org. (Craft) Cumberland and Westmorland.

Col. Whitwell, in congratulating the brethren of Faithfull Lodge, augured for them a prosperous career, and he expressed his entire concurrence in the title chosen, it being the name of a late brother, who, not only in Cocker-mouth, but throughout the province, was well and promiently known as a good and hardworking Mason at heart. He also assured them of the pleasure it had given him to be present on the interesting occasion of consecrating the seventh Mark Lodge in Cumberland and Westmorland.

Bro. J. Gardiner next, in first-class style, installed the W.M. designate into the chair of A., and he also advanced the following six brethren to the degree of Mark Master Mason, with telling effect, the veteran Bro. Jos. Nicholson acting his well-known rôle of S.D.: Bros. W. Shilton, P.M. 1002; J. Black, W.M. 1002; T. C. Robinson, Sec. 1002; J. Hewson, Tyler 1002; R. W. Robinson, 1002; and F. Jackson, Greta Lodge, No. 1073. After the completion of the advancement ceremony, Bro. James Black was elected Treasurer of the new lodge, and Bro. Hewson, Tyler. The investment of officers was made as follows: Bros. R. Robinson, S.W.; W. H. Lewthwaite, J.W.; Capt. Sewell, M.O.; R. W. Robinson, S.O.; T. C. Robinson, J.O.; J. Black, Treas., Sec., and Reg. M.; H. Peacock, S.D.; R. Bailey, J.D.; W. Shilton, I.G.; F. Jackson, Steward; J. Hewson, Tyler.

The R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master was, on the proposition of the W.M., elected an honorary member of Faithfull Lodge, as were also Bros. Gardiner and Nicholson, in recognition of their kind and valuable services in the proceedings of the evening.

Col. Whitwell having replied, followed by the other brethren named, the R.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master and Officers retired from the lodge room, with grand honours. "Hearty good wishes" were tendered from Lodges 147, 151, 195, and 216, and letters of apology were also received from Bros. F. W. Hayward, P.M. 60, Carlisle, P.P.G.S.W., P.G.S.D. Eng.; G. Noakes, W.M. 60, and others. The lodge was then closed in form at half-past nine, after a sitting of close upon three hours.

Subsequently the brethren had supper, at the Rampant Bull. Bro. W. F. Lamony presided, supported right and left by Colonel Whitwell, M.P., Bros. Jos. Nicholson, G. J. McKay, G. Dalrymple, P. de E. Collin, and others. Bro. Capt. Sewell was in the vice-chair. The usual loyal toasts, and those appertaining to Mark Masonry, were duly honoured, and the two hours' space devoted to the feast of reason and flow of soul came to a conclusion at a few minutes before midnight, when the Tyler was called upon to give the last toast, thus warning the great majority of the visiting brethren that the hour had approached when "Tam maun ride." A number of visiting brethren also had a distance of fourteen miles to drive, over a horrid road, with rain falling, and therefore, to quote Bro. Robert Burns, "sic a night as ne'er poor sinner was abroad in." This speaks volumes for the devotion of brethren to Masonry in the high latitudes of Cumberland.

We may mention that Faithfull Lodge meets on the second Wednesday in every month, and from present appearances there is every prospect of it becoming one of the most flourishing Mark lodges in the province.

THE LATE MR. MARTIN AND MR. TOMKINS.

In the course of his sermon at St. Mary Woolnoth on Sunday morning, the curate, the Rev. J. E. Fownes, thus referred to the recent death of the above named gentlemen; During the last month we have been again put in mind of the transitoriness of all things around us. Our tolling bell has twice reminded Lombard-street of the departure of two of those most respected among us—the treasurer of our Church Restoration Fund, and one of the kindest and readiest of all the kind and ready supporters of that successful effort to restore the sacred House of God in which we worship. Both have come to their time, like the "shock of wheat in full season." One, probably the elder, was the head of the honoured house of Martin and Company. He was pleased, as he called to mind, and mentioned it to be rector, that he was baptized in St. Mary Woolnoth some seventy years ago; and in his childhood (when the bankers were not all non-resident), he was in the habit of coming here to worship. He warmly greeted the attempt so successfully made three years ago to put this church into its present state of substantial repair. We are wont in this place to bring to the thoughts of survivors the names and examples of those who are called away in their usefulness. It would be ungrateful if we did not give God thanks for such as these, who (we trust) rest now in peace,—Mr. Tomkins, our treasurer, and Mr. Martin, our friend from the first, and one of the most liberal, even when no longer able as a resident to worship here. In St. Mary Woolnoth, this central parish church, we must never fail to record the worthies of the City, and especially our own of Lombard-street, and trust that they who follow them may emulate their charity and attain at last their Christian peace and hope.—City Press, Aug. 28th.

[The Mr. Tomkins alluded to is our late lamented Grand Treasurer.]

KILLED ON THE RAILWAY.—On Monday morning as Mr. Wm. Hopkinson, of the Corn Exchange, was endeavouring to cross the line at Addlestone Station, the buffer of the engine of the 8.39 train to Waterloo caught his left arm and threw him down on the rails. The engine and one of the carriages passed over his body, causing, of course, instantaneous death. Mr. Hopkinson lately lost his wife, and leaves four children. He held a policy against accidents, for £1000, of the Railway Passengers' Assurance Company, 64, Cornhill, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Diseases of the Bowels.—A remedy, which has been tested and proved in a thousand different ways, capable of eradicating poisonous taints from ulcers and healing them up, merits a trial of its capacity for extracting the internal corruptions from the bowels. On rubbing Holloway's Ointment repeatedly on the abdomen a rash appears, and as it thickens the alvine irritability subsides. Acting as a derivative, this unguent draws to the surface, releases the tender intestines from all acrid matters, and prevents inflammation, dysentery, and piles, for which blistering was the old-fashioned, though successful treatment, now from its painfulness fallen into disuse, the discovery of this Ointment having proclaimed a remedy possessing equally derivative, yet, perfectly painless powers.—Advrt.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The following is the Agenda for Wednesday, 4th September, 1878.

1. The minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 5th June for confirmation.

2. In consequence of the resolutions passed at the last Quarterly Communication for keeping banking account of the Grand Lodge, in future, at the Bank of England, certain alterations in the Book of Constitutions are rendered necessary.

The M.W. Grand Master will therefore move—

1st. to repeal Articles 2 and 3, page 35, of the Book of Constitutions.

2nd. To substitute for them the following, viz.:—
"All monies belonging to the Grand Lodge shall be deposited in the Bank of England in the names of the Grand or Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Treasurer. The duties of the Grand Treasurer shall be to keep a general supervision of the accounts, to sign cheques, which must be countersigned by the Grand Secretary for all monies duly voted by the Grand Lodge, and generally to assist and advise the Trustees and Executive Officers in the due and faithful administration of the funds of the Fraternity. The accounts shall be annually audited by the professional auditor, to be appointed by the Grand Master pursuant to a resolution passed in Grand Lodge on the 23rd of June, 1859."

3. The M.W. Pro Grand Master will make a communication to Grand Lodge with regard to the scrutiny for the election of members of the Board of General Purposes at the Quarterly Communication on the 5th of June last; and a resolution will be proposed approving the action of the Pro Grand Master in the matter.

4. Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz.:—

A brother of the Lodge of Sympathy, No.

483, Gravesend... £50 0 0

The widow of a brother, of the Hartington

Lodge, No. 1021, Barrow-in-Furness... £50 0 0

A brother of the Lion Lodge, No. 312, Whitby £50 0 0

5. Report of the Board of General Purposes.

To the United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England.

The Board of General Purposes beg to report to Grand Lodge as follows:

At a special meeting of the Board held on Tuesday, the 2nd July, 1878, by direction of the Pro Grand Master, to consider the matters relative to the election of members of the Board by Grand Lodge on the 5th June, 1878, the several papers (five in number) containing the summary of the votes were produced, and the Scrutineers (who had been summoned to attend the Board) were called upon to identify their respective papers.

Upon investigation only one paper appeared to the Board to require positive explanation, in consequence of there being recorded upon the face of it 113 votes in favour of a brother whose correct grand total of votes, as ascertained by examination of the whole of the voting papers by order of the Pro Grand Master, amounted to only 59.

The entire number of brethren in Grand Lodge at the Quarterly Communication referred to was 404, and the voting papers examined and retained in the hands of the Grand Secretary amount to 374, so that no more than 30 could by any possibility be missing, even supposing that every brother present voted.

The Scrutineers' paper containing the said discrepant record was identified by Bro. Joseph Smith, Past Grand Pursuivant, and by Bro. William Hilton, P.M., of the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 780, as the paper recording the votes examined by them, and upon these brethren alone of the whole body of Scrutineers the Board thought it necessary to call for explanation.

It was stated by them that Bro. Joseph Smith performed the part of calling out the several votes on the balloting papers, and that Bro. William Hilton marked down upon the Scrutineers' paper the votes so called out.

Bro. Joseph Smith was called upon to explain the palpable discrepancy between the number of votes actually recorded for the brother in question, and the number called out by him to Bro. Hilton as having been so recorded, and the explanation offered by him was, in the opinion of the Board, most unsatisfactory, and could not by any possibility be reconciled with the facts as ascertained by the Board, who reported accordingly to the Pro Grand Master.

At a special meeting of the Board of General Purposes, held on Tuesday, the 30th day of July, 1878, by direction of the Pro Grand Master, the Board arrived unanimously at the following conclusions:—

That Bro. Joseph Smith wilfully misrepresented the votes on the balloting papers examined by him.

That in consequence the return made to Grand Lodge by Bro. Joseph Smith, as Chairman of the Scrutineers, was false, and that Bro. Joseph Smith, when making such return, must have known and did know that the same was false.

That in addition to being guilty of a grave Masonic offence in misrepresenting the number of votes given, Bro. Joseph Smith violated his solemn pledge as Scrutineer, under the provisions of Article 3, page 108, of the Book of Constitutions, and thereby rendered himself amenable to Masonic punishment under Article 8, page 109.

And it was thereupon unanimously resolved:—

"1st. That Bro. Joseph Smith be suspended from all his Masonic functions and privileges for a period of two years."

"2nd. That it has not been proved to the satisfaction of the Board that Bro. William Hilton was in complicity with Bro. Joseph Smith, but that it has been established that Bro. William Hilton was negligent in the discharge of his duties as Scrutineer."

3rd. That Bro. William Hilton be admonished for the above-mentioned neglect of his duties as Scrutineer."

The Board have further to report that they have appointed a Committee to enquire and report whether any better mode can be devised than that specified in the Book of Constitutions, which may ensure greater accuracy in conducting the elections by Grand Lodge of members for the several Boards and Committees.

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON,
Freemasons' Hall, London, President.
20th August, 1878.

To the report is subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge Accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 17th day of May inst., shewing a balance in the hands of the Trustees of the late Grand Treasurer of £3542 18s. 9d.; in the London and Westminster Bank, £1925 5s. 5d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75; and for servants' wages, £96 15s.

6. The report of a Special General Meeting of the Governors and Subscribers of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, held at Freemasons Hall, on Wednesday, the 10th day of July, 1878, will be laid before Grand Lodge, and the following proposed alterations in the rules which were then agreed to will, in accordance with the laws of the Institution, be submitted for the approval of Grand Lodge:—

To alter law 19, page 9, and laws 22, 23, 24, 25, and 26, page 10, of the Rules and Regulations, by substituting the words "Guineas" for "Pounds."

NEW LODGES.

- 1779. Ivanhoe Lodge, Sheffield, Yorkshire.

SURREY MASONIC HALL.

We regret to learn that, amongst other public establishments and private residences in Camberwell, this building has again suffered from the floods which have been lately so prevalent in South London. It is, however, satisfactorily so far to learn that the amount of damage on this occasion is not so great as when the building experienced a similar visitation at an earlier period of the year, although considerable loss and great inconvenience has resulted from last week's heavy storms. But that the building itself is of a most substantial character, every portion of the work having been carried out under the practised supervision of Bro. Oliver, its builder, and now proprietor, fears might be entertained that the floods to which it has been subjected would materially affect the structure. Such fears, however, would be unwarranted, and visitors to the Hall have chiefly to deplore the damages to floors and surfaces of walls up to the level attained by the flow of sewer water, and the destruction of the Club and other furniture. On the former occasion some large quantity of valuable lodge furniture was greatly damaged. On this occasion, the admirable presence of mind of the Club Steward, Bro. Stocken, and his readily-applied labour resulted in the rescue of the property of several lodges from destruction, and the thanks of the members of these lodges are fairly due to him for his forethought and energy. The Surrey Masonic Club members are, after the proprietor, the most inconvenienced by the disaster, for they had had but a few weeks' occupation of their comfortable quarters, after the repairs necessary in consequence of the former flood, when they were "floated out" again. It is to be hoped, nevertheless, that the re-instatement of their rooms will not occupy a long space of time, and that they may be able to inaugurate the commencement of their second year on their anniversary date, the 1st October next, by again taking possession. The temple, dining rooms, and large entertainment hall are above the level of the flood, and are in no wise damaged. A public meeting was to have been held in the hall itself last evening to consider what steps should be taken to direct the attention of the proper authorities to the insufficiency of the existing arrangements for carrying off the storm waters, and we trust that means will be found to prevent the recurrence of similar disasters.

LETTERS FROM OUR IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

No. II.—INCOMPETENT W. MASTERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a general rule a very great improvement has taken place in the normal performance of the duties of the chair since I "first saw the light of Masonry," in now a good "Auld Lang Syne." No doubt we may still here and there stumble on relics of a very bad old system, which, ignoring merit, and passing by capacity, made the election of the W.M. either the job of a clique, or a setting forth of a "pure personality." For instance, I have seen W.M.'s elected simply for their social rank or wealth, who knew nothing of their work, never attempted to learn it, and even now, after a lapse of years, are as little acquainted either with Masonic Ritual or the Book of Constitutions as if no such things existed for Masons in Masonry.

Now I am not going to "run a muck" at rank or wealth. Very good things they are in their way, necessary, absolutely needful, as we believe, as Masons as well as patriots and philosophers, for the perfection of the Masonic system, just as of our social state. He must be a very weak-minded or semi-educated man, who rails at rank or wealth, because others possess them and he does not. Such are not my sentiments, nor those of any good Freemason. We respect rank and we reverence authority, and we pay, to the former the deference it truly claims, and to the latter the obedience it has a right to expect. But as my intelligent readers will perceive, (and all the readers of the Freemason are in my opinion very intelligent beings), I am dealing with an "abuse," and not the "use," with an abnormal, not the normal state of things.

There is a tendency in many minds to think that position, rank, and wealth are everything here, whereas Freemasonry would teach us all to look to internal qualifications as well as to external attributes of rank and fortune, and would bid us one and all constantly bear in mind, for it is a great truth, sometimes overlooked by us all, not only, as Bro. Burns would happily put it, "A man's a man for a' that," but that we are ourselves, in a religious and kindly spirit to "honour all men."

Now, as I have often seen in my Masonic life too much yielding on this score, too great a recognition of merely social advantages, I think it well to raise a friendly and warning voice to day. What I mean is this, a brother is elected, not for what he has done, but for what he is, while Bro. Jones, who is thoroughly up in the Masonic lore, and who is an educated gentleman and a good fellow to boot, but has no social position, is passed over, and probably after a little recedes from Masonry.

What is the state of a lodge which has voted into a position requiring alike brains, care, interest, attention, conduct, one who will not take the trouble even to open and close the lodge, but delegates the work to a Past Master? Nothing in my opinion can be worse! In nine cases out of ten, it is the beginning of the decline of that lodge, because everybody is out of his proper place and no one does his proper duty, and though lodges, like weak constitutions, rally notwithstanding that all the faculty has doctored them, the chances are against that lodge ever recovering its proper tone of positive independence and Masonic efficiency, simply because it has committed an act of injustice.

I cannot conceive a greater parody on all our Masonic professions and work, than placing a brother who cannot do and will not learn his work in the Master's chair. And having said this, I must touch another point. There are some brethren who are anxious for office, though they really have little claim for it, except their own good opinion of themselves. They are neither regular at their work, nor "up" in the lectures, nor do they apparently care much for Freemasonry, except as a social entertainment. They are proficient, I admit, in the "Knife and Fork" degree, and would stand any examination and take any position, if examined into its mysteries. But they wish to be W.M., and they think it the correct thing to attend Grand Lodge. Alas for the lodge which elects such as the chief ruler. We need have no doubt that such a presidency is characterized both by weakness and frivolity, and neither advances the interests of the lodge, cements the concord of the brethren, or helps on Freemasonry either in its general or charitable tendencies. Hence I say to day to all my brethren who read the Freemason, do not put W.M.'s into office who are not prepared to do their own work. Make the election of the W.M. a reality and not a sham. No brother has any claim to such an office, no member of a lodge can look on it as his right. If a brother has served in the Warden's chair creditably to himself, pleasantly to the lodge, if he is fitted for the office of W.M., if you feel sure that he will alikely honour the choice of the brethren, and uphold the prestige of the lodge, then elect him confidently and undoubtedly, as he, be he who he may, is assuredly the right man in the right place.

I do not deny for one moment, that in all lodge life there are times when social rank may help or a struggling lodge, but as I believe that Masonry requires proficiency and efficiency in its rulers, it must be a very peculiar case indeed which shall warrant a lodge in putting on one side humbler but tried ability for the more flashy outcome of privileged incompetency.

So I end my letter as I began it by saying—"Keep clear of incompetent W. Masters; they are a nuisance to a lodge and an incubus on Freemasonry."

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
YOUR OWN IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

The Mayor and Mayoress of Liverpool have been staying at Tarbert, Loch Fyne, for a day or two, and during their visit the boxes of the Mayoress were broken open and a large quantity of very valuable jewellery stolen.

THE CONSTITUTIONS OF 1746.

Since I wrote my note I have been comparing the 1738 and alleged 1746 issues together. My edition of 1738 is a peculiar size, (not large paper), and has no frontispiece, as in 1723, and I do not feel quite sure that it ever had, at any rate if it had it must have been reduced. Its title-page is rubricated, that of 1746, (large paper), is not; so that the editions clearly are not the same, the matter, however, being identical. Caesar Ward and Richard Chandler are the printers of the 1738 edition; J. Robinson, as I said before, of 1746. I am inclined, then, to look on it as a side or unauthorised reprint.

Probably in 1758, as in 1736, large paper and small paper copies were issued.

It seems to be clear that the Grand lodge did not authorise a reprint in 1746.

OLD LONDON LODGES.

No. IV.

In 1736, No. 106 was The Nag's Head, Audley-street. 107, Dali's Coffee House, Warwick-street. 108, a lodge at Bury St. Edmunds. 109, a lodge at Salisbury. 110, The Ship Coffee House. 111, Theatre Tavern. 112, King's Arms, Tower-street. 113, a lodge at Bath. 114, The Ship, St. Mary Axe. 115, Scots Masons' lodge, The Devil. 116, Bear and Harrow, a Master Masons' lodge. 117, King's Arms, another Master Masons' lodge. 118, a lodge at Bury. 119, a lodge at Stourbridge. 120, Oate's Coffee House, a Master's lodge. 121, Oate's Coffee House—another Master's lodge. 122, Solomon's Coffee House, Pimlico. 123, Forrest's Coffee House, Pimlico. 124, a lodge at Birmingham. 125, Duke of Marlborough's Head, Petticoat Lane.

In 1738 the London lodges are continued as follows: 66, Salmon and Ball. 67, Turk's Head. 68, Ship Coffee House. 69, Theatre Tavern. 70, King's Arms, Tower-street. 71, Fountain Tavern. 72, Crown. 73, Forrest's Coffee House. 74, King's Arms Tavern. 75, Marlborough's Head. 76, Bell. 77, Stewards' Lodge. 78, Bear. 79, Anchor. 80, Ashley's. 81, Greyhound. 82, Sun. 83, Yorkshire Grey. 84, Black Dog. 85, Blossom's Inn. 86, City of Durham. 87, Crown Tavern. 88, King's Arms. 89, Three Tons. 90, Westminster Hall. 91, Whitechapel Court House. 92, Three Tons. 93, King's Head, Old Jewry. 94, Sun Tavern. 95, Black-poll. 96, King's Head, St. John's-street. 97, Fountain. 98, Bacchus. 99, Katharine Wheel. 100, Angel. 101, Gordon's. 102, Bell and Dragon. 103, Swan. 104, Checker. 105, Camerons. 106, Key and Garter.

Thus it will be noted that in 1738, the 106 of 1736 had become 66 in Anderson's List, though not as the number of the lodge while 107 is 67. 110 in 1736 is 68 in 1738, and 111 in 1736 is 69 in 1738. 112 in 1736 is 70 in 1738, 114 in 1736 seems to be the same as 71 in 1738, while 115 in 1736 appears to be wanting in 1738, at least it is not traceable in Anderson's List, while, curiously enough, 72 in 1738 is the same as 121 in 1736, and 73 in 1738, if another lodge, appears to be identical with 122 in 1736. 74 in 1738 seems to represent a lodge which is not mentioned in 1736, unless under another name, though 75 in 1738 is the same as 126 in 1736. I do not trace 116, 117, 120, 123, in 1738.

From 76 to 105 in 1738 are lodges not numbered in 1736, as all the dates of consecration are subsequent to the last date recognised in 1736, which is Nov. 3, 1734.

OLD MASONIC CALENDARS.

Can any brother put me in the way of seeing or obtaining the Stationers' Company Masonic Calendar for 1775-76, or the authorised Calendar of 1776-77?

Any of the old calendars before 1811 would interest greatly.

BRETHREN OF THE MINISTERIAL CABINET IN LIVERPOOL.

Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. Eng., R.W.P.G.M. West Lancashire, and Bro. the Right Hon. Colonel Stanley, D.P.G.M., Secretary for War, were entertained at dinner, along with the Home Secretary and the President of the Board of Trade, by his Worship the Mayor of Liverpool (A. B. Forwood, Esq.), at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, the 21st inst. The gathering was a most brilliant and thorough representative one, and the whole of the proceedings were of the most successful kind. Bro. Lord Skelmersdale responded to the toast of "The House of Lords" in a humorous speech, and Bro. Colonel Stanley responded for "The Army" in an address of much practical importance.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE. W. Cutbush & Son, Highgate, London. Autumn, 1878.

We have been much pleased with this catalogue. It takes us away from London streets, from bricks and mortar and stucco, as Paddy says, "galore," to fresh flowers, to green leaves, and pleasant meads, to the delights of a garden—and the really improving occupation of watching the growth of the trees we have planted, and the gay beds we have planned. Bro. Cutbush's catalogue is very tempting indeed, and we confess fairly that had it not been for the unwillingness of Ann Fanny to leave the "little village," and the dislike of our servant to exchange the active surveillance of the metropolitan police for the loneliness of a country village and the long beats of the rural constabulary, we should at once have packed up our things, taken a cottage incontinently, and given Bro. Cutbush a large order, and set to work vigorously to make us a little oasis in the wilderness. Pleasant dream for a London denizen! Alas! it is only a dream! If any of our brethren have gardens they will do well to peruse Bro. Cutbush's list of fruit trees and flowers.

A GUIDE TO MEDICAL OFFICER, &c. (English and Hindustani). Geo. S. A. Ranking, B.A., Calcutta. Spink and Co.

This is a most useful little work, which we have perused with much pleasure. It is intended mainly for medical officers, and "barrin" the professional dialogue which has, of course, only specific interest for the medical profession, it may be studied by all who wish to dip into "Hindustani." The acquisition of languages is alike a duty, a privilege, and a pleasure, and we know of no more interesting study than that of language. It expands the mind, it extends our sympathies for humanity. It makes us feel how, if many are the variations of speech, what an unity yet runs through all, resolving all in their primal elements into one original language. We commend the book to the notice of our readers.

CATALOGUE. Bro. Dick Radclyffe and Co.

We are reminded of these enterprising "entrepreneurs" by their catalogue, which is before us, and which we have often favourably alluded to. We are glad to call attention to it again to day. It is well known that one of their "specialities" is the ornamentation of public buildings like Covent Garden Theatre with shrubs and flowers. In this they have achieved great success.

MUSIC.—ENGLAND'S GREAT STATE PILOT. By Russell Day. Metzler and Co.

This new patriotic and lively song can only be courteously acknowledged, not reviewed, in our columns. Politics are most wisely "barred" in our programme, and whatever our personal or private opinions may be, while we may fairly admire those distinguished men of all parties in the State who render to Queen and country such signal services in dark or in sunny days, we cannot, even by implication, as Freemasons, lean to one side or to the other. It is a most wholesome regulation, and is always scrupulously observed in the Freemason.

On Wednesday week a water spout was seen from Ryde. Shortly before mid-day the south-east wind had massed heavy black clouds, fringed with grayish cumuli, over the Hants coast. I observed, says an eye witness, a thin streak of gray descend from the cumuli, somewhat to the east of Southsea Common, and stand out strongly against the black masses beneath, as it passed rapidly to the westward. It was not till a few minutes after 12 that I observed this thin streak to be in communication with the water, which threw up a column of white spray and foam distinctly visible, though quite four miles distant, at a height of several feet above the surface. A glass showed the disturbance to be considerable, though no pillar of dark water rose above the waves and the area of the gyration was not extensive. The waterspout moved rapidly, at an apparently short distance from the Hants shore, past South sea Pier and the entrance to Portsmouth Harbour. As it crossed Stokes Bay the commotion appeared to increase until it passed the White-house beyond the railway pier. Mr. Wynn's "Cigar ship" was not far from it at this point, and those on board must have had an excellent view. On nearing the opening of Southampton Water, and before reaching the Lightship at the Spit, the phenomenon disappeared in a heavy downpour of rain. One small yacht seemed close to the vortex just before its disappearance. Though less violent and affecting a smaller area and mass of water than a tropical waterspout, this one was very remarkable from its enormous height.

A curious circumstance has happened in the parish of Seacroft. In June, 1870, two Jews, hawking from door to door, called at the house of a Mrs. Burrell, and while her back was turned stole a gold watch and guard out of the room. It was the work of a moment, and when she found out her loss a vigilant search was made. The men were chased and found by the police at the Bradford Hotel, but none of the lost property. The men were tried at the Town Hall, but discharged in the absence of sufficient evidence to convict. On Sunday morning, the 21st ult., as Mr. Carter, farmer, and Mr. Wm. Linley, were walking in a field looking at some crows, they stood talking near a gate for some time. Seeing something glitter in the hedge bottom, they took it up, when it turned out to be Mrs. Burrell's watch. It had evidently lain there for seven years. It is supposed that the men, afraid of being caught, hid the watch and forgot all about the place. Mrs. Burrell, naturally much gratified at the recovery of her watch, made the finders a handsome present.—Daily Chronicle.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

The Musée des Arts Décoratifs, an institution modelled on the South Kensington Museum, but established by private subscription, was opened recently in its temporary quarters in a wing of the Tuileries. It consists at present of a loan collection of ancient and modern paintings, which will doubtless attract foreign visitors now that the Salon is closed; but the ulterior object is to promote artistic training by means of masterpieces of art, technical collections, libraries, and lectures. An association was formed four months ago for this purpose, the Duc d'Audiffret-Pasquier, Mr. Cunliffe Owen, and Sir R. Wallace being honorary presidents, with M. de Chennevières and M. Edouard André as presidents. Twelve influential sub-committees have been nominated, each charged with the direction of a particular department of the future museum. It is gratifying to find that the South Kensington Museum, suggested by the Prince Consort at the close of the 1851 Exhibition, is producing so numerous an offspring, not only in the United Kingdom, but in Austria and America, and now in Paris. The present collection will remain on view till the International Exhibition terminates. It includes pictures by Bianca, Capello, Hals, Hubert Robert, P. Potter, Troyon, Reynals, Chardin, Greuze, Fragonard, Largillière, Van Goyen, Snyders, Vandyck, Albert Cuyp, Van der Velde, Jordaens, David, Dronais, Eugène Delacroix, Diaz, and Théodore Rousseau.

In the reconstruction of the Hotel de Ville, in Paris, nearly two hundred workmen are employed, and every day about 75 cubic metres of stone are cut and placed. The Academy says that even at the present rate of work, however, it is calculated that the Hotel de Ville cannot be rebuilt under at least ten years, though it is believed that by 1890 the whole of the exterior masonry may be finished.

We are requested to state that Sir Joseph Whitworth, having expressed a desire that some important alterations should be made in the conditions of his scholarships, the detailed rules for carrying out his wishes are now under consideration. They will be published as soon as possible. But in order to prevent disappointment this notice is given. No important changes will be made in the conditions of the competitive examination in May, 1879, but the conditions of the tenure and of the amount of the scholarships may be somewhat modified.

The Breithorn, in the Monte Rosa chain, was ascended from the Matterjoch on August 9th by a party of three ladies and three gentlemen, the youngest, John Gooch, being only twelve years old. The whole party returned to Zermatt in good condition.

We believe it is true that the post of Chief Librarian at the British Museum, about to be vacated by Mr. Winter Jones, has been offered to Mr. E. A. Bond, now Keeper of the MSS.—Academy.

Snow fell last week in the Canton of Uri, an occurrence without precedent in August.

M. Naudet, the author of a History of Etienne Marcel, and formerly Professor of Latin at the College de France, died last week, aged ninety-one. He is believed to have been the oldest member of the Institute. A French Hebraist, the Abbé Auguste Latouche, has also just died, at the age of ninety-five.

A pulpit made of Caen stone, erected from a design of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, and executed by Messrs. Cox and Son, Southampton-street, has this week been placed in Bangor Cathedral, and will be used for the first time on Sunday. It is intended as a memorial of the late Rev. Morris Williams, rector of Llanrhuddlad, Anglesey, a clergyman well known in the Principality. The panels illustrate the preaching of John the Baptist and other scriptural subjects, and have been executed by Miss Bunham, a lady amateur.

The Midland Railway Company has always been the first to initiate reforms; and we are glad to see them taking a step into an Augean stable—the "refreshment department." They have commenced with lowering the tariff of non-intoxicants. May we hope that from this small beginning may arise a wave that will sweep away the entire tariff of extortionate charges at railway bars? Dare we look forward to a day when eatable sandwiches and visible biscuits can be obtained at rates not quite seven times their value?

Captain R. F. Burton, who was warmly applauded, made "The Flint Implements of Egypt and Midian" the subject of another paper at the Association meeting last week. Most people, he said, were aware of the dispute between naturalists and Egyptologists. The latter declared that there was no such thing as infancy of art in Egypt, and the naturalists, as was their evil habit, found signs of the commencement and origin of things everywhere (Laughter.) It was a very pretty quarrel as it stood. While literary men were debating, practical men found stones in every direction, even around Cairo itself. He exhibited flints, most of which were chipped, and which were found in great numbers, but Bedouins are now making them in enormous quantities and selling them to travellers. He first visited El Hauri in March, 1877, and then proceeded to the Pyramid, the most southern part of the great cemetery of Memphis, and in the King's Chamber were found two prehistoric weapons. Captain Burton exhibited a number of worked stones, cowries from Thebes, ornamented glass, and the coins of Midian, which were for the first time brought to England. Near the chief town of Midian he came across a coin, which showed that even in those days there were "smashers" (laughter), and was an imitation tetradrachma. It had the owl and the flower on it, but instead of being made of silver it was of copper, with a slight layer of silver outside. In conclusion, Captain Burton thanked the audience for their courtesy in hearing him, and he begged to join in congratulating their worthy chairman upon the honours which he had so worthily obtained.

THE FREEMASON,

SATURDAY, AUGUST 31, 1878.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

We made some remarks last week on the present regrettable state of affairs in Scotland, and stated, that in our humble opinion, some reforms are needed in the present Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. We sympathize fully with that Grand Lodge, at the same time we think, that it is more honest in us to say where we consider reform may fairly be made, though we a little fear that personal feelings in Scotland, as often elsewhere, are to some extent, at any rate, the cause of much of the present undesirable state of affairs, Masonically, in that country. We think then, that the great defect in the Scottish system is its absence of uniform lodge subscriptions, and a regular annual payment capitally towards benevolence. We are aware that lodge subscriptions are permitted by the Scottish Constitutions, but they are not enforced, and no lodge in Scotland, unless it so wills, need have an annual subscription from its members. This is, in our eyes, the great weakness of the Scottish system. It has dwarfed all effort for charity, and has condemned Scottish Masonry to a very constrained level, both of lodge expenditure and active benevolence. We believe that some lodges have a subscription, but we fear that they are very few and far between. In our opinion, the Scottish Grand Lodge ought to compel all lodges to have a lodge subscription annually, and out of it every lodge should send up a capitation payment for all its members. We do not say that the 4s. per head of our English Constitution is the only figure for Scottish Masonry, though it is a very reasonable amount, but under such a system we venture to think, that the whole framework and practical life of Scottish Freemasonry would receive a principle of impetus and extension at the same time, which would practically alter the whole appearance of things. In England our Grand Lodge lays down £5 5s. as the minimum of initiation fees, and it requires 4s. from the brethren annually in the London district, and 2s. from each brother in the provinces for benevolence. Thus a lodge of 100 members in London pays £20 to the Grand Lodge, and in the provinces £10 to the Grand Lodge and £10 to the Provincial Grand Lodge. We cannot see why the same system should not prevail in Scotland. The English Grand Lodge lays down no minimum of lodge subscriptions, though as a rule that subscription varies in the metropolis from £10 10s. to £3 3s., most of the lodges having a medium payment of £5. In the provinces the annual lodge subscriptions lie between £2 2s. and £1. In Scotland a candidate is initiated for a specific sum—much less than in England—and pays no more to his lodge. Many brethren will confirm our words when we say, that the greatest proportion of Masonic vagrants hails from Scotland, inasmuch as when asked for their certificates, they almost invariably tender Scottish certificates, whether true or manufactured we say not. We speak plainly, but we feel sure that our Scottish brethren will bear with us, as our motive is good, and we seek by a well known illustration, not only to "point our moral, and adorn our little tale," but to "clench our argument." Had the Scottish lodges a system of regular subscriptions this state of things, as much objected to by them as by us, could not continue. We recommend, therefore, the Scottish Grand Lodge to make £5 5s. the minimum initiation fee, in Scotland, as with us, though many think now that that is too low and must be increased. The next point is to insist on a capitation payment from all the Scottish lodges for all their members, as with us, of 4s. for the metropolitan district, of 2s. from the provinces, the other 2s. to the Provincial Grand Lodge. The colonial lodges with us do not pay to the Fund of Benevolence, though we never could tell why, and have always considered this state of things a "casus omissus" from our Book of Constitutions. With regard to the proxy system, about which so much is said, and which, a priori, seems very objectionable, not living in Scotland, we hardly feel competent to pass a dogmatic opinion upon it the more so, as we bear in mind that as regards the Lodge of Benevolence, the Grand Lodge of England recognises a proxy system. Proxy members of Grand Lodge seem however to us a great anomaly, a meaningless arrangement, and one likely to become a great nuisance. We think that those who take upon themselves Masonic rank, with its honours, ought to attend to its responsibilities and duties as well. We have said all we have ventured put forward with extreme good will to our Scottish brethren and to the Grand Lodge of Scotland. We wish it, we repeat, sincerely and fraternally, well, and we hope that this present storm will make way for a lasting peace, for rational improvement, and true Masonic reform. The Grand Lodge of Scotland, if wise in its generation, has a goodly future before it.

THE BAÜHUTTE.

Our good friend the Bauhütte is not pleased with us English Masons, and seems to have a little "open sore," which we will try to heal. For we have a very friendly feeling for the Bauhütte, and we always gratefully remember Bro. Findel's most meritorious services to the history and archæology of Freemasonry. Unfortunately Bro. Findel has his special "vanity," so have we, and when vanity meets vanity, like the Greeks of old, "then comes the tug of war." Bro. Findel does not approve of what we have said and done about the Grand Orient of France, whereas he does warmly support all that the Grand Orient has done, and is apparently prepared to back up all that it is seemingly about to do. And so he takes rather a prejudiced view of English Freemasonry, forgetting for the moment that it is to the English Grand Lodge that true historical Craft Masonry, humanly speaking, exists in this world. Bro. Findel will not deny this, though he has said, and no doubt thinks, that English Masonry is asleep and not developing its true mission. We, on the contrary, think we are wide awake, and know as much about true Masonry as the very best of our neighbours. But being modest men, as well as consistent Freemasons, we say very little about ourselves; we leave our acts to prove our professions. Bro. Findel evidently thinks that because we disapprove of the proceedings of the Grand Orient of France we in some mysterious way have become High Grade and transcendental, and here is his mistake. He does not see, (though he ought to see, for he understands our English Masonic history better than most people), that toleration is one thing, and identity of teaching another. We say openly to-day that the English Grand Lodge has nothing to do with the High Grades. They exist, and that is all Grand Lodge knows about them, and though many members of Grand Lodge are also members of the High Grades, the sphere of the two bodies is entirely distinct and severed. We presume Bro. Findel does not wish us to denounce the High Grades, a proceeding savouring of that body of men he so much admires? (the Jesuits), but not in accordance with Freemasonry. England is happily a land both of personal and constitutional liberty, and long may it continue, and while, as Craft Masons, we adhere to Grand Lodge we need not go out of our way to antagonize or find fault with the High Grades, who are just as respectable and well-intentioned as we are. We are among those who think the influence and practice of the High Grades are a little exaggerated. They certainly have little or no influence in Grand Lodge, on its teaching or its practice. If the day should ever come that the ancient principles of Craft Masonry are ever clouded over or affected by Christian Masonry, we shall be among the first to cry out and protest. But until that epoch arrives let us reassure our esteemed confrère, Bro. Findel, against fears which are premature, and misgivings which are needless. The last little matter which seems to have aroused Bro. Findel's apprehensions is Bro. Crawford's very innocent work, just as if because Bro. Crawford publishes a work the Grand Lodge of England, or English Freemasonry, is committed to it. We a little wonder to see such narrowness, (excuse the word, Bro. Findel!), in the Bauhütte. If such speculations are in Bro. Findel's apprehension, wise or unwise, useful or useless, surely on the great ground of toleration we may very well receive and study them. Truly our good brother is unconsciously reaching unto the sectarian intolerance of the "Strict Observance," which so injured and hindered German Masonry! Let us, as Masons, be liberal minded and large-hearted, and within due bounds welcome all researches, whether we agree with them or not, which either affect the practical history or the abstract theories of Masonry. Bro. Findel and ourselves agree in so much that it seems always a pity, and we feel it to be so, when we differ from him, but dismissing all doubts and fears as to the reality, stability, steadfastness of English Masonry, let us labour together in friendly sympathy for the spread of true and ancient and universal Craft Masonry in the world.

LE MONDE MACONNIQUE.

We have received and perused our French contemporary for August, and are glad to reciprocate the fraternal feeling expressed more than once in its pages. It has, indeed, sometimes appeared to us that our good friends and ourselves have, perhaps, both been a little hasty. Bros. Grimaux and Caubet will remember that our first "rencontre" was in response to some remarks about "cheap bibles," and our esteemed Grand Secretary, a brother who deserves the regard of all. Subsequently Bro. Grimaux propounded some amusingly strange doctrines about "Les Philadelphes," and we called attention to them. Then came the famous Convent of 1877, and we spoke out "more nostro," if strongly, (our good brethren will admit), manfully and honestly. We said what we meant, and we meant what we said. The justice of our objections, from an English point of view, to the course the Grand Orient had taken, has been sustained by the calm and deliberate action of our English Grand Lodge. But having said our say, as Masons, as we always say it, with honest frankness, and without any Jesuitical subterfuge or evasion of the difficulty, we do not see that any good can accrue to French or English Masonry by continuing a sterile discussion. We must agree to differ, and so long as the French Grand Orient, responding to Bro. Hubert's anxious hopes, goes no further, makes no change in its ritual, creates no revolutionary propaganda, as we have no object or end to serve but the good of Freemasonry, we shall remain silent spectators of events. We have no wish to keep up a constant "tirailleur" with our worthy Bros. Caubet and Grimaux, and we must ask them to believe, once for all, that though we differ widely, as they know, in our view of things Masonic, though there is undoubtedly a very chasm, so to say, between us, we have never lost our good will for, our sympathy with, French Freemasonry. As regards the present position and future action of the French Grand Orient we shall say a few words next week, which we hope will be taken in good part by our brethren in France and the Monde Maçonique. We hope for better days for French Freemasonry.

A NEW IDEA.

Is it true that "there is nothing new under the sun," yet every now and then an idea crops up which claims and puts forth the gloss of newness? Our contemporary the West London Express, alludes, in the words we now give, to a curious little episode which has, it seems, lately taken place in Lancashire. "Until quite lately the French used to caricature the English husband as leading his wife into the market by a rope and selling her to the highest bidder. This, according to the 'lively Gaul,' was a common event in perfide Albion; but if somewhat overdrawn, it had a foundation in fact. In the Midlands and the North, wife selling is by no means utterly unknown, and an amusing case occurred only a few days ago in Lancashire. A mason parted with his wife to a fellow mason for the sum of £5, on lease; £10 was first asked, but this was considered too high—the 'article' was not worth so much. The landlord of an inn where the transfer was effected acted as arbitrator, and £5 was accepted. As in this case, however, it was not a sale, but a lease, the husband would have done well—regarding the wife-kicking propensities of Lancashire—to make some stipulation about repairs; at present, if the wife is damaged, its original owner will have to stand the loss, or the expense of repairs. It is not unlikely that all four parties concerned in this little arrangement, consider it not only equitable, moral, and in all respects advisable, but actually legal, and would be genuinely amazed to hear anything to the contrary. Perhaps, after all, it would be better if such a practice were made legal, then we should not have so many divorce court scandals. When A admired B's wife, and B's wife responded to his affection, B being amenable, the whole matter could be settled amicably, without collusion or esclandre. I think the idea is worth considering." Thus far our juvenile, but most respectable contemporary, whose views hereon will probably be "caviare" to some of our readers. It is very curious that one of the most cherished traditions in Yorkshire and Lancashire has been that if a man took his wife with a rope round her neck he could sell her in any open market to the highest bidder. This is probably the remnant of the old usages of the "villane," but it is not so long ago either that on a market day in a good town in Yorkshire, which shall be nameless, a man is said to have sold his wife for 2s. 6d. and a pot of beer, having a rope round her neck. This idea, together with the other, that a husband may beat his wife with a stick no bigger than his little finger, must be classed among the delusions of folk-lore. As regards the present case, while we are not quite prepared to endorse our contemporary's opinion altogether, either as to the possibility, or practicability, or morality of his proposal, one "point," as the lawyers say, occurs. And it is one which we commend to the serious attention of our legal brethren. If he parts with his wife on lease, who is bound to give the customary two coats of paint outside, lessor or lessee? We pause for a reply.

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a promoter of the London Masonic Charity Association, I think it right to put before the public in general, and the Masonic world in particular, the "raison d'être," or the foundation or groundwork of its formation. To the uninitiated world who are not Masons, and even to many of them, it might very possibly appear unmasonic, and not pertaining to that universal brotherhood of which we have so much cause to be proud; but I speak for myself, and I think I might say for almost all my colleagues in this Association, that we are entirely actuated by the true principles of charity as taught by the Craft.

I will take my starting point from the statistics so diligently and ably furnished by Bro. Gladwell, in which he gives separately, but which I for terseness lump, the amount subscribed by London alone and that by the provinces collectively, and then the aggregate number of candidates returned for the same period respectively: London £16,425, provinces £15,232, or £1193 less than London; candidates returned—London 234, provinces 394, or 160 in excess. Those figures speak volumes. Well, here is the grievance; what is the remedy? First of all, let us enquire how the provinces achieve so great a success. It is simple enough, and Masonic to a certain extent only.

In each province there are several minor lodges, and over nearly each province there is one, and in some cases two Provincial Grand Lodges; these Grand Lodges as a rule constitute the centre of an association to which the minor lodges and their respective members in a great measure contribute their votes, both collectively and individually, so that they, the province, can feel morally certain of returning their candidate, or candidates, if any, at the first or second election; if there are no candidates, these accumulated votes are lent to a neighbouring province, to be returned when required. So far so good. Where, or when, does true Masonry in these combinative measures cease? It ceases when the merits of individual cases are not sufficiently considered; it ceases when sentiment is allowed to override ordinary justice; it ceases when the child of an aged and decrepid Mason, or his widow, is passed over for the child or widow, of the brother of yesterday; it ceases when the claims of that brother who has subscribed for years, and supported one or more of the institutions are superseded by the brother who when he has paid his entrance-fee and subscriptions considers his duties as a Mason have ceased, buttons up his pockets, and never contributes one iota more towards those institutions, from which he is reaping or seeking to reap the benefit. It is here, Sir, that true Masonry ceases, it is then that the Committee should be empowered to step in, and, after having satisfied the most deserving and the especially urgent cases in their own provinces, should well weigh the merits of the remainder, and without partiality, favour, or affection, forward those on their own list, or help the necessities of their neighbour, if required. There are several points to be considered in the merits of a case besides length of Masonic brotherhood, support given to the Craft and its institutions, &c., &c., such as position of friends and relatives, number of children, number of chances for election, sudden death, or reversal of fortune, &c., &c., but all in their several degrees. I trust, dear Sir and Brother, that you and your valuable columns will give this Association your earnest support, and that by uniting we shall be able to follow the excellent example of our brethren in the provinces, and return our proportionate share of candidates to our different institutions. They have shown us that they can always return those candidates who dwell in their midst, and who naturally look to them for aid and support. I can only say, if we do not take a leaf out of their copy-book we thoroughly deserve to be laughed at, as we have been, for not looking after ourselves.

Yours fraternally,

C. J. P.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I tender to you my best thanks for inserting a letter, the tenor of which you disagreed with. The result of the second meeting of the promoters does not remove my objection to the scheme, which I again characterise as but an offshoot from that lately attempted to be developed by the Charity Organisation Society. The selection of the candidates who are to become recipients of the Association's amalgamated votes is to be left to a committee of the Association. How this will suit the views of those who are supporting the cases not selected can only be judged by the result. In my opinion, each supporter of a case will deem that which he advocates as the most urgent, and it cannot be expected that the friends of every rejected candidate will aid the Association in its endeavour to secure the return of one chosen from the ruck by an intervening Committee.

I fail to perceive any direct advantages to either candidates or the Institutions by the formation of such an Association. On the contrary, I maintain that if the members of a lodge recommending the applicant would use their influence in favour of the candidate on whose behalf they have given a certificate, and if influential members of the Craft would abstain from the too frequent practice of having their names appended to a multiple of cases, sufficient concentration would be effected to secure an election at an early date after acceptance of the case by the General Committee.

[This movement has nothing to do with the C.O.S., and utterly repudiates its ideas.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The formation of the London Charity Association will doubtless prompt those provinces who have not a Charity Committee, to form one at once, to get their fair share of candidates into the Masonic Institutions; and the combined exertions will be sensibly felt by the provinces who have hitherto been so fortunate to get "a good share" of candidates into the Institutions.

Yet to prevent heartburnings after the elections, let the unsuccessful candidates be educated under the auspices of the respective provincial committees, at suitable schools near their own homes, until they are successful, or, if not, their education completed, thereby constituting them wards of their respective province, so to speak; and they would be recognised protégés of the Craft equally with those who have received the superior advantages of the great Charities, and would be additional proofs of the goodness inherent in our principles. Several children might in this manner receive benefits who at present receive none, and who would in after life have reason to remember the good works of the brotherhood, whereas, to them Masonry otherwise would be merely a name.

Those provinces who are not so fortunate as to have an Education Fund could alter their Benevolent Fund rules, so as to include education and increase the members' subscriptions threepence "or sixpence" extra per quarter to meet the additional expense, "if required."

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,

W. M.; LINTS.

TRURO CATHEDRAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I hope I shall not be thought to be interfering in a matter not concerning me if I make one or two very brief remarks on the correspondence which has taken place on the above subject.

Bro. E. Holmes is quite able to take care of himself, and has made an excellent defence of his position, but I would submit to his opponents, "Freemason" and "T.W.M.," that,

1. Bro. Holmes has a perfect right to give notice of any proposition with regard to a grant of money.

2. A Provincial Grand Lodge has a perfect right to appropriate funds to any object which a majority of its members may decide to be fit and proper (subject, of course, to its bye-laws).

3. The very fact of Truro Cathedral being what "T. W. M." calls a "State Cathedral Church" makes it, apart from any denominational question, a national monument, and, therefore, an object of universal interest, which cannot be said of any Baptist, Wesleyan, Jewish, or Roman Catholic place of worship in this country.

4. The precedents adduced by Bro. Holmes in his letter of last Saturday, and well known to every Mason, amply justify him, were any justification needed, in his present course.

I should just like to add, in reference to the remark of "Freemason" about "the numerous band of ladies and gentlemen who think they are praising God by subscribing so many thousand pounds to build a Cathedral, while scores, aye hundreds, of their fellow creatures in the country are wretched and almost starving," that your correspondent ought to know very well, if he does not, that those who are leaders in church work of all kinds in this land are far larger supporters of charity and relief funds than those who sneer at them, and that it is the indiscriminate distribution of relief so largely practised in England that has led to much of the improvidence, distress, and pauperism that are now the curses of our land.

Yours fraternally,

T. B. WHYTEHEAD.

York, August 23.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I find in your issue of the 24th inst. a letter signed "Consistency" animadverting on the appointment of some brethren to office in the Grand Lodge of this province who were not present at the recent meeting held in this town. Your correspondent has, however, omitted to state that shortly before that meeting it became necessary to alter the day for holding it, in consequence of the Naval Review at Spithead having been fixed for the same day (the 13th inst.), after the notice of meeting of Prov. Grand Lodge had been circulated amongst the lodges for some time. No doubt several brethren who had made arrangements to attend on the 13th were prevented from being present at the postponed meeting; indeed I know such to have been the case, and I feel certain the Prov. Grand Master would give due weight to that circumstance in dealing with the absence of brethren whose names appeared on the returns as intending to be present.

In this province notice is forwarded to every lodge several weeks before a meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge is held, and it contains (on the occasion of the annual meeting) the following intimation, viz.: "The Prov. Grand Master expressly requires a return of the names and the highest private lodge rank of every subscribing member who intends to be present at the Provincial meeting," and states the probability of brethren not so returned being passed over in the appointment of Prov. Grand Officers. From these returns a selection is made of the brethren who are to be appointed to office in Provincial Grand Lodge, and this rule has always been adhered to as far as possible, but it is practically impossible to ascertain before Provincial Grand Lodge meets whether the brethren who have been so selected will all be present, the Prov. Grand Master can only rely upon the returns made from the lodges, and when Grand Lodge has met (there being probably upwards of 200 brethren present) it is also impossible to make a change.

The first intimation probably the Prov. Grand Master has of the absence of the selected brother is on his name being proclaimed for the particular office to which he is to be appointed, he does not appear to be invested, and in most cases some brother of his lodge apologises for his absence on some unavoidable ground. It appears to me the only course the Prov. Grand Master can pursue is either to refuse to make any appointment to the office at that time, or to appoint the absent brother who has been selected for it; it is certainly too late to make a change, and, moreover, considering that in many instances the appointment is intended as a compliment to a deserving lodge quite as much as to the brother selected from the lodge who is to receive the office, I think your correspondent will perceive there are some good reasons why the former course should not always be adopted.

I feel certain the Prov. G. Master is most desirous that all the lodges should furnish strictly accurate returns of the brethren who will attend, and that no brother should authorise his name to appear who is not certain (as far as possible) he will be able to be present, and that if any deviation from this rule should arise the Prov. Grand Master will visit it with his marked disapproval.

Yours fraternally,

D.P.G.M.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason"

Dear Sir and Brother,—

"Consistency" having referred in your columns to the appointment of brethren to office in this province who were not present to be invested, I think might have added that the meeting of the lodge having been announced for Tuesday the 13th inst., consequent upon the Naval Review being held at Spithead that day, was put off, at short notice, till Thursday the 15th. This doubtless prevented some from attending who had arranged to be present on Tuesday and could not give up the second day for the purpose. There was also, it should be remembered, one absentee who received honours under circumstances which seem to be justified by very high authority, even if any Mason would be so ungracious as to deprive a brother of a collar in view of the interesting fact, as notified in open lodge, that on the morning of the day of investment he had "married a wife, and therefore could not come." This, however, ought not to have prevented the most obvious precautions against conferring honours on those not present, by appeal to the attendance book to see if the brethren selected were actually in lodge, and, should the reason seem to be special reason for appointing them in their absence, ascertaining of any brother present whether there was reasonable cause for that absence.

The subject of the selection of officers having, however, been raised in your columns, I should like to be allowed to make a few remarks on the system, or perhaps it should more properly be called the want of system, in that selection, which appears to prevail in this province. I, for one, do not fail to recognise that a selection having been made in private, a choice suddenly arrived at on finding the S.W. elect absent might have proved more unsatisfactory in the general interests of the Craft than abiding by the original selection. It has, however, always been understood that in this annual distribution of honours the officials of lodges in the town where the gathering is held shall at least not be omitted from consideration. The reasonableness of that presumed arrangement will be apparent when it is remembered that, there being nearly thirty lodges in the province, the meeting at which the appointments are to be made can scarcely be expected to be held in any one town twice within ten years. Now, at Southampton there are four town lodges, and two others in the neighbourhood at distances of about two miles from its centre, the bulk of their members being engaged professionally or otherwise in the town, practically making six lodges, to which the Prov. Grand Master has recommended the addition of a seventh, or exactly one fourth of the total of lodges in the province. The list, it will be seen, comprises twenty-four appointments, every office included.

If, however, we exclude such appointments as Tyler, Chaplain, and the permanent officials, I venture respectfully to urge that the selection of two brethren from Southampton for lodge honours does not fairly represent what that town was justly entitled to and might reasonably have expected. Reckon the distribution as you will, of the lodges in Southampton proper the only one omitted from honours on this occasion was the Royal Gloucester, the senior of the four receiving Grand Lodge. That omission, I most respectfully urge, is the more marked, seeing that whilst the senior, it is also the mother lodge of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master and Prov. Grand Sec.; it was, too, I believe, the mother lodge of the last two Deputy Prov. Grand Masters before the brother who at present holds that distinguished position—Bros. J. R. Stebbing and C. E. Deacon.

If it be suggested by those unacquainted with the facts that the Royal Gloucester may, perchance, have lost its influence or prestige, I can only say that—apart from the reign of its present W.M., who in so large a province scarcely, I should think, expects recognition before he has put off his armour—the Immediate Past Master has been appointed Prov. Grand Organist some five or six times within my knowledge, and after the specimens of Prov. Grand Organists one has seen and heard in various places, and may yet expect to hear (though, of course, this does not apply to Hampshire), that "honour" cannot be regarded as one to be coveted, or as recognising lodge services; he has also for some years been the life and soul of the excellent lodge of instruction in the town; and his predecessor in the chair of the Gloucester is the son of the Dep. Prov. Grand Master. This omission of the Southampton lodges in general, and of the Royal Gloucester in particular, from Grand Lodge honours is the more marked when the proportion of brethren receiving honours—say from Portsmouth—is noticed.

In saying this I cast blame on no one. The selection of brethren from anywhere and everywhere in the province, except those resident at the place where Grand Lodge is held, may be inevitable, as the many references to this subject at the banquet seemed to indicate was felt in high quarters. If it is, I, for one, am not disloyal or unreasonable enough to complain, especially as having gone from one end of the county to the other at the recent distribution—from Havant and Portsmouth to Ringwood and Bournemouth—there will no doubt be a chance by-and-bye for the recognition of some of those dwelling in the centre of the county; but without some such excuse recent proceedings do certainly seem somewhat strange to

Yours fraternally,

A SOUTHAMPTON MASON.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In the report of the meeting of the above on the 15th instant, a member of one of the entertaining lodges favoured us with some information as to the banquet arrangements; and I quite agree with this brother that it is impossible to please every one; hence the grumbling of a Masonic Shylock who was short of his pint of wine; but the Committee may rest assured that their efforts to make the Annual Provincial Festival a success were duly appreciated by the majority of the brethren who attended; but there is one part of this brother's statement—viz., that 150 bottles of champagne were placed on the table gratuitously by the four entertaining lodges, to which attention should be directed, as it is too great a burden to inflict on any Masonic district, it encourages the present waste in our banqueting and violates the professed principle "that no portion of our funds shall be thus applied save and except as hospitality to visiting brethren," and I presume no one will argue that the wine was given in this sense. The Committee are not blameable for doing what they thought, and which really was, a kind act, but it is quite time the P.G.M., who was present at this meeting, stopped this wasteful expenditure, as the money could be better applied to charitable purposes. Not long since Lord Skelmersdale called attention to the excesses in Masonic banqueting, and more recently one of our luminaries ventured the assertion that £100,000 was annually spent in Masonic banquets.

The efforts of these large, hearted brethren are intended to reduce the waste at these dinners by restricting the menu and so much wine drinking, and not to prevent brethren meeting socially and enjoying the pleasure of fraternal Masonic intercourse in a more inexpensive manner. I may say that all these good intentions will never be carried out whilst brethren of high authority countenance lodges in spending their funds in this manner.

I am, Sir and Brother, yours faithfully.

PYTHAGORAS.

THE ADMISSION OF MEMBERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Assuming the facts to be correctly stated by your correspondent "Caution," it seems to me a more truly important subject than that on which he has addressed you could not be brought before the attention of the Craft. I cordially join with him in the expression of a hope that such circumstances are rare, and I would add that the matter ought "not to be allowed to rest where it now is."

The power of blackballing, especially where one ball may reject, is, no doubt, liable to abuse—as, indeed, what power dependent upon the frailties of our common humanity is not?—especially in small towns, where there is but one lodge, and a man in every way worthy may be shut out from our Order through personal pique or prejudice. But such prejudice surely can hardly find an opportunity of exerting itself where there are six lodges amidst a population, as I gather from "Caution," of only eighty thousand. It is but fair to presume, under such circumstances, that if one lodge will not accept a man who is worthy of joining the Order, and whose circumstances warrant his so doing, another will do so. It appears to me a lodge at a distance undertakes a grave responsibility in initiating members from such a town and neighbourhood, and the officials of the province a still graver responsibility in recommending that the brethren so initiated may be permitted to open a lodge in the very midst of those who may have blackballed or rejected some of them, while, with regard to others, they have not so much as enjoyed an opportunity of passing their opinion on the point whether or not they are such persons as it is desirable should be received into the Order. Even in deprecating a possible abuse of privilege by a brother in a town where a single lodge is held, it is but fair to remember that in such cases the choice of the members has to be made between a novice, utterly untried, and it may be a brother who has been a member many years and has done good service for Masonry; nor, in any case, are our laws so stringent as those of the Grand Orient of France, where I am told—till a recent date, at all events, if it does not now prevail—not only the members of a lodge but any visiting brethren are called upon to ballot respecting the admission of a candidate, on the ground that the person voted for would become not merely a member of a particular lodge but of the Order generally.

I have heard this principle condemned as being far-fetched, but there are, I suspect, few who have held responsible lodge offices in our large towns who could not testify that the privilege "once a Mason always a Mason," is much more extensively claimed and exercised than many of us conceive it was ever intended to be—a fact of no slight bearing on another point raised by your correspondent's letter.

Leaving aside for the moment the question how far Lodges are justified in habitually receiving men from a distant town offering facilities to all for joining the Order, it is obvious that the grant of a warrant to those so received, including, it may reasonably be presumed, some who would not be admitted into the Order by those who know better than strangers can, their habits, social position, &c., can have no other effect than that of nullifying and rendering practically void the power of rejection and, what is worse still, lowering the social standard of Masonry. In saying this, I desire to be clearly understood as holding that Masonry was never intended to embrace artisans and the class for whom Oddfellowship, Forestry, and the like societies were designed; had it been otherwise, nothing is to my mind more clear than that some direct pecuniary benefit would have been offered our members, if not from the moment of joining, at some deferred date. In some circles, however, I regret to see the feeling growing that every man earning something weekly beyond the wages of a mere labourer, and who can spare five pounds for his initiation fee, is entitled to be made a Mason. I may be exclusive in my tastes, but I repudiate sympathy with a feeling which I regard, so far from reflecting credit on the Order, as its most threatening symptom. Our charities, I hold it, were designed and are conducted mainly as reserves, to meet those cases of emergency which will always arise in a country like ours, and not as the one principal object, end, and aim of the Order. Were our schools and benevolent institutions carried on for the purpose of providing assistance or a refuge to every Mason's widow or children, or even every Mason himself after reaching old age, a certain defined proportion—and that necessarily a very large one—of our yearly subscriptions would, of course, be set apart by the Constitutions for the express purpose of maintaining our charities, which to meet even the most urgent and deserving cases must be very much larger than they now are.

As it is, these charities are simply the out-growth of our Order, the outward and visible sign of our principles and tenets, and I hold that no man should be received into the Order unless his social position at the time of his joining is such that he may fairly be regarded as requiring assistance in this way only in time of unexpected emergency. Some will perhaps say that my idea of Masonry is a high and somewhat exclusive one, and I admit the soft impeachment. It is because I hold so high an ideal that I venture to trouble you with these remarks, urging that of our leaders, above all, we ought to expect every effort to maintain what the petition referred to by "Caution" appropriately calls "the distinctive character Freemasonry has hitherto held," and to express the hope that so far from encouragement being given by Grand Lodge to members who seek to invade our privileges in the manner alluded to by your correspondent of last week, they will set their "foot down" on so much as the suggestion.

Your correspondent, I notice, refers to the Prov. Grand Master recommending the warrant as residing some fifty or sixty miles from the "locus in quo," and the petitioners against the warrant as embracing representatives of six lodges in the town objecting, including corporate officials whom one can hardly suppose desirous of doing an injustice to brethren whom they find worthy. Would it be too much, under such circumstances, to ask if the Grand Master of the province made enquiries on the spot before arriving at his decision, and if not, why not, recognising what certainly seems to be a remonstrance worthy of due consideration and weight in such a matter? I venture also to suggest whether the name of the province and its officers, with the lodges concerned, may not be profitably revealed, if not now at some future time, before it is too late to secure a remedy for what I think is justly complained of.

I am, yours fraternally,

SPERO.

WAS POPE PIUS IX. A FREEMASON?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As some of the brethren differ on some occasions, I beg to take the liberty of asking your answer to the questions below, which I should like to know for satisfaction not only to myself but also to others:

Was the late Pope Pius IX. a Mason? also, is it in order to propose and initiate a Roman Catholic in Freemasonry?

If you would oblige me with an answer, I should esteem it a favour.

Yours fraternally,

T. R. STEVENS.

[1. Pius IX. was not a Freemason. 2. Yes.—Ed.]

NON-MASONIC LECTURES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I wonder if there is any hope of any of our London lodges inaugurating with the Masonic season of 1878-9 lectures at which ladies might be present. Purely Masonic lectures must be delivered to Masons; but why not for the nonce give up "shop" and try a little general and open literature? I am inclined to think the experiment might succeed, and I think it would be a pleasing change from the unceasing round of dinners and toasts.

Yours fraternally,

OMICRON.

LOCUM TENENS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In July last we elected and invested a brother to the office of Inner Guard; since then this brother has resigned and left the town. Can the W.M. re-elect another brother as I.G., or must it be one acting as I.G. until the next installation and investiture of officers?

I shall be glad if you will reply fully on this point, as I cannot find anything in the Book of Constitutions bearing on this matter.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

CHESHIRE.

[The W.M. can appoint a "locum tenens" whenever he thinks fit.—Ed.]

MASONIC SOBRIETY

The following striking letter from a Mason's wife appears in the Corner Stone, New York. We call the attention of our brethren to it:—

Dear Sir.—I read a very interesting article in a late issue "Know Thyself," in which you named every virtue a man and Mason should possess except one, a Mason's duty to his family.

My husband is a Mason, and until he joined a lodge a better husband and father never lived. He has been a member for about two years. For the first six months he was all right, but gradually began to change after that. At first he was satisfied to stay in some liquor saloon, after coming from lodge, for about an hour; now he seldom comes home at all on lodge night; I do not see him till some time next day, when he has slept his drunken fit off.

He has also joined an association, an off-shoot of the lodge. Their rooms are over a lager beer saloon, whose proprietor gives the rooms rent free for their patronage; the meetings are generally held in the saloon. My husband is one of its most active members. Every evening the moment supper is over he dresses, goes to the club, and I do not see him till two or three o'clock next morning, when he comes tumbling up-stairs.

He has a clean, comfortable home, nice children, two boys, and I never say a cross word to him, but am always cheerful looking, no matter how sad at heart I may be. He has promised me so often to change, and then broken his word, that I am discouraged. I once saw in a paper, that Masons' wives should impress on their sons' minds the beauties and virtues of Masonry, but I never can. All his Masonic friends are the same as he is. Why is a drunkard allowed to be in good standing in a lodge?

A MASON'S WIFE.

LORD LYTTLETON'S MONUMENT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Many would doubtless like to know the inscription on the "Lyttelton" memorial in Worcester Cathedral, and I do not think I can do much better than send you the enclosed cutting from to-day's Birmingham Daily Post.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

G. PEARCE BALDWIN.

August 24, 1878.

To the Editor of the "Daily Post."

Sir,—As I see a descriptive notice of the Lyttelton memorial monument in your paper of this morning, you may like to add the inscription thereon, which I do not see.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

D. MELVILLE.

Witley Rectory, Stourport, August 22.

"Hoc Monumentum in Memoriam Georgii Gulielmi, Baronis Lyttelton—per xxxvi. annos hujusce Comitatus-Sub Victoria Regina—Proculis—amici quidam—ex iis—inter quos—ut Glorie Dei hominumque Salutis inserviret—opere laborabat—lugentes posuerunt.

"Natus Martii xxxi. A.D. MDCCCXVII.

"Obit Aprilis xix. A.D. MDCCCLXXVII."

The following is a rough translation of the inscription:—"In memory of George William, Baron Lyttelton, for thirty-six years Lord-Lieutenant of this county, under Queen Victoria, some sorrowing friends, of those among whom he diligently laboured that he might promote the glory of God and the welfare of man, have erected this monument. Born March 31, 1817; died April 19, 1876."

MICROMETERS.

Mr. J. F. M. Pollock, of Longclose Works, Leeds, writes to the Times:

Sir,—I see in your review of American inventions at Paris to-day a mention of the micrometer machine used by the Waltham Watch Company for measuring the 1-25,000th of an inch as an extraordinary novelty.

Nothing is further from my wish than to depreciate our Transatlantic cousins, but Sir Joseph Whitworth, of Manchester, made a machine to measure the 1-1,000,000th part of an inch over twenty years ago, and machines measuring easily 1-30,000th of an inch have long been in everyday use for making his standard cylindrical gauges.

NEW MASONIC HALL AT CHACEWATER.

After a long and hard struggle, the Freemasons of Chacewater have succeeded in erecting a hall which does them and their town credit. Many years have elapsed since the movement was begun, and great difficulties have had to be overcome. Want of sympathy with the Craft generally on the part of landowners, coupled with objections more determined than reasonable, did much to delay the carrying out of the proposal, and but for the generosity of Bro. S. G. Moyle it is doubtful whether Chacewater would even now have a Masonic hall. Chacewater is one of those villages in Cornwall which, to use a conventional, yet expressive phrase, have seen better days. Situate in the midst of a vast mineral district, it enjoyed an amount of prosperity in the more favourable days of Cornish mining—when dividends were frequent and calls rarely heard of, except in the case of a new concern. It was in those palmy days that the Boscawen Lodge of Freemasons was founded. Twenty years have passed since then. Mines have been "knocked," others resuscitated, only to be "knocked" again, and the bulk of the inhabitants, or the younger ones, have emigrated. Yet through these vicissitudes the Boscawen Lodge has flourished, and but a handful of members, so to speak, to support it, it now boasts of having on its books the names of more members than any other lodge in the county. It was in 1873 that the lodge passed a resolution declaring the expediency of erecting a Masonic Hall, and negotiations were opened for the purchase of three cottages in the main street as a site for the building. The owner, however, wished to insert a clause in the lease reserving to himself the right to have a reading-room in the building for the benefit of his tenantry, the room to be open at all times for their benefit, and virtually under his control. This the Freemasons considered objectionable. It would, they, argued interfere with that privacy with which Freemasonry should be conducted, and they suggested that they should nominate trustees to control the building. But the owner was inexorable on the point; and further, he desired that a clause should be inserted in the lease by which he should have the right to conclude the same at any time, subject to his giving twelve months' notice. This the lodge likewise objected to, and thus the first scheme dropped. Bro. S. G. Moyle, however, soon came forward to assist his brethren, and, as has been said, chiefly through his help the Boscawen Lodge of Freemasons has a hall of its own.

The building stands on a site adjacent to that of the old lodge-room, at the rear of the Britannia Hotel. A good substantial building it is, and a valuable adjunct to the village. The only misfortune is that it is almost hid from public view—a fact which is attributable to the difficulty with the landowners. Approached from the main thoroughfare by a small lane, it is flanked on the one side by the backs of a row of rather dilapidated houses, whilst on the other is a dull, heavy-looking chapel, more substantial certainly than picturesque. A little to the front is a range of fields rising to a high altitude. Apart from these drawbacks, however, it is a structure of much merit, and admirably serves the purpose for which it was erected. The lodge-room is a capacious apartment, larger somewhat than that just consecrated at Redruth. Then there is a convenient ante-room and other necessary apartments, whilst underneath these are rooms occupied by the local body of Oddfellows and other societies, as well as providing a long-felt want in Chacewater—a suitable room for concerts and entertainments. The lodge-room is well battened and prepared for future decoration, which has, as yet, been carried out only in part. Several articles of furniture have been given by members of the lodge at home and abroad, and were obtained chiefly through the instrumentality of Bro. Ninness, who, with Bro. J. R. Paull, has worked indefatigably for the benefit of the lodge. It may be added that over the main entrance door is a pretty little tablet, the gift of Bro. Juleff, of Grampound. At the top is the triangle, and in the centre of it the "All-seeing Eye," with a scroll bearing the words "May He ever watch over us." In another scroll, interwoven with the anchor and cross, are the words spes in cruce vera anchora animæ, or, "Hope in the cross is the true anchor of the soul."

FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

The Aryan Lodge, No. 1709, was consecrated by the R. W. the District Grand Master of Bombay, on the 5th of March.

The following address was delivered by the R.W. the Dist. G. Master:—

Worshipful Master and Brethren—I congratulate you on having arrived at the culmination of your endeavours to form a Hindoo lodge, and it has given me very sincere pleasure to consecrate it this evening. Since my entrance into Masonry, I have been anxious to see its civilising efforts extended to all races and creeds. From the time of my appointment as head of the Craft under England in this Presidency, my great desire has been to secure the establishment of a lodge for Hindoos, on the plan which has been found to work so well with regard to our Parsee brethren. In this endeavour, you, Worshipful Sir, have been a most able coadjutor. You have laboured long, and with great patience have overcome the many obstacles in your way. Now that this evening your work has been accomplished, I congratulate you heartily on its success.

I not only look upon the establishment of this lodge as an important step towards bringing our Hindoo fellow-citizens into closer connection with their European and Parsee brethren, but I feel sure that the spread of Freemasonry amongst them will help the efforts of the reforming party, and gradually clear away the mists which have for ages overclouded their religion, while it will tend greatly to raise and improve them in their moral and social progress. The present movement is a subject of great joy to myself personally, and I feel sure that we have this night taken a step, the wisdom of which will in the future be fully proved. In conclusion I heartily wish the lodge and all its members every prosperity.

The W. Master addressed the brethren as follows:—

Right Worshipful Sir and Brethren—On so important an occasion as the present, unique in the annals of our Order, I trust I may be pardoned if I offer a few remarks. This evening you have kindly assisted at the consecration of the "Aryan" Lodge, an event which marks a new era in Freemasonry, and which cannot fail to strike the reflective observer as one of deep significance. Hinduism, it is true, have ere now been enrolled under our banner, but hitherto only in a few isolated instances. To-night, however, has witnessed the foundation of the first Hindu lodge—a remarkable example of the universality of our brotherhood, an honourable testimony to the value of our most cherished principles, and a sure sign of the vitality and increasing prosperity of our ancient institution. Nor does the present meeting afford a subject of less interest when viewed in its moral and social aspects with regard to this lodge in particular. The designation we have selected appears to me a peculiarly happy one, inasmuch as it recalls to mind a great historical fact, which the science of comparative philology teaches. Long prior to the dawn of history—at a time concerning which we have no records save those that the affinities of language, myth, and custom incontestably furnish—the ancestors of our native brethren migrated southwards from the cradle of their race in Central Asia, and extended themselves by slow degrees throughout the length and breadth of this great peninsula. Similar migrations of their kindred proceeded from the same centre towards the West, as far as the Atlantic sea-board, and gave rise to those European States whose noble mission it has been to spread the light of civilisation in every quarter of the globe. Thus the Brahmins of the "Aryan" Lodge, whom we this day welcome as our brethren, are members like ourselves—Parsees as well as Europeans—of that great Aryan family, to which belong the Kelt, Greek, Roman, Persian, Slav, and Teuton. On this occasion, also, we celebrate the success of a movement carried out, with a courage deserving of our sincerest sympathy and admiration, by a small band of earnest reformers, in face of the severest social penalties. The happiest auguries as to the future may, I think, be found in the fact that these brethren are foremost in education and enlightenment among the vast Hindu population of which they form a part. Never, I venture to say, has Freemasonry achieved a nobler triumph: for these brethren, who were born in the chains and darkness of Polytheism, whose traditional caste and creed are the most exclusive and conservative the world has ever known, have now voluntarily identified themselves with an institution which abhors and forbids all political and religious dissensions, which inculcates unswerving obedience to the government by law established, and requires subscription to but one article of faith, expressed by the ancient Sanskrit formula adopted by this lodge as its motto, Ekam eva advitiyam—"There is One, no second."

Masonic and General Tidings.

At the meeting of the Hilda Chapter, Rose Croix, held at the Queen's Hotel, York, last Wednesday week, Bro. T. Cooper, M.W.S., presiding, Bros. Lawrence Murphy (St. John's Lodge, 384, I.C.), and Mervyn C. S. Tynte and J. Hanly (St. Patrick's Lodge, 295, I.C.), and Wm. C. Lukis (De Grey and Ripon Lodge, 837), were elected and afterwards perfected. The meeting was of a very pleasant and successful character.

The execution at Peshawur about two months ago of a Sepoy of the 7th Native Infantry who had shot a Subadar in revenge for having been reprimanded by the latter at target-practice seems to have created a little excitement, for between 3000 and 4000 natives were present at his punishment. My informant says:—"His dying speech was concise, and in more ways than one, conclusive. He said—Sisters, brothers. If native officers abuse Sepoys, they must expect to be shot, and if Sepoys shoot native officers they must expect to be hanged, so it is all right and I have obtained justice."—Vanity Fair.

The forty-fourth ordinary half-yearly meeting of the proprietors of the North London Railway Company was held on Thursday week, at the offices, Euston Station, Bro. J. Bancroft in the chair. The report stated that there had been an increase in the receipts from all sources of traffic, amounting to £8074, whilst the working expenses showed a decrease of £732.

On Thursday week the banner of the King of Italy, one of the newly-created Knights of the Garter, was placed in St. George's Chapel by Bro. Sir Albert Woods, Garter Principal King of Arms.

Bro. the Marquis of Hartington will preside at the banquet in connection with the Festival of the Royal Albert Asylum, Lancaster, on Wednesday next, the 4th prox.

Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon inaugurated, on Thursday, 22nd inst., the Falkland Memorial, the erection of which is now being proceeded with on Wash Common, Newbury, the site of the first battle of Newbury, in which Viscount Falkland and an ancestor of Lord Carnarvon fell.

The annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Province of Somerset will be held under the banner of the Royal Clarence Lodge No. 976, on Saturday next, the 7th of September, at 12.30 p. m. in the Kings School, Bruton. Further particulars may be obtained of the Hon. Sec., F. R. Pideaux Bridgewater.

We learn from the Times of India that the Hon. Bro. Gibbs, of the Bombay Council is likely to be appointed a member of the Viceroy's Council.

The Prince of Wales is expected to visit Doncaster during the September race meeting. His Royal Highness will again stay at Brantingham Thorpe, the seat of Mr. Christopher Sykes, M.P., and will on each race day travel from Brough Station to Barnby Don by special train, proceeding from the latter place to Doncaster by road. The arrangements at Doncaster will be the same as in 1876.

We are glad to notice that a well-known member of the press in the Western Counties, viz., Bro. Wm. Brodie, W.M. of No. 1254, one of the proprietors of the Exeter Gazette, was appointed Grand Junior Deacon of the Province of Devonshire, at the Provincial Grand Lodge held at Okehampton on Monday last, and on the same occasion we observe he was installed the first W.M. of the Lodge of Obedience, No. 1753.

The Islington Lodge of Instruction, No. 1471, will resume its meetings on Tuesday next, September 3rd, and following Tuesdays, at the Three Bucks, 23, Gresham-street, at 7 o'clock. Bro. J. L. Mather, Preceptor.

The Past Grand Masters of New York have formed an Association of P.G.M.'s, for social and Masonic purposes.

ORIENTAL MIXTURE.—Lovers of the fragrant weed are much indebted to Bros. W. & C. Page, of the Grange Tobacco Works, Bermondsey, for the introduction of their "Oriental" Smoking Mixture, with a sample of which we have been favoured. The "Oriental" Mixture is made, as its name applies, from Oriental tobaccos, the choicest growths only being utilized. It is delightfully cool, and possesses a rare aromatic fragrance, neither burning the tongue nor leaving a disagreeable taste on the palate. Bros. Page have thus rendered the smoking public a valuable service in the introduction of this very excellent tobacco, which may be obtained through any tobacconist.

The increase of shortsightedness is complained of in Alsace. In a college at Mulhausen fifty out of 234 students were lately found shortsighted, the three higher classes showing 68 per cent. This is attributed to studying by twilight and at night with insufficient light.

The half-yearly meeting of the proprietors of the Great Western Railway, was held on Thursday at the Paddington Station, Bro. D. Gooch, Bart., M.P., in the chair.

The Imperial Bank of Germany has raised its rate of discount to 5, and the rate of interest on advances to 6 per cent.

The traffic receipts of the London and South-Western Railway, for last week show an increase of £1411, and Grand Trunk a decrease of £3189.

The Duke and Duchess of Abercorn, after visiting the Earl and Countess of Lichfield at Shugborough Park, Staffordshire, have arrived at Baron's Court.

We regret to have to announce the death, on Monday last, of Mrs. Stone, wife of Bro. Alderman Stone, P.G.W., after a few hours' illness. The deceased lady had not been in very good health for some time past, and was seriously affected by the terrific thunderstorm on Saturday last. Her death occurred at the Alderman's residence at Hollington, near Hastings, and the funeral takes place at Norwood Cemetery on Saturday. The announcement will be a painful surprise to many of our readers, who will retain a grateful recollection of Mrs. Stone's courtesies at the Mansion House as Lady Mayoress.—City Press.

Commander Swinton C. Holland has been appointed commander of her Majesty's Ship Thunderer, vice Bro. Lord Charles Beresford, P.G.W. Devon.

Mrs. Monckton and Sir C. L. Young, Bart., gave a dramatic recital at the Town Hall, Ryde, Isle of Wight, on Wednesday evening, in aid of a local charitable fund.

Several members of the council of the Oxford Military College have announced their attention of giving special prizes to be competed for annually, the Bishop of Oxford giving one for religious instruction, Bro. Sir E. Lechmere, M.P., R.W.G.M. Worcestershire, one for history, Colonel Moncrieff one for German, and other members for French, dictation, and mathematics. Other special prizes will shortly be announced.

The cricket match at Hastings on Wednesday, between the Australians and Eighteen of Hastings, terminated in favour of the Australians, by 47 runs, in a single innings. The home team only made 83 in their second innings. The Australian total was 260.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The quarterly communication of the Grand Lodge of English Freemasons was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. General Brownrigg C.B., Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, presided as Grand Master, and was supported by Bro. Richard Giddy, district G.M. for Griqualand, as Dep. G.M.; Capt. Platt, P.G.J.W., as G.S.W.; and Sir Harcourt Johnstone, M.P., G.J.W.; The other Grand and Past Grand officers present were Bros. Col. Shadwell Clarke, S.G.D.; Raphael Costa, J.G.D.; John Havers, P.G.W.; Edward S. Snell P.G.D.; Aeneas J. McIntyre, Q.C., G.R.; Thomas Fenn, P.G.D.; Sir Albert Woods (Garter), G.D.C.; James Lewis Thomas, Assist. G.D.C.; John Hervey, G.S.; Henry Brown, P.G.D.; Dr. Jabez Hogg, P.G.D.; Captain N.G. Philips, P.G.D.; Peter de L. Long, P.G.D.; John M. Case, P.G.D.; Joseph C. Parkinson, P.G.D.; John A. Rucker; Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D.; J. E. Saunders, P.G.D.; Alex. J. D. Filer, P.G.S.B.; W. F. Nettleship, P.G.S.B.; J. Wright, P.G.P.; Brackstone Baker, P.G.D.; Robert Grey, P.G.D.; James Mason, P.G.S.B.; W. Hickman, P.A.G.D.C. Francis Robinson, P.G.A.D.C.; Rev. J. S. Browning, P.G.C.; C. C. Dumas, P.G.A.D.C.; H. G. Buss, Asst. G.S.; S. Rawson P.D.G.M., China; Robert Morris, L.L.D., P.G.M., Kentucky; H. D. Sandeman, P.D.G.M., Bengal; W. H. Lucia, G.S.B.; Rev. H. A. Pickard, G.C.; Rev. W. A. Hill, A.G.C.; Rev. C. J. Martyn, P.G.C. Dep. G.M. of Suffolk; Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; John Coutts, P.G.P.; C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.P.; James Brett, P.G.P.; Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B.; Rev. C. W. Arnold P.G.C.; Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B.; J. M. Clabon, P.G.D.; W. T. Howe, P.G.P.; J. Boyd, P.G.P.; Col. A. L. Cole, P.G.W.; W. Ough, P.G.P.; Thomas Cubitt, P.G.P.; E. P. Albert, P.G.P.; W. Wilson, A.G.P.; and C. B. Payne, G.T. Grand Secretary having read minutes of last communication, they were passed and confirmed.

General Brownrigg: Brethren, the first thing we have on our minutes is:—

"The M.W. Grand Master will therefore move—

"1st. to repeal Articles 2 and 3, page 35, of the Book of Constitutions.

"2nd. To substitute for them the following, viz.:—"All monies belonging to the Grand Lodge shall be deposited in the Bank of England in the names of the Grand or Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Treasurer. The duties of the Grand Treasurer shall be to keep a general supervision of the accounts, to sign cheques, which must be countersigned by the Grand Secretary for all monies duly voted by the Grand Lodge, and generally to assist and advise the Trustees and Executive Officers in the due and faithful administration of the funds of the Fraternity. The accounts shall be annually audited by the professional auditor, to be appointed by the Grand Master pursuant to a resolution passed in Grand Lodge on the 23rd of June, 1859."

I think, brethren, that resolution speaks for itself, and it is therefore unnecessary that we should say anything on it. I therefore move it.

Bro. Richard Giddy. I beg to second the motion.

The motion was then formally put and duly carried.

General Brownrigg. Brethren, the next matter on the agenda is.

"The M.W. Pro Grand Master will make a communication to Grand Lodge with regard to the scrutiny for the election of members of the Board of General Purposes at the Quarterly Communication on the 5th of June last; and a resolution will be proposed approving the action of the Pro Grand Master in the matter."

I believe our Bro. Grand Secretary will read the report of the Pro Grand Master.

Grand Secretary then read the letter of the Earl of Carnarvon, in which he explained the action he had taken in the matter, and the necessity there was for immediate steps. There was no provision in the Book of Constitutions to meet such a case as had occurred, and, therefore, he asked for the confirmation by Grand Lodge of what he had done. [The result of this is given in the speech of Bro. Havers below, and the vote read by Grand Secretary in accordance with the wish of Bro. Brackstone Baker.] Bro. Havers: M.W.G.M., I have been asked to move a resolution arising out of that report, and that resolution, with your permission, I will now read to you:—

"That this Grand Lodge approves of and confirms the proceedings of the Grand Master in ordering a revision of the returns made by the Scrutineers of members returned as elected to serve on the Board of General Purposes in June last, and in acting on such amended returns, thus unseating three brethren who had been declared to have been duly elected and who were not so elected, and restoring to their rightful seats three brethren who had been duly elected and were deprived of their seats by the falsification of returns."

That, M.W.G.M., I have been asked to move. You will permit me for one moment to take a brief retrospect of this very unheard of proceeding. Not within the memory of the oldest man within these walls has any scandal so grave, so outrageous been known of. One would hardly have imagined that that man, held in good repute up to that time, should, after taking a solemn obligation before the Grand Master, and in presence of the assembled brethren, that he would make an honest, true and faithful return, for the purpose, perhaps, of serving a friend, so have falsified the return as to oust three most respectable members of Grand Lodge from their seats, and return others, and so to return them that one who held the lowest number of votes was represented to have the highest. The Grand Master has given us his sentiments on the subject, and I am quite sure that this Grand Lodge will agree that it was the duty of the Grand Master to act for his Grand Lodge in such an emergency, and to save us from the consequences of so grave an error. I may say that I think we might quite reasonably go a step further. The Grand Master heard of this only on the Thursday. The Board of General Purposes met on the following Tuesday. He had that Committee summoned, and it met on Thursday. It went to work at once and made its return without leaving the hall, after determining what the true history of the matter was, so that no delay occurred, and the report was made to the Grand Master by that very post. A reply came making the fresh arrangement, and the regularly elected brethren were properly summoned to meet at the next board. This being so, I think, with your permission, we might even go a step further in this proposed motion, and I would venture, but entirely subject to your approval, to add to the resolution the following words, "That this Grand Lodge expresses its thanks to the Grand Master for his prompt and energetic action, by which speedy justice has been done and a grave scandal corrected." I have taken advantage of my position as an old Grand Officer, having that right to express my opinion, though, perhaps, this is hardly the occasion for me to do so; and I cannot help condoling with Grand Lodge on the very great scandal. I take it to be a public calamity. I regret exceedingly the severe punishment that has fallen upon the man, (no, no), a man who has been held in considerable repute among us for many years, who is an old Grand Officer, and who has been a member of the Board of General Purposes for twenty years. I must tell you that even in a matter like this I think his punishment most severe. (Loud cries of no, no.) But, brethren, still I feel bound to say that I think it most just. (Loud cries of hear, hear.) I am not sure whether any man that could be guilty of such conduct ought to be tolerated longer among us. (Renewed cries of hear, hear.) But I think it well to temper justice with mercy. I pity him; but I am glad of the example that has been made. I must say further, if you will kindly indulge me another moment, that I think the Board of General Purposes deserves credit for the manly and upright manner in which they have performed that which must have been a most painful duty. I am sorry to say that there is reason to fear that this is not the first time the occurrence for which punishment has been awarded has happened. I trust, at any rate, that it is the last time. I trust that such steps will be taken in the future as will not only almost, but certainly guarantee, the truthfulness of the returns, and if a man does as this man has done, he will be at once fixed as the individual who has changed the numbers. With these few words, M.W.G.M., and thanking you, brethren, for the attention you have paid to me, I now beg to move the resolution which I have formally read. (Hear, hear.) Bro. McIntyre, G.R.—Most Worshipful Grand Master, I rise for the purpose of seconding the resolution which has been placed before you in such clear language by Bro. Havers, and I feel that anything that I could say would not add to the force of the arguments he has put before you, but might, to some extent, detract from the cogency of the reasoning. I most heartily concur myself in the reasoning, and in everything that Bro. Havers has laid before you, and I feel confident that all of you (for all of you know the brother), while you will be extremely sorry that such punishment has fallen upon him, will still feel more sorry that such punishment should have been deserved. (Hear, hear.) I beg to second Bro. Havers' motion.

Bro. Brackstone Baker having asked that the names of the brethren substituted for those who had been wrongly returned might be read,

Grand Secretary read the following:—

NOTE.—Some doubts having arisen, subsequently to the meeting of the Grand Lodge on the 5th of June, respecting the correctness of the report of the Scrutineers, so far as related to the election of the Members of the Board of General Purposes, the M.W. Pro Grand Master appointed a Special Committee to examine the balloting papers and report to his Lordship thereon. The investigation and report of such Special Committee resulted in the displacement of Bro. Chas. F. Hogard, P.M. 205.

" John G. Stevens, P.M. No. 554.
" Daniel Betts, P.M. 1351. and the substitution of Bro. Alfred Meadows, M.D., P.M. No. 4.
" Frank Richardson, P.M. 14.
" Robert F. Gould, P.M. 92.
as duly elected Members of the Board.

The following report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter was read, in which are recommendations for the following grants, viz.:

A brother of the Lodge of Sympathy, 483,	£	s.	d.
The widow of a brother of the Hartington Lodge, 1021, Barrow-in-Furness	50	0	0
A brother of the Lion Lodge, 312, Whitby	50	0	0

The grants were confirmed.

The report of the Board of General Purposes, as given in the Freemason last week, was adopted, and the motion for altering the subscriptions to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution from guineas to pounds was carried.

Grand Lodge was then formally closed.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

WARRINGTON.—Lodge of Lights, (No. 148).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, Aug. 26th, at the Masonic Rooms, Sankey-street. The W.M. Bro. Pickthall presided, and was assisted by his Wardens and a goodly number of brethren. The lodge having been opened in ancient form the minutes were read. The lodge was raised one degree, when Bros. Dr. A. Mackie and G. F. Curzon claimed preferment, and having proved their claim, were entrusted and retired. The lodge having been opened in the 3rd degree, the W.M. vacated the chair in favour of Bro. John Bowes, P.M., P.P.G.J.W., Cumberland and Westmorland, who separately raised the two brethren before named in ample form. After labour the brethren were invited by the W.M. to supper, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The usual toasts were duly honoured. The W.M.'s health was drunk with much heartiness, as also was that of the junior members. "The Visitors" one and all complimented Past Master Bowes on the manner in which he had rendered the ceremony of raising. Some excellent songs were sung during the evening, and "The Tyler's Toast" was proposed at half-past ten.

BRIGHTON.—York Lodge, (No. 315).—On Tuesday the meeting of this lodge at the Brighton Pavilion was a special occasion consequent on the official visit of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Sussex (Sir Walter Wyndham Burrell, Bart., M.P.). He was attended by the following officers of Provincial Grand Lodge:—Bro. J. Dixon, Prov. G.S.W.; Bro. C. P. Henty, Prov. G.J.W.; Bro. H. M. Davey, Prov. G. Chaplain; Bro. V. P. Freeman, Prov. G. Secretary; Bro. T. S. Byass, Prov. S.D.; Bro. T. H. Crouch, Prov. G.J.D.; Bro. J. M. Kidd, Prov. G.D.C.; Bro. C. Sandeman, Prov. G.A.D.C.; Bro. A. King, Prov. G. Organist; Bro. W. Read, Prov. G. Pursvt.; Bro. M. G. Sharp, Prov. G.S.; Bro. J. Farncombe, Prov. G.S.; and Bro. T. Hughes, Tyler. The past and present officers of the York Lodge present were—Bro. A. J. Hawkes, W.M.; Bro. C. W. Hudson, S.W.; Bro. T. Packham, J.W.; Bro. W. H. Gibson, J.D.; Bro. H. Payne, Steward; Bro. W. J. Smith, I.G.; Bro. J. Stride, P.M.; Bro. J. Eberall, P.M.; Bro. S. T. Foat, P.M.; Bro. W. R. Wood, P.M.; Bro. W. Devin, P.P.G. Organist; Bro. T. Sinnock, Bro. G. R. Godfree, Bro. E. Hall, Bro. J. Bradford, Bro. C. J. Carter, Bro. R. T. Nye, Bro. G. R. Lockyer, Bro. C. A. McKellow and Bro. S. Ridge. The visiting brethren included the following:—The Mayor of Brighton (Bro. J. J. E. Mayall), Yarnborough, 811; Bro. Hallett (P. Prov. G.S.W., Sussex); Bro. T. J. Sabine, P.M. Chaucer, 1540 (P. Prov. G.S.B., Middlesex); H. Davey (W.M. Royal Brunswick, 732); H. S. Gates (St. Cecilia, 1636); G. Cole (Organist St. Cecilia, 1636); D. Legge (Royal Jubilee, 72); G. Reeves Smith (Old Globe, 200). The business of the lodge, which included the ceremony of initiation, being concluded, the brethren adjourned to the Banqueting-room, where an elegant banquet was served by Bros. Sayers and Marks, of the Western-road. The loyal and craft toasts were enthusiastically received. The W.M. in proposing "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master," referred to the honour which had been conferred on him, as no such official visit had been paid to the York Lodge for a period of 25 years. He also spoke of the popularity of Sir Walter as the head of Freemasonry in Sussex, and the rapid strides which it was making in the province.—In responding, the R.W. Prov. Grand Master expressed regret that illness prevented his attendance on the occasion arranged for his visit in March last, and thanked the W.M. and officers of the York Lodge for the special invite which had enabled him to carry out his original intentions. He urged on the brethren the necessity for united action in support of the great Masonic Charities, which were a standing proof that Freemasonry really was what it professed to be. The Mayor of Brighton responded to the toast of "The Visitors," and Bro. Dixon, P.G.S.W., for "The Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge."—Bros. S. T. Foat, W. R. Wood and J. Stride responded for "The Past Masters of the York Lodge." Bros. C. W. Hudson, T. Packham, and W. H. Gibson responded for "The Officers."—The remaining toasts included "The Initiate" (to which Bro. John Saxby responded). The musical arrangements were in the hands of Bro. W. Devin, and some excellent songs and instrumental elections were given.

HALLIFORD.—Acacia Lodge (No. 1309).—The installation meeting of this well established lodge was held at the Ship Hotel, on Tuesday, August 27th. Bro. J. George, W.M., raised Bros. J. Proffitt and F. G. Luke. Bro. C. G. Rushworth, P.G.P. Middlx., P.M., Sec., initiated Mr. J. E. Faith. Bro. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlx., P.M., installed Bro. C. G. Starr, P.M. 871, as W.M. The officers are Bros. R. P. Tibb, S.W.; J. Scott, J.W.; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlx., P.M., Treas., (the father of the lodge and first W.M.); C. G. Rushworth, P.G.R. Middlx., P.M. and Honorary Secretary, he paying up in full all his subscriptions; J. Davis, S.D.; C. C. Smiles, J.D.; J. Sutcliffe, I.G.; W. Y. Leving, P.M., Tyler. All the ceremonies were admirably rendered. The I.P.M., Bro. J. George, having declined to accept a Past Masters' jewel, the amount voted was spent by him in purchasing a Life Governorship of the Male Annuity Fund, in the name of the Secretary of the lodge for the time being. The Stewards representing this lodge at the forthcoming charity festivals are Bro. Charles Horsley, P.P.G.R. Middlx., P.M., &c., Benevolent; J. Sutcliffe, Girls; and J. Proffitt, Boys. Notice of motion was given by the Treasurer, Bro. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, to vote some surplus funds into the Masonic Charities. He also exerted himself to get the several Stewards for the charities, being well seconded by the estimable Secretary, Bro. C. G. Rushworth, P.G.R. Middlesex. Banquet followed. The visitors were Bros. E. C. Taylor, P.M. 11; R. Jennings, J.W. 907; G. Musgrave, 1507, and others.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—The first meeting of the above lodge, after the summer recess, took place on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., at Bro. West's House, the Three Crowns, and although there were not many assembled, yet the event will long be remembered as one of the most solemn and awe inspiring that could possibly occur in the lifetime of any one present, for in the midst of that "refreshment that comes after labour," news was brought of the terrible accident on the river, almost as it were within hearing, and that, at that very moment, some five or six hundred fellow creatures, men, women, and children, were lying in their cold and silent river graves. The lodge was opened by Bro. West, P.M., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Manning, the W.M., who had received a severe injury while travelling on a railroad in France, and Bros. Dudley, Gowers, and Rudd were, with due formalities, raised to the Sublime Degree. There being no further work, the lodge was closed with solemn prayer, and the brethren sat down to one of Bro. West's elegant little dinners, and "all went merry as a marriage bell." The adjournment was hardly made to the social board, before the news was brought of the terrible catastrophe above mentioned, and Bro. Past Master Ives, who filled the chair, supported by Bros. Past Masters W. Graham and West, gave the first few toasts, which were drunk in solemn silence, and in putting them our worthy brother spoke of the desolation that even now, and would, ere to-morrow's morn, reign over many a household, and as it was impossible under the circumstances to pass a few social hours in harmony, he asked them to separate and close the proceedings at once. To this the whole of the brethren immediately acquiesced, and departed sad and sorrowful from the lodge. Among the officers and visitors present were Bros. J. Plume, J.W.; D. W. Vance, S.D.; E. J. Lloyd, J.D.; F. Elder, I.G.; P.M., Page, Tyler; W. Brown, 1076; W. E. Hassell, 13; and C. Jolly, 913 (Freemason).

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The ordinary meeting of the members attached to this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 27th ult. Bro. Walter J. Chapman, W.M., opened the lodge, the other brethren present including Bros. Joseph Bell, I.P.M.; B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B., P.M., D.C.; L. Courtenay, S.W.; J. McKenzie, J.W.; A. Woolrech, Treasurer; John Atkinson, Secretary; F. Wilkinson, J.D.; F. Emery, I.G.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., and R. Burges, Organists; J. Pye, S.S.; W. Savage, jun. J.S.; W. Lowndes; R. Brough; H. Leslie; Avann; Reay; W. Williams, Gough, Duncanson, Penny, Mattison, Ballard, Brown, G. W. Anson, Weston, J. Hill, W. Hildyard, Squire, Cooke, &c. After Bros. W. Cleams and Gough had been passed to the degree of F.C., the brethren proceeded to the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Lindo Courtenay was unanimously chosen to fill that position. Bro. Courtenay acknowledged the honour which had thus been conferred upon him, and assured the brethren that he would spare no efforts to secure the continued prosperity of the Dramatic Lodge. Bro. A. Woolrich was unanimously re-elected Treasurer for the third time, and Bros. J. Ball, Lowndes, Chapman, Ray, Dr. Pitts, and F. Wilkinson, senr., were elected members of the committee of the Fund of Benevolence, which has enjoyed much prosperity since its formation. The sum of three guineas was voted in charity, and twelve guineas for the purchase of a P.M.'s jewel, for the retiring W.M. The brethren afterwards adjourned from labour to refreshment, after which the customary loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and a pleasant evening was greatly enhanced by the vocal efforts of Bros. Hill, Williams, Anson, Brough, Cooke, Weston, Gilfillan, and others.

RHYL.—Caradoc Lodge (No. 1674).—On Monday, the 2nd inst., the first installation meeting of this lodge took place in the Town Hall, at 4 p.m., when there were a large number of visitors and brethren present. The ordinary business of the lodge being finished, Bro. J. Salmon, W.M., was, (a second time), duly installed by Bro. W. H. Spaul, P.G. Sec., N. Wales and Shropshire, assisted by Bro. J. P. Platt, P.P.G.W. Cheshire. Afterwards the following officers were invested for the ensuing year: Bros. W. H. Foulkes, S.W.; J. Rhydwyn Jones, J.W.;

Rev. W. L. Nicholas, Chaplain; W. T. Girdlestone, Treas.; W. Hackforth, Sec.; K. McEwen, S.D.; T. Coxhead, J.D.; E. W. Keatinge, I.G.; F. Wrigley, Org.; H. A. Steer, S.; J. Baylis, Tyler. At 6 p.m. a banquet took place in the Belvoir Hotel. Besides the officers mentioned, with the members, there were many visitors present; amongst them Bros. J. P. Platt, P.P.J.G.W. Cheshire; W. H. Spaul, P.G. Sec.; H. G. Quilter, W.M., F.P.G.S.B. Warwick, shire; R. C. Edwards, W.M.; H. W. Swindells, S.W. 721; E. Smith, W.M. 1336; J. C. Owens, J.W.; T. Davies, J.W. 755; and others. The lodge was declared to be in a prosperous state. The W.M. made a present of his likeness to the lodge.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.

The stout timber staging erected to aid in the elevation of Cleopatra's Needle is found to answer well. It shows no indications of weakness, and admirably fulfils the function of steady and guiding the important operations for which it serves as the scaffolding. All progress now made is in the lifting of the monolith, and in the simultaneous building up of the supports on which it is to rest. After every hoist of about 4in., which takes about ten minutes, the hydraulic jacks require starting afresh. Their place, while they are being shifted, is taken by the timber packing inserted for the purpose on the opposite side of the slot in which the girder moves. The space before filled by the hydraulic jack is then deftly packed to secure the progress made. Meanwhile the supports for the obelisk are still rising from the ground. The completion of the socle and lower plinth, and the pedestal proper is now being rapidly built up. To the total height, 8ft. 5in., of the other three supports it will add 10ft. 5in. It is to taper from 10ft. square below to 9ft. 3in. above. The three lowest courses are based in Cornish granite, the centres being filled up with brickwork and Portland cement; but the two upper courses will be built wholly of granite. The centre is pierced by a tubular cavity—drain pipes in fact—which will be deposited, among other things, a hollow bronze cast of Mr. Wayman Dixon's model of Cleopatra's Needle, which will contain papers of the ordinary character, and a bronze circular plate about a foot in diameter. In the four quarterings are engraven representations of the obelisk as it lay in the sand at Alexandria, with the standing Needle by its side; the obelisk, encased in its iron cylinder, being rolled down the beach into the sea; the obelisk ship "Cleopatra" under full sail at sea; the process of erection on the Thames Embankment, the obelisk being inclined at an angle of 45 deg. An inscription at the top runs:—"Brought away from Alexandria September 21st, 1877;" another to the left is, "The removal from Egypt planned and carried out by John Dixon, C.E.;" to the right is one, "The cost of removal borne by Erasmus Wilson, F.R.S., F.R.C.S.;" in the centre the legend is:—"Reached the Thames January 20th, 1878;" and below, "Erection finally completed, 1878." The following appears in the Asiatic Journal for 1820:—"This celebrated monument of antiquity may be shortly expected to arrive from Alexandria, a present from the Pasha of Egypt to his Majesty George IV. It is, we understand, to be set up in Waterloo-place, opposite to Carlton House, where it will for ages, we hope, serve to keep alive the recollection of the exploits of our naval and military heroes in that country. The weight of the column is about 200 tons; the diameter at the pedestal seven feet. We understand that we are indebted to the influence of Mr. S. Briggs, British Resident at Grand Cairo, with the Pasha of Egypt for this magnificent monument."

REMINISCENCE OF A GOOD TIME.

Human life is so short and the bright rays of the sun are so often obscured by the clouds of adversity and trouble, that when we really enjoy a "good time" it casts its radiance over a long period, and thankful we should be that our nature is so constituted as to forget the troubles and tribulations through which we have passed and remember only the bright and pleasant thoughts, the pleasures we have enjoyed.

It is with such gratifying feeling we reflect on the pleasant day enjoyed with Empire Chapter, No. 170, R.A.M., on the occasion of their grand excursion up the Hudson. The day, though somewhat cloudy, was really fine and just suited for a water excursion. A big saloon steamer, the General Sedgwick, made the several landings on the East River, while the different barges were stationed along the North River to receive the multitude of pleasure seekers.

Promptly according to the programme announced in the Dispatch, the flotilla fell into line and steamed up the Hudson River. The steam yacht Crawford Maxwell, owned by Empire Chapter, lay at the foot of 152nd street with the Grand L.H.A. of the S.T.M.'s in command, and as honored guest of the chapter. When the party came opposite the yacht the flags were dipped in honour of the L.H.A., and the tiny gun of the yacht fired a salute, while all the excursionists sang "Hail to the Chief," "The March to Victory," &c.

The yacht then took position in the line, and when communication was established between the yacht and the barges, the several aids to the L. H. A. were posted, so as to prevent too great a rush, as everybody was exceedingly anxious to see this celebrated and venerable old functionary (his photograph had not then been published in the Dispatch), but owing to the strict orders given and of course obeyed, none but the aids were admitted to the august presence of his Royal Highness. Your reporter, therefore, can only refer your many readers to the striking likeness published in last Sunday's Dispatch for a correct idea of how the great unknown L. H. A. looks.

On the grounds everybody sought to press as much fun into as small a space of time as she or he possibly could.

The race between our jovial and honoured D.G.M., General Roope, and M.W. John W. Simons, on a carousel, ended in a complete defeat of Uncle John, the vigorous general beating him by two lengths.

Taking a hint from an article in a recent issue of the Dispatch, to the effect that too much attention is usually paid to the dances and not enough to the elders and those who do not dance, the committee had hired a piano and engaged Professor Koch, who presided over it with signal ability. Comp. Brinks, with his quartette, contributed largely to the musical programme, as did also the Manhattan Glee Club, a singing society from the west side of the city, and composed of young gentlemen of leisure. Some very fine singing was also rendered by Captain L. D. Decker, of the General Sedgwick, who, by the way, is not only a fine singer and a good captain, but a born gentleman; everybody spoke very highly of his attention to his duty and his solicitude for the comfort of his charge. His songs, "There are Faces We Never Forget," was received with great applause; "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "Roses Underneath the Snow," by the Quartette and the Manhattan Glee Club, elicited rounds of applause.

A little room was set aside for whist players, where R. W. Greg Satterlee was very conspicuous; others in the room adjoining choose the ancient Greek game of ParLOUR Matches. In fact everybody had but to choose and find something to amuse and please.

The refreshment and lunch counter was presided over by Companion Southern, with a grace and dignity surprising in one so young; the grace no doubt is natural, and the dignity acquired by long practice.

The superb music for the dancers was under the direction of that excellent gentleman and boon companion, Tom Deverell, and it is certain that every one was more than delighted. We think without being certain, that even the venerable Bro. Simons was tempted into the Lancers, or did he merely lead the band?

When Empire Chapter has another excursion, or any gathering of whatever description, please count us in.—New York Dispatch.

BOW BELLS.—For some time past this famous peal of bells, one of the finest in the city of London, has been undergoing examination in the public interest, and before long the familiar chime which captivated or consoled a Whittington, and have since charmed many more from time immemorial, will ring out as before. The Church of St. Mary-le-Bow, which, if not originally a Roman temple, as generally believed, was one of the earliest churches built by our Norman conquerors, has been destroyed more than once by storm and fire. It was at one time garrisoned and besieged, and was afterwards the scene of an assassination. It was first mentioned as a Christian church in the reign of William the Conqueror. Stow says it was the first in the City built on arches of stone, and that it was, therefore, called St. Mary de Arcubus, or the Bow, although he elsewhere says, but with less apparent probability, that it took its name from certain stone arches supporting a lantern on the top of the tower. By the way, the Court of Arches was formerly held in this church, and derived its name from that circumstance. During the reign of William Rufus, the roof of the church was blown off by the wind, and four of the rafters were driven into the ground with such violence that, although they were each 26ft. long, little more than 4ft. of their length was visible, the ground in the neighbourhood being then a mere fen. About 100 years after this event a tumult of a serious nature occurred in the City, which led to the assault upon the church before alluded to. The ringleader was William Fitz Osbert, surnamed Longbeard, who was almost worshipped by the lower orders on account of his exertions as a professed advocate of the poor against the oppressions of the rich. An attempt being made to seize him, he took refuge in Bow steeple, together with various followers, and, being well provided with ammunition and provisions, was able for a long time to defy the authorities. In order to drive him out, the steeple was fired. This had the desired effect; the rioters were made prisoners, and, after a hasty trial, were hanged at the Elms in Smithfield, at that time the usual place of execution. It appeared that Fitz Osbert did not lose his reputation among the people with his life, for it is said that after his death vast numbers of persons resorted to Smithfield, expecting that miracles would be performed, and that they carried away as holy relics pieces of the earth on which his blood had fallen.

A very descriptive account of the terrible disaster on the Thames appears in the Daily Chronicle of Thursday, from the pen of Bro. Henry Reed, of 57, Oxford-st., London, who we heartily congratulate on his happy escape from so fearful a death as drowning. Want of space precludes us from reprinting his letter.

One of the new lodges for which a Warrant has been granted is intended to perpetuate the memory of the late King of Hanover. The meetings will be held at the Town Hall, Hounslow, during the summer months. The principal officers designate are Bros. H. A. Dubois, P.P.G.D., P.M., P.Z., W.M.; Henry Lovegrove, S.W.; George Clark, J.W.

Part 9, of "The Rosicrucian and Masonic Record" contains a Portrait and Biographical sketch of the late Sir Fredk. M. Williams, Bart., M.P. Deputy Grand Master of Cornwall.

The Liverpool Autumn Exhibition of Pictures.—The private view of the works of art forming this collection took place on Saturday last, at the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool, and was attended by about 1600 ladies and gentlemen. The season has opened most auspiciously. Up to Monday, 694 season tickets had been sold, as compared with 469 last year, and 75 pictures, realising £1033 11s. 6d. disposed of, as against 58 last year, which realised £802.

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

A further meeting of this Association was held on the 30th ult., in the Drawing Room, Freemasons' Tavern Col. Creation presided. The other brethren who attended were Bros. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford and A. Tisley (Joint Secretaries); C. J. Perceval (Treasurer); A. E. Gladwell, Dr. Jabez Hogg, S. Rosenthal, E. T. H. Southwood, George Faulkner, E. Mallett, John White, Hyde Pullen, and H. Massey (Freemason).

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, in submitting to the meeting the circular of the Association, said it was proposed to have it neatly printed, and together with the bye-laws sent round to every subscriber of the Boys' and Girls' Schools. He then read the circular, which, with a very few minute alterations, was adopted by the brethren.

Bros. Woodford, Tisley, Rosenthal, Southwood, and John White were appointed a Sub-committee to attend the election.

Bro. Perceval, who with Bros. Woodford, Gladwell, and Tisley, had been through the list of the candidates for the forthcoming elections, afterwards explained these cases to the brethren, but before doing so read his letter which appeared in the Freemason of the 31st August, and said that the sentiments there expressed were the sentiments of the Association. They wanted to act fairly and honestly by all, and to have for London a fair proportion of its candidates returned to the Schools. It after giving votes to London candidates sufficient to secure their election they had some votes to spare, they could then help the provinces in cases which were paramount to others. At present the capital of votes was very small, but if they concentrated their energies on one case they could get it through. There were very few vacancies in the Girls' School for next election, and if the London brethren could get one case in they would consider themselves very fortunate.

The Committee, after due deliberation, decided to support the cases of Ethel Stone and Emma Eliza Williams for the Girls' Election; and those of Green, Balcomb, Watkins, Frost, Nicholls, and Gills for the Boys', this being the last chance of the three first boys, and the last chance but one of the other three.

Bro. Charles Atkins, P.M. 27, was elected a member of the Association, and Bros. H. Massey, Tyerman, and Littell members of the Committee.

It was requested that brethren would send in their voting papers (signed) to Bro. Tisley, one of the joint Secretaries. The meeting lasted nearly two hours and a half, and was brought to a close by a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

CIRCULAR.

The Committee of The London Masonic Charity Association has great pleasure in calling the attention of the Vice Patrons, Vice Presidents, Life Governors, and Subscribers of the London Masonic Charities to the important object which it has been established to further and effect. The necessity of a thorough combination and concentration of "voting power" in order to ensure the success of a candidate, is now an established "factor" in the history of our valuable Masonic Charities. Owing to their rapid increase of late years, applications for their benefits have become more numerous, and success has in consequence become more and more proportionally difficult of attainment. It is no doubt true, that individual effort has done, and may do, a great deal in the laudable endeavour to assist deserving cases, and to place them in a satisfactory position on the poll, but "events" are, as it has been truly said, often "stronger than men," and, at this moment, without the combination and concentration of votes, not only must many deserving cases be disappointed, year by year, until their time of continuance on the list has expired, but it may even be a question whether, owing to the overwhelming effect of the system of combined voting, any but well organised arrangements, much less individual action, can henceforth be successful.

In London, as the voting is now conducted by worthy individual brethren, without any attempt at organisation or combination, a large number of votes is practically wasted at the various elections, inasmuch as more votes are recorded for this or that particular candidate than are absolutely required to render the applicant successful, and much of the London voting power is frittered away, and has too often no perceptible effect at the Masonic elections.

Deserving cases in London come up many times, and often utterly in vain, because the voting power, which if combined and properly utilized would have secured their election, is unskillfully employed, or unwisely polled.

The Provinces, wise in their generation, have already all adopted, or are rapidly adopting, the principle of combination and concentration of votes, with singular and powerful effect, as the lists of our Masonic beneficiaries attest, and your committee makes bold to say, that unless a somewhat similar course be pursued, in all good feeling in London, successful London cases must soon be few and far between, while the best interests of the London candidates will be gravely jeopardised, and the votes of the London subscribers practically nullified. For such is the power of the accumulation of numbers, and the uniform concentration of "voting power," that London candidates will hardly ever be enabled to come to the "fore" at all, unless a like simple and sensible system of combination and concentration of the votes be adopted, and without delay.

Under these circumstances a Committee has been formed, (not a day too soon,) to attend to and aid the London cases, by carefully selecting the most deserving, and by a proper use of voting papers, voluntarily placed at its disposal by the members of the Association and the London brethren in general, to endeavour to make such a voting a success. In this way the Committee hopes to secure all deserving London cases, and to help many candidates who now for want of such support often appeal in vain, though with strong claims, on the voters in the metropolis. The Committee, however, in saying this, is not to be understood as endorsing any censure on our existing voting system, which, in the opinion of the Committee, acts fairly for all the candidates. It only seeks to call attention to a principle of voting action, perfectly legitimate, over which however no charitable association has or can have any control.

There is nothing, the Committee begs to observe in conclusion, selfish or narrow in its proposals or its organisation. This movement is simply dictated by common sense, and is practically the result of the "necessity of the case." It is not established in hostility to or antagonism with any other body or system, but appears to be a fair and needful use of voting privileges and voting power.

The Committee then confidently appeals to all the subscribers to the Charities voting in the London district to give the Committee their hearty and general support, to join the Association in order to render it thoroughly efficient, and to confide to it their voting papers. These will be thankfully received and faithfully applied to their destined purposes.

The Committee begs to transmit the bye-laws of the Association for the perusal of the Subscribers to the Charities. The Committee would ask the Subscribers to sign the accompanying form, and send it to the Secretaries. The Committee would also ask the Subscribers to sign (but not fill up,) their voting papers for the Boys' and Girls' Schools when they receive them, and forward them at once to the Secretaries. The Committee will duly fill up the voting papers.

The cases supported by the Association at the ensuing October election on behalf of the Committee are the following:—

For the Girls' School:—

1. Ethel Stone, No. 14. 2. Eliza Ann Williams, No. 29.

For the Boys' School:—

1. Charles Wm. Green, No. 5. 2. Arthur C. Balcomb, No. 50. 3. Frederick C. Watkins, No. 18. 4. Christian F. Frost, No. 9. 5. Richard H. Nicholls, No. 21. 6. Frank Arthur Gills, No. 15.

All communications to be addressed to Bro. A. Tisley, St. Dunstan's Vestry, Fleet-street, E.C.

REPORT OF THE LANCASHIRE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION FOR 1877.

This report is now before us, and it is one of increasing prosperity and usefulness of the charity. Eighty-eight children have "enjoyed," the report states, the lasting and valuable benefits of a good education, the sum paid for this purpose being £580 17s. 3d. The Institution has invested capital to the amount of £13,886 12s. 7d. Of the eighty-eight children educated, forty-three are girls and forty-five are boys. The highest amount paid for education is James Mott, £46 18s., the lowest is James McVickers, £1 11s. 6d. The average amount of money thus spent on the education and advancement in life of eighty-eight children appears to be £6 11s. 11½d. We wish that another year the list of girls could be separated from the boys, so that we may ascertain the cost of each sex, and we should like to know a little more specifically what is spent on education, what on advancement in life. To the initiated in Lancashire the margin as between £46 18s. and £1 11s. 6d. is no doubt easily explained and perfectly satisfactory, but to us outsiders it does strike us a little. Perhaps some good Lancashire brother can explain the "modus educandi" and the ratio of payments. We are glad to note that the work of the Institution is now before a sub-committee, and we shall await its report with great interest, as we cannot help thinking more may be done by the provincial Institutions than yet has been accomplished. Still the report is a most interesting one, per se, and too much praise cannot be accorded to our West Lancashire brethren for the zeal which has sustained, and the Masonic sympathy which has furthered so useful, and important, and true a charity.

Obituary.

SIR F. MARTIN WILLIAMS. BART. M.P.

It is our painful duty this week to record the sudden death of our esteemed brother Sir Fredk. Martin Williams, Bart., M.P., V.W. Deputy Grand Master of Cornwall, which sad event took place at Heanton Court, Barnstaple, on Tuesday evening last, the 3rd inst. An inquest was held at the Manor-house Heanton Punchedon, on Wednesday, when, from medical evidence, it appeared that the cause of death was the rupture of a blood-vessel on the brain, causing apoplexy. Sir Frederick was the eldest son of the late Sir Williams Williams, the first baronet, of Tregulrow, Cornwall, and was born in 1830, and was therefore 48 years of age. He had represented Truro in the Conservative interest since the year 1865. The deceased was a deputy-lieutenant and a magistrate for Cornwall. He was a member of the firm of Tweddy, Williams and Co., bankers, Redruth and Truro, and managing partner of the Trethellan Smelting Works, the Perron, Foundry, and other important companies, and he was engaged in extensive mining and other operations.

The following brief sketch of Sir Frederick's Masonic career, which we cull from the "Rosicrucian and Masonic Record," for January last, will, no doubt, be read with interest:—

"We have now the pleasure of presenting our readers with the portrait of the Second Grand Sovereign of the Red Cross Order in England, since the revival in 1865. This estimable Mason was installed in the Premier Conclave in July, 1866, and became Grand Viceroy to Lord Kenlis shortly afterwards. He retained that position till March, 1874, when, under the new Statutes limiting the period for holding office as Grand Sovereign to three years, Lord Bective (Kenlis) retired, and Sir F. M. Williams was unanimously elected to succeed his Lordship as head of the Order. Under Sir Frederick's sovereignty the progress of the "Red Cross" continued unabated, notwithstanding that America, Canada, and Scotland established independent Grand Councils during that period. The K.H.S. and St. John the Evangelist grades were authorized to be attached to every Conclave possessing the requisite number of R.A. Masons amongst its members, and the result has been most satisfactory, about twenty Conclaves, up to the present time, having availed themselves of the privilege. This will be a noteworthy record in the worthy baronet's reign. In March, 1877, he enthroned his successor, Colonel Francis Burdett, as Grand Sovereign; Sir F. M. Williams is also a Vice-President of the Rosicrucian Society. It is almost needless to add that this distinguished Mason has won very high honours in other branches of Freemasonry and its kindred Orders. He is a Past Grand Warden of England, D.G.M. for Cornwall, Prov. Prior Knights Templar, and Prov. Grand Master for the same county. In the A. and A. Rite he is a 32°, and is likewise a member of the Royal Order of Scotland. Although his connection with the Craft dates only from January, 1873, when he was initiated in Lodge 331, Truro, Sir Frederick has taken a deservedly exalted position, and his munificent support of the great Masonic Charities, as well as his liberal contributions to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund, proves that he thoroughly realizes his responsibilities as a Mason, by losing no opportunity of carrying its sublime principles into practice."

BRO. J. A. GOOCH.

We deeply regret having to record the somewhat sudden death of Bro. Joshua A. Gooch, fringe and lace manufacturer, of Dove-street, Norwich, which event occurred on Tuesday the 27th inst., from congestion of the lungs. Deceased had not been well for some time, which may partially account for the suddenness of the visitation. His age was 39, and he had for some time been a member of the Norwich Board of Guardians. Bro. Gooch also took a leading part among the Norwich Freemasons; he was W.M. of Lodge Perseverance. His funeral took place, with full Craft honours, on Friday week, at the cemetery. Notwithstanding the heavy downpour, there was a large attendance of brethren at the grave of one so loved in life and mourned in death.

THE NEW SHERIFFS OF LONDON AND MIDDLESEX.

We are indebted to our contemporary the City Press for the following account of Bro. George Burt, one of the new Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, who was elected on midsummer day, and will be admitted into office and enter upon his duties on the 28th inst.

Bro. George Burt was born at Swanage, Dorset, on October 2nd, 1816. His father, Mr. Robert Burt, was a stone merchant there, and brought up his son to follow the same trade. At the age of 19, the late Mr. Mowlem (also a native of Swanage, and Bro. George Burt's uncle) brought him to London as an assistant in his business. In 1844, Mr. Mowlem took Bro. Burt and Mr. Freeman (who had previously married Mr. Burt's elder sister) into partnership, the firm from that time being known by its present title of "John Mowlem and Co." The senior partner died in 1868, and the business was carried on by Mr. Freeman and Bro. Burt until 1875, when Mr. John Mowlem Burt, the elder son of the newly-elected sheriff, was taken into partnership, and these three gentlemen now constitute the firm so well known in London as road and general contractors, and in Aberdeen and Guernsey as quarry owners. They were the first to manufacture and lay down the pavement known as "narrow cubes." The first roadway so laid was that of old Blackfriars-bridge, in the year 1840. Bro. Burt's career has been most active, and lately in his well-earned retirement his efforts have been largely devoted in promoting the prosperity of his native place and its neighbourhood, where he is greatly respected. He generally lives at Swanage, where he recently erected a residence. Bro. Burt married Elizabeth, daughter of the late Mr. John Hudson, of Stowbridge, Norfolk, May 19th, 1840. His family consists of two sons and three daughters, the eldest of the latter being married to Captain T. Davies Sewell. Bro. Burt has been an active member of the Metropolitan Asylums Board from its commencement. He also holds many other public appointments, both in London and Swanage. He is a member of the courts of the Glass-sellers', Shipwrights', and Farriers' Companies, having served the office of master three times of the first-named guild. He holds a distinguished position in Freemasonry, being Past Provincial Grand Senior Warden of Dorset, and Past Master of No. 18 Old Dundee Lodge, London, and No. 1,146, De Moulham Lodge, of Swanage.

A fire broke out on Tuesday afternoon in the warehouse of Sir C. Price and Co., oil refiners, Castle Baynard Wharf, Upper Thames-street. With such inflammable material the fire obtained an almost immediate and complete mastery of the premises, and raged until the building and its contents were entirely destroyed. It was with great difficulty that the firemen succeeded in preserving from a similar fate the adjoining premises, to which the fire at one time spread.

We regret to announce that Bros. Chas. Jardine, and F. Boney lost their lives in the dreadful accident on the Thames on Tuesday evening. As a complete list of lost and saved is not yet known, we are unable to give our readers any further names of brethren. We are happy, however, to say that Bro. H. Reed, of 57, Oxford-street, and his wife were among the saved.

FREEMASONRY IN NEW ZEALAND.

No better evidence of the spread of Freemasonry in Hawke's Bay could possibly be given than that which is furnished by the fact that it has been found necessary, in the best interests of the Craft, to erect another Hall in Napier.

It is now twenty years ago since the first lodge was opened in this town, at which time, and for that purpose, the late Colonel McGregor, Mr. Michael Fitzgerald, Mr. J. A. Smith, and others, obtained a dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Ireland. The first meetings were held in the upper floor of a store at the Spit, and though the most primitive furniture and accessories were well in keeping with the cheerless appearance of the apartment in which the brethren assembled, the warmth of heart and Masonic spirit that were there engendered, gave ample promise of bearing good fruit. The canopy of Heaven being the roof tree of Masonry, it mattered little to the fathers of the Craft in Napier where they practised the rites and ceremonies of the Order, so that they could secure freedom from prying eyes and listening ears. But no great length of time elapsed before better accommodation was obtained, and in due course land was bought, and the first building dedicated to Masonry was erected in this town. By this time Scinde Lodge, 419, I.C., numbered amongst its members nearly all the principal people of the province, and until about two years ago was the only lodge in Hawke's Bay. With the growth of population came brethren of other Constitutions, who naturally and loyally desired to see another lodge established. Some old Masons of the English Constitution thereupon met, and decided to form a lodge which, under the name of "Victoria," has gone on prospering until it became necessary for the convenience and comfort of both lodges that another Hall should be erected. This building is now completed, and was formally consecrated to-day.

Situated on a section at the corner of Munroe and Dickens-streets, the new hall presents a striking appearance, the front being remarkably classic in its design. The facade of the edifice is of the Doric style of architecture, having three windows and four fluted columns, with entablature surmounted by pediment. Admission to the building is obtained by a door, the only one, on the north side, which leads into a vestibule seven feet wide, from whence entrance is gained both into the lodge-room and into the ante-room. This latter apartment is 20 feet long by 18 feet wide, and will be ordinarily used as a refreshment room. The lodge-room is an extremely handsome hall, measuring 40 feet in length, and 20 feet in width, having plastered walls and cove ceiling, finished with heavy cornices. In the east, west, and south walls there are alcoves for the chairs of the three principal officers, whose stations are in those situations, the eastern alcove being surmounted with cornice and crimson canopy. The chairs are placed on dais painted to represent black and white marble. Running round the walls are stuffed spring seats, covered with crimson rep. The Masonic furniture is very handsome and complete, and much of it being the gift or manufacture of the members, no expense has been spared to make the several presentations worthy of the Lodge. The officers' pedestals, and the altar, are beautifully designed, the tops resting on entablatures supported by columns in groups of three, having carved capitals, with moulded bases, and cornices complete; each pedestal represents one of the three orders, Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian. Until gas is laid on, the hall is lighted by a kerosene chandelier, and ventilated by a patent ventilator.

The contractors for the building were Messrs Baillie and Davis, who have performed their work in a manner that has given the greatest satisfaction. Indeed every one connected with the Victoria Hall appears to have vied with each other to make the building at once an ornament to the town, and a credit to the Craft. We should mention that the architect is Mr. W. A. Dugleby, whose knowledge of the requirements of a Masonic Lodge, combined with his professional ability, has left nothing to be desired. To the untiring energy of J. M. Batham, Esq., the present Worshipful Master of the Victoria Lodge, is also greatly due that Masonic spirit and zeal that have animated the brethren, by which, without any assistance, they have quietly and unostentatiously worked together to that result which shows itself in the completion of as handsome a lodge as any in this colony.

The consecration of the new building was fittingly appointed to take place on the Masonic Festival of St. John the Baptist, and the August ceremony was attended by every Mason in Hawke's Bay who could be present. The ordinary monthly meeting of the brethren of the Victoria Lodge was held at 3 p.m., and the lodge having been duly formed in the Third Degree, the Delegates of the Provincial Grand Lodge were admitted at 4 p.m., with the usual honors. The Delegates were Bros. Past Masters Batham and Harwood, Bro. P.M. Batham taking the chair. The brethren then resumed their seats, and the Secretary, having read the delegation, temporary Grand Officers were appointed, P.M.s. Kennedy and Wundrum occupying respectively the Senior and Junior Warden's chairs. The ceremony of dedication then commenced by the Rev. Chaplain reading the first three verses from the 1st chapter of Genesis, which was followed by the beautiful anthem "Father of Light" that was most impressively sung. On the application of Bro. P.M. Dransfield, the lodge was formally examined, and Bro. Architect Dugleby having returned the Working Tools, the D.P.G.M. expressed his approval. Bro. P. M. Price then announced the desire of the brethren that the Hall should be consecrated according to the ancient form and usage, upon which the Revd. Chaplain read the Consecration Prayer. The following programme was then observed:—Procession of officers; March by Organ; at termination of first circuit in the East, the Hall was dedicated to Freemasonry; corn sprinkled; grand honours; Ode to Masonry; at the termination of second circuit, wine was sprinkled, and the Hall dedicated to Virtue; grand honours; Ode to Virtue; at the end of the third circuit, oil sprinkled, Hall dedicated to Charity; grand honours; Ode to Charity. The Rev. Chaplain then pronounced the Invocation, the choir responding. After the anthem, "To Heavens' High Architect," had been sung, the D.P.G.M. delivered an able address, and this concluding the ceremony, the delegates of the District Grand Lodge retired. The proceedings were most impressively conducted from first to last, and occupied about two hours in their performance. The choral portion of the service was presided over by Bros. Rudman and Aplin.

A banquet in honour of the occasion was afterwards held. The chair was taken, shortly after 8 o'clock, by the W.M., Bro. Batham, supported on his right by P.M's. Bros. Harwood and Wundrum, and on his left by P.M's. Bros. Kennedy and Sutton, and the W.M. of the Scinde Lodge, Bro. Dransfield. Bro. Morgon, Senior Warden of the Victoria Lodge, and Bro. de Lisle, Junior Warden, occupied the vice-chairs in their respective positions. There were nearly 100 brethren present.

The first toast was the usual one, "The Queen and the Craft" by the W.M., Bro. Batham, followed by "The Three Grand Masters"—those of England, Ireland, and Scotland, respectively. "The District Grand Masters of New Zealand" was also given by the Worshipful Master.

P.M. Bro. Harwood then proposed "Prosperity to the Victoria Lodge. He said it was now, he believed, two years since the formation of the Victoria Lodge, and from that moment to the present it had advanced steadily, increasing in strength until it had assumed the position it now occupied—a position which it had attained by the united efforts of its members and the untiring exertions of its officers and Master, especially of its present Worshipful Master. The handsome Masonic Hall in which they were now assembled stood as a grand monument of the attachment of its members to the Craft. They must all earnestly hope that the lodge might continue to flourish for many years to come, under its energetic promoters, in unity, strength, peace, and harmony. (Applause.)

The toast was acknowledged by the Worshipful Master, who took occasion to thank Bro. Harwood for his kindness in coming to Napier to assist in the ceremony of that day, a kindness which was all the more felt by him (the Worshipful Master) as Bro. Harwood was the only Past Master in the English Constitution whose services were at all available. The W.M. also thanked the officers of the Scinde Lodge for the efficient assistance they had rendered. He then gave some particulars of the efforts made to get the hall erected, dwelling with warmth of feeling upon the liberal and willing aid that had been accorded by the brethren of the lodge. Over £600 of shares had been taken by the brethren, the shares bearing no interest, and a considerable portion of the furniture and requisites had been presented to the lodge by the brethren. The brethren had worked hard to get the lodge erected, and it rested with them to do credit to it and never disgrace it. (Applause.)

Bro. Morgon, S.W. of the lodge, proposed, "The Lodges of Sister Constitutions," responded to by Bro. Wundrum, P.M.

Bro. Dransfield, W.M. of the Scinde Lodge, proposed in highly eulogistic terms, "The Worshipful Master of the Victoria Lodge," acknowledged by the W.M., Bro. Batham.

Bro. de Lisle, Junior Warden of the Victoria Lodge, proposed "The Past Masters," coupled with the name of Bro. Sutton, P.M., and suitably acknowledged by him.

Bro. Kennedy, P.M., proposed "The Building Committee and the Architect of the Hall" (Bro. Dugleby).

Bro. D'Arcy Irvine, M.A., proposed "Visiting Brethren." Bro. Kinross acknowledged the toast, and congratulated the Victoria Lodge upon the handsome hall they had erected for their meetings, and expressed a hope that it would frequently be graced with the company of ladies at Masonic balls or other occasions when the presence of the fair sex was permissible.

Bro. Combs proposed "The newly-made Masons," responded to by Bro. Lush, of Waipukurau.

The W.M. proposed the health of the caterer, Bro. Johnson, which was suitably acknowledged.

The Worshipful Master informed the brethren that he had received telegrams from the Tauranganui Lodge (Gisborne) and from the Wellington Lodge, conveying expressions of congratulation. He had also received a cordial letter from the District Grand Master of Westland (Bro. Lazar), expressing regret that he was unable to be present. He had besides received telegrams and letters from various brethren regretting their inability to attend. He mentioned these matters as evidence of the kind interest evinced in the prosperity of the lodge. (Applause.)

Bro. Garner proposed "Absent Brethren," which was duly honored.

Bro. Ellis proposed "Old Masons" (of not less than ten years' standing). The toast was acknowledged by Bro. Raven, who then proposed the health of "Our Worthy Chaplain"—acknowledged in feeling terms by Bro. D'Arcy Irvine, Chaplain of the Lodge.

Bro. Combs proposed "Prosperity to the Craft."

Bro. D'Arcy Irvine proposed "The Press," acknowledged by Bro. Pirani.

"The Ladies" was proposed by Bro. Garner, and was responded to by Bro. Begg.

Bro. Blyth proposed "Buried Animosities," which having been honoured, the last toast usual at all Masonic banquets was given by the Tyler, Bro. Moxley—"All Poor and Distressed Masons throughout the Universe."

"Auld Lang Syne" then concluded a banquet, which was about the most pleasant and harmonious of any that has been given in Napier, or perhaps in any part of New Zealand. The evening was enlivened with songs and recitations by the brethren, the accompaniments being played by Bros. Rudman and Aplin, but the hour at which the company broke up—nearly two o'clock in the morning—precludes a fuller notice than we have given. We may, however, mention that Bro. Johnson deserves great credit for the manner in which he discharged his duties as caterer. Everything was served in good style, and the ornamentation of the feast was in excellent taste. Amongst these a large model of the hall in sugar merits notice. It was executed in true artistic style.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

LA UNIVERSAL.

An association composed exclusively of the members of this lodge gave an excursion danza on Sunday to their wives and daughters and a few friends. They had two commodious barges and a steamer chartered, which enabled them to carry the large number they had on board. An excursion started from Fulton Ferry at 10 a.m., and arrived at the Grove (Occident) about 4 p.m. On their passage they landed at the foot of West Tenth street, but owing to the miserable conduct of the police officers upon the wharf they could not get on board more than one-half of the number that had congregated there to go. In justice to the force of this city, we give the number of each officer, to wit: 520, 624 and 1822, who officiated on that pier. The party contained some of the best citizens of our Spanish population, among whom we noticed R.W. Bro. A. Gonzalez, D.D.G.M. for the Spanish, French and Italian lodges; also W. Bros. F. Lozano, G. Dean and Isaac Simonson; Bros. S. W. Jaureque and J. W. S. Gonzalez; Past Masters S. Sanchez and Y. Hara; F. Garcia, S.D.: L. Caras, J.D., and Bro. Michael Flood, of Brooklyn Lodge. The last named brother acted as floor manager, and filled his position with courtesy and great satisfaction to all. At a late hour the excursionists returned home refreshed and well pleased with the day's recreation, there being not an angry word spoken, indeed, or any utterance on the part of any one that would bring a blush to the cheek of the most fastidious during the entire day. The representative of the Dispatch returns thanks to all for the courtesies received at their hands, and may the brethren of La Universal long live to enjoy many more of similar excursions, even though it occurred upon the special day of rest. "Better the day better the deed."

TABERNACLE LODGE.

The excursion and picnic of Tabernacle Lodge, No. 598, up the Sound and at Hudson Grove, on last Tuesday week, was a very pleasing and enjoyable affair. The day was lovely—"made to order"—the sail exhilarating, and the company joyous and happy, and determined, one and all, to make everybody else so. The committee of arrangements deserve great praise for the manner in which they performed their duties and cared for the comfort of their guests. The games at the Grove were very interesting and well-contested, and added considerable interest to the occasion, as did also the balloon ascension. The only little hitch in the programme regrettable, was the refusal of W. Bros. Wiley and Pascall to run a ten-mile foot race, who declined on account of their great size and the state of the thermometer.

JACOB SCHMUCK

Uhland Lodge, No. 735, of this city, have sustained a very severe loss in the recent decease of Bro. Jacob Schmuck, their late Treasurer, who died of brain fever (contracted during the late heated term) on the 26th inst. Alas my brother! Thy taking off is deeply regretted by all who knew thee. The fraternity has lost one of its most openhearted, generous and trustworthy members, thy family, a loving husband and father, and thy friends and acquaintances, one whose place cannot be easily filled. His funeral was attended by the members of No. 735 and other lodges, to the number of 130, and by others enough to fill 63 coaches, and other conveyances—and his remains were interred with our beautiful ceremonies, W. Bro. Raushaupt officiating in a very workmanlike and affecting manner.—New York Dispatch.

ST. HELEN'S, BISHOPSGATE.

The following is from the Times:

Sir,—Will you allow me to make known through your columns an interesting discovery which has been made at the ancient church of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, in the city of London? In taking down a portion of the wall at the north-west corner of the church, a ship's anchor has been found imbedded in the masonry. If any of your readers have studied the archaeology of anchors, they could, perhaps, afford a clue to the date of its probable insertion. It would not have been built in at the original erection of the church, but used at a later period to bind the masonry together when found to be defective, and we should suppose it is not unlikely to have been a contrivance of Sir Christopher Wren, in whose time the church was repaired. We take this opportunity of calling the attention of your readers to the elegant ancient door which has been discovered at the west end of the nun's choir, which will shortly be covered up with brickwork, the churchwardens not having sufficient funds for its restoration. This door and many other interesting features were plastered up by classic innovators, but have been uncovered in the course of the restoration now progressing, and should be seen by all who feel an interest in the antiquities of the city of London.

We are, Sir, your obedient servants.

WADMORE AND BAKER.

LETTERS FROM OUR IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

No. III.—EXPENSIVE LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I continue my pleasant labour to day, hoping that my words, sincerely meant, may not be without profit and edification to some of our readers. I touch, however, upon a subject more difficult in itself, still more delicate, so to say, in London. As it is well known the provincial system of lodge subscription and the like, is on a much lower scale than in the Metropolis. Very few provincial lodges, have above £2 2s. annual subscription and £5 5s. initiation fee and £7 7s at the outset. Whereas in London £5 may almost be said to be the normal amount of annual subscription, taking the average of the 256 lodges, and the initiation fees range from £10 to £25, some lodges fixing them at £30. As regards joining members it is the same. In the provinces the usual payments being between £2 and £3, in London varying between £5 to £20 and £25. Two other points of difference of procedure, between London and the provinces require more notice. As a rule in the provinces nothing is paid from the lodge fund to the banquets, each brother paying for what he has, or chooses to have. But in London a large portion of the payments annually is allocated to the dinners, and here comes in a very notable difference between the "Town mice" and the "Country mice." There are few if any dinner lodges in the provinces. The brethren attend to business, come to lodge at 7, and have a modest supper at 9, or 9.30, for which the Stewards collect pro rata. Hence we see that in some respects it is unavoidable that London lodges should be more expensive than provincial lodges, inasmuch as the whole system of procedure is so very different. And it may be a question whether the provincial system could be worked in London. Londoners are late diners, and as most of our Order are "bread-winners,"—business men, professional men,—after their day's work is over they come to lodge work, and to a lodge dinner. It is doubtful whether the supper system, which works well in the provinces, would do or would pay in the metropolis. Therefore I think we ought not to run off with "ad captandum" arguments, that because we pay more in London, the London lodges are too expensive. I apprehend in this, as in other matters, we must accept what is the actual system as the one best suited to the necessities of the case, and as both systems can co-exist and can both work together, and both have their merit, both may in degree, at any rate, be equally right for those who use them.

And I am free to confess that the matter is a delicate matter in London, because, in the first place, each lodge has a right to make its own bye-laws, if they do not contravene the Book of Constitutions, and, secondly, because I go a long way, for one, with that movement which seeks to create special lodges, on the well-known adage "similia similibus." As some of our brethren object to Latin, I will translate these words, "like things for like."

None of us can be insensible to the fact that we are far too loose in our realization of the importance of the proposition of members, and that many persons unfitted for Freemasonry in every way thus get in. One of the impediments to the "ugly rush" is said to be high fees. I am not sure that it is so myself, but it has something in its favour, no doubt, and therefore the expenditure of some lodges is pitched at too high a scale altogether, and while I concede to all lodges the right of suiting themselves in this respect, it is a liberty which no one has a right to infringe, I yet wish that with all their glitter there would be a little more reality.

What I mean is this,—They do not do enough for Charity. Our lodge members, from 1700 to 1770 have only, so far, in 1878, apparently in about fifteen of them done anything for our Charities, and the remark applies to the Provinces as well as to Town.

As a general rule, however, I may remark London lodges have done well and do well for the Charities, but with regard to our new lodges I cannot say as much. I would that I could.

Knowing, as I do, how many worthy Masons they contain, and how aesthetic was their consecration, how admirable their banquets, I yet feel, and feel strongly, that he is the best friend who points out to them kindly and fraternally that they ought (and I trust they will do so in 1879), by the support they give our excellent Charities, show to all of them that their profession and practice go hand in hand.

I hope that I have thus handled a confessedly difficult subject discreetly, and am, Dear Sir and Brother,

YOUR OWN IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

OLD LONDON LODGES, No. V.

In Coles's List of 1763, with the signs of the houses attached, No. 1, of 1738, is still No. 1 in 1763; No. 2, of 1738, ditto; No. 3, is still No. 3, though in High Holborn, seemingly; No. 4, in 1738, appears to be out in 1763. No. 5, in 1738, has become No. 4 (I think) in 1763; and No. 6, in 1738, is the No. 5, of 1763. No. 7, 1738, is out in 1763, while No. 8, 1738, seems to have migrated from the Barbican to Grosvenor Square (still No. 8) in 1763. No. 9, in 1738, is No. 7, of 1763, while No. 10, 1738, is apparently No. 6, of 1763. No. 11, of 1738, may be the No. 9, of 1763 (8) as the date of consecration is the same, and No. 12, in 1738, is probably the No. 10, of 1763, just as No. 13, of 1738, is probably also the No. 11, of 1763. No. 14, in 1738, seems to be No. 12 in 1763, and No. 15 in 1738, and No. 16 are out in 1763. No. 17 in 1738 is the same as No. 13 in 1763, while No. 18 in 1738 is out in 1763. No. 19 in 1738 is No. 14 in 1763. No. 20 in 1738 is the No. 15 of 1763. Nos. 21, 22, 23 in 1738 becoming respectively Nos. 16, 17, and 18, in 1763. No. 24 in 1738 appears to be the 22 of 1763, Nos. 25 and 26 being out. No. 27 of 1738 being clearly the No. 24 of 1763. No. 28 of 1738 is out in 1763, while No. 29 has become No. 25 in 1763. Nos. 30, 31, 32, and 33 in 1738 all seem to have vanished in 1763, and No. 34 of 1738 is apparently the same as No. 26 in 1763. Nos. 35 and 36 in 1738 seem to have become Nos. 28 and 29 in 1763. Nos. 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, and 43 of 1738 are all apparently out in 1763, though one of them must answer to No. 34, (consecrated March 25, 1730), in 1763. No. 44 in 1738 appears to be the same as No. 36 in 1763; and while No. 45 is out, either No. 46 or 47 answers to 37 in 1763, having the same date of consecration. Nos. 48, 49, 50, are represented in 1763 by 39, 41, 42, though it is difficult to connect them, while No. 51 in 1738 appears to answer to 44; No. 53 in 1738 is probably represented by 46 in 1763, while 54 in 1738 is the same, clearly as No. 47 in 1763.

Here I stop again for to-day, hoping to finish the comparison of the 106 London Lodges of 1738, with Coles's list of 1763 in the next Freemason.

STEWARDSHIP OF THE LIVERPOOL MASONIC HALL.

On Thursday evening, the 29th ult., a large and influential meeting of the General Committee of the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, met in that building for the purpose of appointing a House Steward, in room of Bro. Peter Ball, Prov. G. Tyler, who had resigned that position after a long and valuable service. Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., occupied the chair.

The Chairman of the House Committee, Bro. W. Cottrell, P.M., proposed Bro. Angus McDonald, Lodge 477, and this proposition was seconded by Bro. R. Robinson, P.M. 241. The name of Bro. Chaplain, the hall attendant, was submitted by Bro. the Rev. J. R. Jenkins, W.M. 216, seconded by Bro. G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., and supported by Bro. Major Turner, P.G. Treasurer; the name of Bro. Oglesby, 823, by Bro. John Houlding, P.M. 823, and seconded by Bro. H. Ashmore, W.M. 823; and the name of Bro. W. Vaughan, P.M. 724, was submitted by Bro. Ballard, P.M. 724, seconded by Bro. A. Hart, W.M.

On being put to the meeting, Bro. Chaplain was elected by a large majority.

It was afterwards resolved that it be an instruction to the House Committee to revise the regulations with regard to the House Steward's duties, and to appoint a successor to Bro. Chaplain.

The Academie des Sciences of Paris has elected Mr. Darwin a corresponding member in the Section of Zoology, and professor Asa Grey in the Section of Botany.—Athenaeum.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Gout.—These purifying and soothing remedies demand the earnest attention of all persons liable to gout, sciatica, or other painful affections of the muscles, nerves, or joints. The Ointment should be applied after the affected parts have been patiently fomented with warm water, when the unguent should be diligently rubbed upon the adjacent skin, unless the friction should cause pain. Holloway's Pills should be simultaneously taken to reduce inflammation and to purify the blood. This treatment abates the violence, and lessens the frequency of gout, rheumatism, and all spasmodic diseases which spring from hereditary predisposition, or from any accidental weakness of constitution. This Ointment checks the local remedy. The Pills restore the vital powers.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

A curious version of Rip Van Winkle exists in a Japan legend:—"A young man fishing in his boat on the ocean was invited by the goddess of the sea to her home beneath the waves. After three days he desired to see his old father and mother. On parting she gave him a golden casket and a key, but begged him never to open it. At the village where he lived all was changed, and he could get no trace of his parents until an aged woman recollected of hearing their names. He found their graves a hundred years old. Thinking that three days could not have made such a change, and that he was under a spell, he opened the casket. A white vapour rose, and under its influence the young man fell to the ground. His hair turned gray, his form lost its youth, and in a few moments he died of old age."

Mr. Mechi tells the Agricultural Gazette that he has chosen words to be inscribed on his tombstone—namely, 2 Chron. xxvi. 10, "He loved husbandry." They were suggested by an anonymous correspondent.

A correspondent of the Times states that it has cost him £4 17s. 9d. to send to his son in Texas a suit of Tweed cloth and two pairs of woollen socks, worth £4 1s.

Four Italian climbers—MM. Vaccarone, Costa, Nigra, and Brioschi—have, without guides, ascended Mont Blanc on the Italian and descended by the French side, a feat hitherto vainly attempted.

A shock of earthquake was recently felt at Liège, also at Elberfeld, Cologne, Osnabruck, and Barmen. At Barmen houses were upheaved, roofs displaced, furniture shaken, and goods in the shop windows overturned. The shocks were repeated at Elberfeld, Dusseldorf, Cologne, and Bonn.

"Engagement Bracelets" are amongst the latest fashionable novelties across the Atlantic. They are fitted with combination locks, of which the husband in prospective keeps the key.

Mr. Edward Augustus Bond has been appointed Principal Librarian of the British Museum. Mr. Bond is a meritorious officer of long service. He succeeded the late Sir Frederic Madden, as Keeper of the Manuscripts, in 1866. In accordance with the usual practice in making such appointments, the three Trustees with whom the matter chiefly rests—the Lord Chancellor, the Speaker, and the Archbishop of Canterbury—submitted two names to the Queen, from which she selected the first. We believe that the second was that of Mr. Bullen, Keeper of the Printed Books.—Academy.

A case, sadly illustrative of the great danger to which all are exposed who unfortunately come in contact with diseased meat, has recently occurred at North Shields. Peter Young, a cowkeeper, had the carcass of a diseased cow dressed, as if for sale, by a butcher named Walton. It appears that Walton had a slight cut in his hand, and next day felt much pain in his arm, which was considerably swollen. Two medical men were called in, and both pronounced it a hopeless case of blood-poisoning. The man died within a short time in great agony. Young was summoned before the North Shields magistrates on the 14th, and charged by Mr. McQueen, sanitary inspector, with having the carcass of a diseased cow on his premises dressed as if for sale as human food. A penalty of £5 and costs was inflicted, which many may consider hardly commensurate with the enormity of the offence, or the further mischief which might have ensued to the public therefrom.—Sanitary Record.

Juggernaut is said to be in a bad way since the imprisonment of the hereditary protector of sacred affairs. The late Car Festival was a complete failure. It is in contemplation to hand over the great god to the tender mercies of a most useful institution—the Court of Wards—though Juggernaut can hardly be said to be still in his minority.—Calcutta Correspondent of the "Times".

Bombay has held a solemnity for the purpose of investing Maharani Surnomoye with the Insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. This lady has contributed over £20,000 to famine charities enumerated by the Commissioner from 1871 to 1877, and bestowed over £50,000 in works of charity and public utility. During that period she had expended in charity one-sixth of her whole income.

PROPOSED RAILWAY IN ASIA MINOR.—At a meeting of the directors of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, on Wednesday afternoon, a circular letter was read from the Amalgamated Board of the Association for Promoting a Railway from the Persian Gulf to Constantinople, for providing routes to British India, and for developing the resources of Asia Minor. The directors of the Chamber declined, as on previous occasions, to give their support to any private or proprietary enterprise, and passed a resolution to the effect that the merits of the undertaking ought to rest alone on the appreciation of the British public.

The canal from Aarberg to the lake of Bienné, which had been nearly ten years in construction, was officially opened on Saturday. It was actually opened the previous day, when the river, being high, made its way through the temporary barrier. An especially interesting meeting of the Royal York Lodge, No. 315, was held on Tuesday afternoon, in the Masonic Room, at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, Bro. Sir. W. W. Burrell, Bart., R.W. Grand Master of the Province, being present with the rest of P.G. Officers.

On Monday, September 2nd, an elegant breast jewel was presented to Bro. Arthur Stubbs, I.P.M. 850, by Bro. J. W. Lister, P.M. 850. At the back of the jewel (a square with prob) was the following inscription neatly engraved: "Presented to Bro. A. Stubbs, P.M. 850, by the brethren of the St. Oswald Lodge, No. 850, for services rendered to Freemasonry."

THE LAST QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

The report of this meeting will give satisfaction to all the Craft. The dignified proceedings with reference to the wrong doings of the official Scrutineers at the election of the Board of General Purposes, will sincerely gratify all who value the prestige and honour of our Masonic body. It was an unanimous condemnation both of outraged propriety and Masonic justice, which we trust will not be without its effect on all who were present at Grand Lodge, on all who read what took place, and all who peruse our article. No doubt much of personal pity will have been felt for the brother on whom Masonic justice has fallen so heavily, but in this special case the sterner necessity of obvious duty outweighed any personal feelings or individual goodwill. In the Freemason it can never be out of order, or wrong to repeat, that safe and abiding axiom of all social and personal safety,—“Fiat justitia, ruat Cælum.” The other matters of business proceeded in due course, and for which we beg to refer our readers to our report. It will be seen Bro. General Brownrigg, P.G.M. for Surrey, presided, in the absence of the higher dignitaries.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

Though we have given this short heading to our article, for the convenience of our columns, we wish it to take a far wider range, in that we propose to consider to-day, the present position and future action of the Grand Orient of France. Let us say, in the first instance, that a priori, there is no reason in the world why the Grand Orient of France and the Grand Lodge of England should not be on the very best of terms. National prejudices and bye-gone feuds have long since given way, most happily, to the common interest of both countries, to the sympathy of an “entente cordiale,” and the pleasant “souvenirs” of an alliance honourable and welcome to both countries. There has grown up both in France and England, a mutual regard and goodwill for each other, and long may it so continue, and may the mission of both countries be the same, the peaceful progress, the advancing civilization of mankind. All Freemasons, French and English Masons, have this tie in common, that French Freemasonry is a daughter of England, and that there is, and can be no rivalry between the two governing bodies of both countries, but which can best advance the true interests of Cosmopolitan Freemasonry. We in England have always made great allowances for French Freemasonry. We have not forgotten the mournful scenes of the Commune; we knew the violence of Massol and his party, and we always felt that the moderate party in the French Grand Orient had “very difficult cards to play,” and we, therefore, thought it right to express for them all sympathy, and to regard with the utmost favour in our power, their words and acts, to put a good construction on what was the effect of an overbearing majority, rather than the deliberate view of the Masonic and moderate party in the French governing body. But when in 1877 the French Grand Orient, yielding to an insensate agitation, and dominated by the memories and bitterness of the destructive and pernicious teaching of Massol, completed the work of which he so perversely and vigorously laid the foundation, we, in England, unless recreant to our principles, unless base deserters from our colours, had no alternative but to avow alike our dissent from, our disapproval of, an act which seemed to us to undermine and cast away the very foundation of Universal Masonry. We might be wrong in our view of matters, and the majority of the Grand Orient might be right, but as honest Freemasons we had both the right, and we felt strongly it was our duty to speak out and plainly, in respect of proceedings which we could not but deem utterly subversive of all the principles which, as Freemasons, we had been ever taught to revere.

The English Grand Lodge always prudent, always moderate, and always conciliatory, passed a resolution, under the circumstances, which, while it commended itself to the intelligence and loyalty of all English Masons, was alike most Masonic in substance, and most courteous in form. Practically it declared that it must not take cognizance of so sad a departure from the ceaseless teaching of Cosmopolitan Masonry. Further than this, it decided that while it would receive into the lodges all French Masons whose certificates were anterior to the Couvent of 1877, that is those who were initiated under proper sanctions, it declined to admit those initiated after 1877, whose certificates are posterior to the Couvent, unless they supplemented those certificates with a declaration of acknowledgment in T.G.A.O.T.U. Such, in our opinion, is a most wise, Masonic, and befitting decision. We judge this “inter alia,” both by the attacks such a serious resolution has encountered and by the support it has received. It has been supported by the whole of Anglo-Saxon Masonry, considerably over a million of Masons alone; it has been approved of by the Grand Bodies of Egypt, Peru, Spain, Portugal, Hungary, Italy, and many lodges in Germany, while it has been personally attacked only by those who wish to go further even, and whose idea of Freemasonry seems to be a secret, revolutionary, practically Godless society. Such is the present position of the Grand Orient of France, alike without precedent and dangerous, in our opinion, because isolated from the whole of Anglo-Saxon Masonry, and severed from other bodies. Its special danger consists in this, that it may be a question by International Masonic Law, how far any jurisdiction is warranted in treating France as an unoccupied country, inasmuch as such a departure from universal Masonry seems to many minds to be an act of Masonic outlawry on the part of French Freemasonry, seems to take away all rightful claims to acknowledgment and obedience. Bro. Hubert, for whom we have much regard, and who sees things much as we see them, has expressed a hope that the French Grand Orient, under Bro. St. Jean, will go no further and do no worse. We would fain hope so with him, but our faith is not quite so strong as his. There are symptoms to us still of a deliberate intention to go on further, if slowly, if gradually, if little by little, point by point, yet to go on, and thus to complete, in our humble opinion, Masonic revolution. But where? To the complete goal of a wild destructiveness. How else can any English Masons regard the deliberate intention avowed at the approaching Couvent, to issue warrants in another jurisdiction not in fraternal relations with it? Not that the measure is of much moment in the abstract, or is likely to be of much avail in the concrete. Supposing that the effect in England, for instance, was to give a warrant to “Les Philadelphes,” what harm could accrue to English Masonry? Absolutely none. No English Mason of respectability could associate with such a body, and if he did he would be suspended at once, for taking part in a “clandestine meeting,” just as no law-abiding Englishman could or would take part in an illegal meeting of a secret society. We utterly deny “Les Philadelphes” to be in any sense a “Masonic lodge,” neither, in our opinion, could it ever be made into one. We, therefore, look upon such a proposal as a “brutum fulmen,” at any rate practically, but yet it shews an “animus,” “unmistakeable and irreconcilable,” which we are bound, as honest journalists, to note, as loyal Masons to deplore. As regards any other jurisdiction affected by it, we can only foresee, that if persevered in, it must lead to reprisals, and the utter exclusion of French Freemasons from all Anglo-Saxon lodges, as well as from the lodges of many other jurisdictions. And with this intention, practically attacking all the Anglo-Saxon Grand Lodges, the French Grand Orient invites Anglo-Saxon Freemasons to attend their approaching Couvent and take part in a fraternal gathering. Very fraternal in good truth, and the delicate irony of our witty French brethren in calmly putting forth such an invitation under such circumstances deserves to be recorded and appreciated! What Anglo-Saxon Mason can, under such circumstances, attend such a meeting? We say at once—those who value either their own Masonic character or the prestige of their Mother Grand Lodge cannot do so. If any do, depend upon it, they are utterly worthless in themselves as representatives of Anglo-Saxon Masonry, and utterly unauthorized and unaccredited representation of the jurisdiction from which they hail. There are always queer folks who will do queer things in the world, and Masons are not exempt from the law of "queerishness," or any other sublunary law. But we shall not believe the fact until it takes place, and never would the old French saying be truer by whomsoever originally put forth "Du sublime au ridicule il y n'a qu'un pas." We have said this with much regret, but honestly and openly we felt bound formerly to express our opinion and we have expressed it again to day. The French Grand Orient might, we think, however, do much to soothe the troubled waters of Masonry, —if it only retreated gracefully from the unwise position it has taken up; if it openly stated that it gave up this childishness of innovation, that it deliberately rejects all counsels of political propaganda, and that it holds out an olive branch of peace and good will to the Masons of all jurisdictions. For, in our opinion, the real objection to the past proceedings of the French Grand Orient lies in this, that they made no compensation for the verbal changes they introduced, or rather they deliberately shut the door against any acceptance of their proposal—in that they positively and avowedly departed from the teaching of all Cosmopolitan Freemasonry. Had the French Grand Orient thought well to do what we have done, namely, to place the Charges, etc., "separatim," leaving the constitution simply as a code of legislation, we should have had nothing to say, and should have said nothing. But in the face of the world the Grand Orient takes out a profession of belief in God, and substitutes for it a formula which, at any rate, excludes such a belief. The old form was, let us remember?—"Elle a pour principes l'existence de Dieu l'immortalité de l'âme, et la solidarité humaine" (whatever that may really mean). The new formula runs thus:—"Elle a pour principes la liberté absolue de conscience et la solidarité humaine." What then can any honest man understand by such an alteration? Is it not really "nous avons changé tout cela," with a vengeance. There can be no mistake about the act, or the object. It is said to be toleration, but is it not really a pure unbelieving revolution? If, however, the French Grand Orient, ere it is too late, still wants to offer a means of conciliation, let it revise its Constitution, take out all matter therefrom which does not concern legislation, and place under some more appropriate title what its future profession of principles is. We cannot but hope that such a manly realization of the essential difficulty of the present position of the French Grand Orient, of the dangerous tendency of its prospective action might lead to a healthy reaction, and a formula might be devised which would harmonize with the opinions of Cosmopolitan Freemasonry, and pacify the justly agitated sentiments of all loyal Anglo-Saxon Masons. Then the French Grand Orient might truly welcome all Masons at Paris, and it would promote harmony instead of warfare, sympathy instead of disavowal, brotherly love and friendly union instead of growing discontent and hopeless isolation. We trust that our plain-spoken words will be received in the really Masonic spirit in which they are intended, whether welcome or unwelcome to our friends in France.

INITIATION FEES.

By a slight "lapsus calami," £5 5s. was printed for £3 3s. in our leader last week, on the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Practically the actual payment as a minimum in London is £4 4s.; in the provinces £3 15s. 6d., which includes the Provincial Grand Lodge fee for registration. We quite agree with Bro. Hughan that £5 5s. should be the minimum in England, and we hope that it will speedily be made so, though practically very few lodges in England make it a minimum. If such a change takes place in England the payment will be £6 6s. as a minimum in London, and in the provinces £5 15s. 6d., including the Prov. Grand Lodge fee. We do not quite agree with Bro. Hughan as to Scotland. £2 2s., would be better, we venture to think, with all deference to him, and 6d. as a capitation payment is quite inadequate to the object in view.

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

We call attention to the circular of this new Society elsewhere which it is about to issue to all the Subscribers to the London Charities. We do not think it needful to travel over the ground again which is traversed in that exhaustive appeal, (as well as in a recent letter to the Freemason), for the "raison d'être" of the London Masonic Charity Association, but would merely add that we concur alike with its arguments and in its conclusions. We think that our London brethren will do wisely and well if they will at once send up their voting papers, signed, but not filled up, to the Secretaries, whose address will be found at the foot of the circular alluded to. A letter of Bro. Woodford's in the correspondence on the same subject in the Freemason to-day, may also be well perused by our many readers.

PERILS TO EXCURSIONISTS.

We are very sorry at this time of the year, when so many are taking a well-earned holiday, to be startled by the mournful accident on the London, Chatham and Dover Railway on Saturday last close to Sittingbourne Junction, between a cheap fast train and a goods train, which had been improperly shunted and got on to the main line. The carriages, crowded with women and children, ran into the goods train; five or six persons were killed on the spot, thirty or forty maimed and severely injured. We can all enter into the dread reality of the scene, and deeply feel how sad must have been such an ending to a day's lawful pleasure, and how that many of the passengers will carry to their graves a memory of that awful accident. We trust that an immediate inquiry will affix the fault to those who are to blame for such lamentable carelessness or neglect. The Times points out that this cheap fast train, running at forty miles an hour, was not provided with continuous breaks. Why not? It will be seen that our esteemed brother, the Grand Registrar, represented the Company at the inquest which has been held, and has brought in a verdict of manslaughter against the two guards, Moden and Clarke. Since we have written, another dreadful accident on the river adds to the melancholy excitement of London. The "Princess Alice," one of the largest of the London Steamboat Company's boats, with about six hundred passengers on board, was run down just below North Woolwich Gardens by the "Bywell Castle," a Tyne steamer, and between 300 and 400 lives are lost. Alas! what a sad ending to a day's innocent pleasure. But still, "even in the midst of life we are in death." 100 are saved.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS IN NON-MASONIC PAPERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

At an earlier period of my long Masonic career, (thirty-one years), I was an active, perhaps too active, a contributor to our journals. Experience, however, with advancing years, has made me more cautious in this respect. For once, however, I am inclined to trouble you with a few remarks, arising from a recent visit to the Province of Devon. No doubt your next number will contain a detailed account of the provincial meeting held at Okehampton. Allow me first to observe, that in two local newspapers on the 26th ult. have appeared reports of the proceedings, extending over a column and a half. Though by no means one of those who desire our lights to be hidden from the external world, yet the propriety of carrying publicity to so great an extent as has been the case in this instance may be fairly doubted. Masons are human, and matters of controversy must arise, which sometimes infringe upon the fraternal feeling and courtesy which we profess to inculcate and practise, and which, in the main, we do carry out. Is it prudent to make these known, beyond our own members?

Okehampton, where the meeting was held, is a wild and remote part of the province, till lately difficult of access. Recent railway arrangements, however, have afforded greater facilities, and this fact, together with the interest of one or two questions to be discussed, caused a large attendance. It appeared to me that the time would soon arrive when it would be desirable to divide this large province into two portions, with their respective centres at Exeter and Plymouth, between which there is evidently at present great rivalry. I do not mean to say in an unfriendly spirit, but naturally each is anxious to secure for itself and district as many honours as possible, the distance between them being about fifty-three miles. This course has been adopted with advantage in Lancashire and Yorkshire. Devon has nearly fifty lodges, and others are, I believe, contemplated. It is true that, even after such division, each of the new northern provinces contains more lodges than all Devon, but they are more compact, owing to the large populations of contiguous manufacturing towns, whereas Devon extends over a very wide agricultural area, something like seventy miles each way, and hence it is difficult to manage. The venerable Prov. Grand Master is, perhaps, the oldest officer of that rank in England, and is so beloved and respected that so long as he desires to maintain his position, it would be unwise to disturb it, but it may be well to look forward to the time when, in the ordinary course of events, a change must be made. It is probable that, even now, his advanced age and diminished physical powers would render a decrease of labour and responsibility welcome to him.

Considering that, owing to the great number of lodges, each one cannot expect to furnish a Grand Officer oftener than once in four years, I was rather surprised to find the chairs of the Grand Wardens given to brethren who had previously been invested with the purple. The Prov. G.M. stated that in Devon there are about 400 P.M.'s., many of whom are skilful, zealous, and deserving brethren, who have not had provincial appointments, since there are only about fifteen collars to be disposed of in each year, and the number of such unrewarded Masons must, of course, rapidly increase, whereas, in smaller provinces, such as Hereford (4 lodges), Bedford (5), Oxford (8), Nottingham (9), Cambridge (4), Bristol (8), Jersey (7); many who have not even attained to the first chair of a lodge, have received such distinction. There seems to me a ready way of obviating this anomaly, by giving the purple to the Stewards, or at least allowing them to wear it after their year of office, during which they sport the red, and by apportioning the number of Stewards in each province to the number of lodges it contains, say one to every four lodges. This would increase the number of honours to be disposed of where desirable, and would decrease them where they are already too numerous.

A very important question was discussed at great length and with much warmth, which may have a great effect on the existing large and valuable Institutions near London for the education of Masons' children, and the support of the aged and distressed, of which our body is justly so proud. In Devon, as in other provinces, there is at least one local charitable institution, co-existent with, and independent of those already named, which are supported by the whole country. On Monday last it was determined to adopt measures which have a tendency to withdraw all help from the latter, and to limit the funds so appropriated to the formation of local benevolent institutions confined to the relief of distress within the province. This seems a very questionable proposition, and if the example be followed extensively by the larger and more wealthy provinces, it must lead to serious results, and the ultimate abandonment of our great institutions, which can hardly be supported by the smaller provinces. No doubt this step will receive the attention of Masons throughout the country, and especially that of the authorities of the Order, as tending to disruption and the consideration of individual rather than of general interests. In case of the possible separation of North from South Devon, as two provinces, it must also lead to further serious complications there.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

H. H.

CAN ATHEISTS BE ADMITTED INTO THE ENGLISH LODGES? IF NOT WHAT JUSTIFIES THE GRAND LODGE?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Though want of space prevented a verbatim report of Bro. Darley's oration, on the 17th ult., at the Surrey Masonic Hall, we give in particular the following sent by him.

"No irreligious libertine dare tread within the sacred precincts of a Masons' Lodge. At his introduction and admission to the lodge he is given to understand that Freemasonry is based on the purest principles of piety and virtue; he declares openly, in the presence of all, not only his belief in God, but his trust in His divine Providence. The first duty he is called on to perform is to bend before the Great Architect of the Universe in prayer. He is advised to proceed with confidence, for no danger can ensue where God's name is mentioned; the Volume of the Sacred Law is the first object presented to his view as the great light of Masonry, on which he is obligated, and he is advised to make it his guide of faith and practice, teaching his duty to God by never mentioning His name but with due reverence. And every progressive step to the climax of Masonry seems increasingly to magnify God's Holy name and cultivate veneration.

The Atheist, it is possible, may get access by dishonour and falsehood, as a thief or burglar follow out their objects; should he, however, get in he is not happy there.

True, he may be a professed atheist from limited intellect or conception, though idiots are known to have some idea of and veneration for God, or it may arise from a diabolical abuse of the brightest intellect to gratify a depraved mind and fiendish will.

His aims are to tear asunder the most sacred ties, to break the dearest bonds of brotherly union, and undermine the noblest institutions that tend to make earth heavenly, and in their place raise a pandemonium, reducing civilized, refined and social beings, male and female, to the level of the lower animals, and thus create a hell upon earth.

There is extenuation for a violator of law, who owns that he does wrong, but what reliance can be placed in a "creature" holding himself amenable to no moral or social law, and only governed like a pig by his obstinate will and appetite. He is not of sound judgment nor strict morals, and therefore should not be admitted into a society that prizes honour and virtue above the external advantages of rank and fortune.

The genuine Mason venerates the Sacred Law and its Divine Author, whilst the Atheist puts out wilfully his own eyes and sees God in nothing. The Mason says "Thy law have I hid in my heart,"—and surveying the various objects that decorate and adorn creation, he is led with sacred awe to join the poet in saying:—

"These are Thy glorious works, Parent of Good,
Thus wondrous these—Thyself how wondrous then,
That sit'st above these heavens, to us invisible,
But dimly seen in these Thy lower works,
Yet these declare Thy goodness beyond thought
And power Divine."

I am in love with the German practice of sculpturing scripture, as suggested by the late illustrious Prince Consort for the Royal Exchange. "The Earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," and I know of no better motto to chisel in marble in front of our Masonic buildings—glitter in gems on the Grand Master's breast, emblazon in gold over the grand dais, on the banner of every lodge, and to cherish in the heart of every Mason, than the admirable words, suggested by a deep veneration for God, flashed in the first greeting to America by the honoured father of our Grand Master—

"Glory to God in the highest,
On earth peace, and goodwill to men."

Our Grand Lodge cannot, will not, must not, turn its back upon God by countenancing Atheism, whilst we honour men of every faith, the thing of no faith cannot expect to share our fraternal sympathies, and we hope our brethren of the Grand Orient of France will rivet themselves to us more closely by a similar policy.

Yours fraternally, W. DARLEY, P.M.

SUPPORT OF THE CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having perused the account in your last issue of the proceedings of the Hereford Masonic Charity Association, a short account of the doings of a little country lodge in the same direction may not be uninteresting.

In June last (you see we had the start of our Hereford brethren) it was mooted in a conversation between the W.M. and one or two of his officers that such an association be started, and the idea was acted upon on the next ordinary lodge night (July), when thirteen brethren gave in their names as subscribers, and the S.W. was appointed Hon. Sec. At our last ordinary meeting nine more brethren gave in their names, making a total of twenty-two in a lodge numbering less than forty subscribing members, many of whom were already Life Subscribers to or Life Governors of the Charities.

The subscription is fixed at 2s. 6d. per mensem, and we propose balloting for seniority of presentation as the funds accumulate. Without allowing for additional members, this will bring in £33 per annum to the Charities, and if every lodge in our county (Kent) did the same in proportion to its size, it would give an additional £1500 per annum to the Charities.

In conclusion, let me remark that as all business connected with the association is done in the lodge-room after closing down, there are no working expenses incurred, and that as brethren we think our Masonic word quite as good as written promises.

Trusting to see the movement extended, and our noble Charities the gainers thereby,

I am, yours fraternally, W. TUFF, S.W. 1273.

TRURO CATHEDRAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is now some forty-two years ago that I was told that Freemasonry possessed many great and invaluable privileges, but in order to secure those privileges to worthy men, and we trust to worthy men alone, vows of fidelity were required. Believing this to be so, I have repeated them to several candidates for initiation.

Have I misled them? We Masons have all taken those vows, consequently we are entitled to those privileges, and I contend that all those who have not taken those vows are not entitled to them. We pay our initiation fees and annual subscriptions to form a fund for the relief of each other, our wives and children in time of need. If the uninitiated are allowed to share our monies what is the privilege of being a Mason?

I am one of the many who think that our monies should be applied to Masonic purposes alone; we need some 30 or £40,000 a year to support our three great Masonic Charities, and if we continue to vote away our money to cathedrals and various other purposes, by-and-bye we shall want to appeal to the public at large for the support of our charities.

By giving this a place in your paper you will oblige,
Yours very fraternally, J. P. SHAPLAND,
P.M. Z., &c.

FEE FOR INITIATION IN ENGLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your article advocating an increase of fees under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, a much needed reform, you several times mention the minimum fee for initiation under the Grand Lodge of England as being five guineas. I wish that such was the case, but as a matter of fact it is not so. The Constitutions declare that "No person shall be made a Mason for less than three guineas, exclusive of the registering fee."

The fee for registration for a Mason made within the London district is one guinea, in a country or military lodge ten shillings and sixpence, and in a colonial or foreign lodge seven shillings and sixpence (including the certificate). It is clear, therefore, that the minimum fees under the Grand Lodge of England are as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
Initiation, Colonial or Foreign Lodge ...	3	10	6
" Country or Military " ...	3	13	6
" London District ...	4	4	0

I have long advocated an increase of fees under the Grand Lodge of England, and have already drawn up a memorial exhibiting the desirability of so doing, as practically the minimum fee is still the same as it was fixed at the Union of 1813 (1815), although the value of money is vastly different to what it was then. The minimum fee should be at least five guineas, exclusive of the registration fee, which ought to be a guinea for country and military lodges as for the London district, thereby making the initiation fee really six guineas for country and London lodges, and £5 12s. 6d. for colonial and foreign lodges.

My experience goes to prove that gentlemen do not mind what they have to pay for initiation, though many are most particular afterwards to reduce their payments to as small a sum as possible. Added to which the status of the Craft is raised in many respects by a respectable amount being required for initiation. A large sum on admittance, and a small annual subscription subsequently, is, to my mind, the right method as to fees. With respect to the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and under the peculiar circumstances of the case (so many members being operative Masons, &c.), I shall be glad if the minimum fee for initiation is fixed at two guineas, and an annual subscription of sixpence be payable by every lodge held in Scotland for each brother who has been a member during the whole or part of the year before the return is made.

MASONIC BANQUETS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I cordially thank "Pythagoras" for his letter in your last issue, condemning extravagance at Masonic banquets, and may say that my sympathy with his views generally on that subject has not been limited to merely verbal approval. I must, however, be permitted to say that the distribution of four dozen of champagne among a hundred and twenty brethren, many of whom had travelled considerable distances on a sultry day, and probably dined a couple of hours later than usual, was not much more than one would expect to offer at one's private table; the bill of fare, which you were good enough to publish, sufficiently refutes any suggestion of "waste;" and if the price of the tickets very much exceeded the amount the brethren of "Pythagoras" would ordinarily pay at a dining room for a dinner, those with whom he associates must be much more modest and abstemious than are the majority of middle-class men in this part of England.

If this matter of eating and drinking has been overdone in the way of extravagance, let us be careful not to attempt too suddenly to rush to the other extreme. No single effort can be made in reason to reduce the cost of our banquets, which I shall not warmly support—as, indeed, I fancy I have proved in more than one instance. I wrote before, as now, entirely on my own responsibility, without asking or consulting the remaining members of the committee of the entertaining lodges; and I can, therefore, the more readily assure all who are concerned that this feeling of strict economy—a word I use in its best sense—animated every one of them. But in thus acting, they (as I think wisely) remembered the scathing condemnation of those who once sought to set aside the law of ordinary hospitality by complaining that "This ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor."

Yours fraternally,

W.M.

FREEMASONRY AND CATHEDRALS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have no desire to run counter to my esteemed friend and Bro. Whytehead, or any other of your valued correspondents, but really there is no other course left for me, if the columns of the Freemason are to be open for the advocacy of sectarianism. That the "Church of England is the 'National Church' of this country is nothing to us who do not think there ought to be any, and to use any part of the funds of a province to assist in building or restoring the edifices of any religious sect, is, to my mind, most un-masonic. All the members of a Provincial Grand Lodge have a share virtually in the funds accumulated, and a voice in their disposal, and hence, if a majority decide to devote a portion of such monies to a sectarian purpose, the minority must be mortified that, without their consent, some of their contributions have been given to religious bodies, which, as a matter of conscience, they would not support. It is really a "matter of conscience" with many of us not to support, directly or indirectly, an established church; and if I considered that it was the tendency of Freemasonry to thus violate any religious scruple, I should retire from it at once and for ever.

W. J. HUGHAN.

[We publish this letter, as we do all from Bro. Hughan, at once, though he, with us, will admit the impropriety and impossibility of having a discussion with respect to the Church of England in the Freemason. We do not think that Bro. Holmes, in his well-meaning proposition, intended to raise the "National Church" question, and that has regrettably cropped up in the discussion. All such matters must be decided by the Provincial Grand Lodge without sectarian feeling. If the discussion is to continue in our columns all allusion to the National Church or Non-conformists must cease. We will admit letters on the question of the fitness and expediency of the proposition on Masonic grounds.—Ed.]

THE LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

As it is well known that I took a great interest some time back in West Yorkshire in the noble work of its Charity Committee, of which I was the first Chairman, I think it well, with your permission, to record in your pages, the substance of what I said at the first meeting of the above new Association, a precis of which, (admirably reported), has already appeared in your well-filled columns:—

"The Provincial Charity movement and organisation, which proceeded on the new principle in West Yorkshire, of combination and centralization of the voting power, begun fairly, it may be said, about 1861. Since that time most of the other provinces have followed suit, and the 'Voting Power of the Provinces' has so greatly increased, that many provinces now, without external help, can secure the return of their various candidates, or, at any rate, by a friendly 'concordat' with another province. London, however, with its 256 lodges and an immense list of subscribers to the charities, has no such combination or concentration of voting power, consequently the votes of the London brethren are given, so to say, in 'driblets,' and have no sensible effect on the elections; hence, too, the large proportion of unsuccessful London candidates. I will now proceed to point out deferentially, what, in my humble opinion, is the only feasible remedy for an admitted weakness in our London voting arrangements. We must have a somewhat similar system in London. We must form in London an association of the subscribers to the charities, which by the action of a committee will attend to the combined polling of voting papers for selected candidates. Of course, there is in this, as in all other things, some difficulties. There is, 1st, 'Individualism,' which prefers, for some reason or other, to act by self, personally, and not through a committee. I think, as true Masons, we shall be ready to sink our 'individualism' for the good of others. But one or two points appear to me to be needful to bear in mind:—First, that as the only object of voting is to secure the election, all that we really need is that our candidate be on the list of successful ones. We should give up any idea of seeking as a point of honour to place our candidate at the head of the poll or high upon the poll. It is an utter waste of voting power. And then, secondly, unless we combine in a fraternal spirit in London, we cannot expect that our London cases will be more successful than they have been. What that success is, it does not need a prophet to tell you. Nay, more than this, unless we adopt the same, or a somewhat similar system, each year must witness more successful provincial candidates, and fewer successful London candidates, because the provinces, (all honour to them), are in right good earnest, and carry out, moreover, a true and proper principle of legitimate and effective voting. I will only add that if such a position is taken up by us in London, it is not one of antagonism or selfishness, or in any other way open to blame, inasmuch as it is one which common sense itself would suggest, and the rightful claims of our London candidates would undoubtedly dictate to us all. I feel sure, that this movement has not been made without good reason, nor is it set on foot a moment too soon, and I trust that, forgetting all personal feeling, and putting on one side individual prepossession, we shall labour in hearty unison and concert to assist the undoubtedly righteous claims of our London candidates on our time, our sympathy, and our combined and concentrated energies."

I do not think it well here to add anything to these few words of mine, honestly spoken and masonically intended, and am,

Dear Bro. Kenning, Yours fraternally,

A. F. A. WOODFORD.

INITIATION FEES IN SCOTLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am sure that every one who desires the prosperity of the Grand Lodge of Scotland will fully appreciate the excellent and well-timed advice contained in your leader on the 24th ult., and that all reasonable and unbiassed brethren will admit the accuracy of your view of recent unpleasant events. Your remarks in the Freemason of the 31st, upon Scottish Freemasonry, are to the point. The lowness of the fees with us enables persons to join the Craft who are not in the position (however they may be otherwise qualified) to do credit to a charitable institution, such as Freemasonry is; on the contrary, it is too often the case that they become burdens instead, and carry discredit to our institution wherever they go, supplying, as you truly observe, an unenviable majority of casuals for relief in England, as well as elsewhere. Were our minimum fee raised to five (or even four) guineas, as you suggest, the class of society joining our order would come to consist of persons who could afford to pay a regular and fixed sum towards the maintenance of their own particular lodges, as well as to uphold the central Benevolent Fund, and thus our charity would not only be more unconstrained in its extent, but would be more fully available for its proper objects, which comprise, not only the poor, but more especially the distressed, the decayed, the widow, and the fatherless. Let us earnestly wish and work for such a result.

I am, yours fraternally,

JOHN MONRO,
Prov. G.J.W. of Glasgow.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The following letter was sent to the Scottish Freemason for insertion in last week's issue, but held over for reasons best known to the Editor of that journal till next issue—a fortnight hence. As it bears upon topics under present discussion anent Grand Lodge of Scotland meeting on the 5th ult., will you kindly give it a place in your journal of this week, and oblige the writer and other brethren?

To the Editor of the "Scottish Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I was disappointed in not finding a report of the proceedings of the meeting of Grand Lodge on August 5th in your issue of the 16th inst., and I was pained to notice the reason assigned by you why the meeting was not reprinted in the Scottish Freemason. Has the "fine gold" of Freemasonry indeed "become so dim" that an Editor whose position as a journalist ought to be independent of all proceedings, must "refrain from reporting such, even when he thinks these proceedings are of a shameful and un-masonic character?" Methinks, in such a case, the Masonic reporter should have the courage to speak out the more boldly—even though he should sully his dainty fingers by such dirty work—and not refer his readers to garbled misrepresentations in daily papers outside our Order.

In the North British Daily Mail of the 6th, we find a long article headed "Threatened Masonic Disruption." The "wish" of the writer in this case would, we think, be "father to the thought;" in this article there is much that was not before Grand Lodge at the meeting. In the Glasgow News of same date, we do find an epitome of the business, and a fair report so far as it goes. Both papers, however, do not do what, to my mind, was the crowning "shameless un-masonic" act of the day, viz.—the "one hundred" of Glasgow, when they could not carry their points, abruptly leaving the meeting—without obtaining leave from the throne—and rushing in disorder past the guards out of the hall. Where was the voice of the Grand Master that he did not thunder behind them? Where was the Grand Tyler, that he did not bar the way in "front of them?" Where were the Wardens, and brethren "to the right and left of them," that "the one hundred," who so ingloriously forgot their Masonic position—and its corresponding duties—were not prevented from leaving the Grand Lodge till they had asked leave to do so in something like proper form—and with at least a show of honour to themselves, and respect to the Craft, of which they are members.

I humbly venture to affirm, that if the Grand Master had exercised the authority of his high office at this juncture—and in doing so he would have had the support of the meeting) the "scene," which every lover of order must deplore, would not have taken place.

There can be no doubt whatever, that the action of "the one hundred" was that of insubordination, and their subsequent conduct in holding meetings, passing resolutions, issuing circulars, &c., smacks of open rebellion. Surely every right-thinking loyal Mason in our jurisdiction will deprecate such conduct, and consider matters well before lending any countenance to the (I will not use your word "shameless," but will say) "unmasonic" proceedings of our brethren in the west.

I am, yours fraternally,

A READER.

[We are informed that the 100 seceders had permission of the Grand Master to do so.—Ed. Freemason.]

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I feel quite sure that every English Brother will bear you out in your remarks regarding the needful reforms in Scottish Masonry, and I am just as sure that all the best class of Masons in the Land o' Cakes will do the same. But unfortunately there seems to be a strong body of brethren of a class that should never have been initiated at all, who violently oppose any such ideas as you have enunciated, and who are prepared to bring all their influence of numbers to bear upon the Grand Lodge in order to prevent any reform. It is a very significant fact, as you observe, that the greatest proportion of Masonic vagrants hails from Scotland. Nor can we be surprised at this when we consider that the ease with which a man can be received into the Order north of the Tweed is an actual temptation to a professional mendicant to become a Freemason purely for begging purposes.

Many brethren are of opinion that the minimum initiation fee even in England is too small, and certainly low fees tend greatly to the admission of candidates who are not in what could be fairly called reputable circumstances. My observations lead me to think that many persons mistake the aim and scope of Freemasonry, and enter with the indistinct idea of obtaining some financial support from the general body. In some provincial lodges this notion is to a certain extent encouraged by the practice of including in the O.B. a pledge to prefer a Master Mason in all trade dealings, which, I think, most objectionable and lowering to the high tone of the pure ceremony. I hope I am not wrong in the opinion that no man should be accepted as a candidate for Freemasonry to whom the loss of his situation would mean utter penury, or whose death would throw his family at once upon the charity of the Craft. Unforeseen circumstances may, of course, bring about such a state of things, but at the actual period of his introduction a candidate should be in reputable circumstances, which I understand to mean, not only a respectable social position, but either means or friends or both to fall back upon.

If, at the time he desires admission, he is not in that happy position he would, I submit, be far better advised, and the interests of the Craft would be far better consulted, if he entered the ranks of a friendly society.

I am, yours fraternally,

T. B. WHITEHEAD.

Since writing the above I have read the excellent letter of "Spero," in your last issue, in which I perfectly agree, as regards the point on which I have written.

SCHOOLS BASED ON THE PRINCIPLES OF MASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Some few days ago the idea of forming schools based on the principles of Masonry was mooted by one or more of your correspondents. There can be no question as to the great necessity and importance of such institutions. It would be a boon to many a fellow craftsman who is able to commit the training of his children to those who would care for them on the ground of common brotherhood. But such a scheme as that proposed by your correspondents, would involve a great amount of care, thought, and expense, and after all it would be but an experiment. Would it not be better therefore in the meantime to select some already existing school, say such as that advertised in your educational columns viz., Tollington Park College, as the basis of the experiment, and not only so but as forming a very desirable centre for the preliminary operations of a Masonic school. It appears from the depositions of the above College and its principals that it is adapted in every way for the purposes suggested. I should be glad if brethren interested in the education of their offspring in its Masonic aspects would ventilate the subject at greater length. As Masons it is of all things of the greatest importance that our offspring should be taught to revere and embrace the principles so sacred to their parents, amid the uncertain ring in modern educational establishments. I as a parent would hail with pleasure an institution of a Masonic character where my children could be taught not Masonic vices as that poor unfortunate woman, wife of a New York Mason, describes it, but Masonic virtues, which are only real when they show themselves in sobriety, grace and serenity of conduct, and an earnest desire for the higher culture of our children.

Yours very sincerely,

J. H. TOWNEND, M.D.

WENTWORTH LITTLE MEMORIAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I was very glad to see the advertisement in your last week's issue asking for donations for the above object, I think the appeal should be met generously and heartily responded to. When we consider the great zeal and talents displayed by our late brother, who devoted so much of his time, not only for the practical benefit of the Order, but in the elucidation of the historical and mystical teachings of our rites and ceremonies, and there were many brethren who were brought under his personal influence, there should not be any fear for the attainment of the objects the Committee have in view, which I perceive are threefold: 1st The Mural Tablet. 2nd The benefit of the widow. 3rd The perpetuation of Bro. Little's name in the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

I will send my donation to Bro. Buss.

Yours fraternally,

AN ADMIRER OF OUR LATE BROTHER.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to D.P.G.M., I must congratulate him on the very able defence he made of a somewhat bad case; but a reply to one or two of his statements is necessary. 1stly He bases the defence mainly on the fact, that the day of the meeting was altered, and consequently may have interfered with the arrangements of those intending to be present; but he seems to forget that a "second" return was called in consequence of this alteration, and therefore renders this portion of his argument valueless.

2ndly Whether the appointments are intended as compliments to deserving lodges, or in recognition of a brother's high Masonic worth, or in deference to the weight of a brother's social position or money bags; is entirely beside the question raised, viz., the inconsistency of procedure at these P.G.L. meetings.

3rdly As to the inconvenience of altering the officers after they are called out; I contend since the announcement at Basingstoke, it only implies a want of forethought in those who are responsible in arranging the list, in not having some alternative names ready, and thus provide for the absentees. There cannot be any difficulty in this course, as we are duly informed at each meeting how difficult it is to select names from amongst so many deserving brethren for the few collars at the disposal of the P.G.M.

I am, dear Sir and Bro. faithfully and fraternally yours,

CONSISTENCY.

MASONIC ELECTIONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It appears from the agenda of Grand Lodge that the Board of General Purposes "have appointed a Committee to enquire and report whether any better mode can be devised than that specified in the Book of Constitutions, which may ensure greater accuracy in conducting the elections by Grand Lodge of members for the several Boards and Committees."

Colonel Creton has proposed, for the next Quarterly Committee of the Girls' School, "That a sub-committee of five brethren be appointed to consider and report to the Quarterly Court, in January next, on the advisability of revising the laws of that Institution."

Thus, in two important directions, the necessity for the reform, which was so repeatedly urged in the columns of the Freemason during the early part of this year, has been practically admitted.

It now remains for the General Committee of the Boys' School to follow in the same direction, and, if any good is to result, the subscribers would do well, not only to appoint an independent Sub-committee, but also to add to the instructions, that a special report be made on the regulations for the election of Committees, and the alterations that are necessary to prevent irregularities.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

H. T. THOMPSON.

OLD LIST OF LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

One of your correspondents is writing for an old register of lodges. I have in my possession "a List of Regular Lodges, according to their Seniority of Constitution, by order of the Grand Master," printed for and sold by Wm. Cole, engraver and copper-plate printer, opposite Warwick-lane, in Newgate-street; it is printed in copper-plate with emblems. Unfortunately the title page is gone, but I think it was issued about 1770.

Yours fraternally,

SAMUEL JONES.

J.G. Warden of Devonshire.

LEADER ON THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

You say: "In England our G.L. lays down £5 5s. as a minimum of initiation fees." See Book of Constitutions, Ed. 1871, p. 86, art. 9. "No person shall be made a Mason for less than £3 3s., exclusive of the registering fee."

I have not noticed that it was altered in the Quarterly Communications of Grand Lodge since that edition; it may be for all that. It is a slip its way to be printed out, and we always look up to you as being almost infallible (its not every one that "lays his two pence to see for himself,") although its a great pity.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,

ROBERT OWEN.

[It is a mistake, see leader.—Ed.]

SOCIAL GATHERINGS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Brother "Omicron," whose letter appeared last week, has thrown out an invaluable suggestion, by urging that we have social meetings in which our one-sided selfishness ought to be abandoned, and to which ladies can be introduced with safety, as in other respectable and religious societies.

I am proud to find, for the Honour of the Craft, that this is a growing desire for this, and I am in correspondence with lodges now, with the view of holding first-class soirees, followed by suitable Masonic addresses, musical and other amusements, dissolving views, &c. These may be got up at one-eighth the expense to the brethren, keep them from the ruinous society of those who go to extremes, draw others into their habits, and bring Masonry into disrepute.

Another grand object may thus be accomplished, both provident and philanthropic, viz., a valuable aid to the funds of the charities, and the pleasing prospect if generally adopted throughout the various lodges, that the case of every applicant to those institutions may be easily met.

I would say to Bro. "Omicron" and others, I shall be most happy to join them to address meetings got up either in London or the provinces, with that object, and to receive communication from those interested in so desirable a reform, observing that to the honour of the brethren of the Surrey Masonic Club, at Camberwell, they have recently made a start, and are worthy of every support from brethren in the South of London, who wish to do good to Masonry.

I especially and with confidence urge the subject on the brethren of the clergy.

With best wishes,

W. DARLEY, P.M.

P.S.—Ladies will be delighted to aid the movement.

The pulpit in Hereford Cathedral will be occupied every Sunday evening during the present month by Bishops. Bishop MacDougall preached on Sunday night, and the other preachers will be the Bishops of Dunedin, Missouri, Kingston, and Iowa.

An unknown malady has attacked the crawfish in the canal and streams near Lunenburg. They are found dead in the holes serving as their retreat.

The Consecration of the Eldon Lodge, No. 1755, took place on Tuesday last, in the large room over the Pier Refreshment Hall, Portishead. It was a very full meeting, Bro. R. C. Else, V.W.D.P.G.M., was the Consecrating Officer. A full report will appear in our next.

Bro. Sir F. M. Williams Bart., M.P., died suddenly at Heanton Court, near Barnstaple, on Tuesday evening. An obituary of this popular brother appears in another column.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cheshire will be held at Nantwich on the 12th inst., under the presidency of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord de Tabley, R.W.P.G.M.

WEST INDIA ISLANDS.—Mr. F. A. Ober, who has been engaged for several years in prosecuting investigations into the ethnology and archaeology of the West India Islands, under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution, reached Martinique in the beginning of July, where he purposes to continue his labours. He has already explored the islands of Dominica, St. Vincent, Santa Lucia, Antigua, and Tobago, and has sent home a very good collection of the birds of those islands, including quite a number recently described by George N. Lawrence as new to science. He has also supplied many archaeological objects of considerable interest. A list of the birds of Dominica and St. Vincent, prepared by Mr. Laurence, is published in the "Proceedings" of the National Museum at Washington, and the notices of the remaining islands will soon appear in the same journal. Mr. Ober expects to return to the United States, in September or October next.—Nature.

In consequence of continued ill-health Mr. Knox, the senior magistrate at the Marlborough-street police-court, has retired from the bench, to which he was appointed about thirteen years ago. The Daily Telegraph mentions, as "worth record, Mr. Knox's acquaintance with the finger language." He also proved himself a good linguist, speaking French, German, and Italian. This is a subject of deep regret to all, as the services of that excellent magistrate have been very great.

Last week Bro. Sir A. Woods, Garter King at Arms, placed the insignia, and banner of King Humbert, of Italy, one of the recently created Knights of the Garter, in the choir of St. George's Chapel, Windsor. The banner, gules, a cross argent, was hung above the stalls on the Princes' side, between the flags of the Shah of Persia and the Duke of Mecklenburg. An ormolu plate, bearing the arms of the new knight, was at the same time affixed to the back of the stall, the engraved inscription being as under:—"Du très-haut, très-puissant, et très-excellent Monarque Humbert, Roi d'Italie, Chevalier du très-noble Ordre de la Jarretière. Dispensé des cérémonies d'installation par lettres patentes, datées du XVIème jour de mars, MDCCCLXXXVIII." Bro. Sir Albert Wood's and his assistants likewise removed the banner of the late King of Hanover, and re-arranged the flags in the choir.

An appalling accident took place on the Thames on Tuesday evening. The Princess Alice, one of the largest steamers of the London Steam-boat Company, with between six and seven hundred passengers on board, was on her return journey when, nearly opposite Woolwich, she was run into by a large screw steamer. The Princess Alice sank, and five hundred of her passengers are reported drowned.

MAKING A COAT IN A DAY.—Some years ago a gentleman made a bet of one thousand guineas, that he would have a coat made in the course of a single day, from the first process of shearing the sheep, to its completion by the tailor. The wager was decided at Newbury, on the 25th of June, 1811, by Mr. John Coxeter, of Greenham Mills, near that town. At five o'clock that morning, Sir John Throckmorton, Bart., presented two Southdown wether sheep to Mr. Coxeter. Accordingly the sheep were shorn, the wool spun, the yarn spooled, warped, loomed, and wove; the cloth burred, milled, rowed, dyed, dried, sheared, and pressed, and put into the hands of the tailors, by four o'clock that afternoon; and at twenty minutes past six, the coat, entirely finished, was presented by Mr. Coxeter to Sir John Throckmorton, who appeared with it before an assemblage of upward of 5000 spectators, who rent the air with their acclamations.—Keystone.

The Colony of Victoria at the Paris Exhibition has a special interest in collecting hints and suggestions for its own International Exhibition, which is to be held at Melbourne in 1880. To interest the French as well as the British public in the coming "world's fair," the Illustrated Australasian News has brought out an entertaining special number for the Paris Exhibition, containing some excellent views of Melbourne and the other principal towns of the colony, in addition to sketches of various local industries and manufactures. Amongst the engravings a large panoramic view of Melbourne and a reproduction of the successful design for the Exhibition buildings are particularly noteworthy. The accompanying letterpress gives a brief history of the Colony, its climate, institutions, and the advantages offered to colonists, besides describing the illustrations, and is in both French and English, with a few brief notes in German and Italian.

Last week the Somerset Archaeological and Natural History Society concluded its 30th annual meeting, the excursions during the week having been to the principal buildings of archaeological interest in the neighbourhood of Bruton. The society has above 500 members, and the Rev. Canon Meade has succeeded Bishop Clifford in the presidency. Among the places visited has been a small and quaint old building at Witham, near Frome, known as the guest-house. The parish church of Bruton was the subject of a paper by Mr. Carpenter, who said the edifice was one of the finest examples in the district of the style of architecture prevalent at the end of the 15th century, and for which Somerset and Dorset are famous. The works in connexion with the restoration were described and stated to have so far cost £4500. The fine old Abbey ruins, the Abbot's house, and Hugh Sexey's Hospital were visited, and a very ancient and important cartulary of Bruton Abbey was introduced to the society by Mr. John Batten, of Aldon.

We are asked to state that the New Concord Lodge of Instruction has removed to the "Jolly Farmers," Southgate-road, N. The meetings for the season will commence on Wednesday next, the 11th inst., under the Preceptorship of Bro. Cusworth, P.M.

We notice with great regret the sad accident which befel the Princess Alice, involving the loss of some 500 lives, which has cast a gloom over the country, and note that a design was proposed some few years since by Bro. W. Darley, and introduced to Mr. Plimsoll, M.P., and others in the House of Commons, which, if carried out, in the construction of such vessels as river saloon boats, would be the means of saving many lives in case of collision. It is simply this, that the saloon itself be constructed as a vessel, resting on the general hull, but so arranged that should a collision lead to the sinking of the hull, the saloon will remain afloat, and be a means of safety. In Bro. Darley's address at Camberwell, he made reference also to a correspondence with a view of rendering Her Majesty and Royal Family more secure from danger.

The Folkestone Chronicle records another instance of the uncertainty of life, and the circumstances are unusually painful. On Thursday evening week, one of the officers of Excise in the Canterbury district, who resided in Wincheap, was dressing in order to attend a meeting of the St. Augustine's Lodge of Freemasons, of which he was a member, when he suddenly expired. The coroner was made acquainted with the case, but as death was certified to have resulted from heart disease, Mr. Delasaux did not consider it necessary to hold an inquest. The remains of the deceased were interred in St. Gregory's churchyard on Sunday afternoon, and a large number of Freemasons attended the mournful ceremony, including Bro. Secra, W.M., and Bro. Cosens, S.W. The officiating minister was the Rev. R. N. Gandy. Mr. Chidwick was a widower, aged forty-six years, and was held in respect and esteem by a numerous circle of friends. He leaves no family, his children having died before him.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

DERBY.—Tyrian Lodge (No. 253).—A meeting was held on August 28th, at the Derbyshire Masonic Hall, present Bros. A. G. Taylor, W.M.; E. R. Ward, S.W.; W. C. Watson, J.W.; F. J. Robinson, Sec.; W. Naylor, Prov. G.S., Treasurer; T. Hall, Prov. J.G.W. as S.D.; T. Horsley, Jun. J.D.; J. S. Hockey, as I.G.; past Masters, T. Cox, P.P.S.G.W., and present Prov. Treasurer; and W. H. Marsden, P.P.J.G.W.; visitor Bro. J. O. Manton, Secretary, 1085, Tyler; E. Holden. The lodge was opened at 7.45 p.m. After the reading of the circular and minutes, Bro. Ward, S.W., was elected W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Naylor re-elected Treasurer. The lodge was then advanced, and Bro. Beaton raised to the rank of a M.M., in the course of which ceremony he gave involuntary evidence of its impressive character. The lodge was closed at 9 p.m., and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, when the usual toasts were duly honoured. The W.M. elect, when called upon, expressed his intention to endeavour to uphold the prestige of the lodge. The retiring Master bore testimony to the support given him by his officers and brethren generally. The acting S.D. of the evening, in his character of Prov. J.G.W., responded to the Prov. Grand Officers' toast, and the visitor made a passing allusion to the newly raised brother's display of feeling, showing what the impression caused was, in contradiction to what the impression would have been if his manner had been inattentive, and, finally, the initiate expressed himself as very anxious to adhere to the great principles of Freemasonry, and thus proved that the favours he had received had not been undeservedly bestowed. It should also be stated that there was a very interesting discussion, relative to the origin of Freemasonry, and its identity with Jewish and other customs, Bro. P. M. Hall, Bro. Davis, and Bro. Manton contributing some very interesting facts.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 3rd inst., in the Masonic Hall, Station-street. The W.M., Bro. James Black, opened the lodge, in form, at 7.30, the following officers and past officers being present:—Bros. Capt. Sewell, S.W.; Tom Bird, J.W.; W. Shilton, P.M.; R. Robinson, P.M., and Treas.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M., and Org.; W. F. Lamorby, P.M., (Freemason); T. C. Robinson, Sec., H. Pearce, I.G.; Jos. Hewson, Tyler; and fourteen or fifteen others. The minutes having been read and confirmed, Bro. H. Ritson gave evidence of his proficiency, claimed preferment, and subsequently was passed to the degree of F.C., Bros. W. Shilton and T. C. Robinson acting as Deacons. The lodge having been reduced, a ballot was taken for the admission of Mr. Thomas Carter Fearon, which being unanimous, he was initiated into Freemasonry by Bro. W. F. Lamorby, P.M., at the request of the W.M. The E.A.'s charge, was very creditably delivered by Bro. Bird, J.W., for the first time. Upon the proclamation being put, Mr. William Paisley, and Mr. Joseph Nicholson were proposed as candidates for initiation into the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry. The secretary reported that he had received the names of sixteen members of Skiddaw Lodge, who had signified their intention of attending the annual meeting of the province, at Millom, on the 17th inst. On the motion of Bro. Lamorby, seconded by the W.M., Bro. Capt. Sewell was appointed to represent the lodge on the Provincial Charity Committee. Bro. R. Bailey next rose, and, in alluding to the many pictorial embellishments of the lodge room, including H. R. H. the M. W. Grand Master, Bro. Harty's historical engraving, and Bro. Lemon, the Prov. Grand Treasurer, said there was one important omission, a portrait of their late ever-to-be-lamented and distinguished brother, the Earl of Mayo, Governor General of India, who was for some years a member of Skiddaw Lodge. It would afford him (Bro. Bailey) the greatest pleasure in supplying such an omission, and he begged the W.M. and brethren's acceptance of a framed photographic portrait of his lordship. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Bro. Bailey for his kind present, after which the lodge was closed in form.

DERBY.—Hartington Lodge (No. 185).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 4th inst., at the Masonic Hall, when there were present Bros. G. Pipes, W.M.; J. Heathcote, S.W.; W. B. Hextall, J.W.; W. Heathcote, P.P.G.D. of C., I.P.M.; W. H. Bobbit, P.P.S.G.W., Treas.; W. H. Biggs, W.M. 802, as Sec.; J. O. Manton, Sec., as J.D.; W. Butterfield, I.G. Past Masters W. H. Brindley, P.P.J.G.D., and F. Worsnop, P.P.G.P., and other brethren. The proceedings were commenced in due form at 7.40 p.m. The ballot was taken for Mr. Edwin Belfield, of Belper, and found clear. A letter from the W.M. of the Belper Lodge, in reply to formal enquiries, was previously read, saying that there was no objection to Mr. Belfield, as a resident of the district represented by the Belper Lodge, being accepted by the Hartington; also speaking in commendatory terms of the candidate. Mr. Henry Carr was initiated, the ceremony being very impressively performed. A quarterly communication from Grand Lodge was presented, and then the enquiries of the W.M. closed the labours of the evening. The hall is at present in the hands of painters and decorators, which precluded the working of the Fourth Degree, and the zeal of the brethren in the matter of the loyal toasts.

HALLIFORD.—Thames Valley Lodge (No. 1460).—The last meeting for the year of this lodge was held at the Ship Hotel, Halliford, on Saturday, 7th inst. The members present included Bros. T. Burdett Yeoman, W.M.; the Rev. W. W. Martin, P.M., Chaplain; W. Pass, P.M., Treasurer; J. G. Marsh, P.M., P.G.P., Sec.; Major the Hon. O. G. Lambert, J.D.; S. J. Tyler, I.G.; E. F. Thomas, D.C.; W. T. Howe, I.P.M., G.P. Eng.; Rev. E. Baite, P.M., P.G.C.; J. L. Jones, P.M., P.G.D.; J. H. Southwood, P.M.; J. R. Boor, P.M.; Penniston, Dunn, R. Stone, Alfred Brookman, and J. J. Jolliffe. Bros. Brookman and Jolliffe, of the Aldersgate Lodge, were unanimously elected joining members. Bro. W. T. Howe undertook to represent the lodge at the next festival of the Royal Benevolent Institution, and five guineas was voted in aid of this list, which it is hoped will be well supported by the members of this lodge. The business agenda having been disposed of, the lodge was closed till the next regular meeting in March next ensuing. The brethren sat down to an excellent dinner, as it is invariably provided by Bro. Stone, the proprietor. The absence of Bro. Colonel Peters, P.M., the first Master in this popular lodge, was much regretted through illness. The Tyler's toast brought to a close a most agreeable meeting.

HAMPTON.—Hemming Lodge (No. 1512).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held at the Lion Hotel on Monday, the 2nd inst., when there were present amongst others Bro. J. Hurst, I.P.M. acting W.M.; in the absence of Bros. John Hammond, P.G.S. of Middlesex; E. Hopwood, P.P.G.S.B. of Middlesex, P.M. and Treasurer, acting S.W.; Jessett, J.W.; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, Sec.; Raw, P.M. "Canonbury" acting I.P.M.; T. C. Walls, P.P.G.O. of Middlesex, J. D.; Davey, acting I.G.; Gilbert, P.G.T. of Middlesex, Tyler. The visitors were Bro. H. Jones, "Lebanon," and Masters, "Wolsey." The I.P.M. having initiated Mr. Thomas Hanlon, vacated the chair in favour of Bro. W. Hammond, who passed Bros. Cole, Cox, and Carpenter, and raised Bro. Patey, the ceremonies being well performed. There being no other business before the lodge it was duly closed, and the brethren partook of a collation. There were no toasts. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the third Thursday in October next.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—An emergency meeting of this summer lodge was held on the 4th inst., when the W.M., Bro. G. Tidcombe, presided, ably supported by his officers. The lodge was opened at 4.15, and the usual preliminary business disposed of. Bros. Schmidt and Tyrrell, proving themselves efficient, were entrusted to the Tyler for preparation, and on the lodge being opened in the Second Degree, were duly passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, the W.M. resuming his lodge to the First Degree, announced the ballot unanimous in favour of Mr. Robert Banting Paton, of St. Alban's, as a candidate for initiation, and that gentleman he then duly enlightened to the ancient mysteries and privileges of the First Degree. In the absence of another candidate, the W.M. having received hearty good wishes from Bro. Mapleson, J.D. 95, and from 733, the lodge closed in peace and harmony, at 6 o'clock. The brethren adjourned to the usual banquet, and under the generous management of Bro. G. H. Hall, W.S., the customary toasts were fully honoured. Bro. Paton was, as usual, equal to the duties of the chair, and the brethren separated at 9.30, with best wishes to all poor and distressed Masons.

YORK.—Eboracum Lodge (No. 1611).—On Monday the regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Queen's Hotel, present Bros. T. B. Whytehead, W.M.; J. S.

Cumberland, S.W.; James Kay as J.W.; and a number of officers and brethren. A successful ballot was taken for a candidate, and Bro. Hollon, P.M. 236, was elected a joining member. Bro. the Rev. P. T. Triment was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason, after which there was an initiation. The W.M. presented two old Masonic books to the lodge library on behalf of Bro. A. T. B. Turner, and a scarce engraving of Bro. Francis Drake, on behalf of Bro. T. W. Wilson, of the York Lodge 236. The lodge was then closed. During the evening the subscribers to the last list for the Boys' School, drew for two life subscriptions, the winners being Bro. T. Cooper, P.M., and Bro. J. Keswick.

Royal Arch.

GOSPORT.—Gosport Chapter.—(No. 903).—The regular convocation of this chapter was held at the India Arms Hotel, High Street, Gosport, on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., when there were present, Comps. E. S. Main, P.Z., Z. pro tem, G. F. Lancaster, H. R. Turney, J. pro tem, N. Page, E., C. Whitcombe, N. J. Powell, and Brown, A. Soj; Stroud, Treas.; Downing, Org.; and many other companions, including Comps. George Augustus Green, Z. 309, H. 342, &c., and Comp. Emanuel, 804. The business included the election of a joining companion, and a candidate; who was duly exalted into this supreme degree; the officers performing their several duties, with commendable zeal and attention. A resolution expressing the sympathy of the companions with their Excellent Z., Comp. William H. Sleman, in consequence of his ill-health, and in-ability to attend his duties at the chapter, was unanimously adopted. An audit Committee was appointed, and the chapter closed in the customary manner. The J. of this chapter, Comp. Wallingford, cannot attend his duties through residing at Andover. The companions adjourned to the supper room, and partook of light refreshments; the loyal and Masonic toasts peculiar to this popular degree, were duly honoured.

Mark Masonry.

ST. MARK'S LODGE (No. 1).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., at Freemasons' Tavern. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. By request of the outgoing Master, Bro. the Rev. P. M. Holden, P.M., took the chair, and after due presentation by Bro. Levander, G.R., proceeded to instal Bro. H. A. Dubois, P.M., into the chair of A., with that precision of working so well known and appreciated. The W.M., Bro. Dubois, then appointed his officers for the ensuing year: Bros. G. Newman, S.W. the Rev. P. M. Holden, J.W.; W. F. Newton, M.O.; W. Stephens, S.O.; Dr. Whiteway Wilkinson, J.O.; H. C. Levander, P.M., Treasurer; E. Shepherd, Registrar; E. H. Thellay, I.P.M., Secretary; Rev. Dr. Ph. E. Brette, P.M., Chaplain; Major W. E. Williams, S.D.; Captain R. W. Williams, J.D.; H. Green, D.C.; H. Santer, I.G.; and Gilbert, Tyler. There were also present Bros. Thomas Cubitt, P.M., P.G.P.; H. D'Almaine; and George Robinson, (visitor). A distinguished brother and member of St. Mark's Lodge, No. 1, was, by acclamation, elected a life member with all privileges, for valuable services rendered. Bro. Cubitt, P.M. as Steward for the Mark Benevolent Fund, added to his list the St. Mark's donation. The lodge was closed in due form and adjourned; the brethren dined together at Freemasons' Tavern; the W.M., Bro. H. A. Dubois, presided, and proposed the customary loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. E. H. Thellay was presented with a P.M.'s jewel, for his services as W.M. during his year of office, when the Tyler's toast brought to an end a pleasant evening.

Knights Templar.

YORK.—Ancient Ebor Preceptory (No. 101).—The regular meeting of this Preceptory was held at York, on Tuesday, E. Sir Knt. W. Valentine, E.P., presiding; there being also present E. Sir Knts. W. Lawton, T. Cooper, T. B. Whytehead, and Sir Knts. T. B. Prissick, J. S. Cumberland, P. H. Rowland, S. Simpson, J. Ward, and others. E. Sir Knt. Woodall, P.E.P., Prov. Grand Constable for N. and E. Yorkshire, was elected an honorary member, as were also the American Knights who lately visited the preceptory from Philadelphia. Comp. W. Varry, of the Zetland Chapter, and Lord Mayor of York, having been elected, was installed a Knight of the Order.

Red Cross of Constantine.

LEICESTER.—Byzantine Conclave (No. 44).—The adjourned meeting of this conclave was held at Freemasons' Hall on Wednesday, the 4th inst., and was attended by a full average number of members. A Senate of Sovereigns having been formed, Sir Kt. J. T. Thorp was installed in the chair of M.P.S., and afterwards invested his officers for the ensuing year. The V.E. elect, Sir Kt. R. Waite, was unavoidably absent. A ballot was taken for Bro. J. Rolleston, S.D. 1560, as a candidate for installation, and he was unanimously elected. The only candidate in attendance was Bro. J. H. Hale, W.M. Wentworth Lodge, No. 737, who was installed as a Kt. Companion of the Order, the ceremony being very ably conducted by the M.P.S., Sir Kt. S. S. Partridge, K.G.C., acting as Prefect. Sir Kt. G. Toller, jun., after drawing attention to the fund which had been established for the purpose of erecting a suitable memorial to the memory of the late Sir Kt. R. W. Little, G. Treas., who was an honorary member of this conclave, and had been the consecrating officer at its inauguration, proposed that the sum of £2 2s. be voted to the fund, which was seconded by Sir Kt. W. Kelly, Ins. Gen., and carried unanimously. The installation banquet subsequently concluded a very agreeable evening.

The sum of £21 was voted out of the funds of the lodge to the widow of a deceased brother of Lodge No. 296.

The alms collected in the lodge, amounting to £11, were voted to the Bruton Church Restoration Fund.

The banquet was held in the National school-room, and attended by upwards of 120 brethren, under the presidency of the Earl of Carnarvon, who was obliged, however, to leave before any of the toasts were proposed, his place being well and ably filled by Bro. R. C. Else, the V.W.D.P.G.M.

Obituary.

THE LATE BROTHER SIR F. M. WILLIAMS.
We have been requested to publish the following letter.
Truro, Sept. 6th, 1878.

LODGE OF FORTITUDE No. 131.

V. D. B.,

In consequence of the lamented death of the R.W. Brother Sir Frederick M. Williams Bart., M.P., (P.G.W.) Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Cornwall, &c., &c., the business announced for Tuesday next, the 15th inst., will not be transacted, but the lodge will assemble at 7 p.m. to "confirm the minutes," and to pass a vote of condolence with Lady Williams and family on their very sad bereavement.

The brethren are requested to wear "three black crape rosettes" on their aprons, as the lodge will be placed in "Masonic mourning" for three months, to mark the loss thus sustained by the Craft, and in evidence of the great respect in which their distinguished brother was held by all the members.

Fraternally yours,

WILLIAM JAMES HUGAN, W.M. 13.

WILLIAM PORTER, Sec., 131.

BRO. W. COWLING, P.M.

On Wednesday morning, the 4th inst., there was a large muster of the Masonic body at the York Cemetery, on the occasion of the funeral of the late Bro. Wm. Cowling, P.M., who died at Scarborough on the previous Friday. Bro. Cowling had, for some years, occupied a prominent position amongst York Masons, and had laboured hard and successfully in the interests of the York Lodge, No. 236. He was initiated in 1850, by Bro. R. W. Hollon, then W.M. of the lodge, and was elected W.M. in 1855. For a number of years he served the lodge as Treasurer, and was re-elected W.M. in the centenary year, (1877.) He was a P.M. of the York Mark Lodge, (time immemorial), and P.Z. of the Zetland Chapter, 236, and was a Past P. Senior G. Warden for North and East Yorkshire. The pall was borne by five Past Masters and the Inner Guard of the lodge. Amongst those present in addition to the officers of the lodge were: Bros. J. March, P.M. 236; W. Lawton, P.M. 236; Rev. J. E. M. Young, P.M. 236; T. Cooper, P.M. 236 and 1611; R. Davison, P.M. 236; J. Todd, P.M. 236; G. Balmford, P.M. 236; F. Rawling, P.M. 236; T. B. Whythead, W.M. 1611, and others.

FUNERAL OF VICTIMS OF THE THAMES COLLISION.

On Wednesday afternoon the mortal remains of Bro. C. Jardine, late of Manor-road, New Cross, were deposited in Nunhead Cemetery, in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends and brethren. Amongst those who were present, members of deceased's lodge, the St. George's (140), of which he was a P.M., and A.S. of the Chapter of the same number, we observed Bro. Noak, P.M. and Treasurer, and P.Z., also P.M. 1320; Tattershall, P.M., Secretary, and P.Z.; Wallace, P.M.; C. Bell, S.W.; Toughborough, S.W.; Dennant, S.D.; G. Brown, J.D.; Sparks, I.G.; Jordan, Organist; Webb; Pooley; Kendall; Dr. Downings, sen.; Dr. Downings, jun.; Batchelor; Norfolk; and T. C. King. From other lodges we noticed Bros. Mugeridge, P.Z., and Past Grand Standard Bearer, and I.P.M. of the Mugeridge Lodge; R. Trill, P.M. 1320, and P.Z. 79; H. Roberts, P.M., and M.E.Z. 79; C. Nash, P.M. 79; Newton, Chapter 79; Perridge, P.M. 79; Pakes, P.M. 871, and Chapter 140; Morson, W.M. 1320; J. Peckham, P.M. 79, and P.Z. 140; J. J. West, P.M. 548; F. Bell 1320, and Chapter 140; A. Budds and Anderson, 1320; and W. Fieldson, J.D. 548. The funeral cortege was received at the gates of the cemetery by brethren formed in line and bare headed, and afterwards at the church, from thence to the grave, where they took a last look at the coffin, which they bestrewn with sprigs of acacia. There were few dry eyes and many were the sorrowful expressions of regret at the loss of one so much respected. The deceased leaves a widow and nine children, some of whom are eligible for the Masonic schools. Efforts will be made to secure the advantages of these valuable institutions for the orphans, and it is hoped that when the appeal is made it will be responded to with vigour and success. On the following day another victim of the terrible disaster that has filled, and is still exciting the minds of the people, was buried in the same cemetery. Bro. F. Bonney, steward on board of the Princess Alice, went down with her, and his remains were interred, as stated in the presence of numerous friends and brethren. He leaves a wife and five children, one a baby only a few days old. He was very much respected, especially in the neighbourhood of Greenwich, where his loss is deeply deplored.—West Kent Times.

SCOTLAND.

We have been requested to publish the following:—
Dear Sir and Brother,—

We have the pleasure of informing you that the requisition to Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, Bart., to continue to hold the office of Grand Master for another term, is being numerously and influentially signed.

There is reason to believe that some brethren, on receiving the requisition issued for Mr. Inglis, of Torsonce, concluded that it had been ascertained that Sir Michael had indicated an intention of retiring from the office at this time. Such, however, is not the fact. On the contrary, we are enabled to state that, not from personal motives, but for the good of the cause—if it be the wish of Grand Lodge—he is prepared to hold office for another term. Those who, under the erroneous impression that our present Grand Master intended retiring, and have thereby been led to support the requisition to Mr. Inglis, will, of course, not be expected to do so now that the exact state of the matter is known.

Grand Lodge has been passing through a crisis which threatened the very existence of Masonry in Scotland. Much has been accomplished towards placing its affairs on a satisfactory footing, but the work is not yet completed; and we humbly submit that the present is not the time for making a change in the occupant of the throne. We would, therefore, respectfully, but earnestly, urge upon all to use every available means to secure the re-election of our present Grand Master.

In order that a correct expression of their opinions may be obtained on the important matters that will come before Grand Lodge at next annual election of Office-bears, it is also respectfully recommended that all lodges, not represented by their actual Masters and Wardens, should communicate with their proxies and instruct them how to vote; and, in the event of their refusing to comply with the instructions sent them, notice should be sent to Grand Secretary, on or before 4th October, withdrawing their proxies, whereby lodges can, in terms of Grand Lodge laws, chapter 20, section 14, be represented by their actual Masters and Wardens.

The meeting called for Wednesday next, the 11th inst., at 4 o'clock, will be held in the 'Trades' Hall, Glassford Street, Glasgow, instead of at 30, Hope Street, as originally intended.
JOHN MORGAN,
Sec. of Committee.

Resolutions to be submitted at General Meeting, 11th September, 1878.

I.—That this Meeting has learned, with regret, the means that were taken in many instances to obtain votes at the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge on 5th August last, by third parties paying travelling charges and admission fees for members to attend and vote on the occasion: That this is contrary to the spirit of Masonry, and the practice which has hitherto been acted on in conducting the business of Grand Lodge.

II.—That at said Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge brethren voted whose names were not on the Qualified Voters' Roll made up on first Monday of April last, and who were therefore not qualified to vote as provided for by Chapter 17, Section 15, of Grand Lodge Laws; and this meeting therefore protests that the whole proceedings of Grand Lodge at said Quarterly Communication were null, and are not binding on the brethren.

III.—That the present proxy system is unsatisfactory; inasmuch as it fails to secure a due representation of the opinions of Lodges in the Provinces; and steps ought to be immediately taken by Grand Lodge for improving the same.

IV.—That this meeting deprecates in the strongest possible terms the proceedings adopted for promoting the candidature of Mr. Henry Inglis as Grand Master, whereby members have been in many instances erroneously led to suppose that the present Grand Master intended to retire from the office.

V.—That having regard to the deplorable condition into which the financial affairs of Grand Lodge had fallen, and the energetic measures recently taken to place them in a satisfactory state under the guidance of the present M.W. Grand Master, Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, Bart., and the fact that for this purpose much still remains to be done, this meeting has learned with satisfaction that he is willing to continue his valuable services for another term; and being satisfied that his re-election to the Throne would promote the best interests of Masonry in Scotland, this meeting pledges itself to use every exertion to secure his appointment.

VI.—That Committees be appointed for Edinburgh, and also for each Province, with power to add to their number for the purpose of promoting the election of Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, Bart., and carrying out the foregoing resolutions.

VII.—That said resolutions be printed, and copies sent to each R.W.M. and Wardens, with a request that they be submitted for the early consideration of their lodges, and with a hope that they will see fit to give them their support at Grand Lodge meeting to be held on 4th November next, or instruct their proxies to do so.

A special meeting of St. John's Lodge, Stow, No. 216, was held on Saturday evening, 31st ult., to consider a circular issued on 20th August, calling a meeting at Glasgow on the 11th September. Found that the thirty-two subscribers to said circular consist, with the exception of three brethren connected with neighbouring lodges, of brethren belonging to the province of Glasgow. And therefore this further proceeding by the Glasgow brethren is only part and parcel of the self-seeking evinced, when, contrary to all rule, the same brethren with others left Grand Lodge on the 5th August. Resolved therefore, this lodge declines to countenance, as far as in them lies, such irregular and uncalled-for procedure on the part of any section of the Masonic body.

CONSECRATION OF A MASONIC LODGE AT PORTISHEAD.

The ceremony of consecrating the Eldon Lodge (No. 1755) took place on Tuesday, September 3rd, in the large room over the Pier Refreshment Hall, at Portishead, the new lodge of the order really being in connection with the Royal Hotel.

There was a very full meeting of the brethren from Somerset and the adjoining province of Bristol, and the ceremony was ably performed in the most solemn and impressive manner, by the V.W. Bro. B. C. Else, D.P.G.M., and the officers of the P.G.L. of Somerset, among the latter being Bros. the Rev. F. Seale, Chaplain; E. Turner Payne, Treasurer; F. Brown, S.W.; A. Page, J.W.; F. R. Payne, Secretary; H. C. Smith, Registrar; W. H. Batten, and W. W. Westcott, D.C.s.; J. Walker, Deacon; and the following Past Provincial Grand Officers:—Dr. Bryant, P.P.J.W.; Captain Peel Floyd, P.P.G.R.; R. M. Worlock, P.G.S. (Bristol); W. Barge, P.P.G.J.W. (Bristol); Sydney Lewis, P.E.G.S.B.; and W. H. Dill, P.G.Pst.

The musical portion of the ceremony was most ably conducted by Bros. J. R. Thebridge, F. Worlock, John Gard, W. R. Maby, and A. G. Hayman.

The consecrating officer, having constituted the lodge, installed Bro. Charles E. Daniel W.M., and he appointed Bro. T. W. Hardwicke S.W.; and Bro. Walter Minns J.W.

The proceedings, which were of the most interesting and impressive character, terminated soon afterwards.

The lodge having been closed, a splendid banquet was subsequently spread in the same room by Mr. Boulter, of the Royal Hotel, and the excellent catering gave the utmost satisfaction. Bro. Charles E. Daniel, W.M., presided, and of the following gentlemen who were present at the ceremony nearly all sat down:—Bros. R. C. Else, D.P.G.M. Somerset; Robert M. Worlock, P.G.S. Bristol; Sidney Lewis, P.G.S. Somerset; W. Barge, P.M. 187, P.P.G.J.W. Bristol; J. Blizard, P.M. 261, P.P.G.S.W. Taunton; F. J. Brown, P.M. 41, P.G.S.W. Somerset; W. Hodges, L.P.M. 1296; J. A. Page, P.M. and Sec. 1296; J. Roberts, Bristol, 187; Alfred G. Hayman, S.W. 973, Frome; F. Seale, P.G.C., 135, Somerset; S. Bryant, P.P.S.G.W. Somerset; W. C. Jarrett, P.M. 68, and P.P.G.J.D. Bristol; H. Walker, P.M. 53, P.G.S.D. Bath; W. F. Collins, I.G. 53, Bath; F. H. Worlock, J.W. 1296, I.G. 1388; R. C. Stephens, 610, Bristol; T. T. Hallam, P.P.G.J.W. Bristol; E. Payne, P.G.D.; W. H. Dill, P.M. 906, P.G.A.P. Somerset; C. Dando, Bristol; W. W. Westcott, P.M. 814, P.G.A.D.C.; Robert Peel Floyd, P.M. 41, P.P.G.R. Somerset; John B. Halford, P.M. 137 and 103; E. Floor, 610, 906, and 326, Bristol; J. R. Farler, J.D. 68, Bristol; E. G. Grubb, E. E. Sohler, 610, Bristol; Robert Scott, 68, P.G.S.W. Bristol; William Buzzard, P.P.G.S.D. Bristol; Robert Compton, P.P.G.S.D., 68, Bristol; Herbert J. Gough, P.P.G.P., 326, Bristol; W. C. Bamfield, 326, Bristol; Thomas Bamfield, 326, Bristol; J. Stoute, 610, Bristol; A. G. Salter, 53, Bath; G. Paterson, 610, Bristol; Thomas Bowden, I.G. 103, Bristol; G. Perrin, Sec. 68, Bristol; G. F. Forster, 329; R. Wikon, 135, Bridgwater; H. W. Batten, 291, Highbridge; James Lloyd, 1363, Tyndal; John Hill, 68, Bristol; William Munro, P.M., P.P.D.C., Bristol, 326; T. W. Hardwick, Bristol, 103; J. R. Thebridge, 68 and 1755; William Rice, 419; C. S. Daniel, 291 and 1404; Charles C. Woodford, 1199; George Phillips, 1199; H. R. Smith, G. P. R. 1117; J. E. Jones, 68; T. Rowles, 68; W. J. Cullimore, A.D.C. 103; F. R. Pridaux, P.M. 291, P.P.G.D.C.; Francis Trull, W.M. 68; Charles Fisher, 103, S.W. 68; W. R. Mabey, S.W., 68; J. Courtice, S.D. 68, and others.

After dinner the usual Masonic toasts were given, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed.

The brethren assembled in the ante-room and walked in procession to the lodge-room, where the Consecrating Officer took the chair, and appointed the Wardens pro tem.

The lodge was then opened in the Three Degrees.

The Consecrating Officer addressed the brethren on the nature of the meeting, and called upon the P.G. Chaplain to give the opening prayer.

The P.G. Secretary then addressed the Consecrating Officer, who replied and gave directions.

The brethren of the new lodge were then arranged in order by the P.G. Directors of Ceremonies, and the P.G. Secretary read the petition and warrant.

The Consecrating Officer then inquired of the brethren if they approved of the officers named in the petition and warrant, and they signified their approval in Masonic form.

An oration by the P.G. Chaplain on the nature and principles of the Institution followed, after which the anthem, "Behold! how pleasant and how good," was sung. Dedication prayer (first portion.) Omnes—Chant, "So mote it be." Sanctus—"Glory be to Thee, O Lord."

All the brethren turned to the east, when the Consecrating Officer gave the invocation. Omnes—Chant, "So mote it be." Scripture portions followed, and then the anthem, "Praise God in His holiness," was sung.

The lodge board was then uncovered, and the Consecrating Officer and two P.M.s. carried the elements of consecration three times round the lodge (solemn music during the procession), halting in the east at each perambulation. On arriving at the east, the Consecrating Officer strewed corn, the emblem of plenty. Musical response—"Glory be to God on high." The 1st P.M. in the east poured wine, the emblem of joy and happiness. Musical response—"Glory be to God on high." The 2nd P.M. in the east poured oil, the emblem of unity. Musical response—"Glory be to God on high."

The Chaplain took the census three times round the lodge (solemn music during his progress), halting in the east. The Consecrating Officer then dedicated the lodge. Dedication prayer—(second portion.) Omnes—Chant, "So mote it be." Anthem—Haydn, "The Spacious Firmament on High." The Consecrating Officer then constituted the lodge. Omnes—Chant, "So mote it be."

The National Anthem having been sung, the lodge was resumed in the Second Degree, and the installation of the W.M. and appointment of officers took place.

MASONIC BALL AT NATAL.

The above event, which has been eagerly looked forward to for some time past—the first Masonic ball given last year having been so decided a success—came off on Friday evening in the Theatre Royal, which had been specially floored, prepared, and decorated for the purpose.

Punctually at 9 o'clock the members of the chapter and lodge took up their places, and shortly after the first instalments of guests arrived. They were received by the M.W.S. of the chapter, Bro. John Roseveare, and the W.M., Bro. R. I. Finnemore. On the announcement being made that His Excellency the Lieut. Governor and suite were at the entrance, the M.W.S. and the W.M. went forward to meet him, and escorted him through the Arch of Steel, composed of the swords of the Knights of the chapter, who were drawn up in a double row, to the Master's chair, which was placed at the east end of the room.

The walls were decorated with a variety of interesting and appropriate emblems, which the uninitiated vainly endeavoured to get explained to them. Among them was a portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the M.W.G.M. of the Craft, and the Patron of the Supreme Council under which the chapter works. The new flooring gave general satisfaction.

The lighting of the room was tastefully accomplished by a number of wax candle chandeliers. The stage was set apart as a drawing room for those who were not actively engaged in dancing, and the effect of the scenery and the shrubs, with the bayonets and swords glistening between them, was much admired. A spacious room was set apart as a supper room, besides the card room, and the other rooms necessary for the accommodation of the guests. The united bands of "The Buffs" and the Both performed in the gallery; and it is needless to say that the music was of the best character.

Among the guests present we noticed Col. Pearson, Commandant of the Forces, and a large number of the officers, Major Hon. C. B. H. Mitchell, Colonial Secretary, Hon. M. H. Galloway, Attorney General, Mr. Justice Cadiz Capt. A. H. Hime, Colonial Engineer, Hon. J. W. Shepstone, Mr. F. Seymour, Haden, Private Secretary, Mr. Manning, M.L.C., Mr. John Robinson, M.L.C., and many other of the leading residents of the city, as well as several who had come from other parts of the colony.

Most of the Orders of Freemasonry were represented with their proper insignia and jewels, and the costume of a Knight Templar in the cloak and dress of the Order, was a conspicuous feature. The Rose Croix was the most attractive among the different dresses. Mingled with the bright uniform of the military, and the brilliant and tasteful dresses of the ladies, the Masonic insignia had an extremely pretty effect.

The arrangements for refreshments, &c., were very good, and the supper provided by Mrs. Shepherd was excellent, and ample justice was done to it.

Dancing was kept up vigorously until after four o'clock a.m., when the assembly broke up with many expressions of congratulation to the M.W.S. and W.M. on the success of the ball, and the pleasantness of the evening.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of the Subscribers to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys met last Saturday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. W. Hyde Pullen, P.G.S.B., presided.

The other brethren present were Bros. H. Browne, G. J. Raw, Donald M. Dewar, J. W. M. Doell, W. H. Perryman, Joyce Murray, Rev. Dr. Morris, C. J. Rushworth, W. Mann, F. Adlard, John Boyd, F. Binckes, (Secretary), and H. Massey (Freemason).

The salary of the third Assistant Master was raised from £65 to £75, and one pupil being allowed to be educated out of the school in consequence of ill-health, the usual order was made for his school fees to be paid.

An outfit was granted to an ex-pupil who has obtained a situation.

Bro. Binckes reported the death of Bro. Jesse Turner, a member of the Audit Committee. Bro. Binckes also read a letter from Bro. John Symonds, resigning his trusteeship of the Institution on account of failing health. Bro. Binckes informed the Committee that this vacancy would have to be filled at the Quarterly Court in October.

A letter was read from the mother of Harry Newbould, the third boy on the list of candidates for the next election, which would be his sixth application for admission, withdrawing her son's candidature, as he had fortunately secured a presentation to Christ's Hospital.

Bro. Joyce Murray asked Bro. Binckes whether he had received information as to the state of Bro. Benj. Head's health; and Bro. Binckes, in answer, said that on his return to town he found a complimentary card returning thanks for kind enquiries, which was an intimation that Bro. Head had recovered.

The Committee then adjourned.

Mr. Balfour, with the nautical assessors, will conduct the wreck inquiry into the loss of the Princess Alice. It will open on the 24th inst., that being the earliest date at which, it is judged, the inquiry can commence.

THE LOSS OF THE PRINCESS ALICE.

Upwards of 600 bodies have been recovered from this ill-fated vessel, since the late dreadful catastrophe. The loss is simply appalling and the account most afflicting.

The following letter was, on Saturday morning, received by the Lord Mayor:—

Marlborough House, Pall-mall, S.W., Sept. 6.

My Lord,—I am directed by the Prince and Princess of Wales to enclose your lordship a cheque for 50 guineas in aid of the fund now being raised under your auspices for the relief of the sufferers from the late terrible calamity in the Thames, caused by the running-down of the Princess Alice steamer on the evening of the 3rd inst. I am at the same time desired to make known, through you and the medium of the Press, the feelings of sorrow their Royal Highnesses experienced on hearing of this dreadful accident, and on learning that so many of their fellow-creatures had been suddenly hurried into eternity. Their Royal Highnesses feel the deepest sympathy for the relatives of those who were drowned on this melancholy occasion, and condole with them most sincerely in the grief and distress they must suffer from the loss they have sustained under such terrible circumstances.—I have the honour to be, my lord, your lordship's most obedient servant,

D. M. PROBYN, Lieut-General,
Comptroller and Treasurer to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

A letter was, on Saturday morning, received by the Lord Mayor, from the Comédie Française, of which the following is a translation, enclosing a cheque for £50:—

My Lord,—A disaster has fallen upon a portion of the population of London. A subscription list has been opened through your lordship in aid of the necessitous families who have been made the victims of the catastrophe. The Sociétaires of the Comédie Française, preserving an appreciative recollection of the good help which was rendered to them in 1871, hasten to bring their tribute to this subscription. I am directed by them to remit their offering directly into your lordship's hands. I beg you, therefore, in their name, to receive the annexed subscription. I am, my lord, your most obedient servant,

EMILE PERRIN, Administrator.

The names of MM. Coquelin, Fibrey, Lannay, and several other actors follow.

A fund for the poor sufferers has been very properly opened at the Mansion House, and already amounts to a considerable amount.

£164 2s. 11d. was deposited in small sums in the box outside the Mansion House last Wednesday, in the Daily Chronicle, referred to in last week's Freemason.

Bro. HENRY REED, stationer, of 57, Oxford-street, who fortunately escaped, writes the following graphic account

"My wife and I had been down at Gravesend spending the day: we did not go down by the Princess Alice, and our return by her was quite accidental. We were during the voyage on the upper fore deck, where there were other first-class passengers, men, women, and children, but the deck was not crowded. The other portions of the ship seemed to me to be very much crowded, chiefly by pleasure seekers. I never before saw so many children on board a Thames steamer, and the proportion of women on board seemed to me very large, but throughout the passage from Gravesend there was perfect order. I did not see one person under the influence of liquor on board. Up to within a few moments of the collision, a band was playing, and its last tune was 'Nancy Lee.' All went well and quietly until about 25 minutes to eight o'clock, when it was anything but dark. You might not have been able to read small print, but you would distinctly see a picture or a photograph. We were near North Woolwich, and had seen the powder magazine. The captain was standing on the paddle-box, looking ahead, and giving directions to the hands. I am perfectly certain we were slackening speed, and going very slowly. Some of the people around us were straining their eyes, and looking ahead in the same direction as the captain. My wife and I turned to look, as the others did. We were then standing at the extreme point of the deck. Looking up the Thames, I saw a large vessel, a screw steamer, several lengths ahead, and coming directly towards us. It appeared to me that our vessel had then altogether stopped, and was standing still in the water. Everyone around us was anxious, and inquired one from the other what was the matter, but two or three of the men belonging to the Princess Alice, who were on the deck, looking out, told us not to fear, for we would go by all right, and that there was no danger. My wife expressed a fear that the great vessel towering so much above us would come into collision. She was some lengths off, but coming nearer in a direct line. I am quite sure she was coming straight on. I looked, but could see no lights on the large vessel, nor could I see any men in the fore part of her facing towards us. I jumped up on to the seat, still looking towards the vessel approaching us, but one of the hands called upon me to come down, by the captain's orders. I observed that the captain of the Princess Alice was still on the paddle-box, and that our lights were hung out. As the large vessel came nearer to us, while, I believe, we were standing still, I distinctly heard the captain shouting to her in a loud voice, 'Where are you coming to?' I came down from the seat as ordered, when I found my wife and I were the only passengers on the upper fore deck. The large vessel was then close upon us. My wife, who had not lost her self-possession, said 'Do not leave me,' and I took her hands to keep her by me. I looked up at the vessel close upon us, but could see no person in her fore part nor hear any cries from her, but her great height above us would probably prevent our doing so. The collision must have occurred at that moment, for, although there was no crash we felt the Princess Alice tremble under us—a kind of strong shivering motion. We turned, looking aft, seeking for means of safety, and I observed the captain was no longer on the paddle-box. I never saw him again. Screaming had then begun, and I saw a lot of people,—quite a thick and excited crowd—rush, as I believe, across the gangway. I fancied there might have been a ladder there, for I saw several people, women with children and men with women, drop over the side, but whether on to a ladder or not I do not know; but, perceiving that there was a fierce rushing of steam up the side at that point, I feared approaching it, lest we might be scalded to death. Without any apparent shock, we found ourselves—my wife and I still holding together—in the water, and rose again. We sank again, I believe drawn down by the suction of the Princess Alice. When we rose my wife was black in the face and nearly insensible. I could not swim, and could scarcely hold my wife up. She told me to keep quiet and to hold up. A plank was close by us, and, going past, I seized it, and holding on to it, it carried us right behind the vessel which had come into collision with us. The Princess Alice must then have been behind. All around were people struggling in the water, screaming and calling to the men whom we could then see looking over the bulwarks of the other vessel. My wife and I also shouted, and ropes, I believe several, were thrown over to us by the men. I distinctly saw three ropes thrown, and I believe there were more. I grasped one of the ropes, my wife still holding on to me; some four or five others also took hold of the same rope, but I could not see how many took hold of the other ropes as they were thrown behind us. The vessel moved on, and, holding by the ropes, we floated down the river along with her, one of those clinging, a woman, screaming all the while. I believe she had lost a child. We must have floated in this way for more than half an hour, going down the river with the ebb. We were shouting to the men above, and could hear them shouting, but could not hear what they said. Many vessels passed us at a distance, and we could see a good many boats moving about us, but none of them approached us. We could see the lights of Greenwich when a small boat hailed us and took us on board. It was a two-oared boat with three men in it. We were taken on board with all those hanging to our rope. Some of those clinging to the other rope must also have been taken on board, as there were twelve or thirteen of us altogether. I do not know the names of our rescuers, but from the fact that they were hailed by a passing vessel, I believe they belonged to her. They rowed us to Greenwich, where we landed. My wife and I, after procuring refreshment, took train to London, arriving home a few minutes before eleven. The men in the boat told us we were picked up two miles from the scene of the collision. We neither of us lost consciousness during the whole time."

THE SOUTHAMPTON MASONIC BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

The above association has just issued its annual report. Though it marks the third year of the resuscitation of the association, it may be taken as showing its real financial position, this being the first report which has shown in hand its capitalised amount. The association was formed half a century or more ago, for the temporary relief of local distressed brethren, and had been allowed to fall into desuetude; in fact, it had well nigh been forgotten until the Masterhip of Bro. Morris Miles of the Royal Gloucester Lodge. His investigations showed a right in the fund on the part of the Masters of two lodges, the Royal Gloucester and the Southampton. But two of the trustees, however, were living, and they were octogenarians. After considerable delay a mode of reviving the Association was arrived at, by admitting the Master of the third lodge in the town to equal rights with the other lodges on payment of a nominal sum. The capital was to be invested, and the income only, with guinea subscriptions of members, to be applied yearly in the relief of local distress, the Association being administered by a committee of Past Masters and life members subscribing five guineas, under a president, vice-president, and other officers.

The deed of settlement had scarcely been executed, when one and then the second trustee died, but the money had fortunately been secured, and amounting to upwards of £1000 has now been invested in government securities. During the past year £20 has been awarded to the widow of a deceased brother. The number of annual subscribers is reported to have been less than during the two previous years. The list of life members has, however, been augmented, and the committee express their great gratification in receiving the support now accorded to the Association by the lodges to which it belongs. The Royal Gloucester Lodge, on the 8th of last month, granted a donation of £5 5s and elected their Worshipful Master (Wor. Bro. C. John Phillips) as a life member; and since the closing of the annual accounts, the Lodge of Peace and Harmony has also granted a similar donation, and conferred the compliment of life membership upon their Wor. Master (Wor. Bro. W. H. Martin). This leads the committee to hope that this the only local Masonic Charity may annually receive from the Southampton Lodges some portion of that liberal support so generously and freely given to so many of the other Benevolent Institutions connected with our Order.

The work of tunnelling the St. Gothard Railway is being pushed on with considerble rapidity. A telegram from Geneva states that on Goeschene side alone 1000 men are employed inside the tunnel and 400 outside. Three hundred waggon loads of earth are excavated every day, and in the daily blastings 600lb. of dynamite are used. Equal energy is being shown on the Italian side.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cheshire was held on Thursday last, the 12th inst., at the Town Hall, Nantwich. A full report of the proceedings will appear in next week's Freemason.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Craft Lodge of Cumberland and Westmorland was held at Millom yesterday, (Friday), under the banner of Whitwell Lodge, No. 1590. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

We regret to learn that at the monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, on Saturday, Bro. Binckes, the secretary, officially announced the death of Bro. Jesse Turner, C.C., a member of the Audit Committee, and read a letter from Bro. John Symonds, resigning his trusteeship of the institution on account of failing health. These two vacancies will have to be filled up at the next quarterly court on October 14th.

Lord Holland's statue was unveiled on Monday at Newbury by our Pro. Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, in the presence of a large concourse, and the Somerset Freemasons. Our distinguished brother delivered two able addresses.

We are informed by Bro. S. B. Ellis, of Sheffield, that the Steamship Devonia arrived at New York on the 1st. September, and that Bros. Meyer, Sutter, and other American brethren aboard, were well. Curiously enough the notices of the party and the international gathering in the American Masonic papers are very meagre and scanty.

FROM HARVEST TO HARVEST.—In 12 months from the 1st. of September, 1877, to 31st of August, 1878, the imports of wheat and wheat flour into the United Kingdom amounted to no less than 62,255,125 cwt., the equivalent of 14,808,996 qrs.; of Indian corn, 40,746,135 cwt., or 9,474,432 qrs.; of barley, 14,201,373 cwt., or 3,976,384 qrs.; of oats, 12,286,354 cwt., or 4,467,765 qrs. Adding also peas and beans, the total importation of corn in the 12 months reached 134,430,348 cwt., or 33,858,689 qrs., this last number being substantially the same as the estimated number of the population of the United Kingdom. In neither of the two preceding twelve months did the imports of corn reach 119 million cwt.

Tenders have been received for alterations and additions to servants' office, at Chilton Park, Kent, for Bro. A. Akers Douglas. M. G. Friend, architect. Quantities by Mr. T. Potter.—Clement & Wallis, £3,080; Bishop, £2,748; Vaughan, (accepted) £2,679; Bridge, £2,647; Fowler, £2,556.—Builder.

The "Celebrity at Home" in next week's World, will be Bro. Erasmus Wilson, G.D.; in Henrietta Street.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY.—On Monday night at 12 o'clock the task of counting the money collected at the street stations in the boxes of this fund was concluded. For this work 10 gentlemen employed in London banking houses volunteered their services, all of whom were last night at their posts, and busily engaged in arranging the £260 in copper found in the boxes. As far as is at present known, this year's collection has exceeded that of any previous year. The amount collected by street boxes in 1874 was £258, in 1875 £489, in 1876 £825, in 1877 £777, while the amount taken to the Bank exceeded £1000. The largest amount deposited in any single box was £26 11s. 9d. found in that stationed at the Peabody statue, of which £6 10s. was gold; and the smallest amount any box contained was 7s. 7½d. This year the E.C. district contributed the largest amount, the smallest being that collected in the Northern district. One of the collectors, the lady appointed to the station in Monument-yard, was lost in the Princess Alice, as were also two of the Fund's boxes. The collections on the London Steamboat Company's boats have been very good, that on Citizen H, commanded by Captain Cuff, amounting to £5 11s. 3d., of which £3 15s. 9s. was coppers. It was much feared that, owing to the badness of trade, and the many and urgent calls on the charity of the benevolent, this year's collection would not be very satisfactory, but, as already shown, that fear has not, so far, been justified.

The Postmaster-General has issued the following notice: "Money-orders payable at Cyprus can now be obtained at any money-order office in the United Kingdom. The rates of commission are uniform with those charged for money-orders issued on Gibraltar and Malta. For sums not exceeding £2, 9d.; above £2 and not exceeding £5, 1s. 6d.; above £5 and not exceeding £7, 2s. 3d.; above £7 and not exceeding £10, 3s. No money-order can be drawn for a sum exceeding £10.

Dr. Nobiling, the second man who fired at the Emperor of Germany, and who wounded his Majesty, died on Tuesday afternoon. The state of his health had become worse during the last few days. We understand he died without making any confession.

"Tickets, sir," said a collector at a railway terminus in the city to a gentleman who, having been a season-ticket holder for some time, believed his face was so well known that there was no need for him to show his ticket. "My face is my ticket," replied the gentleman, a little annoyed. "Indeed!" said the collector, rolling back his wristband and displaying a most powerful fist. "Well, my orders are to punch all tickets passing on to this platform."—City Press.

DRAMATIC NOTES, unavoidably crowded out, will appear in our next.

The funeral of Bro. Sir Fredk. Martin Williams took place on Saturday last, and was attended by upwards of 2000 people.

The following notice has been issued by command of the Postmaster-General: "Newspaper wrappers bearing penny postage stamps will shortly be issued for sale to the public. They may be purchased singly or in any number according to the undermentioned scale of prices: One for 1½d., two for 2½d., three for 3½d., four for 4½d., five for 5½d., six for 6½d., 7 for 7½d., eight for 8½d., and so on. The public can also obtain these wrappers uncut in quarter reams, containing 120 sheets of fourteen wrappers on each sheet, by making special application for them at the post-office at which they wish to obtain them. The price for the quarter ream is £7. 8s."

OPERATION ON A MONKEY.—On Saturday an interesting operation was performed on a monkey at the Alexandria Palace. The creature has been suffering for some months from toothache, and an abscess had formed on the right side of the lower jaw, from which it was evident that the poor brute was suffering a great deal of pain. It was determined to endeavour to afford him relief, and Mr. Frederic S. Mosely, of 448, Strand, kindly undertook the necessary operation, providing at the same time for the administration of nitrous oxide gas. The monkey was taken out of his cage, not without loud expressions of objection on the part of his fellows, and having been placed in a sack with his head out, a piece of wood was forced into his mouth, which was then examined. The effect on the monkey, however, of the handling was the abscess broke, and the animal, no doubt, experiencing relief from this, appeared to be more patient, and it was not found needful to administer the anæsthetic. It was found that the tooth had completely decayed away, save a very small fragment, which was readily removed. The tooth next behind was also found to be carious, and Mr. Mosely readily extracted it. After manipulating the jaw so as to drive out as much as possible from the abscess, the monkey was released from his confinement in the bag and returned to the cage where his companions welcomed him, one in particular coming down to condole with and comfort him after his severe trial.

Alderman Sir F. Wyatt Truscott, who is a native of Truro, and who was invited to contest the seat at the last vacancy, will be the Conservative candidate for the position which has become vacant by the death of Bro. Sir F. M. Williams.

While driving out in a waggonette, on Sunday last, in the neighbourhood of Hurstmonceaux Castle, Bro. Sir John Bennett, with his three grandchildren (sons of the late Mr. Cockerell), were thrown from the vehicle, the horses of which had taken fright and started down a shelving bank. Sir John, who alighted on his head on the grass, suffered no further inconvenience, we are happy to learn, than a severe shaking. The carriage was turned upside down, but neither the children, nor a friend of Sir John's who rode on the box, sustained any injury.

Bro. James Terry, G.J.W. Herts, etc., will perform the Ceremonies of Consecration and Installation in the Southwark Lodge of Instruction No. 879, at the Southwark Park Tavern, Jamaica Level, Bermondsey, on Wednesday week, the 25th of September. Brethren are invited to attend in Masonic clothing at 6-45 p.m.

The Post-office authorities give notice that a mail will be made up on the 16th inst., and be despatched by the steam ship Charles Townsend Hook, J. White's line of steamers, between London, Havre, Cape Hayti, Gonaives, St. Marc, Port-au-Prince, Jeremie, Aux Cayes, Jacmel, Kingston, and Montego Bay (Jamaica). London and country letters should be posted on Saturday evening.

The Great Naval Review in fireworks at the Crystal Palace will be repeated this day (Saturday).

The Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise arrived at Balmoral Castle, on Tuesday afternoon, on a visit to the Queen. It is believed that the visit is a final one before the Marquis and Princess set sail for Canada.

The Glasgow Herald says that the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold have been duly constituted honorary members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, on the nomination of the Grand Master Mason, Sir Michael R. Shaw Stewart, Bart.

The Whitehall Review states that H. R. H. Prince Albert Victor of Wales is to remain for some time longer on board the Britannia training ship at Dartmouth, and is, it is said, to proceed ultimately to a Military Academy, most probably Woolwich; the Prince of Wales, in his intercourse with the officers of the Army, having been brought to appreciate the excellence of the course of study prescribed for those who qualify for the scientific branches. His Royal Highness will enter the army at the age of seventeen, and is not unlikely to emulate the example of his soldier-uncle the Duke of Connaught, and undertake at first the most subordinate duties, advancing by gentle strides to the higher positions to which his birth gives him a right to aspire. Prince George of Wales is to adopt the naval profession, of which it is proposed he should become a working member.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Fear Not.—Though cured by circumstances disadvantageous to health, these remedies, properly applied, will cut short fevers, influenza, inflammation, diphtheria, and a host of other complaints always lurking about to seize on the weak, forlorn, or unwary. The superiority of Holloway's medicines over others for subduing disease has been so widely and fully proved, that it is only necessary to ask the afflicted to give them a trial; and if the instructions folded round them be followed, no disappointment will ever ensue, nor dangerous consequences result. In hoarseness and ulcerated sore throat, the Ointment should frequently be rubbed on the neck and upper part of the chest: it will arrest the increasing inflammation, allay disquietude, and gradually cure.—[ADVT.]

Review.

THE POET'S MAGAZINE. Edited by LEONARD LLOYD. E. W. Allen, Stationers' Court and 11, Ave Maria Lane.

We have received the September number of this useful and well-conducted magazine. In the August number the Editor promised improvements in the new volume, in the shape of extended size and improved matter, and we must say that this month's number seems to have amply fulfilled his promises. Amongst the poetical contributions we think that "King Alfred," by Percy Russell, bids fair to take rank amongst legendary poetry. "The Path of Gold," by Thos. W. Lee Smith, is continued, and there is an excellent piece of versification by David R. Williamson, entitled "Ode to Imagination," and inscribed, by permission, to Alfred Tennyson. As "pièces de resistance," the Editor contributes another instalment of a forcibly written story, "Nothing venture, nothing have," and George B. Burgin continues "Silas Dome." Whilst the substantial is thus cared for, trifles are by no means wanting, and in "Break-fast Time" we have a very enjoyable specimen of "Vers-de-Société."

This monthly serial has now reached its 5th volume and has all the appearance of assured and well earned prosperity. We opened it, and perused it, and laid it down, with much of pleasurable feelings. It will repay the study alike of the studious and sentimental as even the prosy, much more the poetical we think the idea a right excellent one, poetry being itself, (despite Lady Glenora), a very good thing for us all. We are glad to think that the "Poet's Magazine" has been so well supported and appreciated. Space alone forbids more lengthened notice of the very excellent papers collected and presented to us this month by Mr. Leonard Lloyd. We hope to recur to it on some future occasion.

LA CHAÎNE D'UNION, Paris. Edited by Bro. HUBERT.

The September number of this excellent magazine is most interesting. We are glad to see that Bro. Hubert quite agrees with us, and realizes our real good will towards French Masonry, as well as our honest expression of opinion. We wish that the Chaîne d'Union was more read in England.

BULLETTINO UFFICIALE DEL GRANDE ORIENTE NATIONALE EGIZIANO.

We have received this third volume of Reports for the 3rd year of the Masonic Jurisdiction. It deserves perusal by those who read Italian.

MASONIC MONTHLY. J. W. Husky, publisher, San Francisco.

This is No. 5 of a new candidate for Masonic support. We wish it all success. It is well edited and deserves Masonic support.

NOTES ABOUT WHISKEY. Sutton, Sharpe, and Co. 145, Queen Victoria Street.

There are a great many people in this world who like whiskey, and a writer in one of our magazines declared a few years ago that it was the National Saint of Scotland, and that on a return from a long absence abroad he found that Saint Whiskey had still countless devotees at home.

This is a work which professes to tell us all about whiskey, how it is made, and how you may judge between good and bad, true and "doctored." No doubt it will have its importance for many of our readers, who don't object to "whiskey toddy," or what some people would term a "night-cap." But further than this we cannot go, and deponent does not presume to make any further "deliverance" on the subject. Whether society in general is benefited by such information it may be a matter of doubt and question, and so let us remember the old proverb, "the last said the soonest mended."

The book is well printed and admirably illustrated, and bristles with statistics, and points out in lucid detail the startling mysteries of whiskey.

Mr. Ho, one of the secretaries attached to the Chinese Legation, is engaged in translating Shakespeare into Chinese. The same gentleman has also made considerable progress in a translation of Blackstone's "Commentaries" into the same language.—Lithuanian.

A rather startling archaeological discovery is reported from Galicia. About three weeks ago a peasant woman, while working in the fields in the neighbourhood of Michalkov on the Dniester, dug up several golden objects, including goblets, a staff, brooches with dragons' heads and a crown. The well-known historical investigator, Dr. Praglovski, and other archaeologists of Lemberg have come to the conclusion that these ornaments belong to the regalia of the elder Cyrus, who fell in a campaign against the Massagetae, about 529 B.C. In his report upon these objects, Dr. Praglovski declares that any one who examines the details and style of the ornaments, and then compares the place where they were found with the reports of Greek historians concerning Cyrus's expedition against the Scythians, will at once agree with his conclusion. The intrinsic value of the objects is set down at 100,000 florins at least, or about £10,000.

Mr. Hormuzd Rassam will leave England again on the 20th to resume work at Nineveh, where excavations have been conducted during his absence by his nephew. It is probable that the Kouyunjik Library will be thoroughly explored by March next. Some 400 fresh tablets are on their way to the British Museum.—Academy.

Lord and Lady Sutherland and Hon. Miss Harbord have arrived in town from paying a series of visits in Scotland.

LETTERS FROM OUR IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

No. III.—INEFFECTIVE OFFICERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Next to an incompetent W.M. I know of no more sorry sight in a lodge than ineffective officers. It is very sad to see how our beautiful ritual is marred, how the lodge work is mutilated, by slovenly delivery, or mere parrot-like repetition. I am one of those who think that no brother should be promoted to office until he has shown his proficiency in the lodge of Instruction. In these days of proper performance of allotted duties, and when make-shifts and substitutes are alike at a discount, it is too bad to go on promoting officers, either through a tedious routine, or through the interest of a clique, or the wish of some dominant member, or the modest application for office of the brother himself. Merit and proficiency should be the only test we recognize in our lodges for promotion and preferment, and then that deadweight of incapables which so paralyzes a lodge would be unheard of and unknown. How pleasant is the sight of that lodge in which all seek to work in uniform accuracy, and with evident carefulness and serious interest. How much does the ceremonies often commend the moral teaching of Masonry? How depressing on the other hand is that lodge, and I fear I might name one or two, where the officers are prompted, and where the ceremonial is abbreviated, and where all is done hastily, confusedly, unconcernedly, because—yes, because the banquet "might get cold." Oh! ye gods and little fishes! what a humiliating climax for Masonic professions, Masonic theory, and Masonic ceremonies. I, for one, always, in my own mind, "spot" that lodge as in bad "form" where the work is basely or stumbingly performed, and when Bro. Jiggins whispers to you "sotto voce" "I am sure you will like the cook and the wine."

We have outlived, happily, the era of what some one has called, perhaps severely, the "pothouse performances" of Masonry. We have witnessed happily a taste for Masonic æsthetics setting in among our lodges. Lodges are now arranged artistically "more Latumorum," not as I can remember some, with no ornament, no symbols, no pretence at decoration, and with the tables of the "best room" of the inn to serve for Secretary and Treasurer, while the W.M., just elevated above his fellows, sat in a comfortable coffee-room arm chair. We have left all this far behind us never to return to us, and why we should see still amongst us the lingering barbarities of pre-historic times, which ineffective officers represent, I, for one, do not understand.

Let us set our faces sternly against interest and cliques in such matters, the unwise system of a mistaken routine, or the admission of claims which are no claims at all. The appointment of officers is the prerogative purely of the Master pro tem, but as even the most powerful autocracy must depend to a great extent on "public opinion" in some form, so he is a wise ruler in Freemasonry who takes counsel with his P.M.'s, as to the officers he appoints.

I confess I do not, for one, like that system, (though something may be said for it), which places all the brethren in turn in office by seniority, because I think it creates in a lodge a spirit of subservience, and weakens the responsibility of the W.M. I should prefer such a system as this, that the W.M. should select, with the advice of the P.M.'s, the absolutely most efficient officers, year by year, making it, however, a sine qua non that each should be a life governor of one of the charities. Does this seem too hard a qualification? I fancy it would do our lodges a great deal of good.

I am Dear Sir and Brother,
YOUR OWN IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

THE CUTLERS' FEAST AT SHEFFIELD

One noticeable feature in this great gathering was the large number of Masons present. Bro. W. H. Britain, the well-known P.P.G. Officer of W. Yorkshire, and Master Cutler, was supported right and left by his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, Colonel Stanley, Right Hon. J. A. Roebuck, Q.C., M.P., P.C., Mr. W. S. Stanhope, M.P., Mr. L. R. Starkey, M.P., Sir H. Jackson, Q.C., M.P., Lord Byron, Admiral Douglas, Rev. Dr. Gatty, Bro. Sir John Brown, the Mayors of Leeds, Sheffield, Hull, Halifax, Pontefract, Doncaster, Nottingham, Burslem, Barnsley, and Rotherham, the Master of the Cutlers' Company, London, Captain D. Galton, the Master of the Clothworkers' Company.

Amongst the numerous other guests we are enabled to enumerate the following members of the Fraternity, viz., Bros. W. H. Gill, Ald. Tezzer, Dr. de Bartolomé, H. Harrison, Rev. Canon Blakeney, W. Bragge, J. Haywood, J. U. Askham, P. H. Unwin, T. F. Cocker, R. Bellitt, J. E. Bingham, Edgar Allen, R. Arnison, W. D. Allen, H. H. Andrew, C. J. Bannister, J. Binney, C. E. Brittain, J. Bromley, J. B. Curtis, Rev. E. B. Chalmers, T. Collinson, C. C. Carr, G. A. Cubley, E. Drury, T. B. Edwards, S. B. Ellis, Dr. Griffiths, H. J. Grinett, E. M. Gibbs, J. T. Gillatt, W. Howson, T. Hampton, Rev. A. W. Hamilton-Gell, A. Hay, G. W. Hawksley, S. Hayes, Dr. Hime, G. Howson, C. Harvey, W. Jarvis, W. Longden, I. F. Littlewood, H. W. Loftouse, J. Mountain, J. F. Moss, H. Pawson, J. Robertshaw, J. C. Shaw, H. Smith, W. Short, Septimus Short, J. Spencer, H. Stebbins, S. L. Swann, S. Smith, S. Suckley, W. C. Taylor, T. T. Trimmell, W. F. Tasker, J. W. Woodall, G. E. Webster, G. H. Waterfall, J. D. Weaver, J. H. Wood.

The Mansion House fund for the relief of the Thames disaster amounted on Thursday evening to upwards of £11,000. We are informed that, in response to an appeal made to the members of the Bank and the Corn Exchange, a sum of £500 has been subscribed, and that this amount is expected to be increased.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

A notable improvement in watches is reported from Chaux de Fonds. By a peculiar process the figures on the dial are rendered luminous, so that if exposed once during the day to the sunlight they remain phosphorescent, and visible throughout the night.

Readers of Sartor Resartus interested in the Rue d'Enfer will henceforth have to inquire for the Rue Denfert Rochereau, it having just been rechristened in honour of the late defender of Belfort. There is much criticism on the kind of pun involved in the change, and other alterations on the same principle, such as the Rue de Say, for the Rue Desaix, are ironically suggested.

In consequence of the annexation of Alsace and Lorraine, the pisciculture establishment of Huningen, which had been founded by the French Government in the year 1852, passed into the hands of the German Government, which, since 1871, has bestowed the greatest attention on the establishment, and spared no cost to make it as efficient as possible. Recent statistical reports state that the establishment, while under German control has sent away no less than 23,500,000 ova of various species of fish, such as trout, salmon, carp, roach, &c. Some two million young salmon have been placed in the Rhine, and a similar number of other useful fish into the rivers of Upper Alsacia. The result has been that fish are now plentiful in those waters, that the rents paid for fisheries have considerably risen, that salmon can now be bought at about 6d. per lb. in that neighbourhood, and that the time seems to have returned when fish was in those districts a cheap food for the people.—Nature.

According to the last report of the Japanese Postmaster-General, the postal correspondence of the islands during the year 1877 included 22,053,430 ordinary and 606,354 registered letters, 6,764,272 postcards, and 7,372,536 newspapers. The increase in the number of newspapers over the number for 1876 is 2,323,141, or about 46 per cent., while, as compared with 1875, it amounts to 100 per cent.

The Melbourne Argus reports a "rush" for gold in the Dunolly district, Victoria. A Chinaman, working at a place in that district, found, on the 23rd of June, a nugget weighing 400 oz. But the reports of the Government mining surveyors and registrars of the colony for the quarter ending the 31st of March show a continued decline in the quantity of gold raised. The quarter's yield is computed at 168,428 oz., or nearly 14,000 oz. below the corresponding quarter of last year.

In the last number of Peterman's Geographische Mittheilungen, the number of inhabitants of the globe is estimated at 1,439,145,300. The number of horses existing (China and Japan not included) is said to be 51,000,000.

The awful catastrophe on the river on Tuesday night, by which, in a few minutes, 500 or 600 persons were drowned within sight of all the appliances by which life is usually saved, impresses us more than ever with the importance of introducing swimming into the ordinary education of children of both sexes. The growing love of excursions and adventures by land and sea—in themselves so healthy and commendable—suggests the wisdom of this course. We have but to visit some of the coast towns or seaports where bathing and swimming are cultivated almost as fine arts—conspicuously, perhaps, South Shields, at the mouth of the Tyne—to see how, in such accidents as those of Tuesday, persons might be made comparatively independent of all extraneous aid, and accomplish their own deliverance.—Lawet.

At Duisburg has been erected a memorial of Gerhard Kremer, as the author of "Mercator's Projection."

The four panels designed by Mr. Boehm to decorate the pedestal of the equestrian statue presented by Sir Albert Sassoon to commemorate the visit of the Prince of Wales to Bombay, have been shipped on board the "Avondale." The first represents the reception of the Prince by the native chiefs; the second, a procession of native women bearing offerings in the shape of flowers and fruits; the third, the Royal Arms; and the fourth has the following inscription: "Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, K.G.C., C.S.I., in commemoration of the visit of his Royal Highness to India, 1875-76. Sir Albert Sassoon presented this statue to his fellow-townsmen of the loyal city of Bombay." The panels were submitted to the Prince, and received his hearty approval.

Lieutenant Kitchener has been appointed by the Foreign Office to superintend the survey of the island of Cyprus.—Athenæum.

Professor Struve, director of the Pulkova Observatory, is leaving Russia for a visit to Western Europe, for the purpose of giving directions for the construction of a new great refractor, for the Pulkova Observatory. The old refractor, which some time ago was one of the best in the world, is now behind those of Washington, Chicago, and Galeshead (Mr. Newall's Observatory), and the Pulkova Observatory, according to the will of its founder, the Emperor Nicholas, should be maintained superior to all other observatories in that direction.—Nature.

The Birmingham Post states that the Emperor of Brazil has lately sent a silver vase, as a tribute of regard, to Mr. Thomas Allsop, the author of Recollections of Samuel Taylor Coleridge. The vase, which came from Rio Janeiro to England through the Brazilian Minister, bears the following inscription:—To Thomas Allsop, from Pedro III. In recognition of interesting documents and letters, throwing light on the life of S. T. Coleridge, as the only surviving friend of the philosopher and poet, whom I loved living and honour dead. When the Emperor was last in England, he paid a visit to Coleridge's tomb at Highgate one morning as early as 8 o'clock.

THE FREEMASON,

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1878.

IN MEMORIAM.

Freemasonry has suffered greatly by the loss of two distinguished members of the Fraternity, if of somewhat divergent careers, yet equally valuable to the Craft, of which they were ever loyal and attached brethren. In Sir F. M. Williams, M.P., the Province of Cornwall has lost a "shining light," one who by practice as well as profession vindicated the usefulness and importance of Freemasonry. He will be a greatly "missed man" by our Cornish brethren, as well as by English brethren, and his many services to Masonry will long be gratefully remembered, while his kindly presence and warm heart will long linger in the warm sympathies of those who knew his worth, and who participated in his labours. In Bro. P.M. Cowling of the York Lodge, No. 236, Freemasonry and his lodge lose the services of a most hard-working, zealous and devoted Mason. Always ready for Masonic duty, he was always kindly and conciliating, friendly and agreeable, and no one more strenuously sought to maintain the "good report" of Masonry in the old cathedral city, just as no one more zealously strove to uphold the prestige of the York Lodge. The writer of this brief and inadequate notice had occasion, like Bro. Hughan and others, to invoke his kindly assistance in opening out the valuable "Arcana" of the York Lodge, and to no one does Masonic archæology owe more in this country than to our late Bro. Cowling, who showed on all such occasions a largeness of heart, and a breadth of Masonic goodwill,—greatly commended and to be recommended to all who are placed in a similar position. In him Freemasonry has lost a most hard working member, the York Lodge a most zealous and distinguished officer.

LIST OF CANDIDATES FOR THE GIRLS' SCHOOL ELECTION, OCTOBER, 1878.

There are 29 candidates and 19 vacancies to be filled up in October. Of these 8 are London and 21 are provincial cases. We must always, however, bear in mind, that such epithets are often only relatively used; and as candidates are sometimes partly provincial and partly metropolitan, so candidates, though provincial, are often made London cases practically, and vice versa. Let us take the London cases—The first is Gertrude Alice Jay, (No. 1), her sixth application. Her father was initiated in 1869, and died in Masonry in 1871. She has two sisters in the School, and has received 500 votes. The next is Ethel Frances Alison, No. 14, her first application, (we may remark that 24 of the 27 are first applications.) She has also two sisters in the Institution, and her father was initiated in 1855, subscribed 13½ years, and died out of Masonry in 1877, five years subsequently to his last subscription. He was a Life Governor of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. Ethel Stone, No. 15, has a brother in the Boys' School. Her father has subscribed for 32½ years, is afflicted with spasmodic asthma and heart disease, and is a Life Governor of the Boys' School. We consider this a very strong case, and are glad that the London Masonic Charity Association has taken it up as their case No. 1. The next is Agnes Deelly, No. 20. Her father was initiated in 1870, and died in 1873. The next is Florence E. M. Palmer, No. 22. Her father was initiated in 1873, and died in 1876, subscribing until death. She is one of five children dependent on the mother, and has a strong case and claim. Eva H. Hart, No. 23, is the next. Her father was initiated in 1866, subscribed 5½ years, and died in 1878, being nearly seven years out of Masonry. Juliet S. H. Priestly, No. 25, her father was initiated in 1869, died in 1875, subscribing to death. The next and last London case is Emma Eliza Williams, No. 29. Her father was initiated in 1869, subscribed for 3½ years, and then became Treasurer. During this time he qualified as Life Governor in the Boys' School. The London Masonic Charity Association taking this fact into consideration, as well as his present affliction, wisely, in our opinion, make it their second case for October, 1878, though carefully noting Florence Palmer's case, and other interesting cases on the London list. The provinces have 21 cases. Of these 3 cases are from W. Yorkshire; Monmouthshire has 2 cases; Yorkshire, (Eastern Division), has 1; Bristol has 1, Hants 1, Essex 1, Somersetshire 1, Cambridgeshire 1, Calcutta 2, Durham 1, Wiltshire 1, Warwickshire 1, Kent 1, Gloucestershire 1, South Wales (W.D.) 1, Lancashire (W.) 1, Devonshire 1, Cheshire 1. Meta Bell Brasier, No. 1, (Kent), seems to have strong claims, as her father subscribed for 26 years, was a Prov. Grand Officer of Kent. She has lost both her parents, and this is her last chance. Her father was a Life Governor of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. She has properly received large promises of support. May Eliza Mott, No. 18, (S. Wales, W.D.) Her father was initiated in 1838, subscribed for 15 years, and died in 1874—25 years out of Masonry. This, we suppose, can be explained. Her father was a Life Governor of the Girls' School. Rosamond F. A. Laybourne, No. 26 (Monmouthshire.) Her father subscribed 15 years—initiated in 1857 and died in 1872—subscribed till death. Ellen Mary Busher is the daughter of Bro. Busher, Past G.S.B. of England. He has been Steward to all the charities. Those who remember his former services to Masonry will take note of this case. Two of his children are being educated in our Institutions. This is a West Lancashire case. Marian Selina Cooper, No. 2 (from Bristol.) Her father subscribed 10½ years, being initiated in 1856, and dying in 1866, but 10 years out of Masonry. So, again, Mabel Jane Simpson, No. 5. Her father was initiated in 1859, subscribed 10½ years, is still living, though out of Masonry since 1860. We must always remember in these cases, absence from Masonry may proceed from inability to pay the lodge subscription, and that, therefore, as regards non-payment of dues it may be their "misfortune and not their fault." There is also Edith Corall Williams, No. 28, (from Monmouthshire), whose father was initiated in 1864, subscribed 10½ years until death. Of the remainder, West Yorkshire has three good cases, Nos. 7, 10, and 11, all subscribing till death, the highest 8½ years, the lowest 7½. Gloucestershire has a case, No. 17, 7½ years' subscription, until death; Devonshire, No. 2, 5 years; Durham, No. 9, 3½ years; and Essex, No. 4, 2½ years; all subscribing until death. Calcutta has a case, No. 8, of 5½ years' subscription, but 10 years out of Masonry, which can probably be explained. Cambridgeshire has a case, No. 6, of 8 years' subscription, and 3 years out of Masonry. Wiltshire has a case, No. 12, of 7½ years' subscription, but 6 years out of Masonry; and Cheshire has a case of 5½ years' subscription and 6 years out of Masonry. We have thus run through the list, and if by any chance we have made a little mistake or omission, we must ask our kindly readers to be good enough to point out our "errata."

THE WEST LANCASHIRE MASONIC EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION.

We alluded to the report of this successful Institution in our last Freemason, and are glad to call notice again to day. It is very satisfactory and very flourishing. We have never concealed our opinion, that these Institutions, good as they go, might yet be made more useful, and we cannot see why they should not become subsidiary institutions, all preparatory for our great central educational institutions in the metropolis. There would be no difficulty in having an uniform system of education and an uniform set of educational works. If when elected by the subscribers as competing candidates, they are passed in by subsequent examination by merit, we can conceive no more thorough or practical realization of the true object of our Masonic Charities, the true end of education. In this way, perhaps, Bro. Clabon's idea as to Masonic scholarships might be carried out for the benefit of the whole Craft.

THE GRAND LODGE OF QUEBEC AND THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

We have been favoured with the official publication of the Grand Lodge of Quebec with reference to the matters in dispute, between itself and the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and though we have carefully perused it, we see no reason to change the opinion which we have previously expressed on the subject. It seems to us to be incontestable, that, (1st) the Grand Lodge of Quebec is entirely wrong in the position it has assumed with respect to the rights of lodges consecrated previously to its own constitution, and we feel sure, that on calm consideration, the American Grand Lodges, and even the Grand Lodge of Canada, will endorse the views we have expressed on the subject. Nothing the Grand Lodge of Quebec can say or do can affect the rights and position of the English and Scotch lodges, constituted prior to its establishment, with a full understanding from the Grand Lodge of Canada to boot, that their connexion with these mother Grand Lodges was duly recognized. Indeed, we feel that we must say it, the grounds put forth by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, are neither very reasonable, nor very respectful to the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland, nor even courteous in tone and substance. The Grand Lodge of Quebec is in itself a "swarm" from the Grand Lodge of Canada, and strictly speaking, (if it was worth while), a good deal might be said about its regularity and its actual position, and how far such a proceeding savours or does not savour of Masonic schism. But we prefer not to raise these questions, though they may be raised, the more so as we are not prepared to say, without some just cause or good reason, any thing more about them. For it is not all swarms, however, from a lawful Grand Lodge, which constitute rightful Masonic authority. No doubt, on the "fait accompli" view, much may be alleged on behalf of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, but in our opinion, this is just one of these cases where the "least said is the soonest mended." We must also adhere to our original view, that the action of the Scottish Grand Lodge is, to say the least of it, premature. Admitting its contention, that it for "good and sufficient causes thereto moving" refuses to acknowledge the legality of the claim of the Grand Lodge of Quebec to be a Grand Lodge, and taking note of the alleged surrender of jurisdiction by the Grand Lodge of Canada, we see that it claims by a "Reviver" of authority, to "occupy" now "unoccupied territory," and on the ground, moreover, of "prior occupation." As we pointed out before, admitting that the Scottish Grand Lodge is right in its contention, as far as we are aware, the Grand Lodge of Canada has made no "waiver" of territorial jurisdiction, and until it does so, the Grand Lodge of Scotland is clearly, in our opinion, in all deference, acting "ultra vires," in now re-claiming territorial jurisdiction. When the Grand Lodge of Canada declares the territory unoccupied territory, then, and only then, can the Grand Lodge of Scotland properly step in, as we understand the law, (if there be such), on the subject. We admit it might be said that by the cession of jurisdiction the Grand Lodge of Canada has "waived its territorial authority," and that, therefore, the Grand Lodge of Scotland may resume its rights of "prior occupation." But it may be that the Grand Lodge of Canada has not officially done so, and has simply treated the matter as we do, as a "fait accompli," upon which it passes, for the sake of peace, no opinion. Until, then, such waiver of jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Canada is officially made, it is quite clear that the Grand Lodge of Scotland has no "locus standi" in the territory now claimed by the Grand Lodge of Quebec. If the Grand Lodge of Canada has, however, made an official surrender of jurisdiction, and if the Grand Lodge of Scotland cannot and does not recognize the Grand Lodge of Quebec, (and to say the truth the first stone in the contest seems to have been thrown by the Grand Lodge of Quebec), then, no doubt, the Grand Lodge of Scotland is justified in claiming and exercising its right of "prior occupation." But at present, until the evidence is a little more clear on the points we have called attention to, we must continue to think its action—in granting new warrants and a Prov. Grand Master's Deputation in Canada, both premature and very debatable proceedings.

THE CATASTROPHE ON THE THAMES.

Woolwich is still in the greatest excitement, as day by day reveals even still more clearly the grim horrors of this appalling catastrophe. Few that have occurred in our time, have ever so roused the sympathies, or awakened the attention of all thinking persons. Without prejudicing the verdict of the coroner's jury, without assigning blame on so far exparte information, we yet may say this, that a very unsatisfactory state of things exists as to the control and surveillance of the river. It would seem as if, first of all, there was great carelessness in the management of the traffic especially, and that there are not more accidents daily is rather a matter of luck than any thing else. Why should not the Thames police be extended, so as to watch and patrol in boats, the river to its mouth? We cannot see why, as the matter of expense is not to be set against the saving of human lives, endangered by human recklessness or lost by human neglect. Surely it is a very unpleasant thought, amidst all our civilization, that a steamer freighted with 900 human beings, coming home peacefully from a day's innocent holiday, is to be run down, and 900 people precipitated in the water, helpless women, little children, going down in a death struggle of despair, without the slightest possibility of help, without the power of rescuing one shrieking mortal from an awful death, or from a premature grave. Surely if the river was under effective control, with police stations and lifeboats at intervals, the risks of such possible calamities would be greatly reduced, the chances of saving several hundred precious beings struggling for life in the water be materially increased. It also seems to us that these large steamers, with their crowded decks, go down the river ill provided with boats. It is assumed, of course,—as one of the conditions of the expedition, that no accident is likely to occur. But have the directors a right thus to defy the contingencies of morality, to discount the inevitable accidents of each returning day? We venture to think not, and we trust to hear that all these large river boats will be at once provided with a sufficient number of boats. Our sympathies must be greatly moved in respect of this sad destruction of useful and valuable human life. Two of our brethren have perished, and another, by the good providence of T.G.A.O.T.U., has been rescued from a watery grave to tell his thrilling story in the columns of the Daily Chronicle. We feel deeply for those who are gone; we feel even still more for those who survive!

REPORT OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE FOR 1877.

The report of Sir E. Y. W. Henderson for 1877 is a very interesting one, and deserves to be noted and commented on by the public press, inasmuch as it gives us a great amount of most valuable information, and suggests many serious considerations, both from the statistics it embodies and the facts it details. Sir Edmund Henderson informs us that the total strength of the force on the 31st of December, 1877, was 10,446, an increase over the preceding year of 176. The total number of persons apprehended during the year was 77,982, of whom 2571 were convicted on committal for trial, and 863 acquitted; 54,034 were summarily convicted, and 20,514 discharged by the magistrates. The year was marked by the prevalence for a time of robberies of various kinds, partly accounted for, Sir E. Henderson thinks, by the depression of trade, and partly the result of the depredations committed by a limited number of thieves, who confined their operations mostly to houses left empty and unattended. The number of persons arrested for being drunk and disorderly, or simply drunk, was almost exactly the same as in the previous year. On the other hand, the arrests for serious offences was considerably in excess. The total number of indictable offences committed in 1877 was 15,409, against 13,990 in the preceding year, and the arrests increased from 4234 to 4534, and the convictions from 2476 to 2571. The conduct of the police during the year had been very good. Only 167 were dismissed and 136 compelled to resign, being the smallest number of serious disciplinary charges during the last ten years. The number of voluntary resignations also decreased to 263, and the total removals out of an authorised strength of 10,446 were 960, the smallest percentage for many years. A readjustment during the year of the Detective Department was rendered necessary by the conviction of three of the principal officers for complicity in an extensive case of turf fraud, and in accordance with the recommendations of a commission appointed by the Home Secretary, the Detective Department has been entirely reorganised, and has been formed into one division, in charge of the Director of Criminal Investigations. The following facts seem also to us to deserve special notice in the press:—Out of 1253 cases of burglary, housebreaking, and breaking into shops and warehouses, no less than 839 were houses empty or with no person in charge; 203 of these cases occurred in the Islington division. Special arrangements were made to meet this outbreak of crime, and many of the principal offenders have been arrested and convicted. Twenty-five thousand three hundred and fifty-nine doors and windows were found by the police open or insecurely fastened at night. The assaults on the police decreased from 2941 in 1876 to 2894 in 1877. Some of these were of a very serious character, and some have resulted in permanently disabling the officers even from contributing to their own support. The traffic of the streets continues year by year to increase, and requires increasing care and temper to control. The number of persons killed in the streets decreased from 130 in 1876 to 120 in 1877; the number of persons injured increased from 2740 to 2836. The largest proportion of these accidents occurred in Holborn, Stepney, Islington, Camberwell, and Highbury. Of the 120 persons killed no less than 70 were killed by vans, drays, and heavy carts. Only nine were killed by cabs, nineteen by light carts, twelve by omnibuses, and five by broughams, one by a traction engine, and one by a fire engine. During the year 8483 children and 3216 adults were reported to the police as lost or missing, of these 5441 children and 729 adults were restored to their friends by the police; 3017 children and 2274 adults were found by friends or returned home; two children and sixty adults committed suicide, and twenty-three children and 153 adults have not been found. Thirty-nine dead bodies of persons unknown were photographed during the year, but have not been identified. The police have continued to enforce the Acts relating to dogs. The number seized during the year 1877, was 24,537, of which 21,530 were sent to the Dog's Home, 2905 restored to owners, and 102 otherwise disposed of. The total number of dogs seized by the police since the Act came into force (1867) is 117,423. No case of hydrophobia has occurred either among these dogs or among the police, who are often severely bitten by them. Under the head of public carriages, so important to the great public, we are told that during the year ended the 31st of December, 1877, licences were issued as under:—For four-wheeled hackney carriages, 3994; for two-wheeled hackney carriages, 4535; for stage carriages, 1480;—total for vehicles, 10,009. For hackney drivers, 10,760; for stage drivers, 2724; for conductors, 3901;—total drivers and conductors, 17,385. This shows an increase over last year of 209 vehicles, and of drivers and conductors 631, and since 1870 of 14,000 vehicles, and of drivers and conductors 3302. The numbers of public carriages and horses reported unfit for public use during the year 1877 are as follows:—Public carriages, 3078; horses, 440. As regards lost property we are informed that during the last eight years 99,119 articles have been found in public carriages and deposited at the Lost Property Office:—In 1870, 3258; 1871, 7709; 1872, 12,950; 1873, 14,136; 1874, 14,076; 1875, 15,584; 1876, 15,680; 1877, 15,726. Many valuable articles were deposited during the past year, and satisfactory awards paid to the drivers. Happily for society a wise supervision is now exercised, (not a day too soon), over common lodging houses, and Sir E. Y. W. Henderson reminds us there are 1232 registered houses now open, accommodating 23,705 lodgers, showing an increase of 30 registered houses on the previous year. Two thousand one hundred and twenty-five houses are under careful supervision to prevent sub-letting within the meaning of the Act, at some of which night visits are occasionally made with good results, as the following cases will show. At a house at Penge, in a room on the ground floor, were found two men and two women occupying one and the same bed, and in a corner of the same room two children were also found. Another case at Bermondsey, where three men were found in beds made up on the landing, the height of the ceiling being 4ft. 6in., sloping to 1ft. 6in., and in a room in the same house were found the keeper and his wife, and an adult female lodger. In both cases the keepers were summoned and convicted, and heavy fines inflicted. The following may be taken as an illustration of the beneficial results of supervision over common lodging-houses—viz., at a house in Baden-place, Bermondsey, an entire family, consisting of four persons, was removed suffering from small-pox, while two registered common lodging-houses, one on either side, escaped infection. Surely, this is a very striking report, convincing all who read it, what a large amount of important information underlies the otherwise dry and technical report of the Chief Commissioner of the Police. The single fact that 23 children and 153 adults were permanently missing in 1877, and that 39 unidentified bodies have been interred, shews us how that in this great Babel of ours, the ravages of disease, the juggernauts of sin, the mysteries of crime, all go on, so to say, hand in hand, and side by side, and should serve to remind us, how much we owe, humanly speaking, as citizens of this mighty metropolis, for our ease, comfort, and safety, to the ceaseless energies and the watchful control of an efficient and well-disciplined police.

BRO. FINDEL ON FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As I am very anxious of not being misunderstood by my English brethren, I beg leave to say a few words on your last article, "The Bauhütte."

I must concede that I have not a very high opinion of the high grades in Masonry, and that I differ from you on some questions of importance, but all that has never hindered me from having truly fraternal feelings towards yourself and English Freemasonry, the good features of which I have always in full measure acknowledged.

If I am impelled by my Masonic convictions to criticise this or that fact, book or teaching, I do it because I should wish to forward all that is good and useful for the Craft at large, and to fight against all that I think not in accordance with our principles, or for the true benefit of the fraternity. But be assured, my dear brother, that I am always inclined to uphold fraternal relations between all Grand Lodges, and to promote the spiritual union of the Craft in all its branches.

It is not at all a feeling of intolerance if I criticise particular words, deeds, or opinions, and I am entirely free from prejudice against English Masons. Notwithstanding my different opinions concerning high degrees, or the vote against the Grand Orient of France, or other questions, I never forget that the Grand Lodge of England is the source of Masonry; that I have found fifty fraternal receptions when I have been amongst English Masons, and that some of your highly venerated lodges have nominated me honorary member.

As you were obliged, from your standpoint of viewing Masonic officers, to write against me sometimes, it may seem that I am in some way hostile towards English Masonry, which is not at all the case.

I find more intolerance in the vote of the Grand Lodge of England against the Grand Orient of France, (which vote is a separating element, and like a permanent institution), than in some occasional critical remarks of the Bauhütte. I agree with you when you say, "Let us labour together in friendly sympathy for the spread of true and ancient and universal Craft Masonry in the world."

Believe me, dear Brother, ever your well-wisher, and most fraternally yours,
J. G. FINDEL.

INVASION OF MASONIC JURISDICTION.

Dear Brother Kenning.

As I see in the Canadian Craftsman, of August 15th, a letter under this heading, signed Alexander Murray, I venture to call attention to it at once, feeling strongly where, in good truth, "the shoe really pinches."

In the discussion between the Grand Lodge of Scotland and the Grand Lodge of Quebec, he makes, first the following admission, and then he supplements it with a special statement. His admission is this; let us note it carefully.—"There is, however, a question in the history of the Craft in this province, which presents an anomaly nowhere else known. The concurrent jurisdiction of three distinct Grand Lodges, viz., England, Scotland, and Quebec. The Grand Lodge of Quebec, while inheriting this anomalous state of matters from her mother, the Grand Lodge of Canada, has constantly from the first refused to acknowledge the assumed right of those grand lodges to retain authority over subordinate lodges in her territory. The impediments in the way of the amicable adjustment of the difficulty have been greatly enhanced by the unjustifiable concession of the Grand Lodge of Canada to the Grand Lodge of England, Scotland, Ireland, whereby their several subordinate lodges were permitted to continue their allegiance to such Grand Lodges. It was claimed by the Grand Lodge of England, and admitted by the Grand Master of Canada, that such was their inherent right, and the Grand Lodge of Canada never sought to dispute the correctness of the assumption."

Having made this admission, which he could not well avoid, as it is a simple historical fact, he then proceeds to make a most startling statement, to which I am anxious to call attention in the Freemason. He says:—

"Masonic Jurists have differed on this all-important question, but where a free and unprejudiced judgment has been brought to bear on a calm investigation of the whole subject, there has been but one conclusion arrived at, and that is, I think, that such assumption is wrong in principle and inexpedient in practice. Such is the universal testimony of Masonic juriconsults on this Continent."

I have never in my life read, (begging Bro. Murray's pardon), such an audacious and utterly incorrect statement. If there is one thing Masonic juriconsults are agreed on, it is the absolute and inherent right of the lodge to adhere to its warranting authority, as, indeed, such must be from the nature of the case. I know of no American or Canadian juriconsult, (of any authority), who has laid down such "law." All that ever has been said is, that for the sake of harmony, peace, uniformity, symmetry, &c., it would be better for such lodges, by a friendly concordat, to join the new Grand Lodge. But in all the American States, just as in Canada, the previous right of the original constituting Grand Lodge and the equal privilege of the individual lodge to adhere to the source of its Masonic life have never been questioned.

I adhere to the views already expressed in the Freemason, that on this point the theory and action of the Grand Lodge of Quebec are alike unmasonic and unsustainable.

THE WRITER OF THE ARTICLE ON THE TWO GRAND LODGES IN THE FREEMASON.

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,

The columns of your weekly publication have lately been reporting the proceedings of certain zealous brethren who have resolved, with laudable intent, no doubt, to rectify the often mooted defects of our charitable system, and they have also, to a certain extent, advocated the principles of their would-be "Association." Those principles are prima facie objectionable, and have already been criticized in your columns for correspondents, as, for instance, the "levelling down principle," by which all subscribers, however largely they may have benefitted the Institutions, and, therefore, whatever the number of their proxies, are brought down to the level of Life Subscribers. This, by-the-by, would render appropriate the designation of "union," so carefully avoided lest it should suggest the notion of trades unionism. But there are other objections to which I would call attention, the more so that they are not likely to be elicited by the brethren who are acting as the promoters of the movement.

We are told to consider what a large share of the advantages of our Institutions is taken by our provincial brethren who do not support them as powerfully as we do. Now, I will not for a moment stop to call attention to the very unmasonic, not to say childish, character of this complaint, but will at once proceed to impugn the very basis upon which it stands. The numbers of provincial and town cases relieved by our charities should not necessarily be in proportion to the sums subscribed, but in proportion to the needs of the several localities. That our provincial brethren should have amongst them a greater number of cases of distress than we have, may be their misfortune or their fault; in the one case we should not grudge them our assistance; in the other, we should devise means of preventing their shortcomings from becoming a burden to us. An investigation into the cause of so many more candidates for our charities being sent up by the provinces than by London would, therefore, be more to the point than the formation of a league to shut them out until we have secured all we wanted. And, further, how would this hard and fast line work? If London is entitled to have, say 130 or 140 boys at Wood Green, and can only for the present supply 100; are so many vacancies to be left rather than fill them up with country candidates?

That there is a greater number of recipients of our several Masonic charities hailing from the provinces than from London is shown by the reports, but that, therefore, the numbers as so reported give the proportion of country to London cases requires very great proofs indeed. How many of those provincial brethren, widows, and children, now enjoying comparative ease or acquiring the means of battling with the world, owe their present happy position to votes which the L.M.C.A. would consider London votes? The majority of the brethren of note residing in the Metropolis are connected with provincial Masonry, and, in fact, hold, or have held, offices in Provincial Grand Lodges; are they to keep a separate account of the proxies they have obtained by subscribing to the lists of country Stewards, so that they may employ them, and them only, in supporting country cases? Surely brethren will not thus surrender their liberty of action. By their subscriptions they have acquired a certain influence in the election to our charities, which they are entitled to use as to them may seem best, without distinction as to what belongs to London and what to the provinces, and they are most likely to give their support to cases arising in their province and within their knowledge, than to one quite unknown to them amidst the great maze of London.

As to our lack of success at the elections, it is due less to want of organisation than to the want of a proper feeling with regard to the duty a brother imposes upon himself when he places his name upon a canvassing card. Is it not a disgrace that brethren who have only two or three votes to dispose of should allow their names to be published by half a dozen candidates? Let the supporters of each case work more, and not advertise themselves so much, and they will shine less, it is true, but they will increase the proportion of London recipients of our bounties.

From the silence hitherto observed by the secretaries of our Institutions, I gather that they consider the movement as unlikely to succeed, otherwise it would be their duty to oppose it in every way; for nothing could more effectually put a stop to large subscriptions than the "levelling down principle" already referred to. Without meaning in any way to disparage the sentiments of our charitable brethren, I may repeat what has often been said, that the proxies and the influence they confer are a great encouragement to the donor, which is withdrawn the moment he is allowed a personal vote only in exchange for his proxies however numerous. On that ground alone the secretaries should watch the formation of this association, which may perhaps benefit a few Londoners, but will surely act detrimentally to all our Masonic Charitable Institutions.

Yours truly and fraternally,

D. D.

[It is quite clear to us that "D. D." does not realize the exact aims of the L.M.C.A.—Ed.]

TRURO CATHEDRAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In my letter to you under this heading, which you kindly inserted in your last number, I, or your compositor, have made a slight mistake. In the latter part of my first paragraph I am made to say, "believing this to be so, I have repeated them to several candidates for Initiation." It should be, "I have repeated it."

Kindly correct this in your next, and oblige, yours truly and fraternally,

J. T. SHAPLAND, P.M., Z., &c.

ORIGINAL RESEARCH.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In a former letter I thanked you for your kind offer to receive the names and addresses of subscribers to "Prospectus of Contents to Original Research" at your Masonic Depot, 198, Fleet-street. Copy of same prospectus lies at the business places of brethren and others at various cities of the United Kingdom.

The "Search after Truth" is a Masonic obligation, and is referred to in the Calendar of the Grand Orient de France for 1877, as one of the principles of its constitution in connection with the unity of the human race. Had the Grand Orient known the truth, they would not have forsaken the name of God. The object, then, of original research is to disseminate the truth—"sans peur et sans reserve."

Truth, it is said, lies in a well; at all events, one truth has been found concealed in the science of comparative anatomy, by Professor Darwin, showing that the human race is part of the animal creation, and so destroys the very marvellous description by Moses of the formation of man and then women. But Moses, nevertheless, did not tell an untruth, for he only wrote in allegory, and left its interpretation to others by means of the keys of knowledge, mentioned in the Old and New Testament, and of which Royal Arch Masons were the custodians. Thus, both volumes became like a sealed book, which Isaiah saith, men delivered to one that is learned, saying: "Read this, I pray thee?" and he said, "I cannot, for it is sealed;" then the Book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, "Read this," and he saith, "I am not learned," otherwise not initiated. Professor Darwin persevered in his anatomical investigation for a period of five-and-twenty years, occasionally publishing the results, that were at first denied, though the truths thereof were at length formally admitted by the University of Cambridge, and the Professor publicly thanked by that institution for the great services he had rendered to science.

Brethren will be interested to learn that the science of comparative anatomy is but an integral part of the rediscovered science of Speculative Masonry by Professor Melville, after nearly forty years research. As a brother he carefully kept his MSS. of the truths of the science secret, with a view to initiate his brethren therein, but the late Grand Master, unlike the university, instead of awarding honour to Bro. Melville, rejected his MSS., on the plea they were beyond the scope of ordinary Masonry, so that his MSS. were published about five years ago, and Bro. Melville, strange to say, died at the time the publication came from the press.

Fully aware of the great truths that were disclosed in the rediscovered science, I have, since Bro. Melville's demise, been engaged in simplifying them in the original research, so that they who read may understand the same, while brethren may learn the celestial and terrestrial character of their order, and its influences regarding empires and kingdoms in the remotest antiquity, as well as its steadfast cultivation of the one form and simple faith in the Grand Architect of the Universe that is predestined to prevail over civilization.

Fraternally yours,

W. N. CRAWFORD.

Orchard-hill, Guernsey.

THE CHARITY ORGANIZATION SOCIETY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Enemy, as I am, to all cadgers and mendicants, proper and improper, and friendly as I am to duly discriminating charity, I yet doubt the value of a great deal of that hyper-organization and routine which seem to prevail amongst us just now, with respect to it, and which appears to me to be redolent of nothing positively but red tape. I may be wrong, but such is my opinion, and so I ventilate it in the Freemason. What, for instance, can any one think of such a letter as this, which recently appeared in the Daily Chronicle?

"Sir,—Would you be so kind as to make known to the subscribers of the Charity Organization Society the following case? A few days ago I applied to the above society, stating that I had been out of employment since February last, and that I had tried all I could to get employment, and that I had a wife and three children depending on me for support—ages nine years, two and a half years, and seven months. I was informed that they could not assist me without I had a prospect of work, and that they were afraid we should have to go into the house. Now, sir, I was always given to understand that they gave a little assistance to keep a man from going into the house. I showed them good testimonials of twenty years' character. I served ten years in the army, seven of which I was sergeant, and ten in the metropolitan police, and I have good characters from both services.

I am, etc.,

Compton-street, Brunswick-square, W.C. W.B."

I confess, when I saw it, I felt almost inclined to ask, Can such things be practically? The idea of driving everybody into the workhouse is simply absurd and wicked in my opinion, and though it is one of the favoured fallacies of the day, it is increasing the pauperism of the country.

But this is too long a subject, and too serious a question, to be disposed of to-day, so, with your permission, I will send you another communication shortly on the subject, to which, I may say, I have paid great attention for years.

I propose also in my next to call attention to the Charity Organization Society's Report for July, as it appears to me to be anything but satisfactory, and as it is in the interest of Freemasons, as well as of everyone else, to realize the need and claims of true charity, I shall not apologize for trespassing on your space.

I am, yours faithfully and fraternally,

OMICRON.

FEE FOR INITIATION IN ENGLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Bro. Hughban's letter in your issue for last week well merits the thoughtful consideration of all sections of the English Craft.

There is no escape from the conclusion, that unless the minimum initiation fee adopted at the Union was too high, the present initiation fee is much too low.

Yours fraternally,

H. F. GOULD.

OLD LIST OF LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The year of issue of the list of lodges referred to by Bro. Samuel Jones in your last number, can be readily ascertained by quoting the number and date of constitution of the junior lodge.

The list for 1770, is one of the most interesting of the engraved series, the third of the periodical closing up of numbers having taken place in that year, (the previous re-numberings having occurred in 1740 and 1756.)

Yours fraternally,

H. F. GOULD.

FREEMASONRY IN CEYLON.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In our out-of-the-way corner of the world, we are not much noticed by more prominent brethren whose lot has been cast in busier scenes than this. As I do not observe much mention of Ceylon Masonry in your paper, I believe a few particulars regarding it may prove not uninteresting to your readers.

We have six lodges, three chapters and mark lodges, and also a preceptory and encampment of Knights Templar, in the island. A Provincial Grand Lodge has also been started, and is expected to be in working order by the beginning of next year. The majority of these are under the Irish, and the rest under the Scottish Constitution; English Masonry not being represented. The following is a list of the lodges.

IRISH CONSTITUTION.

107 Sphinx.	Colombo.	R. A. Chapter attached.
112 Serendib.	do.	do. dormant.
115 Leinster.	do.
298 Dimbula.	Dimbula.

SCOTTISH CONSTITUTION.

446 St. Andrew.	Kandy.	R. A. Chapter, dormant.
611 Bonnie Door.	Columbo.

Thus we have five lodges working, and one dormant. The Sphinx, (the oldest lodge) is a mixed lodge of Europeans, Eurasians (or as they are called here, Burghers), and natives. All the other lodges are exclusively European. The five lodges, in the aggregate, comprise a total of from 150 to 200 subscribing members. Not so bad considering the climate, latitude, and temperature, and the small population of this "Gem of the East."

I remain, yours fraternally,

ACACIA.

WAS THE LATE POPE A FREEMASON?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I send you the following extract from a document of the Lodge Etonia, Cadova, (Paler mo), that Ferretti Mastai, (the Pope), was initiated in that lodge. It does not give the date of his initiation, but it was dated August, 1839. Master of the lodge Mateo Chisao, signed Paul Duplessi, and countersigned by the Grand Master of the lodge, Sexto Calaro.

This is taken from a German paper, and states that it is a copy of a document, No. 13,715, existing in the lodge Fidelidad Germanica, Nuremberg. The certificate is countersigned by William Willestach, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Bavaria.

[COPY.]

At a semi-annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Masons, Scottish Rite of the Orient of Palermo, Italy, held in that city on the 27th of March, Mastia Ferretti was expelled from the Order for violating his vows and for perjury. Mastia Ferretti is no other person than Pius IX., Pope of Rome. The decree of the lodge at Palermo is published in the official paper of the Order of Freemasons at Cologne, Germany, and dated March 27th. It is prescribed by the minutes of the lodge in which Mastia Ferretti, in 1826, was initiated into the Order under the old Scottish Rite. The decree was as follows:—"A man named Mastia Ferretti, who received the baptism of Masonry, and solemnly pledged his love and fellowship, and who afterwards was crowned Pope and King, under the title of Pio Nono, has now cursed his former brethren and excommunicated all members of the Order of Freemasons. Therefore, said Mastia Ferretti is herewith, by decree of Grand Lodge of the Orient of Palermo, expelled from the Order for perjury." The charges against Mastia Ferretti were first preferred in his lodge, at Palermo, in 1865, and notification and copy thereof sent to Rome, with a request to attend the lodge for the purpose of his vindication. To this the Pope made no reply, and for divers reasons the charges were not pressed until the Pope urged the clergy of Brazil to aggressive measures against the Freemasons of that country. The charges were pressed, and the second and third notifications sent, and after a formal trial a decree of expulsion was entered, and caused to be published.

The decree bears the signature of Victor Emanuel, King of Italy, and Grand Master of the Grand Orient of Italy.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am pleased that W.M. is also alive to the necessity of restricting any excesses in Masonic banqueting, and hail with satisfaction the attention which is now being given to this subject; but I regret he should think I am finding fault with the sentiment which actuated the committee in placing the champagne on the tables; as we all recognise and admire their unbounded hospitality in all things Masonic; but it is the principle involved which I combat! for as each brother paid for a pint of wine, the necessity of placing on 40 more bottles is not apparent; because if thirsty souls require more than a pint of wine by all means let them have it; but do not punish the funds of four lodges to gratify this appetite for gaseous drinks, as what may be a small expense when divided among four lodges; becomes an intolerable burden, when the Provincial Grand Lodge is held at a place where only one Masonic lodge exists, for if it is necessary to give wine at Southampton it is equally necessary, when the meeting is held at Fareham, Petersfield, Havant, &c. I must say in conclusion, that the scathing condemnation alluded to in "W.M.'s" letter is scarcely applicable to the subject under discussion, as it certainly is an open question whether the Saviour of mankind contemplated his language being used to justify champagne drinking at a Masonic banquet.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, faithfully and fraternally yours,

PYTHAGORAS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your issue of the 31st ult., a Southampton Mason. animadverts on the want of a system in the appointment of officers to purple honours in this province; and I really think he has good grounds for his assertion; that there is an absence of any system at present, and the sooner a more equitable arrangement is arrived at the better. But it is no argument to say, that the four entertaining lodges at Southampton should have had more honour given them simply because they made the necessary arrangements for the meeting; and he particularly mentions the Royal Gloucester, and mourns the loss of its prestige, which, in other words, means the loss of the monopoly of the best purple officers. This lodge has been exceptionally favoured during past years, for in the last decade it has furnished no less than two Senior Grand Wardens, two Junior Grand Wardens, one Senior Grand Dragon, one Grand Superintendent of Works, and one Grand Director of Ceremonies, besides appointments as Chaplains, Organists, and Stewards; they have had likewise the distinguished honour of having two of the so-called permanent officials as members, which no doubt materially assisted them in obtaining the superior appointments above mentioned, and as long as these lodges allow the officers of D.P.G.M., P.G. Treasurer, and P.G. Secretary to remain life appointments, and make no agitation to secure their retirement after a fair tenure of office (say five years) to make room for other equally able, deserving, and willing brethren; so long will the remainder of the province consider these offices in the list of annual appointments to the respective lodges to which these belong.

I need not say that those lodges which are not favoured with the august membership of a permanent official generally fail in obtaining a fair proportion of the superior purple officers, for in addition to the appointments enumerated; during the same period the Oakley Lodge has furnished two more Senior Grand Wardens, and the Portsmouth Lodge no less than three Junior Grand Wardens, and so it will be in the future unless the brethren demand a more equitable system of appointments than now obtains.

I am, dear Sir and Bro., faithfully and fraternally yours,

CONSISTENCY.

CHAMBER'S INDEX TO NEXT OF KIN.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

My attention has been called to your review of the Fourth Edition of this work, in which you state "that the unclaimed funds in the Court of Chancery amounted in 1876 to £70,000,000." Permit me to say you have misread my Preface, as appears by the following extract therefrom:—

"The funds in the Court of Chancery amounted in 1876 to the prodigious sum of upwards of £70,000,000. A large proportion of these funds consists of unclaimed money."

What the proportion is I am unable to say, as the return published last year does not give it.

For the information of those of your readers who may suppose themselves to be interested in these unclaimed funds, but who are chary about taking steps towards putting in a claim to a slice thereof, I may add that when the first List was published (in 1855) many persons came forward and preferred their claims, and about one half of the stock, supposed to be unclaimed, was transferred out of Court to successful claimants.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

EDWARD PRESTON.

(Proprietor of "Chamber's Index to Next of Kin," and author of "Unclaimed Money.")

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As I prognosticated, so it has already come to pass. Bro. Perceval has, for some weeks past, been praiseworthy advocating the interest of Meta Bell Brasier, a candidate for election into the Girls' School. During that time he has also assisted in the formation of this society. Will Bro. Perceval continue to support his protégée Brasier's case? or does he elect, in order to prove his loyalty to the Association, to throw over his provincial case that the new selections may be the better supported? I hold strongly to the opinion that if the members of each London lodge recommending a case would, for the purpose of the election, consider themselves a province, and work as energetically, more favourable results would be obtained than are, I think, likely to be produced by this Association.

Yours fraternally,

H. L.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Referring to your recent article on the Grand Orient of France, I wish to say that there is really no occasion to declaim against the Atheistical tendency of the French lodges, simply because they are not Masonic lodges at all.

If a number of Atheists choose to meet together to vilify the Pope, and every other religious authority, in whom you or I may or may not have confidence, if indeed they only meet, as I have seen and heard at the Amis de la Patrie Lodge, Grand Orient, Rue Cadet, Paris, to constitute themselves a secret discussion forum, for purposes which, according to our English rules and principles, are unmasonic, I cannot think why we should call them Masons at all, or trouble ourselves about their Atheism.

There is no safeguard against intruders to the lodge I entered; although I took my certificate with me, I was asked neither for that nor my signature; notwithstanding which, I insisted on producing the former, and it only met with a cursory and contemptuous glance.

Yours obediently,

ARTHUR D. RENSHAW.

The Inauguration of the Falkland Memorial took place at the Battle Field, Newbury, on Monday last, under the presidency of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master, and the presence of a large number of Freemasons of the Province of Berks, and other provinces lent considerable eclat to the meeting. A detailed report of the proceedings, which unfortunately reached us too late for the present number, will appear in our next.

Lord Waveney, who arrived in town on Monday from Aldeburg, Suffolk, has since left for Ballymena, Antrim.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE.—We are happy to inform our readers that this Obelisk was safely erected at a quarter to 4 on Thursday afternoon. The time taken in the erection being about three-quarters of an hour. The motion was very slow, the Needle being perfectly under control the whole time of operation. Bro. Dixon, C.E., was in charge throughout.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

YORK.—York Lodge (No. 236).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, 16th inst. Present Bros. W. Valentine, W.M.; G. C. Baskett, S.W.; A. Buckle, J.W.; G. Kirby, Sec.; J. Todd, P.M.; T. Cooper, P.M.; W. Lawton, P.M.; C. Smith, P.M.; T. B. Whythead, W.M. 1611, &c. After a successful ballot had been taken for a candidate, the W.M. moved that the lodge do express its sympathy with the family of the late Bro. W. Cowling, P.M., whose death was such a loss to the lodge which he had served so faithfully as Treasurer. Bro. Wm. Lawton, P.M., seconded the resolution, which was carried; after which Bro. J. Todd, P.M., moved that the lodge do go into mourning for three months in respect to the memory of their late Treasurer. This was seconded by Bro. T. B. Whythead, who said that he was glad of the opportunity of acknowledging the many virtues of their late brother, and that, though differences of opinion in matters of detail might have existed, they must all freely admit that Bro. Cowling was indeed a "bright Mason." This motion having been carried, the lodge proceeded to elect a Secretary in place of Bro. Cowling, and Bro. J. Todd, P.M., was unanimously chosen. Bro. Todd having expressed his acknowledgements, the lodge was closed in solemn form. During the course of the proceedings Bro. T. S. Camidge, Organist, presented to the lodge a handsomely-bound "Breches Bible," on behalf of a York gentleman.

SITTINGBOURNE.—St. Michael's Lodge (No. 1273).—The installation meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Thursday, the 12th inst., in St. Michael's schoolroom. There were about 50 present on the occasion. Among the visitors were several Provincial Officers. The W.M., Bro. F. J. Seale, presided, having Bro. F. F. Girard, P.M. 133, P.P.G.O. in the S.W. chair; Bro. H. Pinfold, P.M. 1273, P.P.G.O. in the J.W. chair. After the opening of the lodge, the minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. elect, Bro. H. Tuff, was duly presented, by Bro. B. Taylor, I.P.M., to Bro. F. J. Seale, who formally installed him as Master of the Lodge. The Board of Installing Masters were Bros. F. J. Seale, I.P.M.; H. J. Sutton, S.W.; J. M. Longhurst, J.W.; W. Challenger, S.D.; A. F. Tucker, J.D.; J. Potter, I.G.; H. Black, D.C.; R. Murrell, Tyler. A vote of thanks was then given to the I.P.M., for the able manner in which he had performed the duties of Installing Master. The lodge having been closed in the usual manner, the brethren adjourned to the Bull Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet had been prepared by Bro. J. Owens, P.M. 133, which was very admirably served, about 60 brethren being present. After the cloth was cleared, the usual Masonic and patriotic toasts were given and most cordially received. During the evening the W.M., in the name of the lodge, presented Bro. F. J. Seale, with a very handsome P.M. jewel, as a slight recognition of his services during his year of office. A collection was made for the sufferers of the Princess Alice disaster, amounting to six pounds. The gathering was a most happy and successful one.

INSTRUCTION.

FINSBURY PARK LODGE (No. 1288).—The Master Masons of this lodge met at the Finsbury Park Tavern, Holloway, on Friday, the 13th inst. There were present Bros. Bayley, W.M.; Frampton, S.W.; Jeffreys, P.M.; J.W.; L. R. Rogers, P.M., Preceptor; H. B. D. Dunn, Secretary; Press, S.D.; Walker, P.M., J.D.; Thompson, I.G. The lodge was opened in the First Degree; the minutes were read and confirmed; the ceremonies of the First and Second Degrees were rehearsed. Bro. Frampton was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and the officers appointed in rotation. The lodge was then adjourned until Friday, the 20th inst., at eight o'clock. There were also present Bros. Rogers, P.M.; Walker, Jeffreys, Press, Thompson, Bayley, Dunn, Frampton, Edmonds, and others. The annual supper of this lodge will take place on the 11th of October next.

Royal Arch.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Chapter (No. 540).—The companions of this chapter held their September meeting on Tuesday evening, 10th inst. Present Comps. A. Cookson, M.E.Z.; J. M. Cuthbert, H.; Col. Stuart, P.Z., acting J.; Stafford, First Ass. Soj.; Capt. Calburne, E.; Carter, Treas.; R. Boughton-Smith, acting N.; J. R. Bull, P.Z.; and Sergeant and Kilpin. Minutes of former chapter read and confirmed. Comps. Fisher, J. being abroad, Tebbs and Billan, P. Soj., away from home, Coomb, Second Asst. Soj., ill, all sent reasons for not being present. The attendance was smaller than usual, many other companions being away from home and unwell. Col. Stuart, in very appropriate terms, referred to the very sudden death of our late Comp. Harris, of Springfield, and proposed a vote of condolence and sympathy to his wife and mother; this was seconded by the M.E.Z., in well-chosen terms. After the transaction of certain routine business the chapter was closed in due form, and the companions adjourned to refreshment, and spent a pleasant evening.

HAMPTON.—Era Chapter (No. 1423).—A convocation of this chapter was held at the Island Hotel on Saturday the 14th inst., when there were present, Companions Thielay, M.E.Z.; F. Walters, P.Z., P.P.G.A.S. Middlesex, H.; W. Hammond, P.Z., P.P.G.A.S. of Middlesex, acting J.; T. C. Walls, P.G.O. of Middlesex, S.N.; Austin, D.C.; Johnson; Tagg; and Harrison, Acting Janitor. Companion Haslett, Prudent Brethren, was a visitor. The minutes of the previous convocation were read and confirmed, and the Auditors' Report received and adopted. Several communications from absent members were read. There were two candidates on the agenda for exaltation, but neither of them attended. Previously to the chapter being closed, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed to Comp. Thielay, M.E.Z., for the attention and zeal displayed by him in superintending the furnishing of the chapter. There being no other business before the convocation, it was duly closed, and the companions adjourned to a collation. There were no toasts. The next meeting of the chapter will take place on the second Saturday in May next.

YORK.—York Lodge (I.I.).—On Tuesday evening last, the W.M., Bro. T. B. Whythead, presiding, five candidates were advanced to the honourable degree. The S.W. (Bro. the Hon. W. T. Orde-Powlett) was elected W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Thos. Cooper, P.M., was re-elected Treasurer. A meeting of the York Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners was subsequently held (Bros. T. B. Whythead, N.; G. Simpson, as S.; T. Cooper, J.; J. S. Cumberland, Conductor), when six candidates were regularly elevated.

LIVERPOOL.—West Lancashire Mark Lodge (No. 65).—The periodical meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 4th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool. There were present Bros. J. Hayes, W.M.; R. H. Evans, as S.W.; W. P. Jennings, as J.W.; A. C. Wylie, M.O.; R. Reader, S.O.; W. Corbett, as J.O.; W. C. Erwin, I.G.; and Past Masters H. Jackson, T. Clark, J. R. Goepe, Treas., P.G.O.; W. T. May, and H. S. Alpass. After two brethren had been advanced, the election for W.M. took place, when Bro. R. H. Evans, J.W., was duly elected. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren retired for refreshments, which were very comfortably supplied by the new house steward, Bro. Chaplain. The remainder of the evening was most agreeably spent. The installation of W.M. will take place on the first Wednesday in November.

PLUMSTEAD.—Excelsior Lodge (No. 226).—The first quarterly meeting of the above lodge since its consecration, in June last, took place on Tuesday, the 10th inst., at Bro. Garbett's house, the Sir Robert Peel, on Anglesea-hill, Bro. Captain Ritchie, R.A., W.M., in the chair, supported by the following officers: Bros. Sculley, S.W. (in the unavoidable absence of Bro. C. Coupland), James Smythe, J.W.; the Rev. C. A. Solbe, Chaplain; W. A. Weston, M.O.; Abel Penfold, S.O.; H. Shaw, J.O.; Henry Pryce, Treasurer; G. Kennedy, Secretary; G. Spinks, S.D.; E. Palmer, J.D.; Daniel Deeves, I.G.; Eugene Sweny, R. of M.; H. Harding, Organist; and J. Lackland, Tyler. The lodge having been opened with solemn prayer, offered by the Chaplain, and the minutes and accounts passed, Bro. J. Wilkins, J.W. 700; Thomas Read, 1536; Dr. Spurrell, P.M. St. John's and St. Paul's, and S.W. of the Sydney Lodge; Isaac Quincey, S.D. Perfect Ashlar Lodge; and Walter Osborne, 1536, were with due form advanced to the Mark Degree. It was then unanimously resolved that the sum of two guineas, supplemented by the contents of the last and present charity box collection, should be sent to the Lord Mayor's fund, formed for the relief of the sufferers of the late fatal catastrophe on the Thames. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a plain, but excellent supper, supplied by Bro. Garbett, with his acknowledged taste and skill. After the removal of the cloth, the W. Master gave the usual loyal and Mark Masonic toasts. The W.M. then rose and said, he wished it to be known to many of the brethren who were not present at the closing of the lodge, what steps had been taken in reference to the accident to the steamer "Princess Alice." It was proposed and unanimously carried that the sum of two guineas, and the contents of the charity box, should be given to the fund for the relief of the sufferers now forming at the Mansion House, and that at the same time a vote of condolence and sympathy with them, should, with the sum gathered, be sent to the Lord Mayor at once. It was impossible for him to attempt to tell them the extent of the catastrophe. Those of the members of the Excelsior Lodge who live in the locality must have seen daily the evidences of its most appalling and distressing nature; for himself his heart had been wrung by reading the piteous accounts that appeared in the journals of the day. (Hear, hear.) He felt sure the feelings of every true Mason had as well been deeply touched, and that they would help the cause to the utmost of their power. The charity box was then passed round the lodge and produced £3, and was again passed round, and the sum raised, with the £2 2s. voted, then amounted to £9 8s. 6d., which has since been remitted to London. As one of the advanced was compelled to retire, the W.M. said he should go somewhat out of the usual course in proposing next the toast of the "Advanced Brethren." He need not say how welcome they were within the landmarks of Mark Masonry, which at present was but in its infancy in Woolwich. Among those advanced were brethren who had made their mark in Craft Masonry, and he held "that every Mark Mason should be a marked man." (Cheers.) Some of them might have had the opportunity of reading lately a book which gave them the histories of the "Men of Mark" of the country, and he trusted that the Mark Masons, every one of them, would endeavour to emulate the virtues and excellences of those "men of mark," and be "marked men" in the society they belonged to. (Applause.) Their lodge was "The Excelsior," higher and yet higher, and while they had such good Masons and good men joining its ranks as they had that night, it would ever be worthy of its name and aspirations. (Loud Cheers.) Bros. Spurrell, Wilkins, and Reed severally responded. Bro. Weston then proposed "The Health of the W.M.," who, he said, from the manner in which he had done his work that night, would, he felt sure, leave his mark in that lodge. They were proud of such a Master. (Cheers.) The W.M. said, if there was one thing more than another that made him value his position, it was the very gratifying reception they at all times gave him, and the indulgence they had shown him in carrying out the duties of the lodge that evening. It is at all times a very difficult matter to fill the chair of a lodge to one's own satisfaction; and in the presence of some of those worthy Masons who had filled, and now do fill, important positions in the province, he felt how unworthy he was to carry out with dignity the exalted position they had placed him in. (No, No.) He felt convinced that in the S.W. (Bro. Coupland) they had a coming Master who would be an honour to them; and for himself, while he held the gavel, he would do his best to make this Mark Lodge worthy of its name. (Applause.) To a warm reception of the toast of "The Officers," Bro. Smythe, in returning thanks said, he did so in the name of his brother officers for the great compliment paid them. If they had done their duty well it was only reciprocating the work done by the Master. (Hear, Hear.) Nothing could make subordinates enter into their duty with zeal and assiduity, so much as the example set by their chief, and in that they considered themselves fortunate, for with the example set them by the chair it was impossible for them to do otherwise than to work well and diligently in the exercise of those duties entrusted to their charge. (Cheers.) Their Master was a man who, while doing the most important duties elsewhere, yet devoted a great portion of that spare time, little as it was at his disposal, to the perfect carrying out of his Masonic duties. In that lodge he held it to be only their duty to follow so noble and worthy an example. As an old Mason, he held that there should be a tone given by language, by presence, by mannerism, so as to elevate the standard of the lodge by its very excellence, and those qualifications they were again very fortunate in having with their W.M. (Applause.) Bro. Smyth, at the conclusion of a very lengthy and brilliant speech, said that as the name of the lodge was Excelsior, so would the officers unite with the Master and the brethren in sustaining its name pure and unsullied among the Mark Masons of not only the Province of Kent, but before the world, and resumed his seat amid prolonged applause. Bro. Smythe then, by the permission of the W.M., proposed a special toast in favour of Bro. Sculley, who, at a moment's notice, had taken the chair of S.W., and complimented that brother for the excellent working displayed by him in that position. Bro. Sculley briefly returned thanks for the hearty way in which the brethren had received his name, and Bro. C. Jolly, (Freemason), responded for the "Masonic Press." Bro. Weston was worthily honoured for his efforts generally in the welfare of the lodge, and then the Tyler's toast concluded the proceedings, which had throughout been reverently and solemnly conducted, on account of the appalling accident on the Thames, so near them, without songs or music.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Indigestion and Liver Complaints.—The digestion cannot be long or seriously disordered without the derangement being perceptible on the countenance. These Pills prevent both unpleasant consequences; they improve the appetite; and with the increase of desire for food, they augment the powers of digestion and assimilation in the stomach. Holloway's Pills deal most satisfactorily with deranged and diseased conditions of the many organs engaged in extracting nourishment for our bodies from our various diets—as the liver, stomach, and bowels—over all of which they exercise the most salutary control. By resorting to an early stage of this malady to these purifying and laxative Pills, the dyspepsia is speedily restored to health and strength, and his sallowness gradually vanishes.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND.

The annual meeting of the united Province of Cumberland and Westmorland was held at Millom, under the banner of the Whitwell Lodge, No. 1390, on Friday, the 13th inst. This is the first time the Provincial Grand Lodge has been held so far south; in fact, Millom lays almost on the borders of Lancashire, the smoke, furnaces, and tall chimneys of Dalton and Barrow being plainly visible.

Only half-a-dozen years old, Whitwell Lodge, from very humble beginnings, has attained a very important position in Masonic affairs, notwithstanding the near proximity of so many lodges in North-West Lancashire. There is, however, room enough for all, both sides of the border, and the utmost "entente cordiale" exists between these branches of the two provinces. No doubt the extraordinary development of the iron trade furnishes the secret of Masonic prosperity in the comparatively new centres of industry in the south of Cumberland and North of Lancashire, for, in addition to the comparatively recent No. 1390 of the Millom Lodge, we have almost side by side with it the No. 1021 and No. 1225 of Barrow-in-Furness, and the No. 1398 of Dalton-in-Furness. Despite the extreme distance of Millom from the northern part of the province, the county town being fully seventy miles away, whilst Longtown is nine miles east of the border city, the trains from all parts to the scene of the day's proceedings fitted admirably, the only difficulty being the return journey, inasmuch as at least one half of the visitors had to leave shortly after five o'clock, and some at three, the bulk, however, of the north country contingent not requiring to leave till seven o'clock. All the railway companies allowed single fares for the double journey, and, all things considered, the difficulties as to transit were reduced to a minimum. All the deputations from the different lodges had reached Millom by shortly after twelve, at which hour the Charity Committee were summoned to meet. The Public Hall was metamorphosed into an excellent and capacious lodge room, which rendered the crowding and confusion, so annoying at other places, quite impossible, and over two hundred brethren were comfortably seated when the R.W. Provincial Grand Master rose to open the business of the day.

The Earl of Bective, M.P., P.M. 1074, R.W. Provincial Grand Master, took his seat on the throne at one o'clock, and there were present the following members of Provincial Grand Lodge:—Bros. Colonel Whitwell, M.P., P.M. 129, R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Past Grand Warden of England; Joseph Iredale, P.M. 310, Carlisle, P.P. Deputy Grand Master; W. Kirkbride, P.M. 339, Penrith, P.P.G.S.W., as P.G.S.W.; H. Cook, P.M. 119, Whitehaven, P.P.G. Reg., as P.G.J.W.; Jos. Nicholson, P.M. and Treas. 371, Maryport, P.P.G.S.W.; G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119, P.P.G.J.W.; John Bowes, P.M. 129, Kendal, P.P.G.J.W.; Rev. Horace V. Thompson, 1074, Kirkby Lonsdale, P.G. Chaplain; Rev. W. E. Strickland, W.M. 1267, Egremont, P.G. Assist. Chaplain; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. 1002, Cockermouth, P.G. Registrar (Freemason); W. B. Gibson, P.M. 119, P.P.G.S.W., P.G. Sec.; W. White, P.M. 119, P.P.G.S.D.; J. L. Burns-Lindow, P.M. 1267, P.G.J.D.; J. Holloway, Org.; J. Calder, R. A. Mitchell, W. Perkins, S.D.; R. Black, J. Cleator, H. Miller, I.G.; H. Waiting, G. Baines, J. R. Beck, J. Hill, J. Christian, R. E. Johns, T. Carter, and J. Myers Meakin, Lodge 1400, Harrington: Bros. W. Carlyle, W.M. elect., John Back, and Jos. Hodgson. Lodge 1660, Frizington: Bro. R. Wilson. Two of the nineteen lodges were wholly unrepresented, viz., No. 812, Appleby, and No. 1220, Silloth.

The visiting brethren from other Provinces were:—Bros. R. W. Worral, P.M. 425, Chester, P.P.G.S.B. Cheshire; John Walton, P.M. 1398, Dalton-in-Furness; S. J. Wade, P.M. 80, Sunderland, P.P.G.D.C., Durham; R. T. Taylor, P.M. 1021, Barrow-in-Furness; Thos. Trembath, S.D. 1398, Dalton; Solomon Birkett, Lodge 169, D.ptford; John Soulbey Sykes, 18, Lodge 218, Calcutta; W. Dixon, Lodge 1353, Lancaster; T. Grieve, S.W. 1398, Dalton; and Henry Flask, Lodge Innocent, 224, Cullen, Scotland.

The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form, the minutes of the half-yearly meeting, held at Penrith, last April, were read and confirmed. The Treasurer's statement of accounts, previously audited by the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, the R.W. Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and Bro. Lamonby, Prov. Grand Registrar, were next presented by Bro. Gibson, P.G. Secretary, in the regrettable absence, through declining health and advancing years, of Bro. John Lemon, P.M. 327, P.G. Treasurer, who has held that office, with honour to himself and great advantage to the Province, for some years past. The principal items of expenditure were one hundred guineas from the general fund to the Boys' School, £20 to the "Indian Famine Relief Fund," and £20 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The receipts to the general fund included a large balance from the previous year, as also over £100 for dues.

The balance in hand amounted to £192 14s. 3d. and as the Provincial Benevolent Fund was reduced to a balance of £18 9s. 9d. it was suggested to transfer to it £50 from the general fund. On the motion of the R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master, seconded by the Prov. Grand Registrar, the Treasurer's statement of accounts was adopted. The next business was the election of a Provincial Grand Treasurer, and the R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master, alluding to the long and valuable services of Bro. John Lemon, and also regretting the circumstances under which the province was forced to lose his assistance, proposed the name of Bro. Geo. Kenworthy, P.P.G.J.W., as one whom he had every confidence would prove a most efficient successor to Bro. Lemon.

Bro. John Bowes, P.P.G.J.W., seconded the motion, which, it is needless to say, was carried with the most cordial unanimity.

Bro. Kenworthy, in acknowledging the compliment conferred upon him, said that although conscious of his inability to fill the office of Provincial Grand Treasurer as worthily as Bro. Lemon, assured the members of the province that his utmost endeavours should be put forward to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor.

The next item on the agenda paper was the election of the Provincial Grand Tyler, and the Provincial Grand Secretary proposed Bro. J. M. Salisbury, one of the oldest Masons in the province, and a P.M. of Lodge 872, to the office.

Bro. T. Atkinson, P.M. 872, P.G.D.C., seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

The officers for the year were next invested as follows:—H. Cook, P.M. 119 Prov. G.S.W. J. R. Bain, P.M. 1400 Prov. G.J.W. Rev. W. E. Strickland, W.M. 1267 Prov. G. Chaplain. Rev. W. Barton, P.M. 1390 Prov. C. Asst. Chap. G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119 Prov. G. Treasurer. J. L. Burns-Lindow, P.M. 1267 Prov. G. Registrar. W. B. Gibson, P.M. 119 Prov. G. Secretary. J. Mills, P.M. 1390 Prov. G.S.D. E. Clark, P.M. 1267 Prov. G.J.D. J. Gardiner, P.M. 371 Prov. G. Supt. Works. G. J. McKay, W.M. 129 Prov. G.D.C. J. M. Sergt. Noakes, 55th Foot, W.M.

1532 Prov. G.A.D.C. H. Bewes, P.M. 327 Prov. G. Sd. Br. J. Holloway, 1390 Prov. G. Organist. E. J. Nelson, P.M. 129 Prov. G. Purs. J. M. Salisbury, P.M. 872 Prov. G. Tyler. G. Potter, P.M. 1532; W. B. Cowman, P.M. 872; G. T. Archibald, P.M. 962; Dr. Horan, P.M. 119; W. H. Hoodless, P.M. 327; T. Mandle, P.M. 371.

The Provincial Grand Secretary brought up the Charity Committee's report, which included a grant of £10 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 371, Maryport, who quite recently was killed on the railway, in the discharge of his daily avocations, leaving four children, the eldest of whom is only four years of age, and the youngest an infant, born after its father's untimely death.

The Charity Committee likewise recommended Lodge 371 to prepare a petition to Grand Lodge Fund of Benevolence, which they would support.

The sum of £5 was also recommended to be given to the aged widow of a Whitehaven brother, and £5 to an aged brother in the same town.

The report, on the motion of the R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master, seconded by Bro. G. J. McKay P.G.D.C., was passed nem. dis.

The Provincial Grand Secretary next, referring to the minutes of the previous Provincial Grand Lodge, said that permission had then been granted to Bro. W. F. Lamonby, P.G. Reg., to search the books of the province in the compilation of his intended work on the "History of Craft Masonry in Cumberland and Westmorland." That permission being then granted, on condition that a committee of revision be appointed at the ensuing Provincial Grand Lodge, and the MS. of the work being now ready to hand over, he suggested, with the concurrence of Bro. Lamonby, that the committee consist of the R.W. Deputy Provincial Grand Master, the Provincial Grand Wardens, and the Provincial Grand Secretary.

This was agreed to.

The Provincial Grand Secretary, in accordance with notice of motion, then proposed the addition of the following paragraph to Bye-law XII., of the provincial rules:—"To enable the Provincial Grand Secretary to keep a correct register, it will be necessary for each lodge, immediately after each installation, to furnish him with a copy of return to Grand Lodge, as regards newly-appointed Worshipful Master and Wardens." This addition, he remarked, had more than ever become necessary, from the fact of some lodges in the province having for years neglected to make the necessary returns to Grand Lodge, as provided by the "Book of Constitutions."

Bro. Lamonby, P.P.G. Reg., in seconding the resolution, said he might be allowed to state that it was a modification of a notice of motion sent by him to the Provincial Grand Secretary, and he would explain how it arose. In June last he attended the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, and, in looking over the register books of members qualified to sit in Grand Lodge, found that several lodges in this province had neglected to make the required returns, for periods varying from two up to eighteen years. This was a serious matter, and he had considered it his bounden duty to bring the subject before Provincial Grand Lodge. No brother, otherwise qualified, would relish the idea of being excluded or denied admission to Grand Lodge, through neglect on the part of officers in sending in returns, and he hoped that this motion of the Provincial Grand Secretary, modified as it judiciously had been, to serve a double purpose, would be the means of making Worshipful Masters and Secretaries of lodges better acquainted with the provisions of the "Book of Constitutions" than they hitherto appeared to have been.

The motion was carried without any further comment.

On the proclamations being put, "Hearty good wishes" were tendered by the visiting brethren from other provinces, and a cordial welcome to Cumberland and Westmorland was given by the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, who thereupon closed the Provincial Grand Lodge in due form.

The brethren were then marshalled in order of procession, and, headed by the Holborn Hill Royal Brass Band, marched to the handsome new church dedicated to Saint George, which is situated on the summit of an eminence, from which an extensive view is obtained of the magnificent range of mountain scenery in South Cumberland and North Lancashire. The sacred edifice was crowded by the general public, in addition to the Masons. The service was full choral, including Whiteley's well-known anthem, "Behold, how good and joyful," beautifully sung by the surpliced choir attached to the church. Prayers were read by the Rev. W. Barton, Incumbent, P.G. Assist. Chaplain; the lesson by the Rev. W. E. Strickland, P.P.G. Chaplain; and the sermon was preached by the Rev. H. V. Thompson, P.P.G. Chaplain, from Psalm cxxxix., v. 23-4:—"Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

The offertory was divided between the Masonic Charities and the Millom Parish Sunday Schools.

After church service, the procession was reformed to the Public Hall, and at half-past three a large company sat down to an excellently prepared banquet, in the large and new hall, attached to Bro. Waiting's Castle Hotel.

The Earl of Bective, M.P., presided, but, after dessert had been placed upon the tables, was obliged to leave, in order to reach Underley Hall the same evening. His lordship, however, prior to vacating the chair, expressed his warmest thanks, and those of the province generally, for the admirable arrangements made by the brethren of Whitwell Lodge, and he retired from the hall in a "blaze of fire."

Colonel Whitwell thereafter took the chair, and under his genial presidency, a couple of hours were passed in the most harmonious manner, the company, however, having grown wonderfully smaller by degrees and beautifully less, as the hour approached for the departure of the last train. All things considered, the proceedings were highly successful, and, in fact, the W.M. and brethren of Lodge No. 1390 deserve great credit for their systematic efforts and arrangements, on the first occasion of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cumberland and Westmorland going so far south.

FREEMASONRY IN SCOTLAND.

On Wednesday last a meeting was held in the Trades' Hall, Glassford-street, to take into consideration the proceedings at the last Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. The chair was occupied by Colonel Campbell, of Blythwood, Substitute Grand Master of Scotland, and Prov. G.M. of Renfrewshire East, and there was a large attendance of brethren—from 300 to 400 being present.

Colonel Campbell, on taking the chair, said he felt gratified at the kindness which had been shown him, and said he was perfectly willing to place his services at the disposal of the brethren. (Applause.) Before entering on the business he called upon Bro. Morgan to read some letters of apology for absence.

Bro. Morgan said it would delay the business of the meeting too much to read the letters of apology for absence, but he might say that amongst them they had numerous expressions of cordial sympathy in the movement in which they were engaged. Amongst those who had promised them support were the Earl of Rosslyn, the Earl of Mar and Kellie, Sir James Alexander of Westerton, Bro. Whyte-Melville, Charles Dalrymple, M.P., and a number of others. He had a great pile of letters on the table, many of them with half-a-dozen names attached, expressing their wish to have Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart nominated for re-election.

The Chairman said they were aware that on the 5th August last, at the quarterly communication, there was a long list of laws which had been recommended for alteration, and when they came up for the convenience of Grand Lodge they were put under certain sections. A large number of the alterations, he thought, were opposed to the rights and privileges of daughter lodges holding of Grand Lodge, and in the interest of Freemasonry in Scotland they should have been fully discussed. There was a proposal that the whole of one of the sections should be passed nem. con., and by a large voting power that had apparently come into Grand Lodge, without knowing that they were about to do, certain members had succeeded in silencing the voices of those who wished to have a discussion of these most important subjects. That was sufficient to show that there ought to be some change in the constitution and working of Grand Lodge, and he regretted that a large number had thought fit to leave the lodge at that time, because if they had held together, though defeated at one time, victory would be sure to crown those who persevered in a good cause. The brethren who retired formed a committee, who had afterwards called that meeting. It had been alleged that this committee of thirty-two was entirely composed of Glasgow brethren, but to show that this was not the case he had to state that there were thirty-two lodges in the Glasgow province, each giving three representatives, but besides, there were fifty who were entitled to vote in right of their proxies. Out of the large number of 146 there were only ten on the committee, which was not an extravagant number. He trusted everything would be done in a constitutional manner, and that it would be shown they had no desire to raise any jealousy between east and west. Their desire was that such scenes as had occurred in Grand Lodge would not occur again, and that their business would be conducted for the benefit of Freemasonry in Scotland, and for the benefit of the Craft they all loved so well. (Applause.)

Captain Harriott moved the first resolution—"That this meeting has learned with regret the means that were taken in many instances to obtain votes at the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge on 5th August last, by third parties paying admission fees for members to attend and vote on the occasion; that this is contrary to the spirit of Masonry, and the practice which has hitherto been acted on in conducting the business of Grand Lodge." He said they were not taking up this matter as a party movement, but for the sake of all the lodges throughout Scotland. They wished lodges to come forward, and not send incompetent brethren who would misrepresent them. It was mentioned that third parties were paying admission-fees for members to attend, and this was totally un-masonic. Any one who became a Freemason must pay for himself, otherwise he was not a free agent to vote and think according to his own conscience. (Applause.)

Bro. Robert Wylie, in seconding the motion, said that the fact of so many brethren being drawn together showed there was something rotten in the state of Grand Lodge.

The resolution was put to the meeting, and unanimously adopted.

Bro. Bickerton moved—"That at said Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge brethren voted whose names were not on the qualified voters' roll made up on first Monday of April last, and who were therefore not qualified to vote as provided for by chapter 17, section 15, of Grand Lodge Laws; and this meeting therefore protests that the whole proceedings of Grand Lodge at said Quarterly Communication were null, and are not binding on the brethren." The Grand Lodge Laws, he said, clearly showed that those on the roll at 1st April were alone entitled to vote, except to fill up vacancies as shown in cap 17, sec. 15, Grand Lodge Laws. When the vote was taken on the 5th of August there were those voting that were not on the roll, and on that account he retired, as the proceedings were being conducted in an unconstitutional manner. A few days afterwards he wrote to the Grand Secretary to furnish him with a roll up to date, and he found that since the 1st April 191 names had been placed on the roll, and a large number had voted at that meeting who were not entitled to vote. He, therefore, maintained that the whole business on this account was void. (Applause.)

Bro. Agnew, R.W.M. (No. 126), Kilmarnock, seconded the motion, which was likewise adopted.

Bro. Fisher, R.W.M. (No. 129), Paisley, said that the Grand Committee had ordered a return of the proxy commissions issued since the 24th June, and 120 names were entered on that return who were not entitled to vote.

Bro. R. Nisbet, Prox. Master, (No. 340), moved—"That the present proxy system is unsatisfactory, inasmuch as it fails to secure a due representation of the opinion of lodges in the provinces; and steps ought to be immediately taken by Grand Lodge for improving the same."

Bro. D. M. Neilson, I.P.M., (No. 341), seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Bro. Fisher proposed the next resolution—"That this meeting deprecates, in the strongest possible terms, the proceedings adopted for promoting the candidature of Mr. Henry Inglis as Grand Master, whereby members have been in many instances erroneously led to suppose that the present Grand Master intended to retire from the office." He said that an attempt had been made to shuffle the present Grand Master out of office by giving him a testimonial, and the names of persons were attached to this proposal who knew nothing about it. Direct statements had been made by certain persons in their canvass for Mr. Inglis that Sir Michael intended to retire, and many brethren by this means were induced to sign the requisition to the present Deputy Grand Master, and allowed him to be put in nomination for an office that was not vacant. He thought it would only have been courteous in the first place to ask Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart whether he intended to retire. (Cheers.)

Bro. W. D. Chalmers, R.W.M., No. 204, Ayr, seconded the motion, which was put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

Bro. Barrow moved—"That having regard to the deplorable condition into which the financial affairs of Grand Lodge had fallen, and the energetic measures recently taken to place them in a satisfactory state under the guidance of the present M.W. Grand Master, Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, Bart., and the fact that for this purpose much still remains to be done, this meeting has learned with satisfaction that he is willing to continue his valuable services for another term; and being satisfied that his re-election to the throne would promote the best interest of Masonry in Scotland, this meeting pledges itself to use every exertion to secure his appointment." The question for them to decide, he said, was whether they would support one who they knew had done right or one who they knew had not acted right. He had been a member of Grand Lodge for four and twenty years, and from the first day he had become aware of the fact that it was a rotten institution, and that it was based on rottenness in consequence of the way in which it was conducted by those in Edinburgh. Investigation after investigation was called for, but they never got any satisfaction. When the new hall was built a great impetus was given to Masonry, and better accounts were afterwards got to account for the income of Grand Lodge, which showed that the Secretary and Treasurer were taking all the income for fees to themselves. When the Secretary died it was found that he was due Grand Lodge a large sum, but most of it went for law expenses. (Laughter.) Earl Dalhousie was afterwards elected Grand Master, but he refused to take office unless a committee was appointed to investigate into Grand Lodge business. That committee came back to Grand Lodge and reported that everything was found in order—everything was complete and perfect. Under the next Grand Secretary, though the income showed a large amount, they were still getting deeper into debt, till Grand Lodge became almost bankrupt. When Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart came to the throne, he was determined to have matters looked into, and took the bull by the horns. The result was that at the end of 1876 the Secretary was dismissed. A cashier and interim-secretary were appointed, and the Finance Committee took every means to carry out the views of the Grand Master. They found, by careful watching and the exertions of the present Grand Secretary, Bro. D. Murray Lyon, means to put the Grand Lodge in a more satisfactory condition. He felt sure that during the last twenty-five years the Grand Lodge must have lost from £50,000 to £70,000. In February, 1877, they had only £20, while they were hundreds in debt; and in 1878 the funds accumulated to nearly £2000, which was a pretty good indication of what proper management could effect. Singular to state, the very persons who were in office during this period of mismanagement some brethren now wished to promote. (Applause.) All they wanted was to get again into power. He did not know whether they were responsible for the "plundering and blundering" in the past, but those who were in office at the time this was going on, were not the people to trust with the management of Grand Lodge. (Applause.) The late Grand Secretary had a salary of £315 a-year, and had stated that he spent £313 out of that amount in carrying on the work, yet he could buy gold medals and silver plate to make presents out of £315, and still manage to live at the rate of £1000 a year. Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart had had great difficulties to contend with in the past, and they might be sure they would not be less in the future if they allowed those who had been in power to get back again. He hoped every brother would lend his aid in every form to return to the chair of Grand Lodge Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart, in order that he might complete those reforms which he had begun, and so leave Grand Lodge in a state worthy of her position. (Applause.)

Bro. John Baird, in seconding the resolution, said that he had heard it stated by the Grand Jeweller that there was a determination that no one outside of Edinburgh should be allowed to sit on the Grand Committee. ("Shame.")

Bro. A. McConnachie stated that the Earl of Dalhousie left £150, and he wished to know whether this money had ever been handed over to the Grand Lodge. It was meant to form the nucleus for decayed Masons' widows and children, but he had heard that it was handed over to the late Grand Secretary, and spent on a champagne supper. (Laughter.) He asked Bro. Barrow if this was true.

Bro. Barrow said this was not before the meeting, but if the question was put to him in Grand Lodge he would answer it.

The motion was then put to the meeting, and enthusiastically adopted.

Bro. Mackie, R.W.M., (No. 7), Hamilton, proposed the next resolution—"That committees be appointed for Edinburgh, and also for each province, with power to add to their number, for the purpose of promoting the election of Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart, Bart., and carrying out the foregoing resolutions; and that it be remitted to the present Acting Committee to organise a committee in Edinburgh and in the provinces."

Bro. Moncrieff, Edinburgh, said that they were already taking steps to organise a committee in the city.

Bro. J. A. Ferguson, Prox. S.W., Mother Kilwinning, seconded the motion, which was adopted.

Bro. Macfarlane, Dumbarton, said that capital was being made out of the assertion that this was purely a Glasgow affair, and he hoped that the Central Committee would take care that the committees were organised in such a way as to silence this rumour.

Bro. Barrow said that the object of the meeting was to get Masons from all parts of Scotland to see what was to be done, and where the Central Committee would be was a matter for future arrangement.

Bro. Gillespie, R.W.M. (No. 16), Falkirk, seconded by Bro. W. F. Shaw, moved—"That said resolutions be printed, and copies sent to each R.W.M. and Wardens, with a request that they be submitted for the early consideration of their lodges, and with a hope that they will see fit to give them their support at Grand Lodge meeting to be held on 4th November next, or instruct their proxies to do so."

The resolutions were agreed to, and a vote of thanks having been given to the chairman for presiding, the meeting separated.

LETTERS FROM OUR IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

No. V.—BANQUETS VERSUS CHARITY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am going to touch upon a very delicate subject to day, and to traverse very dangerous ground, I know, but my hope is that as my intentions are good, my remarks will be received in lenient criticism, and with fraternal consideration. I wish that I could think, that some of our lodges realized the great principle of our Order, Charity. Alas, is it not too patent that in some lodges Charity is a mere word, a profession, a familiar and customary utterance, but without meaning, consistency, or practical results? Am I stating an unpalatable fact, when I declare, that some of our lodges are spending far too much on banquets, and giving far too little to Charity? Nay, shall I be censured by some, complained of by others, if I go further and add, that many lodges are in debt to their Treasurer, because their material expenditure exceeds their income? Once more, shall I be condemned as presumptuous if I further venture to remark that the amount of charity is as compared with all this "quantity of sack," really representing the "unknown quantity?" Let us look at the matter seriously.

A large number of London lodges spend all their incomes on their "social agreeabilities," so that they give, and can give nothing as a lodge, for Masonic charity, or for the Charities of the Order. This is a fact, to my mind, always most humiliating, that seven-tenths of the lodges and chapters of our Order have, as yet, done nothing, (as lodges and chapters), for the Charities of the Order, while the amount given in casual charity is ludicrously insignificant. And it is useless to say, as some do for reply, "Oh! but the brethren give individually." Be it so; but the brethren are not the lodge, and I contend, for one, that until all our lodges and chapters support the Charities ostensibly and efficiently, they are not either recognizing their own mission, or realizing their proper responsibilities in this respect. Now, I am not going to attack our social system. I consider it in due proportion needful and advisable, and good for Masonry. But I, for one, do deprecate the fact sincerely, that the balance sheets of many lodges only proclaim that all has been given up to material gratification, that nothing has been done for benevolence, and that banquets, not charity, are the characteristic "be all" of too many of our lodges and chapters. I trust that 1879 may see an improvement in this state of things. The claims of Masonic charity, the needs of our great institutions, are many and pressing, and instead of spending all our lodge returns to please ourselves, let us seek to help a poor destitute brother, yes, if even we have to dispense with a banquet or two, in order to do honour to the always sacred cause of Charity.

I am, yours fraternally,

YOUR OWN IRREPRESSIBLE CORRESPONDENT.

LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday, 18th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. M. Clabon, P.G.D., President of the Lodge, presided. Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B., Senior Vice President, and Bro. James Brett, P.G.P., Junior Vice President, were in their respective chairs. The other brethren present were John Hervey, G.S.; A. A. Pendlebury, W. Dodd, Col. H. S. Somerville Burney, P.M. 699; Joseph Wright, P.G.P.; H. Bartlett, W. Stephens, P.M. 1365; E. P. Albert, P.G.P.; H. Garrod, J. M. Klenck, W.M. 1686; C. F. Hogard, S. Rawson, P.D.G.M., China; W. Groome, W. Mann, P.M. 186; William Russell, P.M. 1464; Thomas Deane, W.M. 77; G. R. Shervill, W.M. 25; W. Stuart, P.M. 141; G. P. Britten, W.M. 183; W. H. Grants to the amount of £160, made at last meeting of the lodge, were first confirmed.

Of new cases there were on the list fourteen, the whole of which were relieved.

The total sum granted was £390, viz.: one £100 (£100), two £50 (£100), one £30 (£30), two £25 (£50), three £20 (£60), one £15 (£15), three £10 (£30), and one £5 (£5).

Bro. Henry Garrod, before the lodge was closed, drew the attention of the President, Vice-Presidents, and brethren, to the loss the lodge had sustained since it last met, by the lamentable death of Bro. C. P. Cobham, one of the elected members, who was drowned with his wife and child in the wreck of the Princess Alice.

We are asked to state that the Urban Lodge of Instruction meets every Wednesday evening at half-past six o'clock at Bro. T. G. Willett's, 23, Gresham-st., City. Bro. J. L. Mather, P.M., is the Preceptor, Bro. J. B. D. Wall, Hou. Sec.

CONSECRATIONS.—The consecrations of the Clarendon Lodge and the St. Thomas's Chapter will take place respectively on Tuesday and Wednesday next. The ceremonies will be performed by Bros. Hervey, Buss, and other eminent brethren.

FRANCE. (Communiqué.)

The General Assembly of the "Grand Orient of France" for the session of 1878, began its work on Monday, 9th of September, at half-past nine a.m., at the "Temple Maçonnique," rue Cadet, 16, à Paris.

Provisional President, Bro. De St. Jean, President of the "Conseil de l'Ordre."

This first sitting had, for its object, the organization of the Assembly and the formation of Bureaux.

170 W.M.'s or delegates answered the call of the roll.

The second sitting took place the same day at 2 o'clock. The Assembly was constituted, and the "Bureaux" were formed. President pro. tem., Bro. De St. Jean.

The order of the day ran thus:—

Nomination of the President. Proclamation of the members of the "Conseil de l'Ordre," whose mandate had expired and were subject to re-election.

Nomination of commissions to report upon the proposition sent to all subordinate lodges, respecting a modification of the art. 41 of the Constitution.

196 presidents of lodges or delegates were present.

The ballot for President of the Assembly gives as result:—177 voters, out of which

Bro. De St. Jean received ...	131
" Le Dlé, from Rouen, received ...	31
" Cousin received ...	3
" Andrient, from Lyons, received ...	1
" Valentin received ...	1
" Lecomte ...	1
" Dèau ...	1
" Bella ...	1
Lost Votes ...	7

Bro. De St. Jean is proclaimed President of the Assembly of the Grand Orient of France.

The members of the "Conseil de l'Ordre" to be re-elected or replaced are:—Bros. Bremond, from Aix; Bruand, from Besançon; Doué, from Banlieue; Du Hamel, Paris; Roehc, (Rochefort-sur-mer); Pouille, from Amiens; André Rousselet, from Paris; Wyruboff, from Paris; Doctor Collineau, from Paris; Andrient, from Lyons; Lagache, from Boulogne-sur-Mer.

The Committee on Finance was conferred on the following: Bros. Grain, Didier, Chevalon, Neumark, Didot, Marchal, Blanpain, David, Lassale, L. Borgne.

The following brothers were elected Committee for the revision of the Art. 41 of the Constitution:—Lauth, W.M. of Alsace-Lorraine; L. Hubert, Editor "Chaine de Union;" Doctor le Dlé (alias Grimaud in the "Monde Maçonnique") from Rouen; Laffon, from Pefiquan; Corbierres (Protestant Minister), Agen; Neumark, from Reims; Pirin, from Paris; Gouvetriet, from Paris.

The sitting of the 10th of September began at half-past 2 o'clock, p.m., President, Bro. de Saint Jean.

Bro. Neumark, reporter of the Commission for the Revision of Art 41 of the Constitution, presented his report.

The former Art. 41 says, Le Grand Orient ne constitue pas d'Ateliers dans les pays où il existe une Puissance Maçonnique régulière.

The proposition made is to add: "en relations fraternelles avec lui."

Bro. Neumark explains the reasons that have engaged eight members out of nine (one being aforesaid) to propose to the Assembly the adoption of that modification.

If I understood rightly this report, the culminating point of the considerations enforced by Bro. Neumark, ran thus:—

"There is a growing tendency towards a transformation in Masonry.

From being universal, it tends to become more and more national (English, German, etc., etc.).

The modification introduced in the Article 1 of the Constitution, by the Couvent of 1877, has caused several Masonic Powers to break with us. Their lodges have been shut against every French visiting Mason.

The Grand Orient of France has shown during a long time a great spirit of moderation, of conciliation, but without obtaining satisfaction.

It has its dignity to sustain, therefore, be the consequences what they may, it must put itself in a position to fight against those hostile powers.

The Grand Orient of France must have the power and the right to create French Masonic centres wherever the resident French Masons may congregate, in every country where the Masonic temples are shut against them.

They try to checkmate the Grand Orient of France, because it has taken the lead in the way of progress, by proclaiming, in Masonry, the liberty of conscience.

France is accustomed to these fights, to these resistances. The French Mason must not recoil."

Bro. Hubert, Chaine d'Union, spoke on behalf of the minority—This is a brief analysis of his remarks: He said he would be short in his considerations, wishing to avoid any froissement but, at first, he must observe that in presence of the spirit of appaisement, that some a few months back seemed to prevail in the foreign Masonic powers towards French Masonry, it would be prudent, it would be wise, it would be necessary to avoid repeating in a new measure anything that other Masonic powers might consider as an act of war, a threat striking directly at such or such Masonic jurisdiction. In the present case, the Grand Lodge of England would feel touched directly and deliberately by said article thus modified.

Consequently, Bro. Hubert and the minority that he represents opposed themselves energetically to the said modifications, and his vote will be against the adoption of the said proposition.

However, he would be ready to rally himself, in a spirit of conciliation, of concord, of "appaïsement" to the total suppression of art. 41, considering the state of mind of the resent members, that suppression, without striking at any particular Masonic power, would spare the susceptibilities and respect the rights of every one, since that would be the proclamation of "common right" the primordial right which can not be denied to any.

Bro. Neumark, in the name of the majority, is opposed to this amendment.

Bro. Jousault (from Reims) answered with a great deal of logic against the modification to the art 41, and with considerations powerful alike moral and practical. He gives an explanation of the tendencies and the importance of English and German Masonry, which strength and material power formed the reasons for maintaining the art 41, without addition.

But there is nothing to be done against a "parti près d'avance." There is no use to conceal the fact that the great majority of the Grand Orient de France is drawn irresistibly towards a maelstrom of reform which may transform that association into something entirely different from Masonry.

Thus, after hearing two or three vehement orators, whose speeches we will not relate, not wishing to throw oil upon the fire, the Grand Orient de France, after favourable conclusions from its Orator in office (Bro. Jean from Albi), adopted, by a large majority, the article 41, modified.

Bros. de Loucelles, Jousault, Roche, Hubert, and a few others, voted against such adoption.

An incident followed the adoption of art. 41, which is a new proof of the resolution already formed by the advanced group of the Grand Orient to run on to the full end of these innovations.

A propos of the few reflections of the Freemason, in answer to the Bauhütte, on the conduct of the Bros. De Saint Jean, Marichal, and Hubert, after the revision of Art. 1st of the Constitution, remaining however in the Grand Orient, a brother made in interpellation to the President of the "Conseil de l'Ordre" to know what were the intentions both of the President and of the "Conseil de l'Ordre," about the revision of the rituals, so as to put them in harmony with the new Article first of the Constitution. Our tolerant brethren, great lovers of liberty of conscience for themselves, and nobody else, are tired to see the circulars of the Grand-Orient of France, and the convocation letters of a few lodges, headed by that noxious formula, A. L. G. D. G. A. d'L. U.

This gives sleepless nights to these unfortunate "Free-thinkers."

I will not relate to you, out of respect for your readers, the riotous scenes, the various interpellations, the motions more or less insane, that succeeded the explanations of the Bros. De Saint Jean, and Hubert, explanations that should have reassured all.

But they wanted scandal, and especially they wanted to prove, without any possible denial, that it was the atheistical free-thought which ruled supreme in the Grand Orient of France.

The assembly voted a resolution, enjoining to the President, to the "Conseil de l'Ordre," that they must put before the General Assembly at its first meeting of 1879, the reformed rituals.

Following this vote, passed as we have said by a large majority, Bro. De Saint Jean, deposing on the altar with much calm and dignity his insignia of President du Conseil de l'Ordre, and after taking leave with a grand and noble language, gave in his "démision" of President of the Grand Orient and of member of the "Conseil de l'Ordre," and notwithstanding all entreaty retired.

After the departure of Bro. De Saint Jean, the assembly voted that it did not accept the resignation of Bro. De Saint Jean, and also voted that a committee, formed of all the Officers of the Grand Orient, should go and visit him, in order that he might withdraw his resignation. The "Conseil de l'Ordre" will do the same thing.

We shall see to-morrow what has become of these missions.

But if Bro. De Saint Jean consents to preside again, he will shelter under his name the most intolerant and absolute positivism, the only true ruling power now in the Grand Orient of France.

SECOND LETTER.

I resume my narrative of the Grand Orient of France's conventual doings.

Sitting of the 11th of September.

What I surmised took place; Bro. de St. Jean, yielding to the entreaties of the committeers sent to him by the Assembly and the "Conseil de l'Ordre," has withdrawn his resignation, and remains, (Poor fellow, I am sorry for him), President of the Grand Orient, and member of the "Conseil de l'Ordre."

This is an act of weakness, hard to explain, for facts are to-day exactly what they were yesterday.

And the best proof I can give for this is, that before Bro. de St. Jean was introduced anew, the very same group of Venerables and Delegates who caused the tempest of yesterday have presented a new demand of interpellation to the effect of obtaining both from the General Assembly and the "Conseil de l'Ordre" a declaration that the actual reduction of Article 1st of the Constitution edicts the absolute obligation for the Grand Orient of France and its subordinate lodges to suppress entirely the formula, A.L.G.D.G.A.D.I.U.

A new hurricane was beginning at the hearing of that motion, and Bro. de St. Jean would have been introduced in the midst of this whirlwind, when Bro. Caubet, seeing breakers ahead, and understanding all the dangers and inconveniences of the situation, brought forward all his influence as a brother acting and thinking in perfect harmony with said group, but wishing to make "à coup sûr."

"My brethren, says the editor of the Monde Maçonnique you know me; you are well aware that I have been one of those that fought the more pertinaciously to obtain the modification of Act 1st of the Constitution. I will not disown myself. I must tell you that I am one of the two brothers that have been appointed by the 'Conseil de l'Ordre' to revise the rituals, (pretty work it shall be, to be sure! A. V.), be quiet, you may feel sure that we will amend them so as to render them in perfect conformity with our new constitutional law: then, pray, wait a little!" The majority then consented to desist, though it was done with a visible reluctance. They well understood it was only a question of time. Yes, dear brother editor, nothing will henceforth hinder the Grand Orient of France from surrendering body and soul, (have they got a soul?), to positivism.

They may try some time yet to dissimulate, but it will only be tactics—that's all.

Now, the positivists have stormed the Grand Orient of France, and they rule supreme. They will not recede.

Bro. De St. Jean was then introduced, and re-took the presidential chair.

A FOREIGN VISITOR.

CONSECRATION OF THE LEOPOLD LODGE, No. 1760.

On Thursday week there was a goodly muster of the brethren of the mystic tie at Scarbro' on the occasion of the consecration of the Leopold Lodge, No. 1760. The ceremony was announced to take place at noon, and at that hour a large number of Masons were assembled in the rooms of the Old Globe Lodge, 200, where the Leopold Lodge has found a welcome home. A procession of Stewards and Provincial Grand Officers was formed in the ante-room, and entered during the playing of a march by the Organist, and a lodge was opened by V.W. Bro. John Pearson Bell, Deputy Provincial Grand Master, the Wardens' chairs being occupied respectively by Bros. T. Sissons, P.M., P.P.S. Registrar, and George Balmford, P.M., P.P.G.O. The usual preliminaries having been duly observed, the D.P.G.M. proceeded with the ceremony of consecration, which was conducted with full choral accompaniments, Bro. J. Woodall, P.M. 200, P.P. S.G. Warden, acting as Director of Ceremonies.

The W.M. Designate, Bro. G. H. Walshaw, P.M. 200, and P.P.G.D.C., was then placed in the chair, and saluted in ancient form, and he then proceeded to appoint and invest the following officers:—Bros. T. J. Gilbert, S.W.; J. Verity, J.W.; R. H. Peacock, Treasurer; W. Fraser, Secretary; A. S. Kirk, S.D.; J. Knaggs, J.D.; E. H. Hackers, I.G.; G. Dixon, Organist; G. Simpson, Tyler.

The D.P.G.M. then gave a very eloquent address on the aims and objects of Freemasonry, exhorting the brethren to diligence in their duties, and in aiding the charities. He also alluded to the fact that Scarborough was one of the earliest centres of Freemasonry in Yorkshire, the Old Globe Lodge having been constituted in 1771. The W.M. then announced that their Royal Bro. Prince Leopold had accepted honorary membership of the lodge, and the D.P.G.M. (Dr. Bell) and Bro. M. C. Peck, Provincial Grand Secretary, were elected honorary members. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet at the Royal Hotel, at which Bro. Walshaw presided, supported by the D.P.G.M. and a number of Past Grand Officers and brethren. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and a pleasant evening was passed, many of those present subsequently adjourning to the Grand Hotel, where the annual Masonic ball in aid of the charities was held under very distinguished Masonic patronage. The musical arrangements at the ceremonies were very excellent, the principal instrumentalists being Bros. B. Shaw and C. H. Hunt, and the leading vocalists Bros. G. H. Walshaw and J. E. Wilkinson.

The following is as complete a list as could be procured of the brethren present:—J. P. Bell, D.P.G.M.; Charles E. Camidge, P.G. Chaplain; J. Parkinson, P.P.G. Chaplain; M. C. Peck, P.G. Secretary; T. Sissons, P.M. 157, P.P.G. Regr.; H. Blane, P.G.D.C.; G. Balmford, P.M. 236, P.P.G.O.; C. H. Hunt, P.G. Organist; A. Fraser, P.M. 1298, P.G.S.B.; A. Fricour, P.M. 1298, P.G.S.D.; N. H. Delamere, P.P.G.S.D.; J. Ward, P.G. Pursuivant; G. H. Walshaw, P.M. 200, P.P.G.S.D.; R. H. Peacock, P.M. 200; W. Garbutt, P.M. 200; H. A. Williamson, P.M. 200; F. Foster, P.M. 1248; W. Roberts, P.M. 298; W. H. Prince, P.M. 298; G. Taylor, P.M. 1248; A. W. Tomlinson, W.M. 200; R. Powley, P.M. 200; T. B. Whythead, W.M. 1611; H. J. Morton, 1248; G. Padley, 1248; R. Boreman, 200; W. G. Smyth, 312; H. Fairfax, 190; J. H. Hackett, 200; J. H. Millstone, 1605; J. W. Harrison, 1621; James Horsfall, 178, G. Chambers, 555; W. B. Richardson, 200; T. Westlake; J. F. Littlewood, 139; J. D. Sissons, 139; W. Fraser, 200; G. Dixon, 1166; J. J. Davidson, 1248; J. Marny, 1248; G. C. Pritchard, 1219; A. S. Kirk, 304; B. Shaw; M. Robinson; J. Knaggs, 200; V. Fowler, 200; W. Meekie; S. Middleton, 200; J. Wanless; J. Webster; E. H. Hackers, 200; A. M. Labarthe, 1298; G. Verity, 200; J. Simpson, 200; E. Walker, 784; W. DeMeilhac, 1248; A. T. B. Turner, 1611; J. E. Wilkinson, 1611; T. P. Currier (Henry Price Lodge, New York); T. Crier, 157, &c.

The weather was unfortunately stormy, which, combined with the fact that Thursday is market day at Scarbro', prevented the attendance of many, and the P. G. Secretary read several letters of apology from brethren who were unable to be present.—Yorkshire Post.

SHEEP, THEIR VARIETIES, POINTS, CHARACTERISTICS, ETC., by JOSEPH DARBY, Dean and Son, Fleet-street, E.C.

We have in this book a very lucid account of sheep, about which a good deal may be written, and about which much ought to be known by us all, in these well informed days, especially.

It seems that, according to Parkinson, there once were 37 English breeds, of which only 16 are now extant, and that the others are practically extinct. Among non-existing species may be mentioned the Ryeland, the Norfolk Heath, the Wilts and Herts horned, and others. And though it would not profit our readers to go through the whole list of existing sheep, yet some of our predominant favourites may well be mentioned, such as the South Down, the Leicester, the Cotswold, the Lincoln, the Hampshire, the Shropshire, the Oxford, the Romney Marsh or Kentish, the Cheviot, the Exmoor, the Dorset, the Mountain, (Duke of Roxburgh) as well as several smaller mountain breeds.

Neither need we now call attention to the colonial sheep, (principally Merino,) because that would lead us into too long a disquisition. Of the foreign sheep, the most common is also the Merino, originally Spanish, but now greatly prevalent in Germany and Hungary. Mr. Darby states that nine-tenths of the sheep of Germany, Austria, and Hungary are true Merino, and that one-fourth of the French sheep are also either pure Merino or half Merino.

Among foreign sheep may be specified the Negretti, the Rambouillet, the Persian, the Syrian, the Wallachian, the Cyprian. Our readers will perceive what a deal may be written and ought to be known about sheep, which help us so greatly in our necessary clothing and daily food, and like the Frenchmen, they will be ready, we feel sure, to say, "revenons a nos moutons."

THE EARLY HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES OF FREEMASONRY.

Bro. GEORGE F. FORT. We are glad to note the favour with which this very valuable work is now looked upon everywhere by all Masonic students, and we venture to predict for it still greater popularity, and a wider circulation. The carefulness of compilation, the originality of research, the lucidity of statement, the remarkable correctness of view, which in general distinguish it, deserve to be gratefully appreciated and encouraged by us all.

PRACTICAL MASONIC LECTURES.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE, P.G.M. of Georgia, U.S. We have been much struck by this valuable little compendium of Masonic practicality. It is well written, clearly expressed, the points are delivered with force and yet eloquence, and no one can rise from its perusal without being more convinced than ever of the value and reality of our good old religious teaching Order, and without feeling that despite Mr. Hecker's "et hoc genus omne," of "scribblers and poetsasters," who like to run a muck at Masonry, there is a Masonic literature after all, and one that deserves study, and will pay perusal.

THE WORLD ON WHEELS.

By EZRA M. STRATTON. New York, Author, 1878. This is an historical sketch of the coachbuilder's art and its results from the time of Ramezes the Great, (circa 1500 B.C.), down to the American Exhibition in 1876. The first picture is the primitive sledge, of no particular date, and the last is a hearse which took a prize at Philadelphia. Between these two extremes come 400 illustrations of carriages of every shape and size, and every period. The chariots of the Assyrian sculptures, of Egypt, Pompeii, Rome, and Greece, with many others, are all figured and described at length, while, in the latter part of the book, full accounts are given of the carriages used in all modern nations. In any future edition, perhaps Mr. Stratton may find some information worth quoting as to the origin of the London Hansom which appeared in 1873, in the March number of the Journal of the Society of Arts.

INAUGURATION OF THE FALKLAND MEMORIAL.

The great clat with which the ceremony of unveiling the memorial to Viscount Falkland, on Newbury battlefield passed off, on Monday, was much more due to Freemasonry than was apparent to the outside world. Owing to the high position occupied by the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, as Pro Grand Master of the Craft, the officers and brethren of the local lodge, the Loyal Berkshire Lodge of Hope, No. 574, initiated steps with the object of doing honour to his lordship, and, in accordance with the terms of a resolution unanimously adopted by the brethren, the Provincial Grand Master, (Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P.), was petitioned, and granted permission to the brethren of the province to take part in the day's ceremonial attired in full Masonic clothing. Invitations were at once issued to the various lodges in this and neighbouring provinces, and every effort was made, (so far as the shortness of the time permitted), to secure a good attendance.

When it became known that the Freemasons intended being present, the Oddfellows, Foresters, and other bodies, followed the example, and the result was, that the demonstration assumed an important character, and Lord Carnarvon received a welcome which must have been highly pleasing to him, given, as it was, in the town near which his lordship resides, and where his high qualities, as a landowner and neighbour, are best known.

Bro. William Biggs, of Reading, Past Provincial Grand Secretary of Berks and Bucks, and P.P.S.G. Warden of Wills, kindly undertook the duties of Director of Ceremonies, and discharged them with much efficiency.

Among the brethren who attended and signed the lodge book were the Pro Grand Master of England, Lord Carnarvon; the officers and brethren of the Loyal Berkshire Lodge of Hope, No. 574, namely, Bro. G. M. Knight, W.M.; Barron Fielder, P.M.; P.G.S.W.; A. Burns, P.M.; R. Ravenor, P.M.; W. H. Herbert, P.M.; Geo. Boyer, P.M.; P.P.G.P.; Jno. Bance, P.P.G.J.D.; S. G. Hunt, S.W.; S. Knight, J.W.; C. Hopson, Sec.; Rev. W. Fraser Campbell, Chaplain; W. Balding, M.C.; W. B. Wilson, J.D.; F. H. Marychurch, W. G. Coldicutt, W. T. Toms, G. J. Cosburn, W. J. Westrope, W. H. Booth, R. Johnston, T. W. Graham, E. Jones, A. Stradling, W. Cordey, James Tegg, W. Knight, E. P. Plenty, Jas. Biffen, J. G. O'Farrell, (Robert Burns, No. 25), and others.

The visitors included Bro. the Rev. George Portal, P.P. J.W. Oxon, P.M. No. 10; C. W. Cox, J.W. 1566; R. Silver, (Mayor of Maidenhead), 1566; J. T. Berscy, 487; A. Welch, W.M. 1101; H. H. Hodges, P.P.G.S.W.; R. Nicholson, 1566; S. Jacob, Fidelity, 445; W. T. Legge, D.C. 1566; R. T. Shrewsbury, 1566; Ephraim Davey, S.D. 1566; T. Pearson, 157; Dick Radclyffe, P.G. Stwd.; T. Newman, D.C. 1101; T. Hawker, 209; Jas. Batting, S.W. 1501 and 1566; H. Ayres, 414; E. Hopwood, P.M. 141, 1512, P.P.G.S.B. Middx.; Rev. C. R. Honey, Prov. Grand Chaplain; H. Balding, 1692; A. W. Cook, 382; E. L. Shepherd, W.M. 945; C. P. Smith, 209; C. Wheeler, 209; J. R. Stillman, H. Creed, 1101; H. J. Thatcher, W.M. 694; J. Gibson, 694; James B. Stone, 195; Hengist, and others.

THE FOUR ORIGINAL LODGES.

Much has been written about these lodges, but as a certain confusion has come over the accounts, owing to the lapse of time and the carelessness of past days, I think it well to remind the readers of the Freemason what is their history briefly recounted.

As mentioned by Anderson, at page 109, "Constitutions," 1738. They are

No. 1. The Lodge at the Goose and Gridiron.

"2. " " " " Crown.

"3. " " " " " Apple Tree.

"4. " " " " " Rummer and Grapes.

The No. 1 of the Old Lists continued No. 1 until 1813, when it became No. 2. It is now the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2. (unchartered). It was at the King's Arms, St. Paul's Churchyard, in 1736, according to Smith, and at the same place according to Anderson in 1738. In 1763, it was said to meet at the Queen's Arms, St. Paul's Churchyard, (probably the same house), and is said to have met at other houses subsequently. Its history has yet to be written. It has met at Freemasons' Hall, I believe continuously, since the end of the last century, probably from a much earlier date. Bro. W. J. Hughan kindly sends me the following, prepared for his forthcoming book: "Register of Lodges at the Union, and List of Centenary Lodges," &c. "No. 1, before the union, and No. 2 since, was named first of all the 'West Indian and American Lodge,' about the middle of the last century. I have it in Lists of 1763, 1765, &c. It is called Antiquity in Cole's List of 1744, and apparently dates from 1770 in that capacity. It has assembled at the King's Arms, and Queen's Arms, St. Paul's Churchyard, Mure, Fleet-street, &c. In a Grand Lodge Calendar I have of 1784 it is at Freemasons' Hall."

No. 2, though it appears in 1736 at the Bull and Gate, in Smithfield, is out, Bro. Hughan tells me, in Pine's list of 1723, and has since disappeared altogether.

No. 3, in 1736, is No. 2 of 1736; No. 2 of 1738, is No. 2, of 1763; No. 2, of 1811, and is now No. 4. It is also unchartered. It is the fourth in order as Anderson names them, but is at the Horn, Westminster, No. 2, in 1763. This old lodge amalgamated with two lodges, the Somerset House, and the Royal Inverness, and was No. 2 in up to 1813, and is now No. 4. Bro. Hughan informs me that No. 2, before the Union, and No. 4 since, was first called the "Old Horn." It is so in lists up to 1768, he adds, in his collection. Also that in 1774 of Cole's List it is changed to "Somerset House," the latter lodge, warranted in 1764, having united with the "Old Horn," and hence its change of name. The Inverness Lodge was the first chartered after the Union, and also united with it. Hence its present name.

The No. 3 of 1717, is the No. 11 of 1736, the No. 10 of 1738, the No. 6 of 1763, the No. 6 of 1811. Why it has changed places with No. 4 is only explicable on the ground given in Anderson, that for some reason, quite needlessly, as he avers, it gave up its immemorial usage, and took out a new charter in 1722, so that the No. 4 of 1717 preceded it, and became No. 3. It is now No. 12, Fortitude and Old Cumberland, having also amalgamated with the Old Cumberland Lodge, or taken the name of Fortitude between 1763 and 1781, apparently. Bro. Hughan informs me that it was first called Fortitude about 1774, and that the Lodge of Friendship was so called by resolution of the lodge in 1767. No. 12, Old Cumberland, warranted in 1783, before 1832, and is now, as before, named Fortitude and Old Cumberland. We want a good history of each of these lodges!

MASONIC STUDENT.

By a printer's error, as all who are interested in the matter will see at once, in my last note, 1730 is printed for 1738, and 1738 for 1763.

MASONIC STUDENT.

I will do my best to oblige "Masonic Student," and others by compiling a few particulars as to the early numbers of many of the old lodges which exist to-day, and will send the article in time for the December "Masonic Magazine."

I am at present, however, engaged in preparing my next work for the press (Register of Lodges at the Union, their Numbers before and since Dates of Warrants, Lists of Centenary Warrants, Illustrations of Centenary and Special Jewels, &c., &c.), that I must not stay to say more now, much as the subject interests me.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

The Athenæum says that Mr E. M. Thompson will succeed Mr. Bond as Keeper of the MSS. at the British Museum.

Under the American patents, some 14,000 telephones have, it is stated, during the past year been set up in the United States, and are being rented at an average rental of £10 per annum; and fresh orders are being received at the rate of 1000 sets per month.

Mr. Edison writes to Messrs. Horne and Thornwaite as follows:—"The newspapers have grossly exaggerated matters in regard to the megaphone. It is true I have been experimenting upon an apparatus for the benefit of those partially deaf, and with a fair degree of success, but should my efforts prove successful it will be several months before the instrument will be placed in the market."

Professor Struve, director of the Pulkova Observatory, is leaving Russia for a visit to Western Europe, for the purpose of giving directions for the construction of a new great refractor for the Pulkovo Observatory. The old refractor, which some time ago was one of the best in the world, is now behind those of Washington, Chicago, and Gateshead (Mr. Newall's Observatory), and the Pulkova Observatory, according to the will of its founder, the Emperor Nicholas, should be maintained superior to all other observatories in that direction.—Nature.

On Wednesday the vacation Judge, Mr. Justice Field, granted an order, upon an application made on behalf of the Poet Laureate, restraining the Christian Signal Publishing Company from publishing in their paper a poem entitled "Confessions of a Sensitive Mind," written by Mr. Tennyson some time ago, but never published, and now advertised for publication without his consent. The Christian Signal is a penny weekly newspaper lately started in London. Since then Mr. Justice Hawkins has made the order perpetual.

Padre Ferrari, the new Director of the Observatory at Rome, announces the discovery of a new comet on August 22. He has registered it as a star of the seventh magnitude, under No. 29,696 in Lalande's catalogue. It was then close to Scorpio, but is rapidly descending, so that on Thursday its declination would have been 20° 22' South. The light is very feeble, but still sufficiently visible. Its apparent diameter is 3'. It is transparent, shows no solid nucleus, and frequently changes colour.

The rage for exhibitions has now spread even to Central Asia. The latest news from Tashkend states that an agricultural and industrial exhibition is about to be held there. Great preparations are being made for it at Samarcand, and the Government has promised gold and silver medals to the exhibitors as well as honorary Kaftans.—Nature.

The golden wedding of the Austrian Empress's parents, the Duke and Duchess Max, in Bavaria, was celebrated last week at Tegersee, in the presence of the Empress, Princess Sophie d'Alençon, and Dukes Louis, Charles Theodore, and Max Emanuel. The Duke declined any public festivities.

Mr. G. W. Callender, F.R.S., of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, Mr. Edmund Owen, of St. Mary's, and Surgeons-Major P. Shepherd and F. Falwasser, Army Medical Department, have been elected Honorary Associates of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England, in recognition of their zealous and able services in furtherance of the objects of the St. John Ambulance Association, established by the Order for the dissemination of information as to the first treatment of the sick and injured.

The Academy notes that a successful experiment has lately been tried in the equatorial provinces of Egypt, which may not improbably ere long revolutionise the mode of transit in Eastern Africa, and solve a problem which has hitherto puzzled travellers. About a year ago, at Colonel Gordon's request, a few trained elephants were sent to Khartum, where they arrived in due course, having marched along the banks of the Nile. A report has been received in Cairo from Colonel Gordon stating that he had despatched them to the military station of Lardo, about 11 deg. south of Khartum, and six miles north of Gondokoro, and that they had accomplished this distance in 84 days. A not unimportant advantage to be derived from the employment of elephants in this manner was demonstrated by the fact that the negroes along the line of march were frightened by them, and made no attempt to attack the party. The elephants have gradually learned to live on leaves and grass, as the wild elephants do, and keep in first-rate condition without the different kinds of food to which they had previously been accustomed. Colonel Gordon consequently advises travellers going into the interior of Africa from Zanzibar to use elephants, and thus to avoid the necessity for a host of porters, who are a never-ending source of delay and annoyance. It may be remembered that the question of employing elephants in African exploration was discussed after the reading of Mr. H. B. Cotterill's paper on the Nyassa, for the Society's African Section on the 28th of May last.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

COLONIAL and FOREIGN SUBSCRIBERS are informed that acknowledgments of remittances received are published in the first number of every month.

It is very necessary for our readers to advise us of all money orders they remit, more especially those from the United States of America and India; otherwise we cannot tell where to credit them.

Several P.O.O.'s are now in hand, but having received no advice we cannot credit them.

Answers to Correspondents.

CORRESPONDENTS are respectfully requested to write their communications on one side of the paper only.

"Original Research," under Consideration.

By an evident misprint in our leader on the Girls' School last week, it was stated that there were 19 vacancies at the next election, which should have been 3, since increased to 4.

THE FRENCH GRAND ORIENT.

The interesting and graphic report of the proceedings of the French Grand Orient, and on the correctness of which our readers may safely rely, will be read by all Anglo-Saxon Masons with the deepest regret. We feel to-day, as we peruse these sad but striking and truthful words, how remarkably all our prognostications have been verified, how too exactly, alas! all our forebodings have been fulfilled. The French Grand Orient has now deliberately entered upon the platform, not of reform, but revolution, and where it is to lead to, or how it is to end, must severely tax the ablest of us all accurately to lay down or distinctly to predict. It has thrown down a gage of anger, warfare, strife, contention, resentment, and indignity to every Masonic jurisdiction in this world. It is a revolution, compounded of angry violence, undignified petulance, irrational destructiveness, and unmasonic animosity. But as realizing the alarming seriousness of the position which the Grand Orient of France, (by a turbulent majority) has created for French and for Cosmopolitan Freemasonry, we shall say no more, as we are not anxious by any words of ours to widen a chasm, wide enough already in all conscience, or to pour oil on a flame which threatens to destroy all within its reach. We but record the facts, for the information of our many readers at home and abroad, though, to say the truth, we cannot profess to be astonished at a result which previous proceedings had rendered only too certain, which forgone conclusion had already discounted. We are, we repeat, most sincerely sorry for the sake of French Freemasonry, and we most deeply grieve for the weakness and vacillation of Bro. St. Jean. As far as we are ourselves concerned, we care little for such foolish threats as the chartering of French Lodges, etc., knowing well that no English Mason, no Anglo-Saxon Mason, will countenance a clandestine meeting, an illegal, political, or atheistical secret society.

LIST OF CANDIDATES FOR THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

There are sixty-seven names on the list, though No. 3, H. Newbould, is withdrawn, leaving sixty-six, and eleven vacancies to fill up. Of these sixty-six, fourteen are London, one London and Essex, and the remaining fifty-one are provincial and colonial cases. East Lancashire has six; Lincolnshire, four; West Yorkshire, three; Hants, three; Devonshire, three; North Wales and Salop, three; Essex and South Wales, W.D., two; Durham, two; Warwickshire, two; Bristol, two; Suffolk, two; Derbyshire, one; Singapore, one; Dorsetshire, one; Northumberland, one; Nova Scotia, one; Surrey, one; Worcestershire, one; Northamptonshire, one; South Wales, E.D., one; Cheshire, one; Bengal, one; Somersetshire, one; Norfolk, one; West Indies, one; and North and East Yorkshire, one. Of the London cases, six have been taken in hand by the London Masonic Charity Association, namely, Green (5), Balcombe (50), Watkins (18), Frost (9), Nicholls (21), and Giles (15), and therefore we need say nothing of them to-day, as their claims have been carefully sifted and recognized. The six cases selected by the L.M.C.A. deserve the support of all our London brethren, who will do well to bear in mind that unity is strength. Of the remaining nine cases they mostly are the orphans of brethren initiated in or since 1870, and will come up for further consideration. Of the provincial candidates, many of them seem to have strong claims on the subscribers; such as No. 51, Worcestershire, with 25 years' subscription, and whose father was a P.G. Officer; No. 46, W. Yorkshire, with 17 years' subscription, and father in a lunatic asylum; No. 19, Suffolk, 17½ years' subscription; No. 23, Monmouthshire, 16 years; No. 6, W. Yorkshire, 13½ years; and 37, S. Wales, E. Division, 12½ years. Nova Scotia has a case of 13½ years' subscription, but nearly 10 years out of Masonry. Bristol has a case 10½ years, and others have 9½, and 9, all dying in Masonry. Of the remaining cases the years of subscription vary from 8 to 1½ years, and even under, and if the average of the whole subscriptions be taken, it will turn out, we apprehend, to be a little over 6 years each. Twenty-four of the cases are of or since 1870; seven in or since 1868; 26 in or since 1860; eight in or since 1850; while one goes back to 1844. Two points, further, I think, must strike us—the comparatively early period at which the parents have died in most cases, and the large proportion of these who have died with Masonic "harness on their back." This is as it should be; and though we are struck with East Lancashire having had originally 7 candidates, though now 6, nearly one-twelfth of the metropolitan cases, we yet are inclined to think that this list of the Boys' School proves beyond doubt the fair needs of the Craft, and the great value, and importance, and blessing of the School itself to our Order.

SCOTTISH MASONIC AFFAIRS.

Our readers will perceive elsewhere a report of some proceedings in Scotland, and will have perused the protest of the St. John's Lodge of Glasgow in our last. We can only repeat a caution and a hope we expressed once before, that nothing will be done for the mere object of agitation, and that all will remember in all they say and do in Scotland, the Masonic graces of Unity, Good Will, and Peace.

A CAUTION.

We have reason to believe that one or two persons alleged to hail from America, as Masons, are going about to lodges and individuals. We recommend caution both to lodges and individuals, as from specimens of their application for relief we would like to know a little more about them. There are many known impostors in America preying on the Craft, and it is just possible that some, finding the United States too hot for them, may have crossed the "little millpond," and are now patronizing us.

CLEOPATRA'S OBELISK.

We congratulate Bro. Erasmus Wilson on the happy completion of his patriotic sacrifices, just as we felicitate Bro. Dixon on the happy termination of his arduous labours, on the skill which has directed his engineering operations, on the gratifying success which has crowned his protracted undertaking. May Cleopatra's Needle be long destined to grace the Thames Embankment, and may it placidly look down amid revolving years, as it towers in its majestic simplicity and its striking grace over wondering strangers and apathetic Londoners.

PERSONAL SYMPATHY FOR OTHERS.

One of the charms of our Masonic aggregation is, its personal sympathy for all its members, and through its members, for humanity. In one sense Freemasonry may not be unjustly termed "Good Samaritanism," as it does not waste its time in asking, "Who is my neighbour?" neither does it imitate the supercilious and callous conduct of the "Priest or Levite" in the famous parable, but it at once seeks to take part in an active manner, to relieve calamity, to mitigate suffering. Hence its noble institutions, hence its continual acts of munificent charity. But yet it may be feared whether we all of us, Masons though we be, act up to our duties and responsibilities in this respect. The world is so vast, and our claims so many, that we think we do enough in attending to this or that when, in fact, we are practically achieving but little, inasmuch as we only touch the surface and fringe of things. A great deal of misery goes on in the world, of which we know nothing, just as it is true, a great deal exists of which we think, as we already do enough, we are not bound to relieve or expected to deal with. Our American contemporary, the Hebrew Leader, of New York has some very touching and appropriate words on the subject, which we make no excuse in submitting to our readers. We have often thought, for instance, how little we all know of each other in London, and "Night and Day," Dr. Barnardo's often startling periodical, makes revelations for us, which seem to illustrate with vivid, nay, with lurid light, the words which follow. "It is the misfortune of most large cities that, instead of union and sympathy, they consist of different ranks, so widely separated as, in fact, to form different communities. In most large cities, there may be said to be two nations; understanding as little of one another, and having as little intercourse as if they lived in different lands. In such a city as London, the distance of a few streets only will bring a person from one state of civilization to another, from the excess of refinement to barbarism, from the abodes of cultivated intellect to brutal ignorance, from what is called fashion to the grossest manners, and these distinct communities know comparatively little of each other." We think these words are most true, and fitly precede these which we now transcribe. "There are travellers from Great Britain who come to visit the American Indians, but who leave at home a community as essentially barbarous as that which they seek, who, perhaps, have spent all their lives in the midst of it, without giving it a thought. To these travellers, a hovel in one of the suburbs which they have left, would be as strange a place as the wigwam of our own forests. They know as little what thousands in their own city suffer, to what extremities thousands are reduced, by what arts thousands live, as they know of the modes of life in strange tribes. How much more useful lessons would be awakened in them, were they to penetrate the dens of want and crime, a few steps from their own door, than they gain from exploring a continent." What is true of London is true of all great cities, New York most especially, but such a fact may, indeed, for us all and to us all, "serve to point the moral, and adorn the tale:—" "Not a few grow up and die without understanding how others live and die around them, without having descended into the damp cellar where children and aged spend day and night, winter and summer, or without scaling the upper room which contains within its narrow and naked walls half a dozen destitute families. They see the poor in the streets, but know nothing of their desolate homes. They travel, in books at least, to distant regions, among different nations, but are strangers to the masses who speak their own tongue, and are joined with them, for weal or woe, in the same social state. This estrangement of men from men, of class from class, is one of the things which shows that the true bond of communities is as yet but imperfectly known." If such words be true, as true they undoubtedly are, they constitute a claim upon us all never to ignore the wants of our suffering humanity, but rather to seek, by all means, as well in Masonry as out, to do all we possibly can to relieve the distress, and succour the needs, of a common suffering humanity. As Freemasons, we may well, nay, should always, seek to cultivate the pleasant and refreshing grace of personal sympathy for others.

THE GRAND MASTERSHIP OF SCOTLAND.

We are authorized to state that Bro. Inglis, of Torsonce, the Depute Grand Master Mason of Scotland, has declined to comply with the requisition signed by about 500 members of the Masonic Order to allow himself to be nominated Grand Master.

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

By an amusing blunder (as if mistakes will never come right) Bro. Chas. Atkinson was printed for Bro. Chas. Atkins, in our last communication respecting this association. By a misprint in the circular, Ethel Stone is said to be No. 14, whereas it is No. 15, and Emma Eliza Williams, No. 29, was described as Eliza Ann Williams.

A Committee meeting was to be held on Friday to elect members and add to the Committee.

The Association is now actively and earnestly engaged in furthering the interests of its selected candidates for the Boys' and Girls' School.

Original Correspondence.

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

"THE PROGNOSTICATIONS OF H. L."

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,

In your issue of the 14th ult., I find a letter from "H.L.," commencing with the above portentous words of augury; I accordingly referred to a few of the later issues of the Freemason, and sought for the voice of prophecy by H. L., but found only the envious croaking of the raven, foretelling non success to a scheme evidently beyond his comprehension. I looked for the brotherly suggestion of carefully thought-out and well-considered arguments, but could only read the pointless verbiage of an unintelligible objection. I expected the urbane courtesy of doubt, but met the unwarrantable egotism of self-sufficiency in the manner in which he re-asserts that the association against which he is railing is an offshoot of the Charity Organization Society.

So much for what concerns me, as one of the promoters, and a member of the L.M.C.A. I will now, with your permission, defend myself from the velvet-hidden scratch of the cat's claw. Does H. L. measure my corn by his bushel? When he states that I must either forfeit my written promise of support to the case I have publicly taken up and worked for, or repudiate the principles of the scheme I have also publicly put my name to, if so, he must only have half informed himself, or must be both short and weak sighted, in which case I will gladly lend him a pair of glasses, whose lens shall be strong enough, I trust, to open the eyes of his mind and others, if any, (?) equally afflicted.

At the time this association was started, many brethren had already promised their support to individual cases, yet although they highly approved of and saw the necessity for united action on the part of the Metropolitan Lodges to secure the commensurate representation of London in the Masonic Charities, and accordingly gave us their influential support to the movement, still there was never a question but that those of its members whose votes were previously engaged were bound in honour, not only as men, but doubly so as Masons, to see their respective cases to a successful issue if possible, nay, more, so completely unfettered are our members, that though expected not to stultify themselves by refusing from mere caprice to uphold the cause they have taken in hand, yet should they elect to support any case not recommended by the committee, they are perfectly free to do so. This was distinctly laid down by Bro. Lieut. Col. Creaton, at the first regular meeting, on the 15th ult.: "No doubt the members of the association would send their votes, but the association must not say they must pledge themselves." By Bro. Lacey, "The very fact of a brother volunteering to become a member would be a guarantee for his throwing in what influence he had." By Bro. Newton, "Did not see that it was Bro. Lacey's intention that a brother should pledge himself to give his votes to the association, and these were answers to a suggestion from Bro. Southwood, "That every member of the association by virtue of his membership pledges himself to place his Metropolitan Masonic Charity's votes at the disposal of the committee" (vide Freemason, August 24th).

I trust that Bro. H. L. can now see that, though placed on the horns of his imaginary dilemma, I can, without repudiation of my principles, support the "Meta Bell Brasier" case, which I still consider the most deserving on the list.

If H. L. has any experience in these matters at all, he must know full well that his idea of each London Lodge, working as a province, is, however good in theory, impossible in practice, and I do think that when a few of the working bees of the London hives are willing, and do devote themselves and a considerable portion of their time, bringing all their energies and past experience to bear in a matter, the importance of which not one of its opponents can gainsay, and which requires great reform, to render it just; I do think that brethren, unless they can suggest any rational amendment or improvement, should wait for the result of that which they either could not or would not conceive for themselves, and are now incapable of amending, before they venture to prognosticate failure, or do all in their power to prove it an abortion.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES J. PERCEVAL.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As you were kind enough to publish a letter of mine on the 10th ult., which has caused a considerable amount of discussion in your columns and elsewhere, perhaps a few words in reply to my various critics will not be out of place. H. L. objects to the Committee of the Association determining the choice of candidates, stating that it is an "election within an election." The case is not so at all. As London subscribes as much as all the provinces, we certainly are entitled to half the vacancies (provided that we have suitable candidates). For instance, at the next election for Girls and Boys, there are three, perhaps four, vacancies for the former, and eleven for the latter, consequently the Committee of the L.M.C.A. determine to run two London Candidates for the Girls' School, and six London Candidates for the Boys' School. Now there are eight London cases for the Girls', and sixteen London cases for the Boys', and the problem is which of the cases we shall support at the next elections. We find that only three of the London cases for the Boys' School are last applications, and their cases on enquiry proving satisfactory, we put them first on our list. We then take the three last applications but one, and their claims also, in our opinion, being satisfactory, we place them next. As regards the Girls' List, our hands are unfettered by any last applications, and we pick out what we consider the two most pressing cases. Now, the remaining six girls' cases, and ten boys' cases we shall deal with at the next election, in April, and if we do not then clear them all off, we shall continue to support them until elected, for it is very rare that an undesirable case is passed by the Committees of our three Masonic Charities. The great failing in London is, that a large number of votes are frequently polled for a London Candidate more than is necessary, as it does not matter when the child is elected whether it is the top, middle, or bottom of the poll. This will be one of our tasks, to endeavour to equalize the number of votes polled for the London candidates, so that no London votes may be lost, as it is a mere matter of figures to find out the minimum number of votes required by a candidate to be elected. Another, and most serious point, now that the provinces have nearly universally adopted the Charity Committee system, is that where a London brother gives his votes in favour of a very urgent provincial case, perhaps at the very next election, when he asks for a vote for a very urgent London case, he is told that the votes are all sent in blank to the Provincial Charity Committee, who are possibly, nay, probably, supporting a not at all strong case, as shown by the following extract from a letter lately received by me: "Only this week," a P.M. of my lodge writes me that he cannot assist me in the case of a little girl, daughter of a deceased member of our mother lodge—"having two cases in his province"—so you see the claims of his mother lodge fade before the orders of the Provincial Charity Committee. I sincerely hope with A. E. G. "that candidates for admission to our schools," who have perfectly "legitimate claims on our consideration, appearing at four, five, and six consecutive elections, and finally becoming ineligible on the score of age," may cease to exist. It will be the most earnest endeavour of the Committee to attain that end.

From the tenor of H. L.'s second letter of the 31st inst., it is evident that he mistakes the objects of the Association, viz.:

1st. "To further the interests of the candidates in the London District," by accumulating votes so as to get the London cases elected, without the poor widows and orphans denying themselves of the common necessities of life in order to pay for the very heavy expenses of getting their sons, daughters, brothers, and sisters elected under the present system; and, secondly, "the support of the London Masonic Charities," as it is a well-known fact that the establishment of the Provincial Charity Committees has caused a very large amount of money to be subscribed, which otherwise, very probably, would not have been; as when an association of this character is formed they are very jealous of keeping up and extending their voting power, which is only to be obtained by giving more money to the charities. The second part of "H. L.'s" letter proves that he is gradually coming to our way of thinking, for he there points out another grave blot, viz., brethren putting their names on more than one candidate's list; and as for the lodges securing a candidate's election, a perusal of the book of subscribers will easily prove that, with the exception of a score of London lodges, I am sorry to say that the members are too fond of the Fourth Degree to leave much for charity. Now a combination of London lodges might, and probably would, be successful, but would soon be hailed before the Board of General Purposes, as I daresay "H. L." very well knows.

Yours truly and fraternally,

A. TISLEY.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is very evident that some of your correspondents do not even yet comprehend the objects of this Association, or the means by which these objects are to be obtained.

"D. D." who appears, (in your last number), to be ignorant that the London Masonic Charity Association is already "un fait accompli," gives the Association a very false character, and then heartily condemns it for faults which exist only in his own imagination.

After calling us "unmasonic" and "childish," and drawing for us "a hard and fast line," which we have not drawn for ourselves, he asks "If London is entitled to have 130 or 140 boys at Wood Green, and can only for the present supply 100, are the vacancies to be left rather than fill them up with country candidates?"

To answer this in the affirmative would be very "unmasonic," but what an absurd suggestion!

Does "D. D." not know that the school is under the control of a committee, who periodically count the vacancies, and decide, (quite independently of the London Masonic Charity Association), how many boys shall be admitted, and that if London supplied no candidates, the provinces would, as a matter of course, be at liberty to fill all the vacancies? and, I think, I may say with safety, that neither the London Masonic Charity Association or any one in London would grudge them the privilege.

Were it ever to happen that at an election to either of the Institutions there were no London candidates, it would be manifestly the duty of the Association to lend whatever votes they might have at their disposal, but every individual member would be at liberty to assist which ever provincial candidate he might choose.

Again, "D. D." asks, "are brethren residing in London, who hold provincial rank, to keep a separate account of the proxies they obtain by subscribing to country Steward's lists, so that they may employ them, and them only, in supporting country cases?"

But "D.D." also provides the answer, by saying, "By their subscriptions they have acquired influence, which they are entitled to use as to them may seem best." Exactly so, the votes are bought and paid for, whether through a London or provincial Steward matters not, the owner has a right to use them as he pleases. But when "D.D." suggests, (and with good reason), that a brother in such a position is most likely to assist a case arising in the province, and within his knowledge, than one "unknown to him amidst the great maze of London," I would say, the more need then of such an association as this, which will make it its business occasionally to extricate from the great maze and bring into daylight a deserving case, which might otherwise be too feebly supported.

The expression, "levelling down principle," which "D.D." twice uses in his letter, somewhat perplexes me, as it appears to convey some sort of reproach; but I fail yet to see what there is in our organisation deserving of reproach. "Levelling down" is certainly not a "principle" of the London Masonic Charity Association. It can scarcely be applied to the junior and less influential members.

I observe that among the members of the Association are three brethren who can poll together in the course of a year at least 650 votes. These votes used for the benefit of a single candidate would occasionally be sufficient to ensure success. Brethren having this amount of influence at command may be supposed to have had also a large amount of experience in Masonic business; but if they, and such as they, are pleased to co-operate with others having but little influence for the benefit of candidates, I think it would be very ungracious to accuse them of countenancing a "levelling down principle," or doing that which is likely to prove injurious to the institutions, and cause our Secretaries any anxiety. On the contrary, I apprehend that their example will prove highly beneficial, by instilling a spirit of emulation into the younger members of the Craft, and inducing them to take greater interest in, and give renewed support to, those grand institutions of which we have so much reason to be proud.

Your "Irrepressible Correspondent" asserted recently that "padding" was acceptable at this time of year, so I won't apologise for the length of this letter, but subscribe myself, dear Sir and brother, yours faithfully,

A MEMBER OF THE LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

P.S. I have noticed also "H.L.'s" letter, in which he alludes to Bro. Perceval, but I think "H.L." has only discovered a "mare's nest."

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,

Since the starting of the London Masonic Charity Association, there has been a feeling of jealousy and suspicion engendered, not only in the provincial bodies with identically the same object in view, and which have been formed for years, and whose example we are following, or endeavouring to follow, after the scores of lessons they have taught us of the necessity for, and the usefulness in combination for, the ends we have in view, not only in the provinces, but also in individual members of the Craft in the province of London, or metropolitan district. I will endeavour to find out the cause of irritation in both cases. First, the provinces have been indebted to their success, in a considerable measure, not only by the combined efforts within themselves, but by the large number of London votes they have been able by individual influence, friendship, or otherwise, to obtain from London members of the Craft, who thoughtlessly or wilfully blind to the exigencies of those immediately around them, fail to see that the legitimate and natural use of the privileges obtained by their munificence is being drawn from them by the provinces, to whom the London cases have, as a rule, not the slightest interest, whose sole thought is for themselves provincially, and who feel jealous, and hurt that we have found out the error of our ways, and are at length endeavouring to profit by the long-taught lesson they have put before us; and so are likely to lessen their continually increasing disproportionate majority. With regard to individual London Masons, two reasons may be ascribed, the first I think too puerile to have found weight with many, viz: That they, as little gods, were not consulted before any of the oi polloi dared to move in such a matter, however necessary, without having consulted all and every one of these self-made deities. The other, which I take to be the true place where the shoe pinches, is the fear and extreme probability of their losing their long held influential individualism, as many of our brethren, of the highest integrity, most unimpeachable honour, long tried experience, and undoubted ability, have been entrusted by their own friends and acquaintances, and their friends again, with their several and combined votes, so by that means a very large amount of power is placed in the hands of one individual, the proper use of which rests entirely on his own judgment, which may be rightfully or wrongfully biased by various causes. Very often these votes go entirely away from the province in which they were raised, to which there would be no objection if the other provinces acted on the free trade principle, and not on purely conservative tactics; and if the case was pre-eminently urgent and deserving, but the predicate supposition being in the negative, London, to be true to herself, must adopt the same policy. This weakness is not only characteristic of the English individual, but of the English nation, for how often do we read and hear of thousands of pounds going from England to relieve the distressed foreigner, while there are thousands of starving poor at our very door, and I take it that the old adage, "that true charity begins at home," is pretty near the mark in Masonry, as well as all other cases.

The following statistical table for 1878 will establish the true facts of, and the necessity for, the step that has been taken with regard to the Charities.

Institutions.	SUBSCRIPTIONS.			RECIPIENTS.
	London.	Provinces.	Amount less than London.	London.	Provincial.	Majority for Provinces.
R.M.B.I. ...	6012	5028	984	69	169	100
R.M.I. Boys	7487	5313	2174	49	109	60
R.M.I. Girls	5577	4891	686	72	116	44
Total	19,076	15,232	3844	190	394	204
The equitable proportion would be:—				Majority for London.
R.M.B.I.	129	109	20
R.M.I. Boys	86	72	14
R.M.I. Girls	102	86	16
			317	267	50

I should think that these figures must convince the most sceptical of what combination has done for the provinces, and what individualism has failed to do for London.

Yours fraternally,

A VICE-PRESIDENT OF EACH OF THE INSTITUTIONS.

OUR GRAND LODGE CALENDAR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As the time is drawing near for the appearance of our official Calendar, I am anxious to obtain a little information respecting one or two matters which appear to me, in all deference be it said, neither business-like in themselves, nor leading to the advantage of the Fund of Benevolence. It would seem that for the "privilege" of printing the Masonic Calendar and Pocket-book, our worthy Bro. Spencer pays £20 per annum to Grand Lodge. A moiety of that amount, £10, was paid Nov. 7th, 1877, "for 1878," so that I presume the contract is entered into for a term of years. This seems, then, to be the actual sum that the Fund of Benevolence obtains for this great "privilege." It might have been a fair payment years ago, but the increase of the Craft and the claims of trade must require altered arrangements, and should be represented by a far larger amount. One should like to know how this amount £20 is calculated, whether as a lump sum or as a royalty. In either case it is too insignificant to be sufficient, and too insufficient to be accurately calculated.

It is clear to me that a considerably greater benefit would accrue to the fund of Benevolence if tenders were invited for the privilege of printing for the work, &c., say for three years, if the contract was thrown open to the Masonic Book trade. By the present system a monopoly is created which does good to no one, and which practically impedes the sale of the Calendar, while it strikes all business men as both inadequate and peculiar.

I am only speaking now on business principles, and am regarding the matter simply from a business point of view. Neither Freemasonry nor the Grand Lodge is intended in my opinion for individuals, but for the brotherhood, and I write without any personal considerations whatever, but simply as a matter of commercial policy. All our arrangements with respect to Grand Lodge supplies should be conducted in a fair, free, open market, inasmuch as it is greatly to the advantage of the community, (just as it is of individuals for the matter of that), to conduct business arrangements on business principles alone.

If any explanation can be offered, of the "raison d'être" of the existing contract, I shall be happy to consider them, hoping that you will permit me to allude to them again in the Freemason.

If my suggestions are read by those in authority, perhaps some good may be done.

I am, yours fraternally.

FIDELITY ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER, No 3.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can you or any of your readers inform me the present place of meeting of the Fidelity Royal Arch Chapter, No. 3. I have looked for it in vain, both in the Grand Lodge, and the Cosmopolitane Masonic Calendar's.

Yours fraternally,

SCOTLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Referring to the circular letter which you published in your last number, signed by Bro. John Morgan, of Glasgow, and the resolutions thereto subjoined, I have to state that it was from a general understanding induced by statements made by Sir Michael Shaw Stewart himself that the requisition to Bro. Inglis to become his successor was promoted. Sir Michael, in his installation speech in Grand Lodge on St. Andrew's Day last year, expressly stated that it would be the last year he would occupy the throne, and in his speeches since he has made several similar statements. The members of Grand Lodge believed he meant what he said, and hence the requisition to Bro. Inglis who would prove a popular and well qualified successor, and through long and meritorious services is well entitled, to the honour.

The resolutions of Bro. Morgan's party deprecate the proceedings taken for promoting Bro. Inglis' candidature. It is not said what these proceedings were. But they simply consisted in the issuing of a circular to members of Grand Lodge and the actual Masters and Wardens of lodges, requesting Bro. Inglis to allow himself to be nominated for the chair. I am at a loss to see any wrong in this. In point of fact it is well known that but for certain side issues Sir Michael would not have been asked again to stand, and Bro. Inglis would have been unanimously elected his successor.

The letter and resolutions further set forth that it is necessary that Sir Michael should continue in office for another term, because, it is said, energetic measures were taken under his guidance to place the financial affairs of Grand Lodge in a satisfactory state. I am not aware that Sir Michael has by guidance or otherwise interfered with the financial affairs of Grand Lodge. But certainly if he had done so earlier all the defalcations might have been avoided, for they took place during his first three years of office.

We are also told by Bro. Morgan and his party that many unqualified brethren voted in the divisions which were taken at the last Grand Lodge meeting, and that they were unqualified because their names were not on the roll in April last, when it closed for the year. But it was Bro. Morgan's own party who first tampered with that roll, and removed out from it the names of brethren who voted against his party's wishes, and it added the names of others, ignorant of the points at issue, to vote with it. It was out-generalled in this manoeuvre, and it now loudly disclaims against it. The letter, however, of Bro. Morgan, he thinking it will suit his interests, again advocates an interference with the roll by recommending lodges to supersede their proxies, if they refuse to comply with the instructions given to vote as Bro. Morgan's party requests.

Much fault too has been founded by Bro. Morgan's friends because a certain section of Grand Lodge requested members to vote in support of its views. He is now doing the same thing.

In point of fact, several of the Glasgow members were watched by their Glasgow friends, and found fault with for voting according to their convictions.

Assuming that Bro. Morgan's party is right in its contention that those only on the roll in April last could vote at the meeting of Grand Lodge, it does not follow that the Grand Lodge proceedings are null, for on a scrutiny disallowing these votes a large majority would still remain in support of the resolutions. The fact, therefore, of parties having improperly voted does not invalidate the proceedings, seeing that their votes were not required to carry the resolutions objected to.

Yours fraternally,

MASTER MASON.

CHARITY AND RELIEF.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In looking through the columns of the Freemason, of the 14th inst, I was very much amused in reading the report of special meeting of St. John's Lodge, Stow, No 216, to consider a circular, calling a meeting in Glasgow wherein it states that there were thirty-two subscribers to said circular, consisting of twenty-nine brethren of the Glasgow province. I beg to inform Lodge 216 that there were only ten on said Committee of the Glasgow province, and they have committed an error which possibly they were led into by false representations.

Again, look at the concluding sentence: "Resolved, therefore, that this lodge declines to countenance this meeting." What an assumption from such a strong body, scarcely known, and consisting of such a large gathering as to be scarcely able to open the lodge for want of numbers.

If lodge 216 will look over the report of meeting in Glasgow, inserted in Scottish Freemason of the 13th inst., they will find said meeting turned out to be one of importance, supported by a large body of representatives from all parts of Scotland.

Fraternally yours,

SCOTIA.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE EXAMINATION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I do not see, in the list published in the Guardian, the name of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. Why not? Perhaps Bro. Binckes or Bro. Dr. Morris can explain and oblige. Yours fraternally, CLERICUS.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

When writing to you to correct what seemed to me omissions in a letter of "Consistency," criticising the recent appointments, I took the opportunity of expressing a feeling which I know to prevail in this town, respecting those appointments, it was furthest from my thoughts to engage in any controversy on the point. "Consistency," however, having apparently to his own satisfaction "settled" the Dep. Prov. Grand Master, in your last Saturday's issue, turns his attention to my observations in a communication so utterly disingenuous that I am constrained to ask you space for a reply. When Mark Twain's friend, the Admiral, was allowed to manufacture history to suit himself, he was a potent opponent, we are told; and once permit "Consistency" to cast loose from facts and read the record after his own fashion, no punishment, it seems, could well be too great for me for having mildly suggested that of the lodges in Southampton receiving Prov. Grand honours at the last meeting, the one omitted was the Royal Gloucester, the senior lodge in the town where Grand Lodge was held, and the third senior in the province.

This hint "Consistency," for a purpose best known to himself, has converted into an "argument that the entertaining lodges at Southampton should have had more honours given them, simply because they made the necessary arrangements," and a dirge on "the loss of the prestige" of the Gloucester. My letter speaks for itself. I neither "argued" the one nor did I "mourn" the other point as thus put. On the contrary, I distinctly alleged that the Gloucester had fully maintained its prestige, in the best and widest sense in which that term can be used. I held, and still insist, that to distribute but two collars between practically six lodges—forming close upon a fourth of the whole lodges in the province—in the town where Grand Lodge being held this year it cannot be expected to visit again for ten years, and especially to exclude from recognition the senior lodge of the number, was not an equitable or wise arrangement. For this I expressly said "I cast blame on no one," and I suppose it was my moderation which excited "Consistency" to make charges that it would scarcely be exaggerating to call odious in their character.

According to him, the Royal Gloucester—on whose behalf there were special reasons, about which something further may yet be heard, for noticing its omission from honours on this occasion—has not only "monopolised the best purple offices during the last decade" of years, but it has likewise had "two of the so-called permanent officials as members, which no doubt ("Consistency" has the temerity to say) materially assisted them in obtaining the superior appointments." I can sympathise with "Consistency" if, being by merit entitled to honour, that "deference to the weight of a brother's social position or money bags," which he affects to abhor, has left him unnoticed, or, it may be, has presumed to offer him a collar unequal to the estimate which he has formed of his own importance. But I venture to say that even if favouritism has been shown in the past, it is scarcely to be atoned for by quietly ignoring the claims of the present, as his letter seems to contend. It would be scarcely "consistent" with the ordinary rules of civilized life to offer to brethren holding high social and public positions in a town like Southampton collars which might, without offence, be preferred to a village cobbler; and it does so happen that during the last quarter of a century or more, the Gloucester Lodge has numbered as its masters and officers brethren who have done something towards "monopolising" municipal no less than Masonic honours, as the lists of Southampton Mayors, Sheriffs, Aldermen, and officials signally testify. These could hardly, I submit, have been asked to become Pursuivants, Sword Bearers, Directors of Ceremonies, and what not, in an assemblage regarded by its chiefs of such social import that it has lately been complained of them they usually attend it "attired in walking costume of various hues!" Not to press unduly a point which "Consistency's" letter would justify my doing, I will test his complaints and insinuations by some considerations bearing upon the Masonic worth and merit of the brethren whose honour he has impeached, premising, as a matter of fact, in reference to the Dep. Prov. G.M., and the Prov. Grand Secretary, that they are not active members of the Gloucester Lodge; and so any insinuation based on the supposition that they fall to the ground.

Taking, then, the "best purple offices," which, by a curious piece of arithmetic, "Consistency" alleges the Gloucester to have monopolised during the last ten years, I find with regard to the two Senior Wardenships, first that the Present Dep. Prov. Grand Master received a collar in 1869, just within the decade, following nine years of service as Prov. Grand Secretary; and I, for one, shall be glad to hear of the favouritism which "Consistency" alleges to have "materially assisted" to such a recognition of past services. The second Senior Grand Warden collar was given to Bro. H. Abraham, (a "Lewis," whose father had been W.M. of the Gloucester,) in 1876—following his holding for twenty or twenty one years a collar for a minor Prov. Grand office—on his retirement, to fill the mayoralty of Southampton, if I recollect aright, from the office of Treasurer to the Gloucester, which he had held for five and twenty years, leaving it in a good financial position, though he found it in debt, and during the time applying the amount presented to him as a testimonial in recognition of his services in the purchase of life governorships of the charities. Will "Consistency" tell me which received the greater honour in the bestowal of this collar, any brethren who might have "materially assisted" in the recognition of such services or the Prov. Grand Master and Prov. Grand Lodge? With respect to the two junior wardenships distributed during the decade, in 1871 a collar was given to Bro. Booth, many years previously made either Prov. G. Pursuivant or Sword-Bearer, than whom I doubt if there is a Mason in the South West of England who has installed a larger number of W.M.s., or striven more earnestly to maintain and uphold the purity of our ritual and the ancient landmarks of the Order. The same collar the following year, being the centenary of the Gloucester Lodge, was conferred on its W.M., Bro. Pocock, who received from Masons high in authority the warmest possible recognition of the princely manner in which he and the lodge entertained the Marquis of Ripon and the officers of the Grand Lodge of England on that occasion. There were special Masonic circumstances (well known locally), apart from his efforts for the charities, which well entitled Bro. Thomas to the S. G. Deaconship two or three years ago. The Superintendence of Works was conferred in 1868 on a Past Grand Steward of England, an architect whose handiwork has been thought of sufficient importance to engrave in last Saturday's Builder, and who holds one of the few of the Earl of Zetland's jewels as an officer on the occasion of the inauguration festival of Freemasons' Hall. Last year's Directorship of the Ceremonies was conferred on the very brother (M. Miles) to whose efforts to secure a valuable Masonic charity, worth more than £1000, for the Southampton brethren your own columns of Saturday last bore witness. The first Grand Chaplain's collar given to the Gloucester for at least 40 years past was that conferred on a joining brother, the Rev. (now Canon) Wilberforce, following the truly Masonic spirit which he showed towards the whole body of Masons, when the rector of the parish in which the Southampton Masonic hall is situate refusing to loan his church for the celebration of the Gloucester centenary and the reception of Grand Lodge, he threw open his parish church and his own private grounds to them. "Consistency's" reference to the organists and stewardships is beneath the contempt of those who know how little the Gloucester brother to whom he refers depends for his reputation as "organist" upon any "honours" Grand Lodge can confer in that direction, and are acquainted with the estimate placed upon stewardships throughout the province. In view of facts strangely at variance, all the circumstances considered, with the inferences "Consistency" has drawn from his imperfect knowledge, I unhesitatingly challenge him to justify his assertion of favouritism towards the Gloucester Lodge or hereafter to hold his peace. He may not always have to deal with brethren who can so well recognize, and act with becoming dignity, as those whose names he has attempted to drag through the mire, Shakespeare's aphorism "Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny."

As to his complaint, and the ill-concealed suggestion he would have the world draw from the fact, that the Masons of Southampton and Portsmouth do not "agitate to secure retirement (from the principal offices) after a fair tenure of office (say five years)," I have yet to learn that we have any special responsibility in the matter. Why has not this apostle of purity before made himself heard in respect to it, for, of course, he will without delay secure discussion of the subject. Perhaps he is not aware that another of those creatures of fortune and favouritism, a Gloucester brother, the late J. R. Stebbing, Dep. Prov. G. Master, some years ago made a strenuous effort (if I recollect aright in the Grand Lodge of England) to secure some such system of retirement. I can only say that when "Consistency" brings forward a motion on the subject, whether in Grand or Provincial Grand Lodge, he will not find a warmer supporter than myself. I should also like to vote for a consideration of the question whether it is in the best interests of Masonry that some provinces should embrace five or six times the number of lodges, and perhaps even a larger proportion of brethren, than other provinces, thus making P.G. honours ridiculously cheap in some districts and well nigh unattainable in others. But so long as the rule of "so-called permanent officials prevails" generally, I decline to mix up such questions of very high import with what I feel to be an utterly unfounded charge of favouritism, believing as I do in Tillotson's remark that "There is no readier way for a man to bring his own worth into question than by endeavouring to detract from the merits of others."

Fraternally yours,

A SOUTHAMPTON MASON.

STRANGE DECORATIONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

At a recent Prov. Grand Lodge, which shall be nameless, I saw one queer thing. The Provincial Grand Master wore the Knights Templar star, and I saw it also on the breast of another of the Past Prov. Grand Officers on the dais.

Is this lawful in a Prov. Grand Lodge or in a Craft lodge?

Yours fraternally,

A PAST PROV. G. OFFICER

[Certainly not. It is perfectly illegal and forbidden.—ED.]

"LOSS OF THE PRINCESS ALICE"

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It is most gratifying to see the vast sums that are pouring in to relieve the distressed through this dreadful calamity. My object to ask you to let this letter appear in your valuable columns is to ask the brethren if they would assist in getting up a concert at the Surrey Masonic Hall. The Hall could be obtained for a small sum, and I feel sure that we could obtain talent, and I trust hand over a fair amount to the Lord Mayor to swell the sum, already received. Brethren who will kindly assist me in promoting this charitable object will send their names early as possible to W. S. Daniel, 84, Fleet-Street, City, E.C., J.W. Lodge 1541.

Yours fraternally,

W. S. DANIEL.

THE QUEBEC QUESTION.

BY BRO. ROBERT RAMSAY.

In a former number of the Keystone, (June 8th), we argued at some length upon the unconstitutionality of the recent action of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, in granting warrants to Masons in Montreal, within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, for the purpose of organizing two new lodges in that city, viz., King Solomon and Argyle. The act was so uncalled for, and the outrage so flagrant, that Most Worshipful Bro. M. M. Tait, Grand Master of Quebec, very properly issued his edict, declaring the proceedings of said lodges clandestine and illegal, and ordering that no Masonic intercourse should take place between brethren acknowledging the supremacy of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, and those in obedience to that of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. In this proclamation Grand Master Tait only expressed, what we feel confident is the unanimous opinion of the Masons in the Lower Province, and as far as we have been able to ascertain, his action is supported and upheld by the leading Masonic writers and juriconsults on this continent.

Next month the regular annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Quebec will be held, and then the voice of the Craft in that province will be heard, and we are not afraid to say, that the result of their deliberations will be a calm and dignified protest on the one hand against the infringement of her territory, and on the other hand an earnest appeal to her sister Grand Lodges throughout the world to support her in her efforts to maintain the doctrine of exclusive Grand Lodge sovereignty as universally acknowledged on this continent. We don't for a moment believe there will be one dissentient voice on this question. The Grand Lodge of Quebec, from her formation in 1869, has been a staunch adherent to this dogma, having experienced the inconvenience and witnessed the unfortunate results arising from a concurrent jurisdictional power as was, and is still actually the case so far as the Grand Lodge of Canada is concerned, since there is at present one lodge in Ontario, L'Original, working (?) under the authority of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. We repeat, the Quebec Masons, on constitutionally seceding from the Grand Lodge of Canada in October, 1869, had felt the inadvisability of allowing foreign lodges to practice within her jurisdiction, and at almost every Communication of Grand Lodge proclaimed her doctrine of exclusive Grand Lodge sovereignty, proving their determination to uphold the theory by declining to accept the exchange of Grand representatives with the Grand Lodge of Missouri, as that Grand Body, in offering recognition, did so on condition that the Grand Lodge of Quebec should not interfere with the rights and privileges of those lodges still working in her jurisdiction under the authority of the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland. The Grand Lodge of Quebec, under the circumstances, very properly declined to accept the recognition, as she did also that of the Grand Lodge of England, which stipulated that the lodges in Quebec, working under her charters, should not be interfered with by the Grand Lodge of Quebec. These conditional recognitions were, we repeat, respectfully declined. Such being the case then, we feel confident the Grand Lodge of Quebec will heartily and unanimously endorse the action of her able and erudite Grand Master.

The question, however, arises, "Cannot something more than a mere protest be accomplished?" We think so, and our view is this: The present imbroglio between the Grand Lodges of Quebec and Scotland, is not one of a mere local character; it is one that should interest the Masons of Pennsylvania, New York, Ontario, California, and every State, Province and Territory on this continent, as much as the brethren of Quebec. Such being the case, we should advise that the Grand Lodge of Quebec should authorize its Grand Master to invite duly authorized delegates from every Grand Lodge in the United States and the Dominion of Canada to assemble, at an early date, in the city of Montreal, and there, in conference, calmly and deliberately discuss this question of Masonic invasion. The very existence of our cherished doctrine of Grand Lodge sovereignty hangs in the balance, and if once we permit the Grand Lodge of Scotland to plant her banners on the soil over which the Grand Lodge of Quebec has, according to forty-eight Grand Lodges, sole and exclusive sovereign jurisdiction, we tacitly admit the right of that Grand Lodge, or any other foreign Grand Lodge, to invade our Grand Lodge jurisdictions. If Scotland can invade Quebec with impunity, California can issue warrants to Masons in New Brunswick, and Canada can send her dispensations to brethren in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and the very bulwarks of our Grand Lodge system would be pulled down, till they would present one chaotic mass of confusion, turmoil and discord.

We would then respectfully suggest that the Grand Lodge of Quebec, at its annual session next month, take the initiative in this movement. A conference, whose members were amongst the leading minds of the Craft from the Atlantic to the Pacific, would carry great weight and power to the Masonic world, that the Masons of this continent are an unit on this question, and will not permit their rights to be trampled on by any Grand Lodge, however venerable or however influential she may be. Such a conference, too, could not fail to accomplish much good. Brethren would be brought together from all parts of the United States and the Dominion of Canada, and interchange alone of the ordinary Masonic courtesies would do much to draw the bands of American and Canadian Masonry closer, whilst the hospitalities, of which the Montreal brethren are so profuse, would make the visit one of pleasure as well as profit. Of course, some Grand Lodges would not be represented, but we feel confident a large majority would hasten to accept the invitation, or at least some of their Grand Officers would endeavour to be present, to aid by their counsel and advice an object of such importance as the one under discussion.—Keystone.

The Duke of Connaught, the Princess Louise, and the Marquis of Lorne, have added their names to that of Prince Leopold as patrons at the Grand Evening Concert to be held at Exeter Hall on the 28th inst. in aid of the Princess Alice Relief Fund.

A grand vocal and instrumental concert, under the patronage of the Lord Mayor, is to be given at the Masonic Hall, Wood Green, on Wednesday, October 2nd, commencing at 7.45. Several eminent artists have been engaged, and the proceeds will be given to the same Fund.

The installation of His Grace the Duke of St. Albans as Right Worshipful Grand Master of the Province of Nottinghamshire took place at the Castle, Nottingham, on Friday. The ceremony was performed by the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master of England, assisted by the Marquis of Hartington, Right Worshipful Grand Master of Derbyshire. A full report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

A meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Province of West Lancashire will be held under the presidency of the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master of England, R.W.G. Master, on Wednesday the 2nd of October, at 12 o'clock, at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool.

The consecration of the Kensington Lodge, No. 1767, took place on Friday. A report will appear in our next.

The Annual Autumn Liverpool Corporation Exhibition of Pictures, in the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool, is now in the full swing of its prosperity, and both attendances and sales are larger, at this date, than in any previous year. The quality of the pictures generally is above the average, and when time and space permit, we may take a passing glance at one or two of the more conspicuous in the gallery.

"J. A. J." suggests, in the Echo, that a box for the reception of donations for the Colliery Disaster Fund be placed outside the Mansion House, by the side of the Princess Alice Fund box, so that contributors may follow their own inclination in the disposal of their benefactions.

The sum of 20 guineas was unanimously voted for the relief of the sufferers by the Abercane colliery explosion, at the Provincial Grand Lodge of Warwickshire held on Tuesday, at Alcester, on the proposition of the Grand Master, Lord Leigh, seconded by Colonel Maclean, Deputy Grand Master.

Hobart Pasha left London on Tuesday night for Constantinople, to resume his duties as Inspector-General of the Turkish Fleet.

Mrs. Bravo, whose name was prominently before the public in connection with the Balham mystery, died recently at Combe Villa, Lumps, near Portsmouth, after a week's illness.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked at the Israel Lodge of Instruction, held at the Rising Sun Tavern, Globe-road, Mile End-road, on the 22nd September, 1878, at 7 o'clock. Bro. The announcement of the death of the Dowager Countess Cowper, in the Times, is without foundation. The Countess is at West Park, Beds., in her usual health.

A meeting of the Grand Lodge of the Province of Dorset was held on Tuesday last, at the Guildhall, Poole, and was presided over by Bro. Montague Guest, R.W.G.M. A full report will appear in our next.

The Fruiterers' Company made their annual presentation of fruit to the Lord Mayor on Tuesday last. An account of the ceremony appeared in the City Press of Wednesday.

A good story was told me by a friend from the States the other day. A spiritualistic seance was being held, at which it was announced that the spirit of the "Immortal Williams" would pass through the room. A sceptic took a handful of tin tacks to the meeting place, and quietly sprinkled them over the floor. The solemn moment came; a ghastly form entered and took a noiseless stride forward. There was a slight shiver in the white object, and a muttered noise was heard; a second step followed, not quite so steady, and another muffled ejaculation; but at the third stride Shakespeare's disembodied form sat plump down upon the floor, and swore like a British army in Flanders.—Hornet.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

GLOBE THEATRE.—This theatre opened for a season with a new two act drama, entitled "Mayfair and Ragfair," by J. Mackay, and with "Les Cloches de Corneville," transferred from the boards of the Folly. Of the latter piece, I have already said my say, and I have nothing to add. Of the new drama I cannot say much; there is indication of a good and pretty story, and matter sufficient for a full three act drama, but the author was tied down to two short acts, and not to exceed one hour in acting; the consequence is we get a thin synopsis of a drama, a very skeleton with all the beauty of surface gone and no fat. Mr. Fernandez, especially engaged to play the principal part—that of the Jew "Mopus Mo"—neither does justice to himself as a good actor, which he is, nor to the part, which is a good one. Miss Fanny Enson played the part of "Esther," the Jew's daughter, very creditably, and Mr. Graham made the most of his part—a character that well delineated would have made its mark.

EGYPTIAN HALL.—Mr. Maskelyne's new musical automaton "Lubal," is certainly a great improvement on "Fanfare," but neither of these new inventions can vie in cleverness and ingenuity with "Pshyco" and "Zoe." As an inventor and constructor of automata, Mr. Maskelyne has certainly no rival in Europe, and I, for one, would not undertake to prophesy where his inventive genius will terminate. It would not surprise me to learn that Mr. Maskelyne had an automaton of himself in preparation, who, when complete, would undertake Mr. Maskelyne's own duties, leaving him without care in his own study to invent automata of Mr. Cooke, Mr. Ring, and other assistants—he need not produce an automaton audience, for the Egyptian Hall will always be full of lively and appreciative ones. The new boxes, those on either side of the hall, are a great improvement, and were certainly needed, for Mr. Maskelyne has more admirers every night than he has accommodation for.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

WANDSWORTH LODGE (1044).—A meeting of this prosperous Lodge was held on Wednesday, at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Wandsworth. Bro. W. A. Jones presided, and was supported by the following officers and brethren:—Bros. W. A. Morgan, S.W.; Alfred Newens, J.W.; H. Wilson, Treasurer; J. Frost, Secretary; J. B. Walker, S.D.; W. J. Huntley, J.D.; S. C. Landon, D.C.; J. J. Holland, I.G.; J. Wardroper, Steward; J. G. Carter, P.M.; E. H. Boddy, P.M.; P. Cooke, P.M.; F. H. Newens, P.M.; C. W. Gray, P.M.; George Howick, P.M.; F. Reed, R. Walker, P. V. Denham, G. Clark, John Sanders, G. W. Smith, W. J. Springett, H. F. Goodchild, George Fortescue, R. Neal, F. Knipier, and A. A. Denham. The following visitors honoured the lodge with their attendance:—Bros. Wilkey Wright, (the eminent barrister), Dr. Joseph Lakman, R. H. Smith, George Brooks, James Wright, A. Mason, T. F. K. Smith, and A. B. Morgan. The lodge having been opened, the usual formal business was proceeded with. Bro. P. V. Denham was then raised to the Degree of M.M., and Bro. John Sanders passed to the Second Degree. The installation of Bro. W. A. Morgan as W. M. was then proceeded with, the Installing Master being Bro. Boddy. At the conclusion of the business, a banquet was provided, and served in the most recherche style; complete satisfaction being expressed at Bro. Dougherty's catering. The usual toasts were given from the chair, and responded to by the brethren in a truly Masonic manner. The W.M. elect justly praised the retiring W.M., Bro. H. R. Jones, for his abilities. The toast of "The Visitors" was eloquently replied to by Bro. Wilkey Wright, Dr. Lakman, and other brethren.

EARL OF CARNARVON LODGE (No. 1642).—The bi-monthly meeting of the above lodge was held at Ladbrooke Hall, Notting-hill, on Thursday, the 12th inst. The lodge was opened at 2 p.m. The officers present were Bros. George Penn, W.M.; S. H. Parkhouse, S.W.; S. Smout, J.W.; B. Pocock, S.D.; Lander, J.D.; Atkins, I.G.; Rev. Darby Reade, Chap.; Smout, jun., D.C.; W. J. Murlis, P.M., Sec.; Wm. Stephens, Treas.; Delevanti, Org.; and a large number of members, among whom we noticed the Rev. P. M. Holden, James Terry, Sec. R.M.B.I.; Reuben C. Green, Rowlands, Reid, Empson, and others. The visitors were Bros. H. G. Buss, A.G. Sec.; G. C. Harding, Bishop, F. Bartle, Boucher, Beauchamp, Handover, Lovell, Tucker, Clayton, Grist, Brown, Manchester, High, and Stephens. Bros. May, Manchester, and Heath, were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, the ceremony being rendered in a most able and impressive manner. Messrs. Braham and French were initiated into Freemasonry. The W.M. gave notice that he would undertake to represent the lodge at the next Boys' Festival, and proposed that the sum of fifty guineas be given from the lodge funds to start his list. It was seconded by Bro. Parkhouse, S.W., and carried unanimously. It was then proposed by Bro. Murlis, P.M., that a jewel of the value of ten guineas be presented to the W.M. for his services for the past year. This was received with great applause, and carried unanimously. Bro. Samuel Hy. Parkinson was then unanimously elected W.M. for the coming year; Bro. Murlis, Sec.; and Bro. Geo. Penn, Treas.; and a vote of thanks on vellum was voted to Bro. W. Stevens, for services rendered to the lodge as Treasurer during the last two years. The lodge was closed at 5 p.m. The W.M. then invited the brethren and visitors to a splendid banquet, given on his grounds at Castle Bar, Ealing. Saloon carriages and conveyances were placed at their disposal to take them to their destination. The I.P.M., in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," stated that their W.M. was not only a most able and efficient Mason, but a most kind and liberal-hearted man, that sixty or seventy brethren were here to testify, for the whole of the expenses of this banquet was borne by him. The W.M., in returning thanks, said he was delighted to entertain them, but would ask them to give their support to him, and send him up to the Boys' Festival with a list second to none. He then proposed "The Health of the W.M. Elect," and hoped he would have a successful year of office. Bro. Parkhouse said he would endeavour to uphold the prestige of the lodge. The W.M. and the I.P.M. were good and true friends, and were as anxious to see his year of office a success as great as their own. Bro. Buss responded for "The Grand Officers," Bro. Boucher for "The Visitors," and Bro. Terry for "The Charities." The musical arrangements were under the management of Bro. Delevanti; Bro. Holden also gave some recitations.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 11th inst., in the Masonic Room, Athenæum, Lancaster, the chair of King Solomon being occupied by Bro. Jowett, W.M. There was not a large attendance. The lodge was opened in the First Degree and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed. Subsequently the lodge was opened in the Second and Third Degrees, when the W.M. gave the traditional history connected with the latter degrees. The lodge was then closed down to the First Degree, when the usual proclamations were made, and the lodge closed with the peculiarities of the Craft.

STAFFORD.—Staffordshire Knot Lodge (No. 726).—At the regular meeting of the above lodge at the North-Western Hotel, on Tuesday evening, 10th inst., a Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. Jno. Storer, P.M. 726, P.P.G.S.B.; the W.M. (Bro. T. W. Chalmers) in making the presentation, said it afforded him very much pleasure to hand the jewel to his old friend and brother, P.M. Storer. The admirable manner in which Bro. Storer had performed the duties of the different offices he had filled in the lodge—his regular and punctual attendance—his kindly and unobtrusive manner whilst in the lodge, and his willingness at all times to give the benefit of his great experience, justified them in presenting him with the jewel as a token of their appreciation. It was customary in some lodges to present a jewel to each W.M. at the expiration of his year of office, but in this lodge such was not the case, and he hoped it never would be, because when they saw a Staffordshire Knot Lodge brother wearing that distinguished emblem they all knew it had been given him for extra services rendered to his lodge. Bro. Storer, in replying, expressed his deep sense of the honour they had conferred upon him. He had at all times acted in a conscientious manner, and if at any time he had inadvertently uttered a word which had given pain to a brother he was ever ready to make the amende honorable. It was not always that conscientious conduct was appreciated by others. But in the present instance it was so, and in after years the jewel would remind him of their great kindness to him.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The monthly meetings of this lodge were resumed, after the summer recess, on the 2nd inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, St. Leonardgate. Bro. A. Sheriff, W.M., presided, supported by his several officers, but there was not a large attendance of brethren. The lodge was opened in due form, but there was no special business before the lodge. A candidate was proposed for initiation, and the usual proclamation having been made, the lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony.

MORECAMBE.—Morecambe Lodge (No. 1561).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 6th inst., in the Masonic Hall, Edward-street. Bro. T. Longmire, the W.M., presided, and there was a good attendance of members and visitors. The lodge was opened in the First Degree with solemn prayer, after which the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. John Heaps, commercial traveller, and proved satisfactory. Bro. Thos. Shorrocks having given proof of his proficiency as an E.A., was entrusted and retired. The lodge having been opened in the Second Degree, he was re-admitted and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft by the W.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. Peter Dickinson, P.M. (London) who occupied the S.W.'s chair. The lodge was then closed down to the First Degree, when Mr. Taylor was introduced into the lodge with the formalities of the Craft, and duly initiated into its mysteries, by the W.M. The usual proclamations were then made, which elicited hearty good wishes from the visiting brethren, and the lodge was closed in accordance with the principles of the Craft.

INSTRUCTION.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 1558).—The first meeting of a new lodge of Instruction, under the authority of the Duke of Connaught Lodge, No. 1558, was held on Wednesday evening, the 18th inst., at the Faunce Arms Tavern, Kennington Park, and it was numerously attended. Bro. James Dunn, P.M. No. 72, presided, and in commencing the business he stated that the lodge had been established for the purpose of supplying the want which had for some time been felt by young Masons, who were aspiring to office in their respective lodges, to have the opportunity of attending a lodge where the only business would be the rehearsing of the different ceremonies, so that any one taking office might be fully qualified to perform the duties required. In other Lodges of Instruction a good portion of the time was taken up with the lectures, and the working of the ceremonies was only occasionally gone through, but in this lodge the ceremonies would be the only business to be transacted. As the lodge was established solely for the assistance of young Masons, and to fit them for their duty as they should be called upon in their regular lodges, he hoped that it would be well attended, as able Preceptors would always be ready to give their instruction. The ceremony of installation was then rehearsed, Bro. Heap, W.M. of the Parent Lodge, being the candidate, and the manner in which that beautiful rite was performed by Bro. Dunn elicited very warm commendations. About a dozen propositions for joining were made, and a vote of thanks was ordered to be entered on the minutes for the very able manner in which Bro. Dunn had discharged the duties of the chair.

Royal Arch.

ROYAL JUBILEE CHAPTER No. (72).—The ordinary meeting of this chapter was held at the Horns Tavern, Kennington, on Thursday, the 12th inst. Ex. Comp. T. Foxall, M.E.Z., presided, with Ex. Comps. Duckin, H.; Stephens, P.Z., acting J.; J. Nunn, Scribe E.; Thurston, P.S.; Salton, 1st Assist. S.; Strube, 2nd Assist. S.; Laskey, P.Z.; Dolson, P.Z.; Dunn, H. Lovegrove, Jaccard, and others. The only visitor was Comp. Gluckstein, P.Z. Faith Chapter. The companions appeared in Masonic mourning, owing to the death of Comp. Harvey, J., since the last meeting. The candidate for exaltation not being in attendance the ballot was taken for the officers for the ensuing year, with the following result: Comps. T. Duckin, M.E.Z.; J. Nunn, H.; Lovett, J.; T. Foxall, P.Z., Scribe E.; Dunn, Scribe N.; Webb, Treasurer; H. Lovegrove, P.S.; Potter, Janitor. Comp. Nunn has been most energetic as Scribe E. since the formation of the chapter, and the companions were unanimous in electing him to the vacant chair of H., the duties of Scribe being undertaken by the I.P.Z., Comp. Foxall. At the conclusion of the business the companions adjourned to the banquet.

COCKERMOUTH.—Faithfull Lodge (No. 229).—The first meeting of this new lodge after the consecration and dedication on the 23rd ult., was held at the Masonic Hall, Station-street, on Wednesday evening, the 11th inst. There were present:—Bros W. F. Lamonby, W. M. (Freemason); W. Shilton, I.G., as S.W.; W. H. Lewthwaite, J.W.; Capt. Sewell, M.O.; R. W. Robinson, S.O.; Jas. Blach, Treas. Sec., and R.M.; H. Peacock, S.D., as I.G.; R. Bailey, J.D.; and Jos. Hewson, Tyler. After the minutes were read and confirmed, the W.M. introduced the subject of a code of bye-laws for the government of the lodge, and a copy being compiled, it was ordered to be printed by next lodge night for final confirmation by the members, prior to being submitted to the Grand Lodge and Provincial Grand Lodge authorities. On the proclamations being put, it was agreed to hold a lodge of instruction on the first Friday in every month. Bros. W. Taylor, P.M. Craft Lodge 1001; and Geo. Brash, Lodge 1002, were then proposed as candidates for advancement, after which the lodge was closed.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. J. A. Rucker, P.G.D., in the chair. The brethren present were Bros. E. H. Finney, H. Hacker, Walter Sowdon, A. H. Tattershall, Joshua Nunn, E. Litchworth, Thomas W. White, John Boyd, Thomas Budwin, H. A. Dubois, R. B. Webster, G. Faulkner, H. Potter, H. Massey, (Freemason,) and F. R. W. Hedges, (Secretary).

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, the chairman reported the melancholy death of Bro. Charles Jardine, a member of the committee, by the collision between the Princess Alice and Bywell Castle.

Bro. Joshua Nunn moved that a letter be written to the widow of Bro. Jardine, condoling with her and her family on the loss they have sustained. He drew the attention of the brethren to the loss, which was a very serious one. The family consisted of nine children, who were now left destitute. Bro. Jardine was in business as a commission agent in the lace trade, and was getting on very well. But the brethren must know that that particular business died with the person who followed it, and although Bro. Jardine was getting on very well in it, he would not be able to save sufficient for his widow and family's support when he was suddenly taken away. The eldest son was the only one who was doing anything, and he was barely able to keep himself; indeed he would not be able to keep himself if he did not live with the family. For the above reasons he had a notice of motion for the Quarterly Court, which had been recommended by the House Committee, for the suspension of the laws of the Institution to place one of the girls on the list for election.

Bro. Thomas W. White seconded the motion, which was put and carried unanimously, and the Secretary was directed to write the letter of condolence to Mrs. Jardine.

Bro. Nunn then gave his notice of motion for the Quarterly Committee, for the suspension of the laws of the Institution, for the purpose of placing Cicely Alice Jardine on the list for election.

Cicely Alice Jardine afterwards passed her examination in reading.

Bro. Joshua Nunn, in reference to Col. Creation's notice of motion for the Quarterly Committee for the appointment of a Sub-Committee of five brethren to consider and report upon the advisability of revising the laws of the institution, gave notice of motion, that the Committee be composed of nine members. He thought it was an important subject, on which, no doubt, a conference would have to be held with the Boys' School, and he did not think that five members would be enough. He was in hopes that Col. Creation would have been present, and if he had been he would no doubt have been able to come to an arrangement with him on the subject.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CHESHIRE.

By command of Bro. the Right Hon. Lord De Tabley, the annual Provincial Grand Lodge of Cheshire was held on Thursday the 12th inst., at the Town Hall, Nantwich, about four miles from the busy railway centre of Crewe, to which all W.M.'s, P.M.'s, officers, and M.M.'s were invited.

The weather in the morning was of the most unpromising nature, but as the forenoon advanced the prospect brightened, and the afternoon turned out as bright and genial as the most fastidious could desire.

The somewhat unusual character of the Masonic gathering—the bands of brethren of the mystic tie fairly taking the quaint and picturesque town by storm—aroused the evident interest of old and young amongst the inhabitants, and a highly successful effort was made to give the place quite a gala appearance; flags and decorations all along the principal thoroughfares to the meeting ground being shown in great profusion.

The square and compasses were not absent, words of welcome were given to Bro. Lord De Tabley and the brethren; and a triumphal arch also spanned one of the streets. The Town Hall was also profusely and tastefully decorated, both externally and internally, with flags, banners, evergreens, crimson cloth, &c., and over the doorway were the words, "Prosper the Art."

The undoubted progress and improved position of the Craft in the important province of Cheshire, which now embraces no fewer than thirty-seven lodges, most ably, courteously, and successfully governed by Bro. Lord De Tabley, R.W.G.M., one of the most popular chiefs in all the Masonic divisions, was clearly and incontestably shown on this red-letter occasion by a most numerous and highly influential gathering of all sorts and conditions of brethren from the remotest as well as the nearest and most convenient position of the province. There were altogether about 350 brethren present, and as the great majority of these were W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and officers, the value and influence of the gathering was thereby very greatly enhanced. Several of the lodges were numerously represented—twenty or thirty members being given in one or two instances as the response to the roll call. It was anticipated that the business of the Provincial Grand Lodge would, according to announcement, commence about noon, and early breakfasts, rendered necessary by long railway journeys, were the order of the day amongst those who had to travel great distances in order to be at Nantwich at the appointed time. The long distance Masons were principally from Birkenhead, Chester, Stalybridge, Rock Ferry, New Brighton, Parkgate, Altrincham, &c., and much to the credit of the Fraternity nearly all were on the scene and ready for business before noon. In consequence of some unexplained cause, however, the business did not begin till beyond half-past one o'clock, and the dissatisfaction amongst the brethren was, perhaps, not loud but deep, and almost universally felt. It would be well in future years, if these delays are necessary in consequence of other business, to fix the time approximately, so that brethren may arrange accordingly.

The meeting was held under the banner of the King's Friends' Lodge, (No. 293), meeting at Nantwich, one of the oldest Masonic combinations in the province. This lodge has enjoyed a long and prosperous career, and during the greater part of a century, which it has existed, has included many illustrious brethren. The late Bro. Lord Combermere, formerly R.W.P.G.M., was installed in the office under the auspices of the lodge, and the jewels now worn by the officers were presented by his father, Bro. Sir Robert Cotton.

Shortly after half-past one o'clock, Bro. the Right Hon. Lord De Tabley, R.W.P.G.M., entered the lower room of the Town Hall, (crowded to excess), which was set apart for the day's business, attended by an imposing array of nearly fifty Present and Past Provincial Grand Lodge Officers. His lordship immediately proceeded to open the Provincial Grand Lodge, having Bro. Horatio Lloyd, P.P.G.S.W., as acting Deputy P.G.M.; Bro. Æneas J. McIntyre, Q.C., G. Registrar, as P.G.S.W.; and Bro. Marwood, as P.G.J.W.; Bro. the Rev. R. Hodgson, and Bro. the Rev. Graham Jones, P.G. Chaplains; Bro. F. Jackson, P.G. Treas.; Bro. E. H. Griffiths, P.G. Secretary.

Amongst the others present were Bros. H. Matthews, P.G.S.; J. B. Piercy, P.P.G.S. of W., Staffordshire; the Rev. J. W. Newell Tanner, P.P.G.C.; R. Smith, P.P.G.S. of W.; J. Tomlinson, P.P.G.S.B.; T. M. Lockwood, P.G.S. of W.; G. Burrows, P.P.G.J.D.; J. W. McGill, P.P.G.A.D.C.; R. C. Mellor, P.P.G.J.D. N. Wales and Salop; J. Salmon, P.P.G.S.D.; S. F. Gosling, P.P.G.S.B.; J. Hibbert, P.P.G.D.; W. Matthews, P.G.A.D.C.; A. Terry, P.G.S.B.; J. Beech, P.P.G.P.; W. Eardley, P.P.G.D.C.; W. Greatrix, P.P.G.P.; J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.W.; P. Wadsworth, P.P.G.D.C.; J. E. Williams, P.P.G.S.D.; J. Bro. F. H. Griffiths, P.G. Sec., read the roll of P.G. officers, and of the lodges, and as a result there appeared a large representation of the former, while all the lodges had members present, with but one exception.

Letters of apology for non-attendance were also read from the S.W. of E.L., Bro. Stanhope, Bros. Captain Cope, B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B. West Lancashire; Rev. E. Parr, and others.

It was stated in the course of the proceedings that Bro. the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., Deputy P.G.M., who had fully intended to be present, was necessarily absent in consequence of the unexpected death of his mother at Homburg, whither he had gone.

The minutes of the last P.G. Lodge meeting at Liscard were read by the P.G. Secretary, and unanimously adopted.

The P.G.M. then said, it was now his duty, as in previous years, to address a few words to the brethren on the present position of Masonry in the province. It was always a matter of anxiety with him to choose his words on occasions like that, but he had great pleasure that day in acknowledging the mercy of the Giver of All Good for allowing him to meet his brethren once more in Provincial Grand Lodge. It was to him a matter of the greatest satisfaction to meet so numerous and influential an assembly in the good old town of Nantwich. It was now eighteen years since he last visited that town, and the lapse of that time had gone like a dream. He hoped the Great Architect of the Universe would long spare every brother present in health and happiness. Masonry, he was happy to say, was pursuing an even course of prosperity, and he hoped the increase in its members would also be attended by continued respectability and discipline. Speaking of the manner in which business was done in the various lodges, his lordship said it was pleasant to find that twenty-five minute books were without any fault whatever, which showed a great improvement on last year, and he was sure that where errors did exist they were the result of omission of a study of the Book of Constitutions, of which he recommended a careful perusal. Alluding to the necessary erasure of one lodge in the province in consequence of certain irregularities, his lordship said it was always painful for him to be compelled to take this extreme course, but pointed out that it was necessary to preserve the character and proper working of the various lodges. He hoped this fact would have a salutary effect on all the brethren within the province. With this exception, all the lodges seemed to have been carried on in the most perfect peace and harmony, and he was proud to state that the lodge which had to be admonished last year had, since their last meeting, contributed the handsome sum of £100 to the great Masonic Charities. (Applause.) Another satisfactory sign of progress was the fact that there was now a greater disposition on the part of lodges to meet in Masonic halls and rooms, rather than, as formerly, in public houses; and he would feel it a great pleasure, as a step in this direction, in being present during the coming month at the opening of a new Masonic hall in Congleton—an example which he hoped would be followed by other towns. (Applause.) The charity organisation of the province had been fairly successful during the past year, as they had succeeded in carrying one of their candidates mainly through the exertions of the committee. He would most strongly urge upon the various lodges the desirability of concentrating their votes, and having full confidence in the wisdom of the committee, as the best means of securing the election of any candidate whom they might send up for the charities. In London they were following the example of the provinces, in forming what was called a Charity Voting Organisation Association, which would make it still more difficult for the provincial candidates to get into the metropolitan institutions. It was accordingly all the more necessary to combine, and he strongly urged the W.M.s and brethren of lodges to send all available votes to the Prov. Grand Secretary, who would forward them to the proper quarter in London. By these means the Cheshire province would maintain the influence and position it had held for many years, and which they must all wish to see continued. (Applause.) The Committee of the Fund of Benevolence had that day resolved to recommend the widow of a brother who was well-known and highly respected in the province, for election on the foundation of the Institution for aged Freemasons, and he trusted she would receive the hearty support of all the lodges in the province. After referring to the death of Bro. Bland, P.P.G. Treas., who had died full of years and much respected, his lordship concluded by expressing a hope that he would continue to receive the constant support he had invariably received at the hands of every Mason in the province, and by expressing his determination to do his best to efficiently fulfil the duties of his office, and his confident hope that Freemasonry would flourish, not only with respect to numbers, but also with regard to its influence and position. (Applause.)

The P.G.M. again nominated Bro. the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., as the D.P.G.M.; and the other appointments were as follow:—

Bro. Æneas J. McIntyre, P.G.S.W., in accordance with notice of motion, moved the following resolution:—"That brethren who may serve the office of Steward to any two of the three great charities of the order, viz., the Royal Benevolent Institution for aged Freemasons and their Widows, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, will be presented with the charity jewel by this Provincial Grand Lodge."

In submitting the motion, Bro. McIntyre said that the Charities to which their children's education was entrusted were charities of great antiquity, and they thoroughly deserved the hearty support of every Mason. Not less interesting and worthy of support was the Royal Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, which had come to be looked upon in London as a charity which was deserving of the greatest encouragement.

Some such recognition of true Masonic service in the sacred cause of charity had been adopted in the Grand Lodge, and he thought that the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cheshire could not do better than imitate the example thus set them in high quarters. (Hear. Hear.)

The motion was seconded by Bro. J. P. Platt, P.P.G., J.W.; opposed by Bro. Latham, P.P.G.S.W.; and supported by the P.G.M. On being put to the brethren it was declared carried unanimously.

Bros. Mellor, Edwin Simpson, T. Chesworth, F. Henry, and H. Marfins, were individually invested by Bro. Lord De Tabley with a charity jewel, in recognition of their services as Stewards to the London charities.

The P.G.M. intimated that Bro. Captain Cope, in consequence of ill-health, had resigned the chairmanship of the Fund of Benevolence, and his lordship said he would appoint Bro. J. P. Platt to that office.

A cordial vote of thanks, on the motion of the P.G.M., was passed to the Rev. F. G. Blackburne, vicar of the parish church, for granting the use of that building for the afternoon service.

Bro. Lord de Tabley intimated that he would hold his next Provincial Grand Lodge meeting at Stockport, and the business portion of the proceedings then terminated.

The brethren afterwards marched in procession to the parish church, headed by the Nantwich brass band, under the conductorship of Mr. Hassall, where full choral service was performed. There was a very large assembly of the general public, besides the body of Freemasons. The musical service was under the direction of Bro. E. Cuzner, P.G.O.; assisted by Bros. Humphries and Knowles, Bro. Bell (vicar choral of Westminster Abbey), Miss and Master W. E. Cuzner, and Miss A. E. Cuzner. An eminently practical and appropriate sermon was preached by Bro. the Rev. Graham Jones, P.G. Chaplain; who took his text from Genesis, iv., 9, "Am I my brother's keeper?" A collection was made at the close in aid of the Fund of Benevolence.

About 200 brethren subsequently dined at the town hall, under the presidency of Lord de Tabley, who was supported by a full complement of Present and Past Provincial Grand Officers. His lordship proposed the principal toasts in an exceedingly genial manner, and the toast of his lordship's health was received with an amount of enthusiasm which showed how Cheshire Masons value and appreciate his admirable rule over them. The musical programme was supplied by the same voices which had rendered the choral service of the sanctuary in the afternoon.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DORSET.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorset was held at the Guildhall, Poole, on Tuesday, 17th inst., and was presided over by the very popular and respected Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Montague Guest. There was a goodly attendance of the brethren, so that the large and well furnished room in which the Provincial Grand Lodge was held was well filled.

The officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge present included Bros. J. P. F. Gundry, D.P.G.M.; C. W. Wyndham, P.S.G.W.; E. G. Legg, P.J.G.W.; Rev. E. J. L. B. Henslowe, P.G.C.; Robert Case, P.G.T.; C. T. Robins, P.G.R.; R. N. Howard, P.G.S.; W. E. Brymer, P.G.S.D.; J. Hammond, P.G.J.D.; Francis Travers, P.G.S. of Wks.; A. H. Green, P.G.A.D.C.; J. Whitehead Smith, P.G.O.; J. A. Sherren, P.G.P.; G. S. Brodie, G. Harrison, J. B. C. Best, J. A. Atkins, and others.

Amongst others we observed Bros. J. M. P. Montagu, S.G.D.; G. Burt, P.P.S.G.W., and P.M. of Swanage Lodge, the lately appointed Sheriff for the City of London; G. R. Crickmay, L. H. Ruegg, Rev. W. M. Heath, T. B. Hanham, John Graves, J. H. Boyd, J. S. Webb, G. L. Thorne, H. C. Burt, G. H. Gutch, T. A. Hanne, J. New, C. W. P. Dyke, E. T. Budden, W. Chick, acting D.C.; A. J. Budden, G. J. G. Gregory, J. W. Luff, J. S. Hudson, R. Evers, F. W. Good, H. W. Abbot, R. G. Gilman, S. Pettitt, W. H. Dean, C. Keats, J. T. Hellier, J. Hine, T. Ratcliffe, G. W. R. Waters, T. Hunter, J. Fenn, T. Ings, H. Smyth, C. H. W. Parkinson, H. A. Lawton, C. W. Kite, W. L. Chitty, S. W. Whetham jun., J. Lowe, Sir M. H. Nepean, Bart., J. Freeman, W. Trayte, J. M. Burt, C. J. T. Hambro, W. H. T. Toby, Rev. J. G. Brymer, and others.

The Prov. Grand Lodge having been duly opened at noon, the Prov. Grand Sec. read the minutes of the last annual Prov. Grand Lodge, held at Beaminster, and also the minutes of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Emergency, held in January last at Dorchester.

An interesting and instructive lecture was then given by Bro. Rev. E. J. L. B. Henslowe, the Prov. Grand Chaplain.

Letters from several eminent brethren were read, regretting their inability to attend from various causes, including a letter from Bro. J. Jacob, P.P.J.G.W., who was initiated into Masonry in 1819—nearly sixty years ago—and who wrote in feeling terms on his regret at not being able to attend from increasing age and infirmities, and also expressing his deep sense of the value of the true principles of Freemasonry, which in his old age he still loved and cherished, although he must now withdraw his thoughts from all below to where the world's Great Architect lives and reigns for evermore.

The R.W. the Prov. Grand Master then addressed the brethren on the various matters connected with the Craft, particularly referring to the action of the Grand Orient of France in having yielded to an insensate agitation and cast away the very foundation of universal Masonry. The Prov. G.M. read extracts from the Quarterly Communications of Grand Lodge, and strongly supported the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of England, who, on the motion of the Pro Grand Master, Bro. the Earl of Carnarvon, lately resolved not to recognise the Grand Orient of France so long as that body persisted in their present withdrawal from the first grand principle on which Freemasonry is founded, and on which he hoped it would continue. The R.W. Bro. alluded to the Indian Famine Relief Fund, reminding the brethren that at the last Prov. Grand Lodge at Beaminster he brought before them, (as a matter of general charity and outside the boundaries of Masonry), that terrible national calamity which was then raging over so large a portion of our vast Indian Empire. He thanked the brethren for the very ready and hearty manner in which they responded to his appeal, so that within a fortnight of that meeting he was enabled to instruct their Prov. Grand Treasurer to remit to the Mansion House Relief Fund the handsome sum of £200. The Grand Lodge of England, a few days after the meeting of this Prov. Grand Lodge, voted £2000 from their funds towards the same object, and several other Prov. Grand Lodges followed the example which this province had set them, and, considering the smallness of this province, the brethren had no reason to be ashamed of the amount which the province of Dorset contributed to alleviate one of the direst calamities that had occurred in modern times. Referring to the position of the different lodges in the province, and the votes held by their members in the Masonic Charities, the R.W. Bro. congratulated the Lodge of "Faith and Unanimity," No. 417, Dorchester, on being the first lodge in the province that had attained the satisfactory position of having every one of its Past Masters, as well as its present W.M., and others below that rank, life subscribers of one or other of the Masonic Charities. He also congratulated the Lodge of "St. Cuthberta," No. 622, Wimborne, on having very nearly attained the same position, and also on that lodge having the largest number of annual subscribers, and strongly urged on the brethren generally to emulate these two lodges in their efforts to assist the various Masonic Charities, which deserved the support of every brother. The R.W. Bro. alluded, in feeling terms, to the loss which the province had sustained through the lamented death of Bro. Herbert Williams, who was Dep. P.G.M. in 1841, and also from the year 1846 to 1853. Closely identified with many public matters in Dorset, and also in Masonry, in being the son of Bro. William Williams, who was an enthusiastic Mason, and Prov. G.M. for this province from 1812 to his death in 1839, and also well known as the Editor of our present Book of Constitution, Bro. Herbert Williams took an interest in our Masonic proceedings, although of late years he did not take an active part in Masonry beyond supporting the Masonic Charities. The P.G.M. also referred to the lamented death within the last few days of Bro. W. Hanne, of Shaftesbury, who was their Prov. G. Treasurer from 1849 to 1865, and who desired to be buried with Masonic honours. After speaking on other matters affecting the province, and expressing his hope that before many years elapsed each lodge in the province would be able to meet within walls of their own, the P.G.M. concluded his address by announcing that he intended to hold his next annual Prov. G. Lodge at Dorchester.

The Prov. Treasurer, (Bro. Robert Case), then read the Treasurer's account and certificate of audit, showing that the receipts for the year had been £273 10s., and the payments £254 12s. 10d., leaving a balance in favour of Prov. Grand Lodge of £104 5s. 4d., and the accounts were duly passed.

On the motion of the R.W. Prov. G.M., seconded by the W. Dep. P.G.M., Bro. Robert Case was then unanimously re-elected Treasurer for the year ensuing.

The report of the Charity Organisation Committee was read and adopted, V.W. Bro. J. M. P. Montagu, Past Dep. P.G.M., as a member of that committee, addressing the brethren on the same, and on the importance of consolidating all their voting power.

On the motion of Bro. G. Burt, seconded by Bro. G. R. Crickmay, a sum of £10 10s. was granted to the Lodge of Amity, Poole, to assist that lodge in becoming Life Governor of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Boys.

On the motion of Bro. W. H. W. Toby, seconded by Bro. T. Hanham, a sum of £5 was granted to the Beaminster Manor Lodge, to assist that lodge in becoming Life Governor of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Widows of Freemasons.

The Prov. Grand Master then called upon the officers present to resign their collars, and appointed and invested his officers for the ensuing year as follows:—

J. P. F. Gundry, P.M. 707 (re-appointed) ...	D. Prov. G.M.
G. J. G. Gregory, P.M. 417 ...	Prov. G.S.W.
C. W. Parkinson, P.M. 386 ...	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. J. G. Brymer, 1266 ...	Prov. G. Chap.
Robert Case, P.M. 417 (re-elected) ...	Prov. G. Treas.
G. Harrison, W.M. 137 ...	Prov. G. Reg.
R. N. Howard, P.M. 1037 (re-appointed) ...	Prov. G. Sec.
C. J. T. Hambro, 1265 ...	Prov. G.S.D.
Sir M. H. Nepean, Bart., 707 ...	Prov. G.J.D.
J. A. Atkins, W.M. 622 ...	Prov. G.S. of W.
W. Smith, P.M. 170 (re-appointed) ...	Prov. G.D.C.
W. H. W. Toby, W.M. 1367 ...	Prov. G.A.D.C.
C. W. Kite, W.M. 472 ...	Prov. G.S.B.
G. R. Waters, W.M. 1037 ...	Prov. G. Org.
Jas. Lowe, W.M. 707 ...	Prov. G. Purs.
E. P. Philpotts, 137; H. Smyth, 137; H. T. Trevanion, 137; W. L. Chitty, 472; J. H. Masters, 1168; W. Trayte, P.M. 1146 ...	Prov. G. Stwds.

The customary votes of thanks having been given, Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed at three o'clock.

The banquet took place in the Oddfellows' Hall. There were from 150 to 200 brethren present, and the entire arrangements gave great satisfaction to all.

The usual Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and at the suggestion of the Prov. Grand Master, the charity box, which amounted to £12 12s., was agreed to be given to the Dorset County Hospital.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.

The place chosen for the installation of His Grace the Duke of St. Albans, as Provincial Grand Master of Nottinghamshire, on the 20th inst., was the long picture gallery at the Castle Museum, the walls of which are covered with some of the choicest and best works of both old and modern masters, consisting of Murillo, Vandyke, Rubens, Lillan, Ward, Turner, Damsau, Patt, and others. At the north end of the room was placed the dais, or raised platform, with the banner of the Nottinghamshire Grand Lodge at the back; the other lodge banners were arranged on both sides of the room according to seniority. No. 47, being more than a century old, looked like a relic of a battle field. The different lodges were arranged on either side, and consisted of the Newstead, 47; Commercial, 411; Royal Sussex, 402; Annesley, 1415; Notts., Robin Hood, Pelham, Pankwell, and Newton, besides the Provincial Grand Lodges of Notts., Derbyshire, Lincolnshire, Dorsetshire, Staffordshire, and Cheshire, numbering in all more than 300 Masons. When the room was full and complete it was one of the most brilliant scenes ever seen in the province of Notts.

At one p.m. the W.M. of the Newstead Lodge, assisted by his officers, opened his lodge, and after this the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master, accompanied by Bro. Montagu, Guest, P.G.M. Dorset; Major Smyth, P.G.M. Lincolnshire; Bro. J. Watson, D.P.G.M. Notts., and other members of the Prov. G. Lodge of Notts., entered the room in procession, and were conducted to the pedestal, where they were met by the W.M. of No. 47, his officers, and Bro. Sir Jas. Oldknow, (Mayor of Nottingham.)

The Pro Grand Master, Earl of Carnarvon, then opened the Prov. Grand Lodge according to custom. The Pro Grand Master was then saluted according to custom, after which the patent appointing the Duke the G.M. of the province was read by the G.D.C., and then the Pro Grand Master addressed the brethren present upon the occasion which had called them together, and dwelt upon the need there was for concord and harmony in all their gatherings. Freemasonry was pre-eminently the landmark to true courtesy, and whilst it respected the failings of all, it looked upon all men as brothers, and it behoved every true Mason to put forth all his energies to assist in every way possible in promoting the great work which society demanded from every man. He referred to the pleasing fact that although the province had for some time been without a guiding head in matters Masonic, they were now about to instal one who was eminent in all the good qualities of a true Mason, and would do all he could to promote the prosperity of the Craft in this province. A deputation of seven Masters with the G. D. C. retired and returned with the Duke, who was led up to the pedestal, obligated, and duly installed in the chair. The brethren then saluted their head in due form. The patent of the D.P.G.M., Bro. Watson, was then read, and he was duly obligated and installed by the Duke, and then saluted by the brethren.

An address was next presented to the P.G.M. of Nottinghamshire, by the P.G.M. of Lincolnshire, to which the Duke briefly replied, and promised to send a lengthened reply in writing.

An address was also presented to the Earl of Carnarvon, who replied at length on the duties of every Mason in the province, observing that whilst some must rule, others must serve and all obey, and that whilst it was easy to obey it was not so easy to command so as to insure that respect which was due. Their duties were doubtless onerous, but with patience and kindness all would be overcome. They must feel that every brother had claims upon them, and that the poorest brother had the right to have his case considered by the noble Duke, subject to the laws and regulations of the order. He (the speaker) had very high regards for this county, and he looked forward to much prosperity in the future working of the province under the noble Duke. After the noble Earl had resumed his seat, followed the appointment of the various officers of the Grand Lodge. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the Earl of Carnarvon, and he was asked to become an honorary member of the Prov. G. Lodge, which he said he should be exceedingly glad to do.

After other resolutions had been passed, the lodge was closed by the Duke in due form, and then the Prov. Grand Lodge retired. The W.M. of No. 47 and officers resumed the chairs and closed the lodge, and thus brought to an end the most brilliant and most impressive ceremony it has ever been the pleasure and privilege of the Masons of this province to attend.

The brethren then adjourned to luncheon at the Albert Hall, at which about 300 sat down, the chief table being occupied by the Duke of St. Albans, supported on the left by the Earl of Carnarvon, Bro. M. Guest, G. M. Dorset, an Irish brother, and others. On the right were Bros. Sir Jas. Oldknow, Watson, D.P.G.M., Major Smyth, Lincoln; Bemrose, Mayor of Derby; and others. The band of the Robin Hood Rifles played select music during luncheon.

The following toasts were proposed and responded to:

"The Queen and the Craft," proposed by the Prov. G. Master; "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master, and the Grand Lodge of England," proposed by the Prov. G. Master; and "The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro G.M.," proposed by V.W. Bro. Watson, D.P.G.M.

The noble earl replied at length, and was repeatedly cheered, and closed by proposing "The Health of the Prov. G. Master, the Duke of St. Albans," who replied, and proposed "The D.P.G.M., and Past and Present Prov. Grand Officers of Notts.," to which Bro. Watson responded.

"The Visitors" were proposed by Bro. Danks, Grand Treasurer, and responded to by Bro. M. Guest, Prov. G. Master of Dorset, the Irish brother, and Bro. Bemrose (Mayor of Derby.)

At 8 p.m. the conversazione was held at the "Castle," where the rooms had, after the morning ceremony, been prepared for the reception of visitors, and never has the interior of Nottingham Castle presented so brilliant an appearance as on this occasion. The Long Gallery and White Gallery were transformed into an elegant drawing room, whilst the other rooms were similarly decorated with chairs and seat arrangements being abundantly placed on carpets of the softest texture. At the north end of the gallery was placed Mr. Farmer's select body of musician nd vocal artists, surrounded by a delicious collection of othouse plants and mirrors. On the broad terrace outside was placed the splendid band of the Robin Hood Rifles, which played at intervals during the evening. More than 800 persons were present, and when all the guests were in the Long Gallery the scene was most charming. The Masonic body were in full regalia—here and there were to be seen the graceful robes of a Knight Templar, followed by the sombre hue of the Knight of Malta; the glaring dress of the Rosicrucian, relieved by the blue of the Craft and mixture of the Royal Arch. The above, mixed with the rich dresses and laces of the fair sex, presented a scene of singular brilliance.

At half-past nine Sir James Oldknow was received under an arch of crossed swords, and shortly afterwards a similar ceremony was performed when the Ducal party entered, consisting of the Duke and Duchess of St. Albans, the Earl of Carnarvon, and the duchess's sister, Sir Ivor and Lady Guest, and other distinguished visitors. These remained in the rooms for an hour, regarding the proceedings with evident pleasure, and inspecting the rare and costly contents of the museum. After the departure of the Ducal party, the guests gradually departed, and thus brought to a close a day long and vividly to be remembered by those who were so fortunate as to be present.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE IN NEW ZEALAND.

Our readers may recollect that, in the year 1876, a communication was laid before the Grand Lodge and other governing Masonic bodies in Scotland, relative to certain steps which had been taken to issue a spurious charter in the British possession of New Zealand. This communication, which was from Bro. J. Whyte Melville of Benochy and Strathkinnes, Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Council 33° of Scotland, set forth that in the month of June last, he learned that two brethren in Edinburgh were endeavouring to obtain a charter from the Grand Orient of France, to establish a Supreme Council in New Zealand, and one of them, a brother John T. Loth, proceeded to Paris for this purpose; that he put himself in communication with the Grand Orient of France, and the result was that the charter was not granted; that Bro. Loth then communicated with the Supreme Masonic Council of Luxembourg, but did not get a charter from that body either. He then applied to the Grand Orient and Supreme Council of Egypt, a body at that time unrecognized. From it he got all he asked. A translation of the Decree of the Grand Orient and Supreme Council was published, and is as follows.

A.G.G.D.G.A.A.D.M.

GRAND ORIENT OF EGYPT.

To all the regular Masons in the Two Hemispheres.

S.U.G.P.F.

DEGREE XLV.

We, S. A. Zola, 33°, Sovereign Grand Inspector General, Grand Master, Grand Hierofant of the Grand Orient of Egypt, Supreme Council of Egypt and its Dependencies, as Grand Commander ad vitam of the Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree, President of the Grand College of Rites, of the Section of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite.

Having taken into due consideration a petition presented us by our Grand Secretary, under date 7th October, 1875, E. V., in name of Ill. Brother J. T. Loth, Knight K.T. of the Thirtieth Degree, &c., &c., and confirmed by the Mandate of Ill. Bro. Wm. Officer, Knight K.H. 30°, &c., &c., by which the Ill. Bros. John Hislop, K.T., John Hyde Harris, K.T., William Caldwell, K.T., William McCullough, P.M., John Honibourne Sanders, K.T., James Mills, P.M., Wm. Patrick Crawford, K.T., Frederick William Theil, R.A., Louis Gourt, S.T., request to be promoted to the Thirty-third and last Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, and to be authorised to work from the First to the Last Degree of that Rite; to be empowered to confer regularly all the Degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite upon those brethren whom they shall judge worthy, and finally, to empower them to constitute a Supreme Council of the Thirty-third.

Considering as sufficient and available the moral and Masonic guarantee which Ill. Bros. Loth and Officer offer in favour of the petitioners.

Considering that in accepting such petition, the Grand Orient of Egypt, far from injuring the rights acquired by other powers, only co-operates in the progress and in the splendour of Masonry, in a country where until now no Supreme body exists.

Having taken into account the enormous distance which separates the petitioners from their mandatories, and these from the powers invoked.

Having heard the opinion of our Council, consulted the General Statutes and Regulations of our Order, and in virtue of the unlimited powers accorded to us by the Council itself and confirmed to us by the constituency.

We have decreed and we do decree.

Article 1st. Ill. Bro. J. T. Loth is raised to the Thirty-third Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, and nominated Special Delegate from the Grand Orient of Egypt, for the purpose of communicating the same degree to the mandatory of the applicant, Ill. Bro. Officer.

Article 2nd. Ill. Bro. Officer is raised to the Thirty-third Degree, and authorised in conjunction with Bro. Loth to confer personally, or communicate by letter, such Degree on the undersigned petitioners.

Article 3rd. The undersigned petitioners, living in New Zealand, are invested with up to the Thirty-third Degree, and authorised to work and cause to work in all the Degrees, and to communicate them to all such brethren as they shall believe worthy of them.

Article 4th. There is hereby accorded to the undersigned signed brethren petitioners, a patent by which to constitute a Supreme Council of the thirty-third Degree, under the auspices of the Grand Orient of Egypt, and under the free denomination of Supreme Council of the thirty-third Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite for New Zealand and its Dependencies.

Article 5th. The execution of the present Decree, so far as concerns Ill. Bro. J. T. Loth, is hereby confided to our Grand Secretary—in so far as concerns the petitioners, Ill. Bros. Loth and Officer, are bound under the rule of Article 2nd of the present Decree,—with the obligation of depositing in the archives of the Grand Orient of Egypt, the signed obligations under the form annexed of Ill. Bros. Loth, Officer, and the petitioners.

Given from the seat of the Grand Orient of Egypt, this XVI. day of the VIII. month of the year V.L. 000,875—16th October, 1875, E. V.

The Grand Master—Sov. G. Commander ad vitam,

(Signed) S. A. ZOLA, 33°, 96°.

The Grand Secretary,

(Signed) F. F. ODDI, 33°, 95°.

The Grand Chancellor,

(Signed) P. L. DILBEROGLUE, 33°, 95°.

The Grand Lodge of Scotland at once sent instructions to its Provincial Grand Master in New Zealand, to warn the Scottish brethren there against having anything to do with the body so irregularly constituted in New Zealand, and the same course was followed by the Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland, and the Chapter general of the Religious and Military Order of the Temple.

Since then the Supreme Council of Egypt has been legalised, and is now acknowledged as a lawful Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite; but being satisfied of the error previously committed, its first act has been, in the most frank and ample manner, to express this and to undo it. It has accordingly issued a Decree, a translation of which we annex, cancelling the diplomas issued to Bros. Loth and Officer, creating them members of the Thirty-third Degree, cancelling all the diplomas issued to brethren in New Zealand, cancelling the Charter under which the body there was professing to work, and declaring all the patents, diplomas, and certificates sent to New Zealand and Scotland in absence, and relating to the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, to be nullities, and that the same are deleted from the Registry of the Supreme Council of New Zealand.

The following is the Decree:—

ORDO AB CHAO.

Ad Universi Terrarum Orbis Summi Architecti Gloriam.

Grand Orient of Egypt. Supreme Council of the Thirty-third and Last Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite.

No. 152 Subject.

Valley of the Nile.

Orient of Alexandria.

DEGREE.

We, S. A. Zola, Sovereign Grand Commander, Grand Master of the Supreme Council of the Thirty-third and Last Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite for Egypt and its Dependencies, Valley of the Nile.

As the Supreme Council of Egypt, anxious always to propagate the highest principals of the Rite, by our Decree, No. 45, of 16th October, 1875, and subsequently No. 69, of 20th March, 1876, exalted to the Thirty-third Degree, several distinguished Masons living in New Zealand, and granted to them patents by which they could constitute in that valley a Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree, and that because that territory was considered free and not subject to any regular Supreme Council.

As the Supreme Council of Egypt, moved by the same principle, by means of several of our Decrees exalted to the 33rd Degree several Masons residing in Scotland, and that because the Supreme Council of Scotland had been represented to us as an irregular and illegitimate body.

We being now satisfied and convinced of the legal and legitimate existence of the Supreme Council of England, Ireland and Scotland, of the right of the first or of all the three over New Zealand considered as a dependency of the British Crown, and in consequence being satisfied of the grave error into which we had, to their injury, involuntarily fallen. Having consulted the Grand Constitutions of 1876.

Wishing, as much as in us lies, that the most perfect harmony should reign among all the Supreme Councils of the two hemispheres.

Requiring for us, and for all the Masonic powers, the most scrupulous reciprocity in questions relative to territorial jurisdictions.

Desiring, above all, that any, even the least pretext of schism or division on our part may be avoided with the universal Masonic brotherhood. Having heard the opinion of the active members of the Supreme Council. In its own name, have decreed and do decree.

Article 1. Our Decrees, No. 45, of 16th October, 1875, and No. 69, of 20th March, 1876, E. V., by which there were raised to the Thirty-third Degree several Masons living in New Zealand, and according to them the power to constitute themselves into a Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree, is definitively abrogated.

2. All our Decrees by which several Masons living in Scotland were exalted in absence to the 33rd are annulled.

3. All the patents, all the diplomas, and all the certificates remitted, be it to New Zealand, be it to Scotland, in absence and relating to the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, are deleted from the registry of the Supreme Council and declared null.

4. The present shall be communicated to the parties interested immediately to the Supreme Councils of both hemispheres, and shall be published by means of our Official Bulletin.

Given from the Grand Orient of Cairo, Valley of the Nile, this 8th day Tieri A.M. 5638, Vulgo the 7th September, 1878.

(Signed.) S. A. ZOLA 33°. Sov. G. Commander.

F. F. ODDI, 33°. General Grand Chancellor.

Masonic and General Tidings.

The consecration of the "Royal Hanover Lodge" No. 1777 will take place at the Town Hall, Hounslow, on Friday the 11th October, the ceremony being performed by Bro. Col. Francis Burdett, the Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex, assisted by Bro. H. G. Buss, Asst. Grand Sec. of England, and Prov. Grand Treasurer of Middlesex.

The Town Commission of Mullingar, county Westmeath, have, according to the Standard, passed a resolution condemning the proposal to erect a Masonic hall in that town.

A Grand Council of the Illustrious Grand Elected Knights K.H. Thirtieth Degree, will be held at the Masonic Hall, 33, Golden-square, London, W., on Wednesday week, October 9th, at 4.45 p.m., prompt.

On Friday, October 4th, the Annual Meeting and Banquet of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex will be held at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., Prov. G.M., presiding. Brethren intending to be present should at once obtain tickets of the following Stewards:—Bro. J. Farncombe (311), Lewes; Bro. W. T. Fell (315), Brighton; Bro. A. R. Cröcher (40), Hastings; and Bro. W. G. Sharp (1141). The banqueting room of this building is one of the handsomest in the south of England, and there is little doubt but that there will be a large and influential gathering on the occasion.

We learn from the Broad Arrow that Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Waveney, R.W.G.M. Suffolk, has intimated his intention of giving a sword as a prize annually at the Oxford Military College for proficiency in riding and sword exercise.

Bro. George Burt, Sheriff-elect of the City of London, is to be entertained at a congratulatory dinner, given by the well known Contractors Messrs. Mowlem and Co., at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen St., London, on Saturday next the 5th proximo.

The installation meeting of the Liverpool Dramatic Lodge, No. 1609, took place last Tuesday, the 24th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool. A full report of the proceedings &c. will appear in due course.

Bro. H. G. Colville has been presented with a silver salver and tea service, weighing in all thirty ounces, by the members of One and All Lodge, Bodmin.

FREEMASONS' TAVERN.—The liquidators of the company which formerly carried on this establishment have made a return of £2 per share to the shareholders. The tavern is now being successfully carried on by Bro. A. Best, who purchased it from the company.

Bro. F. G. Faithfull announces that a report which has been circulated that he has withdrawn his candidature for the appointment of City Remembrancer is incorrect, as he has "every intention of going to the poll."

The Whitehall Review of this week contains a list of the converts to Romanism.

A report of the consecration of St. Thomas's Chapter, No. 142, will appear in our next.

TRINITY COLLEGE LODGE No. 1765. — A report of the proceedings at the consecration of this lodge is in type and will appear in our next.

The Consecration of the Clarendon Lodge, No. 1769, took place on Tuesday last, the 24th inst., at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street.

Bro. Col. Francis Burdett, R.W.G.M. Middlesex, has returned to Ancaster House, Richmond, from Aberdeen.

The annual court of Governors of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, will be held (immediately after the Provincial Lodge Business) at the Philharmonic Hall, Hope Street, Liverpool, on Wednesday, October 2nd, at 12 o'clock in the forenoon, to receive and determine the several recommendations of the general committee, and for the transaction of the general business of the institution.

CHECK ON OMNIBUS CONDUCTORS.—Bro. A. G. Church, Secretary of the London General Omnibus Company, has invented an apparatus containing continuous rolls of numbered tickets for checking the receipts. A ticket, with the fare printed plainly upon it, is given to each passenger at the time payment is made, and the apparatus being so contrived that it is impossible to return a ticket when once withdrawn, the conductor will have to account for as many fares as there are tickets gone from the roll in the box.

The Emperor William of Germany was initiated, passed, and raised, on May 22nd, 1846, more than thirty-eight years ago.

AN INCREASING FAMILY.—The United States of America in 1822 contained nearly 80,000 members of the Masonic Fraternity; in 1878, the State of New York contains many more, and the United States 600,000.

We are asked to state that one-half of the roadway of London Bridge will be closed for repairing from Monday next until November 2nd, during which period one line of traffic only can pass.

The following reports unavoidably stand over:—Lodges 205, 862, 1273, 1288, 1557, 1580, 1597, 1744; Chapters 311 and 568; Red Cross Conclave 53.

Constitutions of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, containing the Charges, Regulations, E.A. Song, &c. A copy should be in the possession of every brother. It may be obtained for 2s. at the office of the Freemason, or will be sent post free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of twenty-five penny stamps. Address, Publisher, 198, Fleet-street, London.—ADVT.

Multum in Parbo; or Masonic Notes and Queries.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

It is always assumed and asserted that Anderson's statement on this head is correct, and that four lodges, and only four lodges, met at the "Apple Tree," and revived the Grand Lodge of 1716-17.

It is, however, to be observed, that the author of "Multum in Parbo," &c., (whoever he may have been), declares that six lodges met on St. John's Day, 1716, at the "Apple Tree."

Anderson agrees as to the date, though he only says, be it observed, "A.D. 1716," (Constitution 1738), and declares that four lodges and some old brothers then met and re-established the Grand Lodge, fallen into abeyance.

The author of "Multum in Parbo" talks of the "Masters and Wardens of six lodges," but in this statement he is singular, and is followed, as far as I am aware, by no other writer.

Preston agrees with Anderson, and so do all our earlier and later Masonic writers, I believe, without a single exception. Thus, by seemingly universal consent, the author of "Multum in Parbo" is given up on this point, and the historical accuracy of Anderson is maintained, though, on what grounds exactly I do not know, except that, I suppose, that Anderson was more likely to be correct than an anonymous Masonic historian.

If Anderson saw any contemporary documents illustrative of the history of 1716-17, they have not come down to us, as our Grand Lodge minutes begin in 1723. If any such MSS. do exist, their whereabouts is, at present, not known. The author of "Multum in Parbo" is, no doubt, inaccurate in many particulars, and, therefore, I presume, that we may safely assume that he is wrong on this particular point, and that Anderson is right.

I do not remember to have any where met with a surmise as to the real name of the author of "Multum in Parbo." He was probably a London brother. The book, (at least my copy), has no printer's name, but the plate is designed by Br. Pewiss, and engraved by Br. Larken. The date is assumed, from the last meeting of Grand Lodge, recorded 1763. He uses the word "Grand Assembly," but this word is not found in the minutes of Grand Lodge.

It contains a list of lodges differing from Cole's of 1763, and the names of streets and houses where the lodges met. It might be worth reprinting.

MASONIC STUDENT.

LODGE LISTS.

I alluded in the above note to the variations between Cole's list of 1763, and that in "Multum in Parbo," and I am anxious to offer a protest in which, I know, Bro. Hughan will join, against a too hasty or dogmatic assumption, that we are bound to accept any of these lists as absolutely correct, without collation and consideration.

To show the errors which a Masonic student might fall without circumspection, there is a lodge at Paris, called the "Ville de Tenerrre," No. 49, in Cole's List of 1763. It was not erased until 1768, though earlier dates of this transaction have been cited by more than one writer, as far I can make out, there was only one lodge chartered in Paris which was not erased, as I have said, before 1768, (see Freemason of June 15th, 1878.)

MASONIC STUDENT.

THE GRAND MASTERSHIP OF SCOTLAND.

The following letter has been sent, in reply to the requisition by members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, to Bro. Henry Inglis, the Depute Grand Master, requesting him to permit himself to be nominated Grand Master:

Torsonce, Stow, 16th September, 1878.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have to acknowledge receipt of the requisition which was presented to me last week, signed by some five hundred members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and actual Masters and Wardens of lodges, requesting me to allow myself to be put in nomination at the ensuing election as Grand Master Mason; and pledging themselves in the event of acceptance, to afford me every support.

Looking to the numbers and position of the requisitionists, I am justified in believing that, were I to accept the prayer of this requisition, my election would not be doubtful; but understanding that the present Grand Master is desirous to remain in office for another year, I have determined, from an anxious wish not to disturb the harmony of the Craft, to decline the request upon this occasion.

It only remains now for me, through you, to return my warmest thanks to those requisitionists and yourself for the honour which you have conferred upon me, and I remain, dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

HENRY INGLIS,
Depute Grand Master.

Bro. JAMES TURNER,
Chairman of Committee of Requisitionists.

Previous to the withdrawal of Bro. Inglis two influential committees to promote the re-election of the present G.M. had been formed at Edinburgh and Glasgow as follows:—

GLASGOW COMMITTEE.—Bro. James Caldwell, Pr.M. No. 256, Substitute Prov. G.M. Renfrewshire East; H. Jackman, R.W.M. No. 571; John Scott, P.M. No. 27, and Pr.M. No. 215; David Smart, R.W.M. No. 347; A. C. Paterson, Pr. M. No. 384; George Fisher, R.W.M. No. 7; Adam Thompson, Pr. M. No. 605, Representative from the Grand Lodge of Illinois; W. M. Pearson, Pr. M. No. 518; Thomas Fletcher, P.M. No. 34, and Pr.S.W. No. 108; B. Kelso, R.W.M. No. 31; James Findlay, R.W.M. No. 333; A. McConachie, P.J.W. No. 622; J. hn Mathieson, R.W.M. No. 178; W. J. E. Dobson, P.M. No. 71, and Pr. M. No. 622;

Z. H. Heys, R.W.M. 307; Thomas Stobo, R.W.M. 581; John Gillespie, R.W.M. 16; James Booth, R.W.M. 87; Robert Munro, R.W.M. 103; John Fraser, P.M. 87, and Pr. J.W. 252; John Morgan, R.W.M. 219; James Thomson, R.W.M. 102; J. B. McNaught, R.W.M. 556; Robert Nisbet, P.M. 592, and Pr. M. 340; Malcolm Stark, R.W.M. 419; J. C. Johnstone, R.W.M. 409; D. Donald, R.W.M. 275; W. J. Shaw, Prov. J.W. 230; James Ferguson, Pr. S.W. 0; Thomas White, R.W.M. 592; John McMillan, P.M. 34, and Pr. J.W. 108.

EDINBURGH COMMITTEE.—Bros. the Right Hon. the Earl of Roslyn, Past Grand Master; J. Whyte-Melville, of Bennoch and Strathkinness, Past Grand Master, and Provincial Grand Master of Fifeshire; Col. A. C. Campbell, of Blythswood, Substitute Grand Master; F. A. Barrow, Senior Grand Warden; The Right Hon. Lord Inverurie, Junior Grand Warden, and Provincial Grand Master of Kincardineshire; Robert F. Shaw-Stewart, R.W.M. 1, Senior Grand Deacon; William Hay, P.M. 48, Architect to Grand Lodge, and representative from Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia; Thomas Halket, Grand Bible Bearer; G. F. Russell Colt, of Cartsherrie, Grand Sword Bearer; the Right Hon. The Earl of Mar and Kellie, Past Depute Grand Master, Proxy Provincial Grand Master of New Zealand, and Representative from the Grand Orient of the Netherlands; the Right Hon. Viscount Strathallan, R.W.M. 192, and Representative from the Grand Lodge of Denmark; the Right Hon. Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Depute Provincial Grand Master of Stirlingshire; the Right Hon. Lord Carnegie, Pr. J.W. 136; Sir John Don Wauchope, Bart., Pr. M. 406; the Hon. Francis J. Moncreiff, Pr. S.W. 86; Charles Dalrymple, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of Argyll and the Isles; Roger Montgomerie, M.P., Pr. M. Mother Kilwinning; Alexander Smollett, of Bonhill, Provincial Grand Master of Dumbartonshire; William Boyd, Provincial Grand Master of Aberdeenshire, East; James H. Neilson, Pr. Provincial Grand Master of Venezuela; Samuel Hay, Past Grand Treasurer; Rev. V. G. Faithfull, Past Grand Chaplain; Lindsay Mackersy, W.S., P.M. No. 48, Representative from the Grand Lodge of Canada; E. W. Nightingale, Pr.M. No. 309, Representative from the Grand Lodge of New York; R. S. Brown, P.M. No. 145, Representative from the Grand Lodge of Kentucky; John Middleton, M.D., R.W.M. No. 2; William Edwards, R.W.M. No. 36; Henry E. Gordon, R.W.M. No. 44; William Mossman, R.W.M. No. 160; James Greenaway, R.W.M. No. 349; W. J. C. Abbott, P.M. No. 1, and Pr.M. No. 86; James Crichton, G.S. and Pr.M. No. 144; H. Y. D. Copland, G.S., P.M. No. 44, and Pr.S.W. No. 35; J. A. Hamilton, Pr.S.W. No. 22; Thomas Swinton, G.S., Pr.M. No. 52; James Melville, P.M. No. 97, and Pr.M. No. 251; George Dickson M.D., G.S., Pr.M. 357; John B. Innes, W.S., Pr.M. 261; George Barrie, Pr.S.W. 519; James Jamieson, S.W. 1; James H. Balfour, W.S., J.W. 1; John Fleming, G.S., Pr.S.W. 126; Francis L.W. G.S., Pr.M. 454; John Kirk, W.S., Pr.J.W. 65; A. T. Aphorpe, Pr.M. 420; J. S. Mackay, M.D., Pr.M. 466; J. S. McIlwraith, Pr.S.W. 41; T. Grahame Plumber, S.W. 2; S. A. Christie, P.M. 36; William Milne, P.M. 36.

THE LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

A special general meeting of the Committee of this young Association took place at Freemasons' Tavern on Friday last, at four o'clock, Bro. Lieut. Col. Creaton, P.G.D., in the chair, when several new members were elected, and some more names added to the Provisional Committee. The financial position of the Association was considered, and a long and important discussion took place, in respect of the October election, and the interchange and pledging of votes. Several voting papers were handed in and subscriptions paid, and the Committee adjourned until next called together by the Chairman, the Sub-Committee to attend to the October elections having been previously appointed.

The Committee had its attention called to several letters, and also to a few "canards" respecting its aim, objects, and arrangements, but thought it better to leave all such matters to the good sense of the brethren, and to the actual result of its friendly and unselfish efforts.

It was recommended that all voting papers should be sent at once to Bro. Tisley, St. Dunstan's Vestry, Fleet-street, by whom they are registered in the books of the Association.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

According to a statement made at the Manchester licensing sessions, there are 2567 persons holding licences for the sale of intoxicating liquor in that city.

The fees and fines in County Courts in the last financial year were £399.064 14s. 9d., and £1534 4s. 1d., was "forfeited suitors' money."

In the year ended the 31st of March last, the productive labour of convicts in prison in England amounted to £10.573 9s. 11d., of which £2190 12s. 10d. was profit on farms and £8382 17s. 1d. on manufacturing department.

One hundred and twenty eight thousand two hundred and seventy-seven foreigners slept in Parisian hotels and furnished lodgings on Wednesday week, only 6514 beds remaining vacant.

Dr. Schliemann's next researches are to be in Ithaca.

M. Ernest Quetelet, the director of the Brussels Observatoire, and well-known for his meteorological and astronomical studies, has died in Belgium, at the age of 53.

The Citizen states that the Corporation have decided to take the present opportunity of executing some extensive improvements in Ludgate-hill and St. Paul's churchyard. No less than six houses are in course of demolition for rebuilding, and two others are partly untenanted. By this procedure a far finer view of the cathedral will be obtained from the western side.

The Ecclesiastical Art Exhibition will be held at Sheffield during the meeting of the Church Congress. Many of the architectural drawings exhibited at the Royal Academy will be on view. There will be great competition among artists in stained glass, no less than twenty applications having already been received for places to exhibit. There will also be a loan collection of mediæval and modern art.

Mr. Walter S. Britton, of the Clarence Bicycle Club, has ridden from London to Bath and back, a distance of 212 miles, in one day.

A fine Quarry of Lithographic Stone has been found in Algeria, near Oran. The stone is reported to be equal to some of the best specimens from the old Manich quarries, now exhausted.

Tell's Chapel, on the Lake of Lucerne, is to be restored, and the damaged frescoes, scrawled over with the names of tourists of all nations, will be replaced by four large pictures representing "The Oath of the Swiss Confederates at the Rütli," "Tell Shooting at the Apple," "Tell's Escape from the Boat," and "The Death of Gessler in the Hohlle Gasse, near Küssnacht." The little chapel by the lake side, now nearly five hundred years old, is very shabby at present, having been much injured by damp and the weather, to say nothing of the roughness of visitors, while the sister edifice at Küssnacht, built where Tell is asserted to have shot the Austrian tyrant, is in much better preservation.

News from Capt. Tyson's Arctic expedition in the Florence has been brought to Washington by the schooner Helen, which wintered in the same bay on the coast of Cumberland. Meteorological observations were taken most accurately during the winter by Mr. Sheerman, the physicist of the expedition. Unfortunately, M. Kumblein, the naturalist, inflicted on himself a wound when on duty, and was disabled for the greater part of the winter. Capt. Tyson went to Disco to recruit natives, collect goods, and purchase dogs. He fulfilled his duty with his wonted activity and success. But when everything was ready he learned by a message sent from Washington that the preparations were useless, the American Congress having taken its vacation without deliberating upon the report so carefully drawn by the Marine Committee. The brave and accomplished commander of the Florence is now on his way to Washington, where he is expected daily. We are informed that a demonstration will be made against this piece of Parliamentary negligence. This preliminary expedition was entirely fitted out at the expense of Captain Howgate and his friends.

The African Expedition under Mr. Keith Johnston, organised by the African Committee of the Royal Geographical Society, is now completing its preparations, and will leave England early in November. Some weeks will be spent in scientific investigation in the coast regions near Zanzibar before the party finally marches for the interior, the route to be then taken being from Dar-es-Salaam to the north end of Lake Nyassa, and thence to Tanganyika. A geologist has been appointed as assistant and second in command to Mr. Johnston.

The Lancet says:—"In the ten years from 1867 to 1876 inclusive we published notices of the deaths of 3434 qualified medical men. Of this number, the age at which death occurred was recorded in 2684 instances, or in 78.13 per cent. of the whole number of deaths. The average age at which these 2684 deaths occurred was 56.6 years."

On Saturday last a man named Richard Rogerson completed his 66th year of service as turner for Messrs. R. Dalglish and Co., of the St. Helen's Foundry. He is nearly 77 years of age, and is in the enjoyment of excellent health, and likely to continue his service for some years to come. He first joined the foundry on the 14th of September, 1812, and has never left Messrs. Dalglish's employment since that time. He has had 14 children, five of whom are now living, and has 42 grand-children and 12 great grand-children living.

THE FREEMASON,

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1878.

THE PROGRESS OF ENGLISH MASONRY.

The advance of our Order in England is certainly going on with giant strides. We record to-day the consecration of three lodges, two metropolitan and one provincial, and that of a chapter, within a few days of each other, and we have reason to believe, that many new lodges are contemplated with our re-opening Masonic season. Our lodge roll nearly reaches 1800, and probably by Christmas 1879, will be as near 1900. We are among those who look on this increase of Masonic lodges with hearty approval. Believing Masonry to be a good thing, "per se," in the "abstract," and good in the "concrete" for the brotherhood and for man, we rejoice, we confess, when we hear of its setting up its "banners," and "strengthening its stakes," on every side. We have those of us, no doubt, who take a very different view of the matter. Like all earthly associations, Freemasonry has its "croakers," its "ill-omened seers," who indulge in "jeremiades," over the evils of "over production," and "over extension;" and we have to submit to portentous shakes of the head, and emphatic assertions of the "errors of our ways," and the "folies" of our "administration," the unwisdom of "new lodges," the "too rapid increase of Freemasonry." Yet, still as the old song has it, "merrily goes the mill stream on," and each succeeding week records new lodges and new chapters consecrated, and fresh application for consideration and approval, both in Craft and Royal Arch Masonry. And we ourselves do not at all share in the doubts of the "very sceptical," or the fears of the "very timid." A season of prosperity has set in for English Masonry; let us wisely use it, and not abuse it. There is danger in over-prosperity, just as there is danger in over-everything, nay, in everything of earth, but by prudence, care, and moderation, prosperity will have for us its good things, just as, no doubt, adversity always has its salutary warnings, and its hidden blessings for us all. Never at any time was our Grand Lodge so peaceful and so prosperous, nor its affairs so well managed, and so efficiently directed, as now. Some foolish persons have passed reflections on the fact, that a portion of our funds was lost in the bank of Willis, Percival, and Co., but those persons, if they know anything of banking, which it is clear they do not, must be aware that at one time no bank stood higher in the opinion of the commercial world. If those amiable critics knew the fact before hand, it is a pity they did not warn the authorities. It is idle, nay, impertinent, to be wise after the event, and then to blame the authorities in a matter utterly beyond their control. No doubt the question of security of the Treasurer is a very proper one, per se, but formerly it was very difficult, legally, we apprehend, to obtain it, or make it valid under the arrangements of Grand Lodge finance. We should not have said this but for certain remarks we have read on this head. With this exception, who can find fault with our Grand Lodge management? We have as its working head, a most hard-working, zealous, and courteous official, our esteemed Grand Secretary, Bro. John Hervey, always available, always attentive, always accommodating. His habitual kindness of heart and manner makes him always attractive to the brethren, while the skill with which he performs our ceremonies, and the sound advice he always tenders, render him most useful to our Order, and cause him to be alike looked up to and deeply valued by us all alike, by all who have the privilege of his private acquaintance, by all who know him only as the kindly Grand Secretary, or Consecrating Officer. If any little anomalies exist, (as in all institutions), they are altogether in detail, and are such as reasonable change and seasonable improvement can easily adjust and comfortably rectify. We have every reason to be proud of English Masonry, and when we consider the position of other bodies, of

"side issues," and "extraneous organizations," we may rejoice to think that we are under that good old Grand Lodge of ours, which has successfully weathered so many a gale, and stands to-day before the world confessedly the mother of all existing speculative Masonry. Distinguished by its wise laws, its sage administration, its conciliatory counsels, its kindly acts, and its zealous efforts in the sacred cause of charity, it holds a position occupied by no other Grand Lodge in the world, having earned the hearty confidence of its own loyal brotherhood, and the warm appreciation of foreign jurisdictions.

THE GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

It will be seen, by our leader of last week, and by Bro. Inglis's letter of this, that he declines to be nominated as Grand Master, so that there is no opposition to the re-election of the present distinguished Grand Master for Scotland. We trust that one "burning question" being happily disposed of, all the others may be as speedily and as sagaciously settled, so that the Grand Lodge of Scotland may at once take up, for calm and careful consideration, several questions of salutary internal reform, in order to promote its own efficiency, to increase its own activity, and to gratify its many friends. But, as we have ventured to point out all along, reform is one thing, revolution is another; carefully considered proposals of amendment are both reasonable and seasonable; angry agitation is alike unreasonable and unseasonable in the highest degree. In all agitations it is difficult to separate the honest reformer from the mere agitator, and, above all, to steer clear of that curse of Masonry, personal idiosyncrasies and private interests. All such proposals for alteration of the Constitutions should come "ab intra," not "ab extra," and we know enough of our Scottish brethren, though writing at a distance, to be well aware that there are amongst them many most able men and good Masons, who are quite competent to manage their own affairs, and quite willing to give a hearing to all sensible and well adjusted proposals for welcome changes and practical reforms.

THE QUEBEC QUESTION.

Our contemporary, the New York Dispatch, under the guidance of our esteemed confrere, the editor, has laid down as the law of all the American Grand Lodges, in respect of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, what we venture respectfully to demur to, as really laid down by any American Grand Lodge, absolutely and officially. We have read their proceedings, and we cannot call to mind any such "deliverance." Undoubtedly, as a fact, and we do not object to it as a fact, when a New State Grand Lodge has been formed in America, the previously chartered lodges, being the "constituted body," have taken out renewed charters from the new Grand Lodge. But we wonder that our able contemporary does not see that what he contends for proves our position, and that the force of his own logic squares exactly with our contention. We do not object to the fact, for the sake of "peace," "harmony," or "uniformity;" we approve of it, and have always said so. But that is not exactly the point in question. We contend that a Grand Lodge cannot take away Masonic life from a private lodge, which it did not even give, without the consent of that lodge. The American Grand Lodges, by the very resolution of the constituent lodges forming the Grand Lodge, admit the previous and legal life of such lodges, and not from their authority, but from that of another jurisdiction. That is a very easily understandable position. But what is going on at Quebec? It is here we think that our contemporary has missed his way, for he certainly does not realize, (we say it in all deference), the point we are contending for. When Canada set up its Grand Lodge, Lord Zetland in acknowledging it, stipulated for the existing life and rights of English Lodges. This was at once properly admitted by the Grand Lodge of Canada, and was, we believe, extended to Irish and Scottish Lodges. Most of the lodges in our opinion sensibly acknowledge the Grand Lodge of Canada, but one or two lodges, still kept up their allegiance to their old

Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge of Quebec is formed, a "swarm" from the Grand Lodge of Canada, and straightway proclaims a repudiation of the original "Concordat" as between the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Lodge of Canada, as well as with the Grand Lodge of Scotland. It is not pretended that the Grand Lodge of Scotland took any steps or intended to do so, until thus "challenged" by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, about whose actual legality, a good deal might be said, if it was worth while. It is quite clear that the Grand Lodge of Quebec had nothing to do with these lodges, and we doubt if any American Grand Lodge will assert, in express words, that where a lodge previously chartered declines to give up its original constituting Grand Lodge, it is to be compelled to do so, or be excommunicated for not doing so. There may be some "post hoc propter hoc" decision of some one American Grand Lodge on this delicate point, but we will not believe, till we see it in black and white, that all the American Grand Lodges hold the same views, or have propounded that to be law, which is against all known Masonic law, right, and precedent on the subject. We are quite clear that, as regards the English and Scottish, and, we believe, Irish Lodges, the Grand Lodge of Quebec is in the wrong. With respect to the Provincial Grand Mastership, &c., lately appointed by Scotland; in all probability the Grand Lodge of Scotland will not care to proceed with the matter. In our opinion it is really not worth while. If the Grand Lodge of Quebec will not be reasonable, either as regards the Grand Lodge of Scotland, or the Grand Lodge of England, the best way is to close all communication, as we venture to think that both the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland will survive vapid declamation, or "stumping" accusations. We are struck with the tone of some of the Quebec brethren, which is neither to our taste, nor very kindly, nor very Masonic, but then we are old fashioned Masons, with strong opinions, perhaps, on men and things. Our esteemed contemporary, the New York Dispatch, will be amused to find what a "Sermon" we have written on the "text" he so courteously and ably supplied.

THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' SCHOOLS VOTING PAPERS.

It is instructive and interesting in the highest degree to note how great is the importance of our two valuable Schools, for the various and contrasted classes of society which now eagerly avail themselves, year by year, of their great, nay their remarkable benefits. We have put together a sort of classification of such classes or divisions, though owing to the abstract difficulty of the classification itself, we are not quite prepared to say that our concrete statement is the most correct, or the best that could be made. It will give our readers, however, we think, an approximate idea of the facts of the case and the relevancy of our remarks. In the Girls' School voting paper, with its twenty-nine cases, two represent the professional element, a surgeon and an engineer; there are two officials, a Superintendent of the Board of Trade, and a government clerk. There are four merchants, (so-called), an iron merchant, a wool merchant, a plush merchant, and a wine merchant, while we have also a contractor, a warehouseman, a brewer, a newspaper proprietor, and an accountant. Of trades we have a jeweller, a bookseller, a chemist, a house decorator, and an auctioneer. We have also a sergeant in the Royal Artillery, a traveller, a nurseryman and farmer, a post-master, two clerks, a brewer's foreman, and a yeoman. Thus, if we divide this list into a broader classification of pure professional element and pure trade qualification, we find that the former is represented by seven, the latter by twenty-two cases. Such a fact speaks volumes for the middle-class importance and need of the school. In the boys' voting paper, of sixty-seven cases, (though one, if not two, are out), of professions we have thirteen, a dentist, two marine engineers, a teacher of music, a professor of music, two surgeons, an artist, three schoolmasters, an architect, a lecturer to a mechanics' institution. Of the official element, we find two superintendents of police, a railway superintendent, an inspector of dock police, and a clerk of the works, Royal Engineers, and a sergeant of artillery. Of trades we have, two maltsters, a draper, a stationer, a sailmaker, a brewer, two hotel keepers, two jewellers, two grocers, a hay and corn merchant, a chemist and druggist, a plumber, an ivory turner, a sailmaker and ship chandler, an oilman, a drysalter, a tall-ship chandler, a publisher, two builders, an ecclesiastical glazier, and a bill broker. We have also a contractor, a merchant, a planter, four commercial travellers, and one licensed victualler, a satisfactory reply to the childish allegations sometimes recklessly made, that the licensed victuallers profit more by our schools than any other class. In addition, in this list, we find also five clerks, a cashier, two farmers, and one farm steward; we have also a brass founder, a mercantile agent, a commission agent, a cashier, and overseer of a mill, a clerk and steward. Thus nineteen may be said to represent the professional and official elements, and forty-eight relate to the trading class. Such statistics demonstrate most convincingly the essential middle class character of our schools on the whole, though we have to deal with other classes, and often greatly contrasted as well.

CANVASSING FOR VOTES AT MASONIC ELECTIONS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I wish to call attention to a great nuisance and evil going on amongst us just now, I mean the begging and borrowing of votes by some worthy brethren who have cases which they seek to carry. I think that a very vicious system of individual I.O.U.'s. for votes is going on, which is productive of great jobbery, and may lead to great abuse.

I quite recognise the propriety of a Charity Committee of a province, or an association acting officially, openly, and above board, in legitimate interchange of votes, but my experience of this individual "touting" is certainly as bad as bad can be. Can nothing be done to check it? And is not the remedy to be found, for instance, in the London Masonic Charity Association?

Yours fraternally,

B. O. X.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I see that you have called attention to the withdrawal of Henry Newbould from the list of candidates. There is also another candidate ineligible for election, No. 43, Henry Webb, born 16th September, 1867, therefore, will be one month over the official age, 11, for election. This will reduce the number of candidates to sixty-five. I would take this opportunity that as the London Masonic Charity Association have taken up the cases of Ethel Stone and Emma Eliza Williams, of the Girls' School; and C. W. Green, T. C. Watkins, and A. C. Balcombe, in the first place; F. A. Gills, R. N. Nicholls, and C. F. Frost, in the second place, among the boys, it behoves the lodges and friends of the above cases to assist the Association with every vote they can individually get, and not slacken in their zealous efforts for the good work they have taken in hand. I would doubly impress this now, as the Association is very young, and, consequently, has not as many votes at its disposal as it eventually must have in the future. I have spoken to several brethren, who say that this charity movement is much wanted, but they are afraid it will not answer, or, they will wait and see how it answers before they will join. Why, sir, you might as well stand by and look on some unfortunate creature drowning, who, by a little trouble, you might have saved, and say, "Oh! poor fellow, I am afraid he will be drowned, but I will wait and see whether he can save himself," and you never put a finger out to save him.

Yours fraternally,

C. J. PERCEVAL.

WHO ARE CONSECRATING OFFICERS?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

This is a question often asked nowadays by inquisitive brethren. Will you kindly resolve our doubts and difficulties?

Yours fraternally,

NEOPHYTE.

[Strictly speaking, there is but one Consecrating Officer, the brother deputed by the G.M., or the G.M., or the Deputy G.M. in person. By courtesy and custom, however, the Chaplain and the two Wardens are considered Assistant Consecrating Officers.—Ed. F.M.]

ORIGINAL RESEARCH.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother.

In reply to your note enquiring when "Original Research" will be published, I beg to say that the time is very uncertain, and will greatly depend on the number of subscribers obtained to the prospectus in London and elsewhere. From the time of Bro. Melville's death, now about five years' ago, I have been, and am still, more or less, engaged analysing and reconstructing his work. My chief object in so doing is, to show that Divinitarianism is the true religious substitute for Catholicism—Romish and Anglican. The change is looming in the horizon, and come it will—inevitably.

In fact, so much of a Divinitarian am I, that I do not consider myself justified in participating in the ceremonies of sectarian churches or chapels, as such participation would be a practical denial of my astro-Masonic or Divinitarian faith. True toleration is a virtue, but there is a vital difference between toleration and participation. There should be no compromise.

I have just sent, at the request of an Edinburgh firm of booksellers, two or three extracts from "Original Research" for publication, to awaken the "gude folks" there to the truth.

As you may think this letter worth publishing I have headed it "Original Research."

Fraternally yours,

WM. N. CRAWFORD.

A LETTER OF INQUIRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can any American brother give us any information about a Bro. J. F. Harma, of Keystone Lodge, 285, New York? He claims to be a Royal Arch Mason, of seventeen years' standing, and to be in dire distress, and still a subscribing member of his lodge. English brethren are always glad to relieve genuine distress, but they also like to be certain that their relief is properly bestowed.

Yours fraternally,

AMICUS.

WAS THE LATE POPE A FREEMASON?

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your last week's issue you stated in an editorial note, to a correspondent, that the late Pope was not a Freemason, and that all the accounts contrary to that statement were apocryphal. The Rev. Dr. Benjamin Arton, the respected Chief Rabbi of the united congregations of Spanish and Portuguese Jews in the British Empire, was the W.M. of a lodge in Naples, and he related most succinctly to me, some time since, the fact of the late Pope having been a Mason, and the steps that were taken by all the Italian lodges when they were excommunicated by his authority. After reading your remarks upon this matter, I wrote to the Rev. Doctor, and beg herewith to hand you his reply received to-day.

He says, "I have no written records of what I related to you at Manchester; consequently, I cannot furnish you with the date you desire. I positively state, however, that when the late Pope, in 1863 or 1864, excommunicated Freemasonry, much indignation was felt by the Masons, especially at Naples, in consequence of the fact, that he had cursed an institution to which he had belonged, and to which he had promised fidelity."

This extract needs no comment on my part, and trusting you will insert this in your next,

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

H. DAVIS MARKS, J.W.

Israel, 1502.

[We repeat the statement again to-day distinctly. Pius the IX. was not a Freemason. All these statements have been examined over and over again, and they have been found to be utterly unreliable, as Bro. Findel says, in the Bauhütte, they are all "humbug." The late Pope was said to have been initiated at Naples, in Sicily, the United States, at Havannah, in South America, at Madrid, and in France, as a French cavalry officer, (which is the last place). As we have often said before, though probably enough, a Carbonari in his "hot youth," he was not a Freemason.—Ed. F.M.]

THE LOSS OF THE "PRINCESS ALICE."

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother.—

In reference to the letter of Bro. W. S. Daniel in your last impression of this date, I am instructed by the proprietor of the Surrey Masonic Hall to state that he will be happy to assist such brethren as may desire to augment the fund now being raised on behalf of the sufferers by the late disaster on the Thames, by placing at their disposal the use of the hall, gratuitously, for a concert, or other public entertainment, on the first evening for which engagement has not yet been made.

With the exception of an early date in October the hall is fully engaged up to the first week in November; but as there will certainly be a continued necessity for adding to the Mansion House Fund for many weeks to come, it may not then be too late for the contemplated purpose, and meanwhile such arrangements could be made, both in respect of obtaining talent and public support, as would secure a successful result.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES STEVENS, Manager.

RELIEF AND CHARITY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Allow me to say a few words, in answer to your article of the 31st of August, with regard to that of our greatest principles, relief, and charity. Relief is the text of our profession, to relieve the distressed is a duty incumbent on all men, but more particularly among Masons, who are linked together in one indissoluble chain of sincere affection, to soothe the unhappy, to sympathise with the misfortunes, and to compassionate with the miseries, and at the same time to restore peace to the troubled minds of our brethren, that is the grand aim we have in view, and on this basis we establish our friendship. We are well aware that charity is the brightest and greatest ornament of the Masonic profession. Benevolence rendered by Heaven-born charity is an honour to the nation from whence it springs, is nourished and cherished. Happy is the man who has sown in his breast the seeds of benevolence, the produce of which is love and charity.

He believeth not a tale when reported by a slanderer, he forgiveth the injuries of men, and blotteth them out from his recollection. Then let us ever remember we are Masons, and men, and ever be ready to give to the needy, and in the most pressing time of necessity, let us not withhold a liberal hand; so then shall the heart-felt pleasure reward our labours, and the produce of love and charity will most assuredly follow, except in such cases as the one of which I will give you an illustration.

In December, 1874, I was initiated as a Mason, in the lodge of St. Stephens, No. 145, Princess-street, Edinburgh. Shortly after becoming a member, I became a resident in America. On my return I addressed a letter to the W.M. of the lodge, requesting an account of my lodge dues. Failing to receive an answer, I addressed a letter to the Secretary with the same result. Since that I have forwarded two more, requesting information. Up to the present time he has not had the courtesy, let alone the brotherly feeling, to condescend to answer my letter! He must be aware that we, as Masons, are one family—the high, the low, the rich, and the poor, created by one Almighty Being, and sent into the world for the support and protection of each other.

On this principle Masonry should unite men of every country, sect, and opinion, and it should constitute true friendship and courtesy between those who rank underneath its banner.

If there was no regular subscription connected with St. Stephens they might have replied to my several letters, instead of treating them with contempt. I cannot forget the words (and the able manner in which he expressed them) that were made use of by the W.M., at my initiation but am sorry to say that they have not been executed by the office bearers of St. Stephens.

Trusting that this may draw their attention, believe me to remain yours ever fraternally,

WILLIAM E. HASELL.

[We agree with our correspondent. The explanation probably is that there are no lodge subscription or fees other than those he has already paid. The Scotch system in that respect is very vicious.—Ed. F.M.]

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE IN NEW ZEALAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

On the 23d. April last, I addressed to you a letter, (which appeared in your issue of the 27th of that month) in refutation of several misstatements contained in a communication signed "a 33°," and published in your paper of the previous week, on the subject of an irregular body styling itself "The Supreme Council 33° of New Zealand," and in which I explained that the said body had been founded against all laws of Masonic jurisdiction by an unrecognized one in Egypt.

I now beg to hand you a translation of a Circular "Decree" just received from the Egyptian body above referred to, and dated 7th inst., in which they acknowledge the "grave error" into which they had fallen, and revoke and annul the warrant they had irregularly issued to certain brethren in New Zealand, constituting them a Supreme Council 33°, and likewise cancel the diplomas of that degree which they had granted "in absentia" to the said brethren, as well as to others in Scotland.

Further comment appears unnecessary. Requesting that you will kindly published this "decree" in your next issue for the information of "A 33°" and others,

I am, dear sir and brother, yours fraternally,
SHADWELL H. CLERKE 33°, Grand Sec. Gen.
Supreme Council 33° for England, Wales, and the Dependencies of the British Crown.

GRAND ORIENT OF EGYPT.

Supreme Council 33rd and last degree of Ancient and Accepted Rite, Valley of the Nile, Orient of Alexandria.
7th September, 1878.

No. 152.

DECREE.

We, S. A. Zola, Sovereign Grand Commander, and Grand Master of the Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree, and last Degree of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, for Egypt and its Dependency, the Valley of the Nile.

Whereas, the Supreme Council of Egypt, ever anxious to propagate the high principles of the Rite, did, by our Decree, No. 45, of the 16th October, 1875, and a following one, No. 69, of the 20th March, 1876, advance to the Thirty-third Degree several distinguished Freemasons residing in New Zealand, and did furnish to them patents by which they constituted themselves in that Valley into a Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree, and that because we considered that territory to be free and not belonging to any regular Supreme Council.

And, whereas, the Supreme Council of Egypt, induced by the same principle, did, by means of our several decrees, advance to the Thirty-third Degree several Masons dwelling in Scotland, because the Supreme Council of Scotland was represented to us as an irregular and an illegitimate body.

Now, we having been persuaded and convinced of the legal and legitimate existence of the Supreme Councils of England, Ireland and Scotland, and of the right of the first, or of all three, over New Zealand, as a dependency of the British Crown, and have consequently become aware of the grave error into which we have fallen.

Having consulted the Grand Constitutions of 1786, we desire, as far as lies in our power, that the most perfect harmony should reign over all the Supreme Councils of the two Hemispheres.

We require for ourselves, and all the Masonic powers, the most scrupulous reciprocity in the question relative to territorial jurisdiction. We desire, above all, that every, and even the smallest pretext of schism and division should yield to the universal Masonic alliance.

The entire members of the Supreme Council having well considered the subject, we, in our own name, have decided and hereby decree,

Art. 1. Our decrees, No. 45, of the 16th October, 1875, and No. 69, of 20th March, 1876, by which we admitted to the Thirty-third Degree several Masons residing in New Zealand, and gave them powers to constitute themselves a Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree, is definitely annulled.

Art. II. All our decrees by which we have admitted, (in absentia), certain Masons residing in Scotland are annulled.

Art. III. All patents, diplomas and certificates, whether issued to New Zealand or to Scotland, (in absentia), and appertaining to the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, are cancelled from the roll of the Supreme Council and declared null.

Art. IV. These presents will be communicated to the interested parties, and to all the Supreme Grand Councils of the two hemispheres, and will be published in our Official bulletin.

S. A. ZOLA, 33°,

Sovereign Grand Commander and Grand Master.

F. F. ODDY, 33°

Grand Chancellor.

AN ERROR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The words "one-twelfth," at the end of the leader on the "List of Candidates for the Boys' School," is an obvious misprint, for "one-half."

It is still true of printers, as of mortals that "nemo mortalium omnibus horis sapit." And that printers will make mistakes, and often very provoking ones, like other men.

No doubt some blame attaches to the "chapel," but some may also fairly be ascribed to the copy.

Yours fraternally,

THE WRITER OF THE LEADER.

CONSECRATION OF THE ELEANOR CROSS LODGE, No. 1764.

A second lodge was consecrated on Tuesday week, at the Masonic Hall, Northampton. No similar event has taken place in the province of Norths and Hunts for the last nineteen years, although Masonry has made rapid progress in the adjoining counties.

We are glad to be able to say that in this instance the new lodge does not emanate from any spirit of jealousy, but that a number of the members of the mother lodge, the Pomfret (360), felt that as the town was rapidly extending, and there was a hall which might well be used by two lodges, the time had come for taking a step in that direction.

The proposition was accordingly made, and was entertained in the most kindly spirit.

Bro. M. A. Boémé, P.M. 360, consented to be the W.M. Designate, while the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Butler Wilkins, rendered invaluable services to the petitioners, who eventually received a warrant from the Grand Lodge, dated May 29th.

Preparations were accordingly made for the consecration ceremony, and there was a large gathering of the Craft from the province, and we may add, the neighbouring provinces, the following being amongst those who signed at the opening of the lodge:—R. P. Bent, 10 and 446, P.G.C.; Butler Wilkins, P.M. 360, P.Z., D.P.G.W. Norths and Hunts; J. Terry, P.M. 228, P.G.J.W. Herts; Wm. Simmonds, 445, P.M., P.P.G.O.; J. Benthams, 466, P.P.G.P.; James C. Jones, 445, P.M., P.G.J.W.; John Reeve, 840, P.M., P.P.G.S.B. F. G. Buckle, 442, P.M., P.S., P.G.S.; W. Warnett, 840, W.M., P.P.G. Chaplain; R. King, 840, P.M., P.Z., P.P.G.S.B., Bucks and Berks; Thos. Miller, 445, P.M. 737 P.P.G.J.D.; Henry Norton, 466, W.M., P.P.G.S.B.; L. G. W. Sanders, 360, A.P.G.C.; W. H. Smith, 373, P.M., P.P.G.R.; G. Hanley, 373, P.M., P.P.G.R.; John Rogers, P.M. 607, P.P.G.J.W.; Geo. Osborn, 448, P.P.S.G.W. and others.

The lodge was opened in due form, Bro. Buckle reading the petition and warrant. An eloquent oration was delivered by Bro. the Rev. S. W. Wigg, Chaplain elect. Bro. J. Terry was the Consecrating Officer; Bro. Wilkins installing the W.M. of the new lodge, who invested the officers, including Bro. the Rev. S. J. W. Sanders, M.A., LL.B., S.W.; and Bro. H. J. Atkins, J.W. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Bro. Rev. R. P. Bent, P.G. Chaplain. The brethren then adjourned to attend divine service at All Saints, the principal parish church, and the spectacle of so large a number of the fraternity not having been in the town for many years past, there was a large number of spectators. A very efficient D.C. was found in a young member of the new lodge, Bro. Ellard, and the proceedings out of doors were consequently conducted with the strictest decorum. The service at the church was choral, and a brother in the choir, H. Brown, Secretary of the new lodge, having obtained the assistance of choristers from Peterboro' Cathedral and the round church of St. Sepulchre's, the music was admirable. The vicar entered, and the lessons were read by Bro. Rev. R. H. Cox and Bro. Rev. L. J. W. Sanders, Grand Chaplain and Assist. Grand Chaplain of the province respectively, while the sermon was preached by Bro. Rev. R. P. Bent, P.G.C.

A collection, amounting to £25, was made, which will be divided equally between the Masonic Charities and the infirmity of the town.

After the service the brethren returned to the lodge-room, when votes of thanks were accorded to those who had taken a prominent part in the proceedings, while jewels, commemorative of the event, were voted to the W.M. and Secretary; and Bros. Bent, Terry, and Wilkins, were made honorary members of the Eleanor Cross Lodge.

A list of a dozen or more candidates for initiation was submitted, and the lodge was closed, the brethren repairing after their labours to the Town Hall, where a banquet had been prepared.

The W.M. of the Eleanor Cross Lodge presided, supported by the Provincial Officers, and about a hundred other brethren sat down.

The usual Masonic toasts were given after the repast, and a most pleasant evening was spent, all uniting in the opinion that a grand success had been achieved.

CONSECRATION OF THE KENSINGTON LODGE, No. 1767.

This new lodge was consecrated on Friday week, at the Courtfield Hotel, Earl's Court, Kensington, and a more convenient or agreeable hotel no lodge ever settled in. It is situated opposite the Earl's Court Station of the Metropolitan District Railway, and has a great number of large, lofty, well ventilated rooms. There is, however, one disadvantage, which it is to be hoped will soon be remedied. The house has at present no wine and spirit licence, and the lodge therefore has to supply its own wine for the banquet. But for general comfort the hotel is unsurpassed, and the brethren on the day the lodge was consecrated repeatedly expressed their pleasure with the quarters which it had chosen. About sixty brethren attended the ceremony, which was performed by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, as Consecrating Master, assisted by Bro. Thomas Fenn, Past Grand Dragon, as S.W.; Bro. Bryett, Prov. G. Superintendent of Works, Berks and Bucks; as J.W.; Bro. the Rev. Ambrose William Hall, M.A., Chaplain of the Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 259, P.M., Prov. G. Chaplain, and past Provincial Senior Grand Warden of Surrey, as Chaplain; Bro. H. Cooper, P.M. 228, 276, 511, 858 and 1694, as D.C.; Bro. C. J. Foakes, P.M. No. 511, as Secretary; and Bro. Barfield, P.M. and Treasurer, No. 511, as Secretary; and Bro. Barfield, P.M. and Treasurer, as I.G. The musical brethren, who assisted with some excellent music, were Bros. T. Baxter, J. Stedman, Charles Beckett, and Theodore Distin. The music was under the direction of Bro. Stedman, and Bro. F. J. Oliver was organist. The complete list of the brethren as appeared on the signature book, was as follows:—

The members of the new lodge present were Bros. Geo. Read, P.M. 511, C. E. Williams, Thomas Hancock, A. Barfield, C. J. Foakes, P.M. 40, James W. Barker, J. H. Taylor, J. G. Swanson, F. J. Oliver, G. Bidgood, E. R. Baugh, J. Metcalf, J. Clavey, R. H. Williams, H. A. Robinson, W. Burgess, Frederick R. Hayes, Wm. G. Silcock.

The following brethren were present as visitors:—John Hervey, Grand Sec.; Thomas Fenn, P.G.D.; Lewis Bryett, P.P.G.S.W. Berks and Bucks; H. S. Cooper; W. Bray; H. Stiles, S.D. 1732; J. Thompson, P.M. 834; C. Cordingley, S.D. 45; Alfred C. Alais, P.M. 834; W. H. Weaver, P.M. 858; W. Cunningham Glen, P.G.S.; Theodore Distin, W.M. 173; Richard Jasey, 834; H. Blunden, 865; C. Holland, 1681; F. T. Barrow, 511; W. T. Worthington, P.M. 834; C. A. Walter, S.D. 865; C. B. Corston, J.D. 865; S. Elborn, W.M. 511; A. Runacres, S.W. 1558; H. Turner, 511; W. Craig, S.D. 1425; W. Game, P.M. 511; R. T. Gaubert, S.W. 172; John Stedman, J.D. 172; W. Fisher, P.M. 834; W. Watson, S.W. 834; Chas. Beckett, 1319; J. Avery, S.D. 511; W. Honeyball, I.G. 1681; J. H. Webb, 834; Robert Burleton, 860; W. M. Styles, Sec. 1507; Thos. Baxter, 145; Peter Burton, 834; H. Massey, (Freemason) P.M. 619.

After the lodge had been opened. Bro. Hervey in addressing the brethren said, they had now travelled west for the erection of a new lodge, the establishment of which he hoped was on such a basis as to ensure its remaining in that locality. By this he meant that it would be composed of Kensington men, and be in reality a Kensington lodge. The last Kensington Lodge took its name from the locality in which it was situated, and there were a great many reasons why these extra metropolitan lodges should be established. Owing to the great growth of the metropolis, these lodges could hardly be termed outside lodges, because London was extending into the country and ramifying in the surrounding neighbourhood to such an extent that one hardly knew where London began or where it ended. From what he saw around him, however, he thought this lodge had begun with a good home, and that there was a sufficient number of local men to support it to constitute it as essentially a local Kensington Lodge. Passing to another subject, he was sorry to say, that during the summer vacation Masons had experienced some great and serious losses by death, several of the Grand Officers had been called to their account during the year, and some had passed away within the last few months. They had to deplore the loss of one who was universally respected, although at the close of his career he had misfortunes. Such misfortunes, however, did not diminish the respect in which he was held by the brethren, for during the five and twenty years that he was Grand Treasurer, Bro. Samuel Tomkins on every occasion supported the dignity of the Craft and influenced for good its proceedings. If by his failure he had done any little damage to the Craft, which he (Bro. Hervey) doubted, the brethren had long condoned the misfortune, and they would cherish the memory of a man who, through a long life, had been a brother of commercial and Masonic honour, and of unblemished integrity. He died very suddenly, and it was to be feared that his recent troubles contributed very much to the melancholy event. Another distinguished brother had also departed, a brother not known perhaps to the younger members of the Craft, Bro. Wm. Foster White, the Treasurer of Christ's and Bartholomew's Hospitals. That brother had not taken an active part in Masonry for some years, and was only known to the older Masons. Since these two brethren died, another gap had been made by the death of Bro. Bagnshaw, Provincial Grand Master for Essex, an old and experienced Mason, with whom he (Bro. Hervey,) had been on intimate terms, not only in Masonry, but in private life, for thirty years. He was a man of unblemished character and unbounded benevolence. To add to the list, only a fortnight ago Sir F. M. Williams, having invited a large party to meet him at his country seat, was suddenly seized with an attack of illness; he laid down on a sofa, and when he was called to dinner, it was found he was dead. All these brethren contributed largely to the Masonic Charities, and to the well-being of Masonry, by the manner in which they had passed through life, and he trusted they had now met with their reward. To leave this subject and refer to Masonry, it could not be denied that the Order was advancing. Still there must be drawbacks, and it must be expected that those who had toiled for many years in a Masonic career would be called away at last, and leave the Society which they had loved so well and the respectability of which they had striven so much to maintain. In England the Craft was progressing speedily, and he hoped, surely. Certainly during the last ten, fifteen, or twenty years, it had extended very much, not only numerically, but he trusted also in respectability, and in that charity which ought to be the great aim and object of all Freemasons. There was only one unfortunate spot looming in the distance, the way in which our brethren across the channel were conducting their proceedings. They had just had their annual meeting, and they had decided, by a large majority, to alter the ritual, so as to eliminate from it all connection between Masonry and the name of and belief in the Deity. They had directed their Grand Master and some of their acting Committee to reform the whole ritual, so as to be consonant with the changes they had made in their constitutions. He understood that, on the first blush, the French Grand Master took off his clothing, laid it on the pedestal, and left the room, declining to be a party to any such change. However, they formed a committee to wait upon him, and he was persuaded to resume his place. As reported, he had the weakness to do so, and consented to do what the Grand Lodge wished, thereby falsifying those undertakings which he entered into when he first became Grand Master. The English brethren would deeply deplore the course which the French brethren had taken. He feared that the manner in which they acted was as almost to justify the objection which Foreign Sovereigns made to the Order; that the members having ceased to acknowledge the name of the G.A.O.T.U. in their rituals, their meetings were changed from the original plan of Freemasonry, and that they mixed themselves up with politics, and were becoming more of a political than a Masonic Society. French Masonry of course now defined that they were giving up all connection between religion and Masonry because the name of the Great Architect of the Universe could not be dissevered from religion. In every case where His name was invoked some belief or other must be entertained in a Supreme Being. If that be given up the future of Freemasonry looked very dark, and he hoped that as long as Masonry was carried out in England we should see the old system continued in which it had worked and flourished so long. When that was abolished, the sooner the axe was put to the root of the Order the better. He hoped that the Kensington Lodge would be a bright star in the western side of the metropolis, and occupy a prominent position among the lodges of the Order.

Bro. the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, in delivering the oration, said: Brethren, it has been usual from time immemorial for mankind to join themselves in what Masonically we call "a column of defence and support," or to establish societies or brotherhoods, and of this you have a clear instance in the various societies and lodges in this and other countries. And after a lodge is brought into existence, and the precepts of Freemasonry are more particularly to be poured out, when societies like this of to-day are dedicated to T.G.A.O.F.U., it is usual for the consecrating Chaplain to give what is called an oration, or, to speak more properly, to make a few remarks on the nature and principles of our Order. It was only yesterday that I became aware of the privilege I had of attending here to day. I accepted the invitation with pleasure, hoping and trusting that you, my brethren, would make every allowance for any shortcomings on my part, on account of the shortness of the notice, and likewise would listen to the brief words I have to say, as words coming sincerely from one who greets well yourselves and your new undertaking. I would first then remind you of the importance of the responsibilities that are about to devolve upon you. You are, so to speak, about to become a beacon light to shine on all, both far and near, those great truths of our Order, brotherly love, relief, and truth. And if you do this well, the lustre of your lodge will be increased. If you do it ill, the harmony of the brethren will be marred. Therefore, in all your dealings, be just, and upright, and true. In all your transactions with the brethren be considerate and kind; and in the hour of difference, should dissensions at any time unfortunately arise, think of the compasses, which symbolise the keeping down all angry feelings, and take the pacific teaching of our Order to show you what a Mason ought to do. Since those old days when the good King Solomon built the Temple to the Lord on Mount Moriah, Masonry has gone through different phases of difficulty and danger; but it has passed through them all, and like the fabled Phoenix of old has come unscathed out of the fire of persecution, only to shine with a brighter lustre, and to carry its principles to every time and among all the people of the world. And why?

Because she bears about her a banner, a glorious banner; and on it are inscribed those mystic words, Wisdom, Strength, Beauty—wisdom to comprehend all mysteries; strength to carry out all her teachings; and beauty in all those rites and ceremonies which symbolise the principles of our Order. And on you, brethren, it will now depend to carry out those principles, to cherish them yourselves, and likewise to inculcate them among the brotherhood. Depend upon it, it is only by doing so that your lodge will take that stand which it ought to take in the Masonic world. May your W.M. open his lodge at sunrise with diligence and punctuality; may your J.W.'s call be heard with profit and with pleasure; and may your S.W., when the sun sets in the west, close his lodge at the command of the W.M., after seeing that no brother leaves it unimproved in virtue and in science. Such, my brethren, are some of the principles which it has been my office to bring before you to-day. They are high and holy principles, and I trust will be long remembered by you, and that you will inculcate them upon your brethren by precept as well as by example, and that you will guard the mystic treasures that are to be committed to you against all cowans and all intruders that would invade the repository of your secrets, with Fidelity, Fidelity, Fidelity. Now, brethren, let me thank you for the attention you appear to have paid to the few words that I have been permitted to address you. Had time been allowed I could have given them more in detail, but as it is they speak a language dear to every Mason's heart, and should lead us all to cherish and to love the Craft the more. What I have said, I trust, will lead you in all danger and difficulties, and guide the Craft which you are now about to launch safely over the ocean of the Masonic world, until by the help of the Great Architect of the Universe it is brought safely into the haven where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. And now, brethren, receive my heartiest good wishes for the success of the Kensington Lodge. I feel, from the gratification of those who are to preside over it, that it will in due time take its stand in the annals of Masonry. May the Everlasting, the Most High, of His mercy, guide you by the principles and teachings of our noble Order safely through your walk in life, and lead you with all fortitude over the dark valley of the shadow of death, until He lands your enfranchised spirit in the peaceful abode of the blessed.

The ceremony of consecration was then performed, and the petitioning brethren were constituted into a regular lodge.

At the request of Bro. Hervey, Bro. Thomas Fenn installed Bro. George Read, W.M. 511, as first Worshipful Master of the lodge, and the following brethren were invested as officers: Bros. Charles Edward Williams, J.D. 511, S.W.; Thomas Hancock, 511, J.W.; Barfield, P.M. 511, Treas.; C. J. Foakes, P.M., Sec.; James William Barker, S.D.; Joseph H. Taylor, J.D.; Charles G. Gumpel, I.G.; Swanson, D.C.; Oliver, Organist; Baugh and Metcalf, Stewards; and Thomas Schofield, Tyler.

A vote of thanks was afterwards passed to Bros. Hervey, Fenn, Hall, and Buggett, for their services, and they were elected honorary members of the lodge.

Propositions for joining and initiation were given in, and the lodge was then closed.

An elegant banquet followed the consecration of the lodge, after which the usual toasts were proposed.

Bro. Hervey, after acknowledging the toast of the "Grand Officers," proposed "Success to the Kensington Lodge and the Health of the W.M." There could be no doubt, he said, that where a lodge was well conducted it tended to the well-being of society and the comfort of the locality in which it was situated. It also conduced to the great benefit of the members who were enrolled under its banners. He trusted, as he had said in the lodge, that the Kensington Lodge would be so conducted as to reflect honour on itself and credit on the Craft. Under the auspices with which it was started he thought there was no question that it would do so. It had emanated from an overflow of brethren of another lodge, which, though originally constituted in that neighbourhood, migrated to Fleet-street, where it had so prospered that it had become like a swarm of bees. Many of those brethren lived in Kensington, and from the number he saw round the table he thought the Kensington Lodge bade fair to rival in number the mother lodge. For the sake of those who had launched the vessel on the waters that day he hoped the Kensington Lodge would flourish, and that under the auspices of the W.M. during the current year it would show that it had not been established in vain, but that it might add good members and true to the Craft. He did not recommend that the brethren should endeavour to make their lodge great in numbers; that, he thought, was a mistake; but let the members of the lodge be respectable, and worthy of being members of the Craft; then they would be doing good service to the Order and to the lodge. But if they introduced men to the Craft whom they would be sorry to see at their own table, whom they would not receive in private, they had no right to do so, and would not be doing the duty to Freemasonry which it expected at their hands. He was sure that under Bro. Read's rule and management such a state of things would not arise, and he trusted that the Wardens who would succeed Bro. Read would exercise the same foresight of the affairs of the lodge, and not look for number but for quality. Masonry did not want those who would not be an ornament to it, and he for one would be heartily glad if a great many now in the Craft were not members of it, and if it would purify itself of some to whom they were at present allied, and with whom they were compelled now to associate.

The W.M. in reply said: It was now some twelve years since he was initiated in Masonry in the Royal Parish of Kensington, but he had no expectation that he should be able to occupy the first chair in a lodge in the parish. They had felt their old lodge was too great, and they migrated to the great city; but after a while the time seemed to have arrived when they should establish a new lodge in Kensington, as very admirable quarters were to be found there. He had approved of those quarters for the new lodge, and he hoped it would long remain there. He had heard so many expressions of the brethren's esteem that he was at a loss to explain how much he thanked them, but he thanked them very much. They had placed him now in a very responsible position, because the Master of a new lodge held a more responsible position than the ordinary Master of a lodge. He did not take the office with any fear or trembling; he had great confidence in the brethren who nominated him as the First Master, and also in the first Officers. There was a portion of the more advanced ritual to the effect that to reign sovereign in the hearts and affections of men was far more preferable than to rule over their lives and fortunes. He did not know whether it was presumptuous for him to apply that to himself; but if the esteem in which he was held by the brethren of the Ranelagh and Zetland Lodges was to be measured by the number of those brethren who were present that evening, he felt that they had conferred a very great honour upon him. He had been associated with them in Masonry for many years, and he had always received from them great kindness and respect. He took it as a further mark of their esteem attending at the consecration of this new lodge, and seeing him installed as the first W.M. Bro. Hervey had expressed the hope that the lodge would succeed, and be an ornament to the Craft. He reiterated the wish, and with the assistance of The Great Architect of the Universe he would endeavour to make it so.

The W.M. next proposed "The Health of the Consecrating Officers," and was delighted to see present the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall. Many brethren were now out of town, and Bro. Hall had kindly undertaken the office of Chaplain. He was a neighbour in the parish, and the brethren were all delighted to have such a neighbour as Bro. Hall. The Consecrating Officers had all performed their duties admirably that evening, and the brethren were very much pleased with what they had witnessed.

Bro. Thomas Fenn, P.G.D., who replied, said he was very much flattered by the remarks that had been made with regard to the Consecrating Officers. If it had not been that they should not work a willing horse too much, Bro. Hervey was the proper officer to reply to this toast, as he had done so much more of the ceremony than he (Bro. Fenn). However, it is not the first time they had appeared together at an interesting ceremony like that. Bro. Hervey's kind and courteous way of going through the work like a good master marked him as a good man, and therefore those who were associated with him had to do their best to do their work as well as he. The notice he had had was very short, but still his attendance had not been given with less pleasure. They would allow for many shortcomings, but, notwithstanding those shortcomings, he had a great interest in a lodge which was formed in his immediate neighbourhood. He lived but five minutes walk from the lodge, and he took sufficient interest in the neighbourhood to hope that such a lodge as this would be established so near to him. He begged the brethren to receive his thanks for the compliment they had paid him by electing him an honorary member of the lodge. Whenever the brethren would like to see him among them, he should be glad to come and see the progress which he hoped they would have. He must now congratulate the lodge on coming to the Courtfield Hotel. Their lines had certainly fallen in pleasant places. In the course of his Masonic visits he had seldom seen such good accommodation as the brethren had at this hotel, and he understood that above the rooms in which they were now sitting there was one that would be used for the working of the lodge, so that they would not be detained between the times of labour and refreshment. Some time ago a circular was brought down to him to sign a petition against a licence being granted for this house. He went to see the house, and saw it was a nice house, and he said to the gentlemen who brought him the petition that the house would not hurt him, whatever it was; and it seemed a nice house; and that in the first place he did not wish to prevent an honest man who tried to cater for the public from keeping a good house and getting a living. He did not sign the petition. When he looked at the house he looked at it with rather a Masonic eye, and found it well suited for Masonic purposes. It was strange under such circumstances he should have been asked to assist at the consecration of a lodge at that house. He bailed the advent of a lodge there as a success to the house, and he thought the brethren had done a good thing not only for the house but for the neighbourhood and for Masonry in the neighbourhood. He again thanked the brethren for toasting him the amongst Consecrating Officers, and could assure them that what he had done had been simply a labour of love, and from a desire and wish he had always had to promote in every way the interest of Masonry. It was forty-four years since he was first made a Master Mason, and although for thirty years, on account of professional duties, he was unable to attend to the working, as soon as he became free from professional duties he returned to his first love, and had been intimately acquainted with Masonry since. By the blessing of the Great Architect he would endeavour to continue to do so, and he should feel the greatest pleasure as an honorary member of this lodge at all times not only to hear of the excellence of its working but to see it prosper in the way he prognosticated in his address in lodge. He thought it would.

Bro. Worthington, P.M. 834, responded to the toast of "The Visitors." He said he did so with pleasure, for two or three reasons; first, because he believed, if not the oldest, he was the next oldest in the room as a Kensingtonian; and secondly, because he and his late father were two of the oldest friends of the W.M. as Masons. He had known Bro. George Read for many years, and his tongue never tired when it spoke of his qualities, because his private life endorsed what they knew of him in public. It fell to them to propose the health of gentlemen at the head of Masonry or other bodies; but when they knew that the gentleman whose health they proposed fully merited in his private capacity what they said of him in public, it must afford them great pleasure to propose his health, or to return thanks for any health he might think fit or proper to propose. He rejoiced to see Bro. George Read at the head of this new lodge; he was certainly carrying out the motto of his (Bro. Worthington's) mother lodge, "Nulli Secundus." In their suburban lodges they believed him to be second to none. As a Mason they knew his working; he was painstaking in it, and he was ready to impart the knowledge he possessed to other Masons. Although it was his (Bro. Worthington's) pleasure to teach Bro. Read his first lesson, he only wished he knew half what Bro. Read knew now. He had far outshone him (Bro. Worthington) and others. When Bro. Bryett was taken from them, and Bro. Andrew died, they asked "On whom shall the mantle of Elijah fall?" they all said "Upon Bro. George Read." He had proved himself a thorough good Mason, ever ready to impart knowledge. The brethren therefore were glad to see him in the post he now occupied, and they wished him and the lodge every success. He hoped Bro. Read's year would be a prosperous one. He was glad to hear Bro. Hervey advise them not to go in for numbers, but for good men. When he (Bro. Worthington) proposed a man, he said to himself "Is that a man who is worthy to be proposed as a Mason?" He therefore was of Bro. Hervey's opinion that they should not go in for quantity but for quality. If they did that they were sure to succeed; and if other lodges did the same, the aim of Masonry would be accomplished, and they would produce a body of men the most upright and honourable a land could desire.—Bros. Barfield and Foakes replied to the toast of the Treasurer and Secretary, and the other toasts having been proposed and replied to, the Tyler's toast brought the evening to a close. Some pleasant singing was given between the toasts by the professional brethren named in the introduction of this report.

Obituary.

BRO. GEORGE RAW.

Bro. George Raw, an old member of the Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 102, departed this life on Thursday, the 19th inst., after a lingering and painful illness of months' duration, which he bore with great fortitude and resignation to the Divine will. He was initiated into Freemasonry in the lodge Sem per Fidelis, No. 529, Worcester, above thirty years ago.

In London he joined the Stability Lodge of Instruction, then meeting at the George and Vulture, Cornhill, on the 24th September, 1847, then under the direction of the late Bro. Peter Thompson, P.G.D., and became intimately acquainted with Bro. Henry Muggeridge, who introduced him as a joining member to the Lion and Lamb Lodge, and afterwards to the Jerusalem Chapter, No. 185, where he was exalted to the degree of Holy Royal Arch Masonry. Bro. Raw made some progress in Masonry, and on one occasion delivered a very interesting address at the Stability Lodge of Instruction, in the First Degree.

Bro. George Raw was born in the early part of 1814, and a more kind, upright, and straightforward, honest man never existed. His mortal remains were interred at Abney Park Cemetery, on Saturday, the 21st inst., under the direction of Bro. Stephen Hayworth, of High-street, Kingsland, P.M. of the Kent Lodge, No. 15, and the Temple Lodge, No. 101, who was an intimate friend of the deceased.

The funeral cortege consisted of a hearse, three mourning, and three private carriages. The proceedings were carried out in an admirable manner, and must have given satisfaction to his numerous friends. Bro. Muggeridge attended to see the body of his old and esteemed friend consigned to the cold, but hospitable, bosom of mother earth.

DEATH OF LADY EGERTON, OF TATTON.

Deep regret will be felt at the announcement of the death of Lady Egerton of Tatton, which took place in Germany early on Wednesday morning, the 11th inst. Her Ladyship had been unwell for some time past, and had gone abroad after the London season to recruit her health. The news was unexpected both at Tatton and Rostherne Manor, and Bro. the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., R.W.D.G.M., Cheshire, left at once for Germany, accompanied by his brother, the Hon. Alan Egerton. The Hon. Miss Egerton had left Tatton on the Monday previous, on a visit to her mother. Lady Charlotte Elizabeth Egerton was the eldest daughter of the second Marquess of Ely. She was married to Lord Egerton in 1830, and leaves issue the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P. for Mid-Cheshire, and three daughters. Lord Egerton received his title of Baron Egerton of Tatton in 1859.

We are requested to announce that the Stability Lodge of Instruction meets at the Guildhall Tavern, No. 33, Gresham Street, E.C., every Friday evening, from six to eight o'clock.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Autumn is proverbially the season when the blood requires purification, the digestion demands thorough and attentive regulation, and all the secretions call for correction. Holloway's remedies supply all these necessities for securing health; the one overcomes cutaneous diseases, sores, ulcerations, abscesses, and carbuncles, and all visible imperfections; the other acts most potently in cleansing the circulation, strengthening the stomach, governing the liver, regulating the bowels, and reducing the entire system to order. Thus these twin medicaments furnish the most efficient medicine chest available for family use. It is easier, through Holloway's discovery, to point out the remedy than to describe the disease—into the former no fallacy can intrude; into the latter prejudice may unwittingly creep.—[Advrt.]

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS
Craft Masonry.

LODGE OF FAITH (No. 141).—A meeting of this old lodge was held at Anderson's Hotel on the 24th ult., when there were present, Bro. E. Mallett, W.M.; C. Dairy, S.W.; Rumball, J.W.; Carter, P.M., Treasurer; W. Stuart, P.M., Secretary; Pevor, P.M., acting I.P.M.; Morris, J.D.; Walls, acting I.G. (Freemason), Clark, D.C.; and Past Masters Hopwood, P.P.G.S.B. of Middlesex; Taylor, Thomass, Kennett, and Cobham. The minutes of the previous regular and emergency meetings having been read and confirmed, the bye-laws were read and passed unanimously. The election of W.M. resulted in favour of Bro. C. Dairy, who made an able response to the W.M.'s address and congratulation. Bro. Carter was elected Treasurer, and Bro. Longstaffe re-appointed Tyler. The existing members of the Committees of the Benevolent Fund were re-appointed, and Bro. Clark added to their number. The members appointed on the Audit Committee were Bros. Travers, Goulden, Jordan, Abrahams, and Holmes. Upon the motion of Taylor, P.M., which was seconded by Pevor, P.M., and carried unanimously, a jewel was voted to the outgoing W.M., who briefly returned thanks. The names of three candidates for initiation at the next meeting were then handed in by the W.M. elect. There being no other business before the lodge, it was duly closed, and in consequence of the hotel undergoing great alterations, which, when completed, will render it Masonically and otherwise equal to any in the metropolis, the brethren had to adjourn to the Holborn Restaurant, where a very elegant banquet was served. Amongst the visitors we noticed Bros. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, &c.; Cook, J.W. 382; H. J. Lardner, S.D., Farringdon; Without; Butt, West Smithfield; Piller; Woolsey, and Hilditch. Upon the removal of the cloth, the ordinary Royal and Craft toasts were done full justice to. The health of "The W.M." was proposed by Bro. Stuart, P.M., who stated that as that was the last time, in all probability, that the W.M. would preside at their banquet table, it afforded him—Bro. Stuart—great pleasure in proposing his health. The hospitable and able way in which Bro. Mallett had presided over their conviviality would be long remembered by them all. His year of office in the lodge had not been an arduous one, in consequence of there being less initiations than usual, but what "work" had devolved upon their W.M. had been performed well. In conclusion, the speaker said, that from the moment of Bro. Mallett's advent to the present time his kindness had been proverbial, and that he had laboured hard to perform his various duties honestly and cheerfully. This toast having been received with excellent "fire," the W.M. made a modest reply, and immediately proposed "The Visitors." This compliment was acknowledged at length by Bro. F. Walters, and others. "The Health of the W.M. elect" was given by the W.M., in a few neat sentences. He said that all who had watched Bro. Dairy's career in the Lodge of Faith must have noticed the interest he had taken in it, and also the punctual and able manner in which he had discharged the duties of the various offices which he had from time to time held. In conclusion, he wished him a prosperous and happy year of office. Bro. Dairy, in reply, stated that in response to the kind manner in which his health had been proposed and drunk, he could only reiterate what he had said more fully in the lodge, that with the blessing of T.G.A.O.T.U. he hoped to carry out the duties of the high office which he had been called upon to fulfil to their entire satisfaction. This, however, could only be done by the united assistance of the Past Masters and the subordinate officers of the lodge, but he felt confident that that valuable aid would be cheerfully rendered by those brethren. In conclusion, he again heartily thanked the members for the honour they had done him, and he hoped that they would never have occasion to regret their confidence. The remaining toasts were "The Past Masters," "The Treasurer and Secretary," and "The Officers," which were duly acknowledged. The brethren separated shortly after the Tyler's toast. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the last Tuesday in the present month, when Bro. Dairy will be duly installed into the chair of K.S.

CITY OF WESTMINSTER LODGE (No. 1533).—The brethren of this lodge met on Thursday, the 26th ult., at the Regent Masonic Hall, Air-street, W. Present: Bros. E. White, W.M.; B. Phillips, S.W.; B. Turner, J.W.; J. E. Shand, S.D.; J. Hutchinson, J.D.; C. Waugh, I.G.; E. J. Scott, P.M., Sec.; Rev. P. M. Holden, I.P.M.; B. Swallow, P.M.; Woodward, Gardner, D.cker, Hancock, Ward, and others. The business commenced one initiation, one passing, five raisings, the election of W.M., Treasurer and Tyler. Bro. S. W. Phillips was unanimously elected W.M., and will be installed in November. Bros. Swallow, P.M., was elected Treasurer, and Potter Tyler. Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to dinner at Bro. Nicol's Café Royal. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were gone through, and a very pleasant evening enjoyed.

WEST SMITHFIELD LODGE (No. 1623).—The third installation meeting of this well established lodge was held at the New Market Hotel, King-street, West Smithfield, on Thursday, 19th ult. Punctually at four o'clock the W.M., Bro. T. W. Adams, opened the lodge. The minutes of the meeting held on July 18th were read, and unanimously confirmed. Bro. J. Smith, P.G.P., P.M., and Treas., by letter resigned his membership of the lodge. His resignation was accepted with very great and deep regret. Bro. F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Millx., P.M., and Sec., resigned the Secretaryship of the lodge. His resignation of that important office was accepted. On motion duly made, seconded, and unanimously resolved, "That a vote of thanks be given (the same to be drawn on vellum) to Bro. F. Walters for his services as Secretary to the lodge." The ballot for Treasurer was declared to be unanimous in favour of Bro. Frederick Walters. The ballots for initiates were declared to be unanimous in favour of their admission. Bro. F. Walters, P.M. 73, took the chair. He raised Bro. E. Bowley, passed Bro. P. Bowley, A. Allen, and J. S. Thomson, installed Bro. G. S. Elliott, S.W., as W.M., who appointed as his officers Bros. J. Howes, P.M., S.W.; J. Johnson, J.W.; F. Walters, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M., Treas.; E. Mallett, W.M. 141, Sec.; W. Pennfather, P.M., S.D.; W. Malt-house, J.D.; T. McCluer Butt, I.G.; Lardner, D.C.; Stephens, W.S.; W. Snow, C.S.; J. Gilbert, Tyler. The newly-installed W.M. proved his proficiency, and showed he was the right man in the right place, by the admirable and impressive manner in which he initiated Messrs. Roberts and Kinloch into Freemasonry. After an eloquent appeal from Bro. F. Walters, soliciting members to become Stewards to represent the Masonic Charities at the forthcoming festivals, three brethren offered, and were accepted, namely, Bro. J. Johnson, J.W., Benevolent; Bro. W. Malt-house, J.D., Girls; Bro. T. W. Adams, I.P.M., Boys. A cordial vote of thanks was given to Bro. F. Walters for his admirable rendering of the installation ceremony. Several gentlemen were proposed for initiation. The lodge was closed, and adjourned to meet on Thursday, November 21st., at 6.30 p.m. The usual superior banquet followed, served under the personal superintendence of Bros. T. Butt and his two sons. The long list of visitors included Bros. Rev. G. R. P. Colles, P.P.G.C. Oxon., Chap. 1275; Whitley, P.P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M. 946; C. Becks, P.G. Org. Middlesex, W.M. 1687, Org. 1326, &c.; White, P.M. 901; A. Treadwell, P.M. 177; W. T. Leaver, P.M. 1178; Jones, 205; Furlong, 1672; Thomas, Org. 1672; J. S. Sweasey, 1423; A. Allen, 1326; E. Bowley, 1326; P. Bowley, 1326; J. S. Thompson, 1326; J. Thompson, 1326, and others.

ROYAL SAVOY LODGE (No. 1744).—A meeting of this young lodge was held on Tuesday, Sept. 24th, at Ashley's Hotel, Covent Garden. There were present Bros. Willing, W.M.; Douglass, S.W.; Clemow, J.W.; Treadwell, P.M.; Stiles, Sec.; Jones, S.D.; Hyland, J.D.; Smith, I.G.; Sillis, Callaghan, Armstrong, Barham, Hammond, and others. Bros. A. D. Douglass, Philpot, Hixon, Nicol, and Dovey were solemnly raised to the Third Degree. Bro. James Smith was passed to the Second Degree, and Mr. J. H. Bennett was impressively initiated into ancient Freemasonry. This being an off night, only thirty of the brethren sat down to the banquet. A very enjoyable evening was spent. The visitors, among whom were Bros. Walter Joyce, Britton, and Smyth, expressed themselves very pleased, the former giving a splendid rendering of the "Balacava Charge." During the course of the evening the W.M. alluded to the new Masonic Charity Association for London, stating that many London votes were absolutely lost for London candidates through the brethren not knowing the merits of individual cases in their own neighbourhood, consequently giving them to persons who frequently solicited, "begged, borrowed, or exchanged," for provincial candidates. Bro. Treadwell, Treasurer, gave the history of a most deserving case of a widow, Mrs. Watkins, being left with nine young children. She tried to get one of the children into the Boys' School, but failed, and became ineligible on account of age. Now she applies for the second boy, who has twice failed, and if not elected this time also becomes ineligible. The London Masonic Charity Association having made full enquiry, have espoused the case, (with others), so there is a hope for his success. It was agreed among the brethren to send their votes when possible to the Association and to support it by their best ability. The meeting broke up at eleven.

BODMIN.—One and All Lodge (No. 330).—The meeting of the above lodge, held on the 16th September, was one of unusual importance, to the brethren. Notices were issued to the members by the W.M., Bro. Rowe, intimating that he had received a communication from the M.W. the Provincial Grand Master, the Earl of Mount Edgcombe, respecting the death of our well-beloved brother the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Sir Fredk. M. Williams, Bart., M.P., and requesting the brethren to appear in Masonic mourning on that and following occasions for three months. This notice was duly attended to, and an unusual number of the brethren attended to show by their presence and by ultimate resolutions their unfeigned regard for a brother whose fraternal kindness will be long remembered by the fatherless and the widow. But the chief feature of the meeting was one which had been looked forward to for some time past, namely a presentation to W. Bro. Captain Colvill, P.M., and P.P.S.G.W. of Cornwall on his leaving for London, for the great interest he had taken in Masonry for a considerable number of years, and for the zealous manner in which he had endeavoured to promote the welfare of the One and All Lodge. The presentation was made by W. Bro. Captain F. Hext, P.M., and P.P.G.S.W. of Cornwall; he being one of the oldest members of the lodge, and in doing so he said it gave him mingled feelings of pleasure and regret that such a duty should be entrusted to him, of pleasure inasmuch as Bro. Colvill, by leaving was about to do so for his welfare; of regret at losing so valuable a member, but he thanked the Almighty Architect of the Universe that Bro. Colvill would not be entirely lost to the lodge, as he had declared his intention to still remain a member. No lodge in the Province occupied a better position than the One and All, and this he attributed to the energetic exertions of Bro. Colvill, and as a slight token of regard the brethren had for a brother who had worked so assiduously in every good work, had much pleasure in handing Bro. Colvill a silver salver and a silver five o'clock tea service, the salver bearing a suitable inscription. W. Bro. Rich said that as the next oldest member of the lodge he felt it incumbent on him to say a few words on this occasion, if necessary he could give a more detailed account of the kind and energetic manner in which Bro. Colvill had always conducted Masonic business, but as time was short he would consent himself with endorsing all the eulogy bestowed by Bro. Hext. W. Bro. Colvill, in accepting the present said, he had received no intimation of what was about to take place, or he would have prepared himself for the occasion, but he felt sure that no words would be more acceptable than those of the heart. He came into the county 18 years ago, almost a stranger, he left it now almost a Cornishman. His connection with the lodge he looked upon as a bright spot in his life, whatever he had done since he had been in the town had always been done for the welfare of the place, and those who knew him as a Mason knew he spoke the truth. Bro. Adams, S.W., asked to be permitted, as an officer of the county, to congratulate Bro. Colvill on his promotion. He had been associated with Bro. Colvill for a number of years, and they had always been agreeable and pleasant, and whenever he required Masonic knowledge he had always referred to Bro. Colvill, and was always guided aright. He had hoped Bro. Colvill would have remained to see him pass the chair. W. Bro. Rowe, W.M. introduced opening and closing hymns for the first time, which gave every satisfaction to those present. Bro. Jacobs, the Organist, presided at the harmonium, and played the Dead March for our lamented Bro. Williams.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No. 540).—The first meeting of the Stuart Lodge took place on Wednesday, 25th Sept., held at the Swan Hotel, Dr. Rhys Williams, the W.M., was unavoidably absent through important business, the chair was taken by the I.P.M., Bro. Col. W. Stuart, and there were present Bros. Colburne, S.W.; Coombs, J.W.; Allan, S.D.; Bull, P.M. and Steward, acting J.D.; Bills on, P.M., acting I.G.; Prior, P.M., Sec.; J. Sergeant, P.M., Treas.; Rev. C. Metton, Chaplain; Reynolds, Tyler, and the following: Cuthbert, P.M.; Cookson, P.M.; E. Green, Faussett Ward, Verry, Stafford, Foster, Jarvis, H. Allen, R. Boughton Smith. The boys and girls schools were disposed of and business gone through. A gentleman formerly resident in Bedford was proposed for initiation. The lodge having been closed the brethren adjourned to refreshment and heard some remarks concerning the formerly done by Bro. Wicks, and which, by implication, were not quite complimentary to the present host.

SITTINGBOURNE.—St. Michael's Lodge (No. 1273).—The annual installation meeting of the above lodge was held at the St. Michael's Schoolroom on Thursday the 12th ult., when Bro. H. Luff, the S.W., was duly installed as W.M. There was but little other business, so that when the minutes had been confirmed, and a candidate balloted for and approved (but not initiated), the installation ceremony was at once proceeded with. The Installing Master was the then W.M., and now I.P.M., Bro. Seale, who acquitted himself so thoroughly well as to gain the approval of every one present, and at the conclusion of the ceremony a vote of thanks was, at the instance of Bro. Goldfinch, heartily accorded to him for his efficient working. The W.M. invested the following as his officers: —Bros. H. G. Sutton, S.W.; J. M. Longhurst, J.W.; Geo. Payne, Treasurer; T. Henham, Secretary; W. Challenger, S.D.; A. F. Lucker, J.D.; J. Potter, I.G.; H. Black, D.C.; R. Murrell, Tyler. Other members of the lodge present were: Bros. B. Taylor, I.P.M.; W. J. Harris, P.M.; C. Burley, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C. Kent; J. M. Goldfinch, P.M., P.P.G.D. Kent; H. Penfold, P.M., and several others. Amongst the visitors were Bros. the Rev. W. A. Hill, G.C.; G. Watson, P.M. 1050, P.G. Reg. Kent; H. Bathurst, P.M. 133, P.P.G. Reg. Kent; F. F. Giraud, P.M. 133, P.P.J.G.D. Kent; H. S. Naylor, W.M. 1449, P.G.S. Kent; A. Ranson, P.M. 1050; H. G. Clarkson, W.M. 1089; E. J. Penny, P.M. 1089; J. P. Griffin, P.M. 1050; H. Miskin, S.D. 1449; M. Barnes, W.M. 1050; J. Gambrell, 1050; C. Tuft, 184; J. P. Watts, W.M. 158; T. Deane, W.M. 77; J. Saffery, J.W. 1089; W. H. Ruskin, W.M. 184; J. R. Foord, S.W. 503; A. Aubrey, S.D. 127; E. Hogben, 133; A. Sales, 706; A. Barfield, S.W. 35. The banquet was held at the Bull Hotel, and did credit to the host, Bro. J. Owens; he was not however present, owing to a recent bereavement. The Chaplain having said grace the toast list was proceeded with. "The Queen and the Craft," and "The W.M. Grand Master," were briefly, yet ably, proposed by the W.M., and were of course heartily received. The third toast contained the names of the R.W. the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy G.M., and the Grand Officers. In proposing the toast, the W.M. said, he must congratulate the Craft upon having such a Pro Grand Master. He had two or three times lately had to deal with most delicate matters, notably in the matter of the Grand Orient of France, and more lately in a still more delicate matter, and he had proved himself able to grapple with emergencies. The qualities required in a ruler were gentleness and firmness, and these were found admirably combined in the Earl of Carnarvon. He spoke in high terms of the other Grand Officers, and passed a warm eulogy on the worth of Bro. Hill, one of the Grand Chaplains, whose name he coupled with the toast. The Rev. Bro. Hill, in an eloquent speech, said, how proud he felt to find himself associated and named with such eminent men as those to whom reference had been made. Alluding to the able and thorough manner in which the affairs of Grand Lodge were conducted, he remarked that unless men came well to the front it were well they should not come forward at all. He said it so much depended upon the chiefs doing their work thoroughly and well, whether the other officials came up to their work; a little laxity at head-quarters was an excellent excuse for laxity elsewhere. It was an honour to Masons to have such men to guide their destinies. We had also the sympathies of our Queen, who was the daughter of a Mason, and who had three sons who were Masons. The Rev. Chaplain then alluded to and reproduced some of the observations which had fallen from the Earl of Carnarvon on the occasion of the inauguration of the Lord Falkland Memorial. The favour of serving under these distinguished men, he told the brethren, he owed not to himself, but to the popularity he had obtained amongst them. Whether he deserved that popularity or not he did not know, but he intended if possible to keep it. Viscount Holmesdale's name was next proposed, as Provincial Grand Master, and very cordially received; the W.M. believed that as a Provincial Grand Master he had no superior, and very few, if any equal; and this he thought must be the opinion of all who had witnessed the excellent way in which he had conducted the business at the late meeting at Canterbury, the most successful ever held in the province. This toast was followed by that of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and the Provincial Grand Officers; the name of Bro. Payne, one of the Grand Officers and Treasurer of this lodge, being associated with it. The W.M., in giving the toast, said that the lodge owed a great debt of gratitude to Bro. Payne; he was a man that was always at his post, indeed, he thought he might almost say that Bro. Payne had never failed to attend lodge, at any rate, he was sure he had always been there, unless prevented by sickness or some very pressing emergency. They had, moreover, to thank him as their Treasurer for having so long taken care of the deficit for them, although he was glad to say the balance was now in their favour. He thought, too, that never had an honour been more justly deserved than that which the Provincial Grand Lodge had lately bestowed upon him. Bro. Payne, in a suitable reply, urged upon the younger brethren the necessity of regular attendance, especially if they held office. He made a touching allusion to the serious illness of Bro. Wood, a P.M. of the lodge, for whom he begged the consideration and prayers of the lodge. He concluded by making a brief financial statement, showing how the lodge had nine years ago started in debt, and how that by judicious and careful management they had now a very fair balance in his hands. Owing to the rather awkward train service, some of the toasts which followed had to be hurried over, in order that that of "The Visitors" might be reached before they were compelled to leave. The toast of the W.M. was, of course, enthusiastically received.

To this he made an able response, and in the course of his remarks referred to the sad catastrophes which had lately happened, one of them in their very midst. Relief, he said, was one of the great principles of the Order, and he appealed to the brethren then present to contribute their mites in aid of the sufferers from the founding of the "Princess Alice," and asked them to respond as heartily to this appeal as they had to the last toast. The sum of £6 was at once collected, which the W.M. promised to send to the Mansion House Relief Fund, as a contribution from the Lodge of St. Michael and its visitors. The W.M. next proposed "The Health of the Installing Master, the I.P.M.," whom he complimented upon the zeal and assiduity with which he had performed his duty, during the period he had filled the chair, as well as upon his crowning effort in so successfully installing his successor. It gave him great pleasure to pin upon his breast the jewel which the lodge, in recognition of his worth, had voted him. The reception of the toast proved that the brethren heartily appreciated Bro. Seale's successful efforts. After Bro. Seale had responded, the W.M. gracefully proposed "The Visitors," and coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Barfield, of Lodge No. 35, who had come all the way from the Isle of Wight to do him honour. Bro. Barfield, in reply, regretted that he had been until that day a perfect stranger to everyone present except their W.M. He had been, he said, mixed up with Masonry for thirty-five years. He compared Masonry as it was then with Masonry as it is now, and mentioned, in proof of its improvement, that the amount bestowed last year upon charitable purposes reached nearly £40,000. Its numbers had lately received vast augmentation, but he was afraid that the bounds had been overstepped in this respect. He feared some lodges showed hardly sufficient discrimination in the selection of members, and judging from his own experience he thought this was particularly the case in some London lodges. In spite, however, of this fear, he could not help feeling that this was doing a certain amount of good, for he was sure that Masonry would tend to make every man better. He complimented the lodge upon its working, remarking that he had never seen better in a country lodge. "The Past Masters of the Lodge" were next toasted, for whom Bro. Penfold responded, and the toast of "The Officers of the Lodge," proposed by Bro. Harris, brought the list to a close. The music was under the direction of Bro. Aubrey, and during the evening Bro. Arthur Thomas, an excellent tenor, sang some capital songs. Altogether the lodge has every reason to congratulate itself upon so successful a meeting.

CROYDON.—Addiscombe Lodge (No. 1557).—The installation meeting of this lodge took place at Harewood House, High-street, Croydon, on Saturday last, and Bro. J. W. Gray was installed by Bros. Frances, P.P. G.D.; Turquand, P.M.; and Mullet, P.M. This being the first time that the lodge has met at a private house, some anxiety was felt, owing to the room never having been used for the purposes of Freemasonry before. The hall attached to the house is a spacious iron building, used for private concerts, and admirably adapted for a lodge, being sixty-four feet long, seventeen feet wide, and fifteen feet high, with a fine three-manual organ at the end, which is blown by hydraulic pressure. The ceremonies were commenced by Bro. John Rhodes, P.P.G.O., playing a grand march upon the organ, composed by him for the occasion. The degrees were worked by Bro. Parsons Smith, the retiring Master, in a most impressive manner. After the installation, the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, prepared by J. Mash, of High-st., Croydon. It was stated during the evening that this year was the first that the lodge had a balance in hand.

HATFIELD.—Cranbourne Lodge (No. 1580).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday week, at the Red Lion Hotel, (Bro. Webb's.) Last year the experiment was tried of treating ladies to a day's enjoyment in that beautiful neighbourhood, and after the lodge work was over entertaining them at the banquet. The experiment proved so successful that it was repeated this year, and while the brethren were at work in the lodge the ladies were escorted over the grounds of Hatfield House, and through the historical apartments of that building, for which Bros. Thody and J. S. Webb, had previously obtained permission from the Marquis of Salisbury. Several brethren accompanied the ladies on this expedition, and for the space of two hours and a half the party, who had previously been entertained at a luncheon, had the pleasure of walking about the lovely grounds and inspecting the antiquities which abound in the ancient domain of the Cecils. The lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. William Bausor, and after the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, Bro. J. L. Mather, Prov. G.D.C. Herts, P.M., initiated Mr. Ford, and then passed Bro. J. H. Thompson, to the Second Degree. The election of W.M. for the ensuing year was afterwards taken, and Bro. Henry Cox, S.W., was chosen to fill that high and important office. Bro. G. F. Cook was elected Treasurer, and Bro. Steedman, Tyler. After the appointment of the Audit Committee a vote of thanks was passed to Bros. Thody and J. S. Webb for their kindness in obtaining the permission of the authorities at Hatfield House for the ladies and brethren to view it. Lodge was then closed, and the ladies having returned from their tour of inspection, the whole party sat down to a very choice banquet, provided by Bro. Webb. The company comprised Bros. W. Bausor, W.M.; H. Cox, S.W.; T. S. Hellier, as J.W.; W. Webb, as S.D.; J. Ward Verry, I.G.; W. J. Crutch and Thody, Stewards; James Terry, Secretary. W. G. Jennings, (Albion), J. G. London; Bowyer, P.M., Past. P.G.D.; J. L. Mather, P.G.D.C., P.M.; W. Cook, Past Prov. G.S.; J. M. Hare, Prov. G. Steward; Hamel, Thompson. J. S. Webb, Darc, W. Webb, J. Woodman, P. Woodman, A. Kade, C. H. Reed, R. C.

Read, C. K. Killick, the Rev. W. H. W. Caseley, Bedell, Steedman, Dobby, 1287; Drummond, P.P., G.S.B., P.M. 403; Shillitoe, H. Massey (Freemason), Leage, 55; and Mrs. Bauson, Mrs. Bowyer, Mrs. Terry, Mrs. Crutch, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Dobby, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. London, Miss Woodman, Miss Herbert, Misses Leage (2) Mrs. Crutch, Mrs. R. H. Halford, Mrs. Payne, Mrs. Eade, Mrs. Reed, Miss Shillitoe, Mrs. J. S. Webb, jun. Mrs. H. Halford, Miss Strike, and the Misses Hamel, altogether fifty-four ladies and brethren sitting down. After the dinner had been disposed of, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and honoured. In giving the toast of "The Provincial Grand Master, Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P.," the W.M. said, that he felt it an honour as well as a pleasure to propose this toast. It was doubtless in the recollection of the brethren that Bro. Halsey honoured them with a visit on a recent occasion, and on that occasion the brethren received him with great heartiness. He was not now present, but still it behoved them to drink his health heartily in his absence as well as in his presence. He had only to call upon them to do so to ensure the toast a cordial reception, because the Provincial Grand Master of Herts was a man that was well-known among them, and was well respected, in addition to being a thorough good working Mason. This toast having been drunk the W.M. proposed "The Health of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers, Past and Present." He said that in doing so he must ask the brethren to drink the toast with all heartiness and sincerity, seeing that they had a Present Provincial Grand Officer present whom they wished to do honour to. That brother was Bro. Terry. (Cheers). He was sure that no words of his were needed to give éclat to the toast. Bro. Terry had been so long connected with them, and was so much esteemed in Masonry in other places, that an explanation of what he had done was not necessary in any assembly of Freemasons. What he had done would occur to all the brethren; and when he said all the brethren he wished them to understand that he did not mean the brethren of the Cranbourne Lodge only. All the brethren of the Cranbourne Lodge would put their shoulders to the wheel to do him honour, and they had placed their mites together to testify to him by subscribing to a testimonial of their high appreciation of his character and attainments. This had been done without any communication with Bro. Terry, who came into that room that evening perfectly ignorant of what was in store for him. It afforded him (the W.M.) the greatest pleasure to present to Bro. Terry a gold jewel of the office of Provincial Grand Junior Warden, to be attached to his collar, and he was quite sure it could not give any brother greater pride to present that jewel than it did to himself (the W.M.). It had been made in such a form that it could be either attached to Bro. Terry's collar or worn by him on his breast. The inscription on the jewel was "Presented to Bro. James Terry, Provincial Grand Junior Warden of Hertfordshire, by the members of the Cranbourne Lodge, No. 1580, to mark the esteem and the love in which he is held. Sept. 1878." Addressing Bro. Terry, the W.M. said, I need not say that I am exceedingly pleased to be in the proud position of placing this upon your breast, and I am sure that whenever you look at it you will not value it so much for its intrinsic worth as for the inscription on the back of it, which says that it is presented out of esteem and love for you. Bro. Terry, in acknowledging the gift said, W.M., Bro. Wardens and brethren, accustomed though I am to public speaking, and having had for some years now the pleasure and the privilege of addressing very many of my brethren and very large audiences, yet upon the present occasion I certainly must say I have been taken entirely by surprise, and scarcely know how to express myself. In the first place permit me to thank you, on behalf of the D. Prov. G. M. of this province and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past, for the very kind manner in which their names have been received among you, and to assure you that I deeply regret that we have not the presence of the D.P.G.M. with us, inasmuch as the knowledge that had been here we should have had a highly intellectual treat in the response which he would have given to this toast. For the Grand Officers Past, we can only speak of them for what they have done; we know full well their merits have been recognised and acknowledged by the Prov. G.M., and they would not have had their collars bestowed upon them if they had not been worthy of them. For the Present Grand Officers I can only say we have scarcely been tried yet; we are only just in collar, and we have not had a public opportunity of displaying our ability; but I have no doubt the collars would not have been conferred upon them if the eyes of the Prov. G.M. had not been previously upon them for what they had done. Bro. Drummond represents the oldest lodge in the province, and I see no representative of any other lodge in the province present except our own. Therefore, I think it is something to say that within two years five of us can stand up and show that we are Provincial Grand Officers. Well now, Sir, you have positively overwhelmed me, I have to acknowledge again the receipt of a testimonial. I say "again," because this is not the first time I have had the honour of a presentation; but I have now also, to thank you for your great kindness of manner in presenting this one to me, and the very kind words which you have used in making the presentation. I am sure I can but thank you and the members of the lodge for having gone out of your way in marking my advent to power by such a gift. For myself, I prize it very highly, and also the agreeable way in which it comes to me. It is one of those gifts which come to a man totally unexpected, for I can certainly say I knew nothing about it. I may also say it is undeserved, for I have done very little indeed in this lodge. I have been merely your Secretary; but I can also say that in that capacity I have endeavoured to do my duty to the utmost of my ability. Looking at the two W.M.'s who have preceded you, worshipful sir, although I may have done very slight things for the lodge, it conjures up before me a great deal of love and esteem, which is expressed on the jewel. If I had not had the love and esteem for the brethren, I could not have gone on working for them. I also know that if I had not had their love and esteem this mark of it would not have been offered to me. It is therefore knowing that I have it that I thank you all the more for the kind words you have uttered, and the members of the lodge for the way they have contributed towards the jewel. Permit me to assure you that as long as health and strength are spared to me I shall do all I possibly can to promote the interests of the lodge and the material advantages of every one of its members, as well as the advantage of the great province of which we form a part. Bro. J. L. Mather, P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M." All the company, he said, not only the brethren, but those who had not before been acquainted with the W.M., had had an opportunity that day of forming an opinion of the very amiable way in which he discharged the duties of his office, and as chairman of a very agreeable assembly. In placing this toast before the company it would be superfluous to make use of many words to induce the company to drink it with enthusiasm. In the discharge of the duties of W.M. during the year, Bro. Bausor had shown great efficiency, and as president over a party which comprised many of the softer sex, it was quite evident he was a ladies' man. He requested the brethren to include Mrs. Bausor in the toast. The W.M. in replying said, that as this was the last time he would have to address the brethren as W.M. he had great pleasure in taking the opportunity of thanking the brethren for the kindness he had experienced at their hands. The close of his year of office had been signalized by a great deal of pleasure. He had received so many kindnesses at the hands of the brethren that he should never forget them. With regard to the many qualifications Bro. Mather had alluded to, if he was deserving in any shape or form of the least of them, he was delighted to receive them. If on the other hand he had neglected any of the duties that fell to the lot of his office he was very sorry; but at the same time he must unreservedly admit that he had received nothing but kindness and consideration from all the members of the lodge. For this he tendered the brethren his heartfelt thanks. Bro. Ford in replying to the toast of "The Initiate," said he could not help expressing the extreme gratification and pleasure which he felt at the unanimous and cordial manner in which the brethren had been good enough to drink it. It was quite true that had he been aware that in addition to the mysteries of the initiation he should also have been called upon to fulfil the penalty of delivering a speech, he perhaps might have hesitated in embarking on this career. But the fact was he had been struck that day by several features connected with Masonry with which he for a single moment would attempt to detain the company. He felt very great pleasure—an especial pleasure—in being initiated in the mysteries of this ancient Order, and he felt great pleasure in the fact of ladies being present, and for this simple reason, that the principles which he had heard enunciated in the lodge by their eloquent and worthy Bro. Mather, as being the peculiar characteristics of Masonry were those which men honoured most, and which they found better developed, above all others, in the presence of those ladies who graced the table that evening. He would proceed further and say that the principles which he had heard explained in lodge were principles which were inherent in the ladies, and were the characteristics of the great English race. He had, therefore, great pleasure in finding that he belonged to an Order which was not only honoured, ancient and honourable in itself, but which was founded on principles which were innate in the human heart and which were superabundant in the ladies of our race, which also presented the characteristics of the common race of Englishmen. He had but one other observation to make in thanking the brethren for the way they had received the toast. When he glanced over the continent and saw our neighbour country France, he saw that the principles for which they fought and bled, for which they passed through so many struggles, for which the great revolution strove were principles which they could not accomplish: yet that which the great revolution could not establish, and the great French race could not bring about, were embodied and could be presented in a simple form, and might be ascertained by every person who joined that great and ancient body, the Freemasons. Bro. Drummond replied for "The Visitors." Bro. H. Cox, S.W., responded for "The Officers." Referring to the very pleasant gathering they had had, he said the lodge hoped to have a similar one every year; it was really the gathering of the season. It was a great success last year, and it was again a great success. Bro. Thompson in acknowledging the toast of "The Ladies" said that Demosthenes was an orator, but he would fairly have quailed if he had had to reply for the ladies; without speaking in an ungallant sense, he was sure that every lady then present or at any other time was quite prepared to speak for herself. Why, therefore, the duty for replying for them had devolved upon him who did not know, unless it was that nature came to the front, which always had as far as he knew, and which always would to man's dying day characterise him under all sorts of circumstances. But he trusted that if any lady wished to express what he might fail to express, she would do so. He could not know their thoughts; if he did he would express them in the best way he could. He did not believe they were the weaker sex, but adopting the common belief, he would as a gentleman thank the brethren on behalf of the ladies, hoping at the same time they would excuse him for the lame way in which he had done so. The company then proceeded to the lodge-room, where the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

STAINES.—Musgrave Lodge (No. 1597).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Angel and Crown Hotel, on Saturday, the 21st September. The W.M., Bro. F. Keily, P.G. Treas. Middlesex, presided, supported by Bros. E. Amphlett, as S.W.; T. H. Edmonds, P.G.S., as J.W.; A. Paterson, as Secretary; G. P. Gillard, as J.D.; and several others; also as visiting brethren, Bros. H. C. Levander, P.G. Sec. Middlesex; G. Phythian, W.M. 22; G. W. Kentish, 1293, and R. E. Jones, 1293. The lodge having been duly opened, and the minutes of the last meeting confirmed, Bro. R. E. Jones was then examined, entrusted, and duly passed to the Second Degree. Bro. William Cock, a candidate for the Third Degree, was examined, entrusted, and raised to the degree of a M.M., after which the lodge proceeded to the election of W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler, the whole being unanimously in favour of Bro. Amphlett, as W.M.; Bro. Levick, as Treas.; and Bro. Gilbert, as Tyler. The Audit Committee were re-appointed. The lodge was then closed in due form, and the members adjourned to refreshment, and at an early hour returned to town.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The annual installation gathering of the members of this first-class and admirably conducted lodge, which has deservedly attained a high name and great fame in the extensive province of West Lancashire, was (as we stated last week) held at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, on the 24th September, at the hour of "high twelve." A more brilliant and numerous gathering has not been witnessed at the hall, in connection with installation proceedings, for a long time, and the whole of the business passed off with an éclat, which must have proved eminently satisfactory to the visitors, as it was highly creditable to those entrusted with the arrangements. There were altogether upwards of 100 brethren present, and the character of the Masonic congregation may be gathered from the fact that the Tyler's book showed there were about a dozen Past and Present P.G.L. officers present, nearly thirty W.M.s, and P.M.s, and a great array of officers. Bro. W. J. Chapman, W.M., opened the lodge punctually at noon, and his official supporters included Bros. Joseph Bell, P.M.; B. B. Marson, P.M., D.C., P.G.S.B.; Lindo Courtenay, S.W. (the W.M. elect); J. MacKenzie, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treasurer; John Atkinson, Secretary; W. W. Sandbrook, S.D.; F. Wilkinson, J.D.; F. Emery, I.G.; J. Pye, S.S.; W. Savage, J.S.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., and R. Burgess, Organist; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. The private members of the lodge present were Bros. George (Jolly Little); Lewis, Dr. Whittle, J. C. Duckworth, H. P. Squire, P. Lowndes, A. Robertson, R. Williams, W. M. Annand, S. Mattison, J. Keet, J. E. Cowdell, J. H. Owen, John Hill, T. S. Bailey, W. Williams, M. Gough, G. Ashley, T. Avann, P. W. Sanderson, P. Buck, R. W. Barnes, J. Penney, Dr. R. H. D. Johnson, W. Hildyard, Mat. Robson, H. Round, L. B. Brough, G. W. Anson, Richard Brown, P.M. 241 (Hon. Sec. W.L.M.E.I.); Walter Stafford, Henry Leslie, Henry Scott, P.M. 86; Dr. H. Y. Pitts, Sec. 1620; W. Heap, J. S. Macbeth, J. W. R. Brown, W. Coates, W. S. Cook, C. Campion, F. Duncanson, M. P. Tieski, J. Ballard, J. Shrapnell, J. Martin, D. Saunders, J. De Frece, Treas. 1502, and others. The visitors included Bros. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; John Salmon, P.G. D.C. (East Lancashire); G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C.; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; J. T. Callow, P.M. 673 and 1505; James Salmon, P.P.G.J.W. (North Wales and Shropshire), P.P.G.S.D. (Cheshire); J. P. Platt, P.P.G.J.W. (Cheshire); A. D. Heaketh, J.W. 1182; J. O. Rea, J.D. 1182; J. A. Brown, P.M. 1242 (Isle of Man); A. Child, 1505; A. Taylor, S.S. 1432; W. Morris, 1356; J. W. Williams, W.M. 1356; F. G. Thomas, 1380; A. E. Milton, 1356; R. W. Chatham, 1356; W. Corlett, S.W. 249; M. Hart, P.M., Sec. 1502, P.M. 724; A. Jones, W.M. 1502; J. Winsor, W.M. 241, P.M. 203; H. R. Elston, 95 (S.C.); R. Roberts, I.P.M. 1473; F. Barnett, W.M. 249; E. Paull, jun., 1356 and 1182; J. J. Cooper, 1570; T. Horne, P.M. 1356; J. Tunstall, 1035; J. Little, 1505; E. Johnson, P.M. 203 (W.M. designate of the new Kirkdale Lodge, which will be consecrated some time during this month), R. Langley, P.M. 477; G. Macbeth, 1009 (E.L.); J. Busfield, 216; T. Holden, 1182; H. G. Vernon, 1242 (Isle of Man); J. Meesenger, 249, and others. Bro. Barry Sullivan, the eminent actor, was invited, but a professional engagement prevented his attendance. The minutes of the previous meeting, as well as those of the Fund of Benevolence, were read and confirmed, and the ballot was subsequently taken for two candidates and one joining brother, each of whom was declared unanimously elected. Mr. James Alfred Mercer, acting manager for Mr. Charles Reade, one of the candidates, being in attendance, was most efficiently initiated into the Order by Bro. W. J. Chapman, the retiring W.M., Bro. Lindo Courtenay, S.W., one of the lessees of the Royal Amphitheatre, Liverpool, was then presented for the benefit of installation, by Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec., and Bro. B. B. Marson, P.M., P.G.S.B., and after the ancient regulations and charges had been read over by the Secretary (Bro. J. Atkinson), the W.M. elect was most impressively and efficiently installed in the chair by Bro. Chapman, his immediate predecessor in that position. There were nearly 30 present at the Board of Installed Masters, and on the brethren being re-admitted they saluted the newly installed W.M. in the Three Degrees, singing a Masonic ode as they passed round the room. Bro. R. Burgess, Organist, most effectively furnished the accompaniments for this and the other portions of the initiation and installation ceremonies, the "Dramatic" vocal choir rendering the various incidental pieces of music with good effect. The W.M. invested the following as his official staff for the coming year:—Bros. W. J. Chapman, I.P.M.; J. Ball, P.M.; D. C.; J. MacKenzie, S.W.; W. W. Sandbrook, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treasurer; (re-elected for the third time); John Atkinson, Secretary (re-appointed for the second time); Fred. Wilkinson, S.D.; Frank Emery, J.D.; J. Pye, I.G.; W. Savage, S.S.; H. P. Squire, J.S.; R. Burgess, Organist (re-appointed for the second time); J. Skeaf, P.G.O., Honorary Organist; and W. H. Ball, was re-elected Tyler. The balance-sheet, which was taken as read and adopted, showed that the present total value of the Dramatic Lodge is about £200, and that nearly £30 besides this had been set aside during the year for the Benevolent Fund. The W.M., after this piece of business, said he had a very pleasant duty to perform, which was to present the I.P.M. (Bro. Chapman) with a very artistic P.M.'s jewel, in token of the esteem in which he was held by the members of the lodge. He considered this one of the greatest compliments which could be paid to the I.P.M., as it showed that he had performed his duty to the satisfaction of every brother in the lodge. On behalf of several individual officers and members the W.M. also presented the I.P.M. with a valuable set of jewellery for Mrs. Chapman. In acknowledging the handsome gift, Bro. Chapman spoke in feeling terms of the pleasure he had had in filling the chair and of the hearty support he had received from every one, especially his officers. After three propositions for initiation had been made, the brethren were called off from labour to refreshment. After a lapse of about an hour the brethren adjourned to the banquetting hall, which was chastely decorated for the special occasion by Messrs. Anderson and Sons, Bold-street, Liverpool. By an exquisite arrangement and grouping of flags and banners the somewhat unattractive room was made to look quite charming, and the crimson carpet, window and door hangings, &c., added greatly to its cosiness and comfort. A splendid banquet, embracing nearly all the delicacies of the season, was supplied by Bro. R. Russell, of Bold-street, Liverpool, whose catering and wine carte were of the most satisfactory character. Elegant button-hole bouquets were provided for the whole of the guests by the W.M. and his co-lessee, Bro. Henry Leslie. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were briefly given by the W.M. In response to the toast of "Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. England, and R.W.P.G.M. West Lancashire, and the P.G.L. Officers, Past and Present," Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; expressed the great pleasure which he had experienced in being present that day, and the great satisfaction he had in replying to the toast which had just been proposed. He had much pleasure in doing so for the very good and sufficient reason that the wisdom of Lord Skelmersdale in sanctioning the consecration of the Dramatic Lodge, and giving countenance to the granting of the warrant, had been shown by the undoubted success which had attended the lodge. He further complimented the brethren on the excellent balance-sheet which had been presented that day at the close of the year. After referring to the first-class working of the lodge, and the unanimity which prevailed amongst the brethren, Bro. Alpass said, that had not only the lodge been a great success, but it had supplied a keenly felt want in the Masonic world by affording professional brethren the opportunity of attending to their Masonic duties in connection with their professional engagements. The attendances at the Dramatic Lodge were larger than those in connection with any other lodge which met in that building, taking the number of subscribing brethren into account, and he did not travel beyond what was true when he said that the working was quite up to any in the province. Whilst the brethren had done admirably in endowing the W.M., S.W., and J.W.'s chairs for Life Governorships of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution; Bro. Alpass eloquently urged upon the brethren the great desirability of supporting the London Charities as well as those which existed in West Lancashire. In reply to the toast of "The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution," Bro. R. Brown, the Hon. Secretary, referred to the immense advantages which had been conferred by the institution, stating that at present there were 115 children being educated by means of its funds. Bro. J. A. Brown, P.M. 1242, responded to the toast of "The Visitors." "The Health of the W.M.," given by Bro. J. Bell, P.M., D.C., was most enthusiastically received, and suitably acknowledged; and the toast of "The P.M.s and Officers," was coupled with the name of the S.W. After other toasts the brethren were again called to labour. On the motion of Bro. Bell, seconded by Bro. Sandbrook, J.W., the sum of £5 5s. was unanimously voted from the funds to endow the occupant of the I.P.M.'s chair as a Life Governor of the "West Lancashire." Capital songs were given by Bros. Saunders, W. Williams, Lewis, Hill, Busfield, Child, Elston, R. Brown, and others, and the accompaniments were played by Bros. Skeaf, and Burgess.

The lodge was opened in due form, at 7 o'clock, and the work proceeded in a very admirable manner, reflecting great credit upon the brethren for their proficiency. It was proposed by Bro. P. M. Cundick, Preceptor, and seconded by Bro. Ellis, that a vote of thanks be recorded upon the minutes to the W.M., Bro. Stephens, for the efficient manner in which he had presided, also that he be made an honorary member, was carried unanimously. Bro. Stephens briefly responded, and thanked the brethren who had so ably assisted him, and the lodge for the mark of their appreciation. A vote of thanks to the brethren who had worked was responded to by Bro. Cohen, P.M., who expressed the pleasure it had given them to assist that evening, especially so in his case, having taken a great interest in Bro. Stephens since he was made. The lodge was closed and adjourned until the 29th inst.

WHITTINGTON LODGE.—(No. 862.)—This lodge held its weekly meeting on Wednesday, 25th ult., at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Fleet-street, Bro. Hallam being W.M.; Vizzard, S.W.; Drury, J.W.; Thomson S.D.; Abell, J.D.; Brown, I.G.; Long, Preceptor, and others. The lodge was opened and minutes confirmed, after which the lodge was opened in the Second Degree. Bro. Knill Abell having offered himself as a candidate for the Third Degree was examined and entrusted. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree and the ceremony of raising completed, the W.M. giving the traditional history in a very able manner. The lodge was then removed to the Second Degree and a portion of the lecture worked in Sections by Bros. Tate and Brown. Bro. Vizzard was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, on which occasion the ceremony of initiation will be rehearsed. The annual banquet was fixed for the last Wednesday in October, at which Bro. Long, the Preceptor, will preside, and the lodge was closed.

FINSBURY PARK LODGE (No. 1288).—A meeting of this Master Masons' Lodge of Instruction, was held at the Finsbury Park Tavern, Holloway, on Friday, 27th ult., Bro. Walker, P.M., occupied the chair of W.M.; with Bros. Press, as S.W.; Frampton, J.W.; Dunn, S.D.; Cox, J.D.; Part, I.G.; H. B. D. Dunn, Secretary; P. M. Rogers, Preceptor. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes read and confirmed. The ceremonies of initiation and passing were rehearsed, Bro. Hawkins being the candidate. The lodge was then closed in the Second Degree, and Bro. Press was elected W.M., for ensuing week, and the officers were appointed in rotation. The lodge was closed in ancient form. There were present P.Ms., Rogers, Walker, and Pigot, and Bros. Press, Frampton, Dunn, Cox, Part, and Hawkins.

SALISBURY.—Elias-de-Derham Chapter (No. 586).—The annual convocation of this chapter was held on Friday, the 20th ult., at the Masonic Hall, when there were present Comps. Fletcher, M.E.Z.; J. Rumbold, H.; F. J. Russell, J.; A. Tucker, E.; T. Norwood, P.S.; Folliot and Haskell, Assist. S.; Silverthorne, Janitor; H. Ward, P.Z., P.P.G.H. Wilts; R. Stokes, P.Z., P.P.G.J. Wilts; C. W. Wyndham, P.Z., Prov. G.J. Dorset; F. Griffin, F. J. Harman, E. Hale, G.W. Wiltshire; J. T. Celkin, W. C. Powning, and Capt. H. F. Yeatman, 622. The minutes of the previous chapter were read and confirmed. M.E.C. P.Z. Ward, having taken the First Principal chair, he requested all companions below the rank of First Principal to retire, when E.C. Rumbold was duly installed into the chair of Z.; E.C. Russell into the chair of H., and Comp. Norwood into the chair of J., according to the ancient rites and ceremonies of the Order. The companions having been admitted, the following officers were invested by the M.E.Z., namely, Comps. Tucker, as S.E.; Haskell, S.N.; Harman, P.S.; Folliot, Assist. S.; Silverthorne, Janitor. The ballot was then taken for three candidates for exaltation, which having proved unanimous in their favour, they were separately admitted, and duly exalted to the Supreme Degree of a Royal Arch Mason. A vote of thanks was accorded to M.E.C.P.Z. Ward, for the very able and impressive manner in which he had given the ceremonies of installation and exaltation. After the names of two candidates for exaltation had been proposed and seconded, the chapter was closed in due form, and the companions adjourned to refreshment.

LEWES.—South Saxon Chapter (No. 311).—The annual chapter for the installation of Principals took place at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, when the following officers assumed their collars of office: Comps. R. Crosskey, M.E.Z.; C. H. Elman, H.; J. Farrcombe, J.; G. Stone, N.; and S. Tanner, E. A Past Principal's jewel was presented to Comp. J. Adams for the efficient discharge of the duties of First Principal during the past twelve months. The business of the chapter closed, the companions adjourned to the Bear Hotel, where a very excellent repast was supplied by Bro. Whitcomb.

Red Cross of Constantine.

PORTSMOUTH.—Naval and Military Conclave (No. 35).—The usual quarterly convocation was held on Friday, 20th Sept., at the Masonic Hall. The M.P.S., Sir Knight, G. A. Green, was supported and assisted by the Dep. Int. Gen., Hants; Sir Knight, J. Clark; C. G. Adams, Vicar; J. Lillywhite, Sen. Gen. (acting); Wm. Tuck, Jun. Gen.; A. R. Robinson, G. Herald, Rec.; G. Reading, Sen. Aide; J. E. Buck, as Herald; J. Harrison, P.S.; B. Simister, P.S.; C. Groom, P.S.; A. J. Reed, J. Skeens, and G. Copus, Sentinel. The conclave was duly opened and minutes adopted. The ballot was favourable to Bros. Count Des Geneys, of Gosport, Lodge No. 902, and Samuel C. Heath, P.M. Hanley Lodge, No. 797. Bro. Heath, being in attendance, also Bro. T. P. Hall, W.M. Carnarvon Lodge, No. 804, (previously elected) were entrusted, admitted, installed, and proclaimed. The historical oration was delivered by the M.P.S. The M.P.S. proposed, the Dep. Int. Gen. seconded, that a letter of condolence be forwarded to Lady Williams and family, on their serious bereavement in the death of our much loved Im. Past G. Sov., Sir Fredk. M. Williams, Bart., M.P. This was carried, as also a proposition by P. Sov. J. Harrison, seconded by the M.P.S., that £2 2s. be forwarded as the contribution of this conclave to the fund now being formed to perpetuate the memory of our lamented P. Grand Viceroi, R. Wentworth Little, an honorary member of No. 35, (P.S. Harrison expressing his intention of adding half a guinea); also that a letter of condolence be written to Mrs. Little. A candidate was proposed for installation. The members will wear the usual mourning during the remainder of the year. The conclave was closed in solemn form by the M.P.S. at 8.35.

CONSECRATION OF THE EXCELSIOR CHAPTER, ROSE CROIX.

On Tuesday, 6th August, 1878, the M.W.S., Ill. Bro. W. Deamer, M.D. 18°, assisted by Ex. Bros. A. Thomson, and F. J. Smith, 18°, consecrated the above chapter in ancient and solemn form, at the St. Augustine Masonic Hall, Manchester-street, Christchurch, N.Z. at 6.30 p.m. The warrant from the Supreme Grand Council Thirty-third Degree of England, Wales, and the Dependencies of the British Crown, authorising the formation of the Excelsior Chapter, was read by the M.W.S., and also the authority from the Ill. Sec. General, to perform the ceremony of consecration.

The consecration ceremony having been completed, the M.W.S. opened the chapter in due form, when Bro. Jubal Fleming, late Recorder of the Spurious Memphis Chapter, having severed his connection therewith, took and signed the obligation of allegiance to the Supreme Grand Chapter Thirty-third Degree of England and Wales, and was affiliated to this chapter.

Bro. W. Toms was obligated as a serving brother to fill the office of Equeury.

The following brethren having been balloted for and elected, signed the obligation of allegiance in the presence of the M.W.S., and were duly perfected:—William Robert Mitchell, Charles Wellington Bishop, Rookwood, Comport, Bishop, Charles Partridge Hulbert, Henry Hobday, Francis Pavitt, Augustus Charles Saltmarsh, John Joseph Milner, George Maber Walton, Henry William Ford, William Hickley Gundry.

The M.W.S. then proceeded to appoint the following officers:—Ex. Bros. C. W. Bishop, 18°, High Prelate; Henry Thomson, 18°, 1st General; F. J. Smith, 18°, and General; Jubal Fleming, 18°, Grand Marshal; F. Pavitt, 18°, Raphael; H. Hobday, 18°, Herald; C. P. Hulbert, 18°, Captain of Guard; R. C. Bishop, 18°, Recorder; J. J. Milner, 18°, Organist; G.M. Walton, 18°, Director of Ceremonies.

The next business was the election of Treasurer, on the motion of Ex. Bro. H. Thomson, seconded by Ex. Bro. J. Fleming, Ex. Bro. W. R. Mitchell was elected to that office.

Proposed by Ex. Bro. H. Thomson, seconded by Ex. Bro. F. J. Smith, that Ex. Bros. C. W. Bishop, H. Thomson and F. J. Smith be a Committee to discharge the liabilities incurred in the formation of the chapter, carried.

Proposed by Ex. Bro. H. Thomson, seconded by Ex. Bro. J. Fleming, that the M.W.S. and the officers of the chapter be a Committee to draft bye-laws, with authority to transmit them to the S.G. Chapter for approval, carried.

Proposed by Ex. Bro. F. J. Smith, seconded by Ex. Bro. H. Thomson, that the M.W.S. be requested during his visit to England to obtain any furniture, regalia, &c. that he may consider necessary for the chapter, carried.

Ex. Bro. F. Pavitt proposed, and Ex. Bro. W. R. Mitchell seconded, Bro. George Mitchell Douglas as a candidate for perfection.

The M.W.S. made a few congratulatory remarks on the successful formation of the chapter, and desired to particularly direct the attention of the Ex. brethren to paragraphs 8, 10, 12, and 13 of the rules and regulations and especially cautioned them against holding any communication with any chapter or member holding under the Spurious Supreme Council existing in New Zealand.

Ex. Bro. Jubal Fleming expressed a wish on behalf of the chapter that the M.W.S. would have a pleasant passage to the old country, and a quick return to the command of his chapter.

The Third Point having been given the chapter was duly closed at 11.30 p.m.

At the banquet that followed the M.W.S. gave the toasts of "The Queen," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," Patron of the Order. "The S.G. Council, 33°, of England and Wales," and at the same time took the opportunity of expressing his thanks to Ill. Bro. Col. Shadwell M. Clarke, 33°, for his expedition in replying to the application for the warrant, as well as for his kindness and courtesy in furnishing the clear instructions and valuable sketches which had enabled him (the M.W.S.) to have the chapter properly furnished.

Our late respected Bro. John Bigshaw, R.W.G.M., of Essex, has, in his will, dated June 2nd, 1876, left the sum of £100 to the Provincial Grand Lodge of that Province.

The infant child of the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh was baptised on Wednesday last in their Royal Highnesses' Palace in Berlin, and was named Alexandra Louise Olga Victoria.

Obituary.

BRO. JOHN MILLWARD, P.M.

Bro. Millward, who, a correspondent states, was certainly the oldest Mason in England, died at Longnor, near Buxton, and was buried on the 2nd inst. He was initiated into Masonry in 1811; in the Lodge of Reconciliation he was re-initiated in 1813. He was first W.M. of the Phoenix Lodge of St. Ann at Buxton, and first P.Z. of the chapter. The brethren of lodges 1258 and 1653 attended the funeral. Flowers from Chatsworth and sprigs of acacia were placed on the coffin.

THE LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

We have been requested to publish the following statement:—

The Committee have thought it well to issue a few supplementary remarks to their previous report, inasmuch as it understands that some objections have been raised to its actual organization, and its professed aims.

1. It is asserted, the Committee has been informed, that the institution of this Association is an interference with the liberty of action of individual voters for the Charities, and sets up a quasi-dogmatic interference with their undoubted right of selection and support, in respect of the cases which they themselves deem the most deserving.

It is not fair, it is argued, or expedient even, to surrender such individual right of choice and voting to any Committee whatever. Undoubtedly much may be said on this head, but if the argument is closely analyzed it will be found that the same may also be said of all similar Committees. But yet in the provinces, as we all know, this principle of harmonious central action and combination has been accepted, and is spreading, and works most satisfactorily without any infringement of the privileges of the voters on the one hand, or any interference with the free and impartial selection of candidates on the other. It is a purely voluntary combination for a specific purpose, namely, the advocacy of the claims of a province or a district of those candidates whose cases are good, and whose claims are satisfactory. To suppose for a moment that the Association seeks dictatorially to say to any subscribers how they are to vote is an entire misapprehension of the objects for which the Association was founded. Owing to the "individualism" which prevails, and the intense interest excited by the personal claims of some candidates, the London subscribers to the Charities, are unable, except by immense exertions, to secure the success of London candidates in due proportion to their subscriptions, and as election follows election the balance is being struck as against London, whereas it ought to be in favour of London. The Committee knows, for instance, that as regards the Girls' School, the votes, in round numbers about 21,000, may be divided roughly into 11,500 London, as against 9500 for the provinces and colonies, a proportion which will be found, the Committee believes in both the other Charities, and yet it is impossible to combine these votes. In asking the London brethren to surrender this very freedom of individualism in a thoroughly fraternal spirit, if they wish to see London candidates successful on the poll, which consummation, devoutly to be wished for by us all, is at present very dubious, and must become still more difficult unless steps are taken to combine the votes, the Committee is asking nothing unreasonable.

It is an entire fallacy to assume, as some do, that it is a question of lodges, or of London versus the Provinces. The whole question is narrowed to this—do the London subscribers obtain their fair share of candidates elected? Owing to a very successful system of combination of votes, so far the London subscribers, though large contributors, cannot carry their proper proportion of candidates through want of combination. It is purely a question of actual subscription.

If the London brethren are unwilling to aid the Committee, the only effect must be that, owing to individual interests and personal claims, a small number of votes will be polled for each candidate, sufficient to detract from the chance of another, but insufficient to ensure the success of the particular case, while the provinces, wise in their generation, by their own compact accumulation of provincial votes, assisted by friendly concordats with other similar provincial bodies, and the kindly support of London brethren, must be successful in their applications, and more successful, moreover, as year follows year.

The Committee, repudiating any dogmatic assertions or any dictatorial utterances, asks for the friendly co-operation and help of all London voters who feel that whatever the claims of others may be, the good and fair claims of poor London candidates have a primary interest for them.

The Committee in the next place would allude, though not without a feeling of repugnance and regret, to the absurd supposition, somewhat busily spread about, that there is a tendency to form a clique, to contest the elections with some interested objects in view. Those who form the Committee may fairly appeal to their Masonic career, as a proof that their objects are, and ever will be the promotion simply and solely of the interest of those many London candidates, who, from many and peculiar causes are now too often unsuccessful. The Committee has no cause to gain, but that of the welfare of the Charities and the fair claims of the London candidates, and it trusts that all who read these remarks will credit the Committee when it assures them that, despite all opposition, and all that too often interested criticism which sees the mote in its neighbour's eye, but forgets the beam in its own, it means to persevere in its honest if arduous labours, trusting materially to advance the claims of many who, without its zealous co-operation and support are not destined to be successful in the race. It trusts to receive such an accession of new members of the Association, and to its own numbers as a Committee, that it will be able to appeal, alike to the confidence of the London brethren, and the unswerving and loyal adherence of its own warm and active members.

The extraordinary persistency with which unsuccessful candidates present themselves year after year at the Chinese competitive examinations is curiously illustrated by certain edicts in the Peking Gazette of last year, in which honorary degrees are conferred on 43 candidates who were finally plucked at the age of 90 and upwards, and 136 who gave up the struggle when between 80 and 90.—Albion.

Reviews.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS OF THE SUPREME COUNCIL OF THE THIRTY-THIRD DEGREE, A. AND A. RITE. Freemason Office, Fleet-street.

We have seen these photographic representations of the "Mystic Nine," and who, like the "Nine Muses," are very important personages, whether in ancient mythology or in modern High Grade organisation, and very beautiful as works of art they are. They set before us in very "pleasant presence" our well-known and distinguished brethren, beginning with our esteemed Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, always and everywhere popular, as well as Bro. Capt. N. G. Philips, Bro. Major-Gen. Clerk, Bro. J. M. P. Montagu, Bro. Lt.-Col. Shadwell Clerk, Bro. R. Hamilton, M.D.; Bro. Sir Michael Costa, Bro. Col. W. Adair, and Bro. Hugh D. Sandeman.

We feel sure that they will be much admired by all, and largely patronized by our good brethren of the High Grades. We have seldom seen more thoroughly satisfactory portraits. In fact, the likenesses are speaking, and they afford a most pleasing "souvenir" to High Grade associates and personal friends. To see them is to admire them, and to admire them is we hope, to obtain them, as they are likely to be soon "taken up," having already attracted warm admiration and most friendly comments.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S CARDS. Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswoode, Queen's Printers, 43, Fleet-street, E.C.

We are reminded of the eventual approach of Christmas by the striking Christmas and New Year's Cards of the Queen's Printers.

The cards are issued in all styles, from the costly hand-painted souvenir, or the richly illuminated motto for the wall, to the tiny bookmark or children's text card. In each we are greatly struck, as, indeed, all must be, with the variety of design, size, and colouring, in the assortment now before us, as we before mentioned. There are tiny little Reward Cards in packets, for children, each with an emblematical design of figures or flowers, or both, with an appropriate text; and there are large and handsome cards, nearly two feet long, with such words as "God is Love," "A Happy New Year to You all," "Welcome to our Hearth," shining forth from within garlands of exquisite floral decorations. Between these limits are to be found specimens of every shape and size—Scripture texts, greetings for Christmas, New Year, and birthdays, crosses with floral emblems and toasts, two series of "Poetical Gleanings" from our great poets, "Waking Thoughts from Holy Writ," &c., &c.

As we before remarked, we have never seen more effective productions, indeed, some of the cards are perfect gems, reflecting the highest credit on the resources and artistic execution and taste of Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswoode. We feel sure that they will be greatly appreciated by the public, and we venture, without hesitation, to predicate for them great popularity and extended patronage. They seem destined to suit all uses and all purposes which that genial season enjoins.

BEAR YE ONE ANOTHER'S BURDENS. A Sermon, preached by the Rev. F. J. W. WINTLE, M.A., J.W. 893, P.G.C. of Cornwall, before the Prov. Grand Lodge. F. Tregaskis, Stamp Office, Fore-street, Rotherhithe.

We like this sermon much. It is both simple and straightforward, apt and appropriate, and well acts before our brotherhood the need and the duty of active sympathy and charitable exertion. We commend it conscientiously to our readers, remarking, that as Masonic sermons are somewhat scarce, we always think it well to record such efforts of our reverend brethren the Chaplains, Prov. Grand Chaplains, and Grand Chaplains of our Order to the attention and patronage of our Masonic reading public.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

PRINCESSES' THEATRE.—That excellent sensational drama "Queen's Evidence" has been removed to give place to Mr. Rowe's so-called play "Uncle Tom's Cabin." No one with the remotest knowledge of dramatic lines could term the piece a play in any acceptance of the word, anymore than one could call Mrs. Stowe's book a novel. The piece is a wild, extravagant, highly improbable series of scenes, having little or any connection one with the other, and only requires some individual to stand by the wing with a wand to turn the whole thing into a Panorama. So much for "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as a play; as an entertainment, however, I know of no place in London just now where the pleasure seeker can find more amusement and enjoyment than at this house. The glee singing of the blacks is almost beyond praise; and Mr. Weston's performance on the banjo is truly marvellous. The religious cant put into the mouth of Uncle Tom ought to be cut out wholesale, it was bad enough in the book, on the stage it is simply intolerable; moral goodness can be demonstrated on the stage without the aid of church doctrine. I cannot say anything about the acting, as all the artists engaged are above their parts.

A Quarterly General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls will be held in the Hall of Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, London, on Saturday next, the 12th inst, at 12 o'clock noon, to consider notices of motion (see official advertisement on front page), and to elect three girls into the school by ballot.

The ceremony of freeing Waterloo Bridge will take place this day (Saturday) at half-past twelve o'clock.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

The eight annual Exhibition of Works of Art, under the patronage of the Corporation of Liverpool, has now been open for about a month at the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool, and up to the present time the success, both with respect to sales and attendance, has been hitherto unequalled. The exhibition all round is an admirable one, although there is an absence this year of prominent pictures, such as have been shown on previous occasions. There are altogether 1062 exhibits, but owing to want of space, the hanging committee had to reject as many more which were sent, the rejected pictures being principally the work of local men. London artists have been specially favoured, and this has given rise to a good deal of heart-burning, which can scarcely be wondered at. Amongst the best known artists who have places in the galleries may be named Alma Tadema, Ansell (a Liverpool native), E. Armitage, J. Archer, Mark Anthony Chevalier, Calderon, Carrie, Goodall, H. S. Marks, F. Leighton, O'Neil, Yeames, and others. It would be impossible, of course, to give even the faintest idea of the character of the various works of art in this large collection in the space at our command, and therefore we content ourselves by commending the collection to our Liverpool brethren, as well as to the country cousins whose tastes lie in the direction of art, who may pay the "shipping village" a visit. Perhaps the most charming picture in the collection is Leighton's "Winding the Skein;" and certainly the most hotly debated has been Alma Tadema's "Sculptor's Model," which has caused quite a fierce newspaper war in Liverpool. There can be little doubt that the exhibition of nude figures like this in public galleries is neither healthy nor elevating, and the argument which is raised in justification of the exhibition of such a picture, that our French and other neighbours do it, is best met by the every-day proverb "Two blacks don't make a white." While, "To the pure all things are pure," is a true maxim, the reverse is equally forcible, "To the impure all things are impure."

At Coblenz and Saarlouis the police recently prohibited smoking in the streets by youths under sixteen; and at Treves a bye-law of 1857 has just been brought into force, which imposes a fine of from three to nine marks, or imprisonment in default, on boys under sixteen who smoke in the streets and in places of amusement.

Dousson's observations go to show that dysentery caused by the introduction of Anguilla stercoralis and dysentery, Ankylstoma dysenterica, &c., into the intestinal canal by means of polluted water may be avoided by dissolving alum in the water, although this is of course a less desirable method than that of boiling the water. The treatment with alum has, it is said, been successfully used by the natives of Annam from early times; while for several years it has completely protected the French troops in Cochin China from this dreadful scourge.—Academy.

Augustus Peterman, the greatest cartographer and one of the most eminent geographers of modern times, who died Friday week at Gotha, was born at Bleichrode, near Nordhausen, in 1822. At the age of 17 he entered the Potsdam Cartographic Institution; and as a pupil of the famous Dr. Berghaus's speedily gave promise of his future accomplishments. In 1845 he went to London to assist in the getting up of an English edition of Berghaus's "Atlas of Physical Geography"; and owing to his rare gifts and attainments, was appointed Geographer Royal. He returned to Germany in 1854 to take charge of Perthes's Geographic Institution at Gotha, which post he filled to his death. All the German, African, and Polar explorations of modern times were either planned or effectually assisted and described by him. Not to speak of his deserts as a fertile author, draughtsman, and editor of Perthes's monthly, his maps on Africa and the Pole are recognized as the best extant.

A large portion of the Ancient City of Ithaca has just been unearthed by Dr. Schliemann, who has discovered 190 enormous houses on the south-eastern shores of the island at a considerable distance beneath the surface. The result of the excavations, however, will in no way rival the finds at Troy and Mycenae, for Dr. Schliemann writes that all the treasures of the city have been washed into the sea by winter rains.

The Mantuan "Didactic Exposition" (as a telegram calls it), has closed. The jury awarded a gold medal for infant designs to the superior female school established gratuitously by the Municipality, who (it is announced) have introduced gymnastics, music, and drawing into the elementary schools.

The meeting of the Congress of Orientalists at Florence last week was saddened by the death of Professor C. Seager, of the Roman Catholic College, Kensington, one of the delegates. The grand prize of 2500f. offered by the congress for the best essay on the different phases of Aryan civilisation in India has been awarded to Dr. Immer, of Germany.

A Woven Book has been manufactured at Lyons, the whole of the letter-press being executed in silken thread. Portraits, verses, and brief addresses have often been reproduced by the loom, but an entire volume from the weaver's hand is a novelty.

A serious disaster is reported from the delta of the Godavery River. The system of sluices and anicuts which restrain the river prior to the distribution of its waters over large tracts of country, has proved unequal to its work in consequence of the unusual rain. One of the principal anicuts has given way, and the waters have swept down into the plains, doing enormous damage to the crops.

A technical school for girls has been established in Rome, in which lace-making, china painting, designing, and the manufacture of artificial flowers, &c., are taught. The scholars already number upwards of 250.

Answers to Correspondents.

CORRESPONDENTS are respectfully requested to write their communications on one side of the paper only.

J. J. MAY (New Zealand).—The book was sent you, in the early part of April last.

The Publisher will be glad to receive a copy of the Freemason of date Sept. 25th, 1869, for which the sum of 1s. is offered.

Letter from "A 33°" in our next, proof shall be sent; also "A Warning to the Charitable."

On consideration, as the discussion in each case is now bordering on pure personality, and as our columns are "heavily weighted," we think it better not to keep up the controversy, ament the Prov. Grand Lodge of Hampshire and the London Masonic Charity Association. Enough has been said pro. tem.

THE FREEMASON,

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1878.

A QUID PRO QUO.

A correspondent, signing himself "Business," properly enough called our attention to some official arrangements relative to the publication of our Masonic Calendar, which seemed to be a fair subject for consideration and criticism. The subject for us is both a difficult and a delicate one, inasmuch as we are loyal members of our Order, and always respectful of the ordinances of Grand Lodge, and also because such remarks on our part might seem to some to savour of personal interest and private considerations. But we cannot forget on the other hand, that we write for the Craft at large, not for persons or cliques, and, therefore, we feel assured that in what we are about to say to-day, we shall be credited with those higher motives, and truer principles of thought and action, than might seem to be identified, on any grounds, or no grounds, with personal idiosyncrasies and special interests. Far be from us, any mere petty questions of commercial dealings, of the competition of business, of the rivalry of trade. We write as we feel, and we feel as we write, and under any circumstances ours are always honest and upright opinions, "de omnibus rebus et quibusdam aliis." We think, therefore, that we cannot be wrong, or do wrong in allowing them to appear in the Freemason, in all deference to Grand Lodge on the one hand, in all regard for the interest of our whole body on the other. We cannot then affect to think that £20 is a sufficient amount to be paid for the "privilege" of publishing the Grand Lodge Calendar, just as we are perfectly sure that a much larger sum annually might be obtained by a fair business-like arrangement, for the benefit of our important Masonic Charity Fund. But it is the nature of all monopolies, that they do good to no one but the monopolist. The public is not advantaged, even the trade suffers. And we agree with "Business" when he suggests that all matters connected with "Grand Lodge supplies," should be thrown open to "tender," and "free competition." We are quite sure that Grand Lodge would be materially benefited in more ways than one. But here we pause. We throw out these friendly "hints," or "passing notes," whichever you like to term them, for the consideration of those in authority, and we leave the matter simply and absolutely, once for all, in their hands. The object of the Freemason, often misunderstood, as often traduced, has always been to advance the best interests of the Order at large, on grounds just to all, in fact "pro bono publico," and "pro bono publico" alone. We utterly disclaim any private interests or personal considerations, treating this, as all other matters, from a business point of view alone. We have always advocated a "fair field and no favour" ourselves, and what we ask for ourselves we wish for all competitors. But equally on the other hand, we feel bound, as honest journalists, to point out in much good feeling and in all deference, what we venture to consider points of defective arrangement in things Masonic by Grand Lodge itself, without any reference whatever to our own special views or personal position, and most surely without any other motive than that of supporting free trade, and the fairest open market in all concerns of Masonic supply and demand, and equally for all, whose business, like ours, lies in that direction. Indeed we may fairly add, that we make these remarks as much for others as for ourselves. But having made our "deliverance," we also make our bow. We neither wish to be considered intrusive, complaining, exacting, or dictatorial, and we leave in full confidence our manfully avowed but humble views to the appreciation of the loyal, and the calm consideration of the intelligent of our respectable fraternity. We feel assured that their substantial justice will be admitted, and their undeniable truth conceded by our many correspondents and readers. We also, in conclusion, venture in all due submission, to ask the attention of our rulers to our well-meant suggestions, and fraternal observations.

AN AMUSING LITTLE EPISODE.

We took up an esteemed American contemporary the other day, (but as we are strong and generous we suppress the name), and we read a very glowing eulogy, "In Memoriam" of a deceased American brother. We liked the words, they seemed to run smoothly and "pan out" crisply, and we were equally pleased with the sentiments and the moral. All of a sudden it flashed across us that we had seen those words before; then it further struck us that they were somehow very familiar to us, and, lastly, we realized, "incontinently," or otherwise, that they were our own words—yes, our "ipsissima verba," which we had taken some pains with, and written "In Memoriam" of a lamented English brother in the Freemason. Well here are contemporary fame and Masonic sympathy with a vengeance! In a spirit of touching and sentimental fraternity, our worthy confrere had adopted and adapted our words, and we hardly know which to admire most, the ingenuity of the new colouring, or the kindly and amiable larceny which had thus appreciated and appropriated them. Still we felt that we must not complain too much. It is something in these days to be read at all, so "more Masonico," we contented ourselves with the reflection, that the words were good words, kind words, feeling words, true words, or they would not have so commended themselves to the undeniable taste and the skilful use of our eloquent and able confrere. Yes, we said, it is better to be read in some way than not read at all, and why should we blame our good friend across the Atlantic, of, by an ingenuity of adaptation almost unequalled, he transfers the words we wrote "in memoriam" of a brother here in England to another in America, far away, and claims credit for what he considers an effective commemoration of the pleasant virtues and enduring associations of a defunct friend and brother. We do not always all of us get the credit we deserve in this world, but our friendly American contemporary has shown us how pleasant it is to be reminded of our own writing in his prolific and perspicuous pages. After all, as Boatswain Chucks in Midshipman Easy would say, "it will all be the same 100 years hence," and so it will. We do not, therefore, begrudge our good contemporary his skilful use of our humble words, if only he pleases his readers and pleases himself. Rather, we may fairly say, after all, "such is life."

BETTING EVILS.

It is impossible to shut our eyes to the great and growing evil of "betting clubs and betting speculations." Hardly a day passes but the police magistrates warn the public in most forcible and yet feeling terms of this moral cancer, which is eating out the very vitals of society at the present hour. If the authorities at the Mansion House and Scotland Yard were asked "what is the most predominant evil you have to contend with now?" they would reply, we feel sure, "betting clubs, and betting speculations." For these affect all classes of society, and especially young men in positions of trust, such as cashiers and confidential clerks, drawn into the vortex by the love of hasty and unworked for gains, who too often end by robbing their employers and finding themselves at the bar of justice. We are told of the "Investigator," of the "East End Spec," and the "Racing Prophet," as a peculiar form of betting lotteries. Mr. Vaughan, at Bow-street, in a recent case, called attention to the fact that such speculations are "very profitable to those who set them on foot," but "very detrimental to those who have been allured into buying the tickets which are issued." In a recent race no less than 25,000 circulars at 1s. each, of the "Investigator" were issued. The following is the "modus operandi." Each copy of the Investigator, for instance, bore a number, which number corresponded with the name of some horse engaged in the principal race of the current week. Should any person buying the Investigator happen to receive one with a number corresponding to that coupled with the name of the winning horse he would obtain a prize, which would,

according to the value of the race, be from 10s. to £3 and £5. In this way the love of easy and extraordinary gains is fostered in the minds of those who in possession sometimes of small incomes wish to make them larger. And not only this, but the buyers of these tickets send small sums first and then often large sums to be put on special "favourites," on "dark horses sure to be successful," as proclaimed by the sagacious "tips;" and thus the gains to the "Great Unknown," who generally act by agents, are very great, the losses to these gullible "pigeons" are still greater. Thus, week by week we read in our police reports, how in order to make good their "honourable" payments, small sums are abstracted from the "till," "figures are falsified in cash books," large amounts are dishonourably obtained, until the crash comes and the "Confidence Trick" is again shown up by the police, though often accompanied by the lasting ruin of a fair name and a good reputation. Oh! "fortunati nimium," who, in all classes keep out of the "Maelstrom" of betting. Any such system to which we have called attention is, in our opinion, an unmitigated evil to society, as it is productive of numerous and necessary infringements of the law, and we are glad to note the efforts made by the authorities to suppress it. We think it well to caution our brethren against being mixed up with any such illegal practices or hurtful speculations. As Masons we are not breakers of the law, but upholders of the law, at all times and under all circumstances. Any brother so offending, or tried by the magistrate for such breaches of the law, becomes, in our opinion, disqualified to continue a member of our Order, inasmuch as such acts, contrary to law, are equally hurtful to morality, and tend to the injury and demoralization of society. Any lodge would be justified in excluding a brother thus convicted from its membership, and would be sustained on appeal by the Board of General Purposes and Grand Lodge.

MASONIC COURTESY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As Freemasons we profess often a good deal, I wish that we practised what we often so loudly profess. I fear that, like men in general, even we Freemasons are not exempt from the veriest littleness of humanity. Indeed, how could such exemption be expected? To say the truth, I fancy that if the veil were lifted which hides much of our Masonic life from the public gaze, we should be found to be equally susceptible, as other mere mortals, of all those passions which dominate the human will and agitate the human breast.

For instance, in courtesy one to another, we are often gravely and greatly wanting, sometimes most markedly so, and though, as a Freemason, I am taught not to be uncharitable in thought, word, or deed, I believe that I am correct in my assertion. I cannot shut my eyes to acts which amongst ourselves are almost a ludicrous reflection on our noisy professions, and too often demonstrate in the culprits a weakness both of the head and the heart.

I might say more, but I beg to-day to subscribe myself yours fraternally,

MASONIC COURTESY.

FREEMASONRY IN SCOTLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Among the many unfounded statements made by the speakers at the meeting of Freemasons held at Glasgow, on the 11th ult., reported in the Freemason of the 21st ult., the following statement was made by Bro. Barrow, of Glasgow:—

"The Earl of Dalhousie was afterwards elected Grand Master, but he refused to take office unless a Committee was appointed to investigate into Grand Lodge business. That Committee came back to Grand Lodge, and reported that everything was found in order. Everything was complete and perfect."

This statement implies that such a Committee either failed to make inquiry into Grand Lodge affairs and falsely reported it had done so; or that it made such inquiry and falsely reported that all was correct. But Bro. Barrow's statement has no existence in fact. Lord Dalhousie neither made such a refusal or request. Such a Committee was never appointed and never existed, and, consequently, no such report was ever made. Lord Dalhousie, however, did write a letter on his nomination to the Grand Master-ship, expressing a very decided opinion that the former practice of the Grand Lodge should be adhered to, by electing a new Grand Master every two years, and that that practice was of the highest benefit to the Craft, and, in so far as he was concerned, would be followed by him by his retirement at the end of his second year of office.

Bro. Barrow further states that he has been a member of Grand Lodge for twenty-four years, and that from the first day of his membership he was aware that it was a rotten institution. He has also in the course of that period, been a member of Grand Committee, and has held various offices in Grand Lodge. He is ready to fasten responsibility for mismanagement upon other persons. Is he not also equally with others responsible for that mismanagement? What steps did he take to rectify the abuses the existence of which he from the first says he knew, and of which he now complains? None. Although he says that after 1858, when the new hall was built, better returns were "got to account for the income of Grand Lodge, which showed that the Secretary and Treasurer were taking all the income for fees to themselves," and that, according to his estimate, the sum so appropriated during the period of his membership amounted to the fabulous sum of from £50,000 to £70,000. I think Bro. Barrow owes some explanation to the Craft for thus standing by, and silently, but knowingly, permitting, as he chooses to term it, such "plundering and blundering." The accusations he now so freely makes against those with whom he was associated in the administration of Grand Lodge affairs come with bad grace from him, even were they as true as they are incorrect.

A person at the meeting also stated that he had heard that £150, the balance of the funds subscribed toward a testimonial to the Earl of Dalhousie, and handed over by him to the Benevolent Fund of Grand Lodge, had been "spent on a Champagne supper." He asked Bro. Barrow, who had been Chairman of the Finance Committee, if this was true. Bro. Barrow knew that that statement was absolutely untrue; but what was his reply? He did not give the statement a flat denial, as any person wishing to act fairly to his neighbour and brother would have done, but said that he would answer their question if put to him in Grand Lodge! thereby implying that the money had been improperly spent. Such conduct on the part of Bro. Barrow, who occupies the position of Senior Grand Warden, requires no comment.

Almost all the other statements and insinuations made by Bro. Barrow, and the other speakers at the meeting, are as incorrect as those I have referred to. They appear to have been purposely made to throw discredit on others; but they are so numerous as not to permit of particular notice in this letter.

Colonel Campbell, who presided at the meeting, states that a large number of the alterations which were proposed in Grand Lodge laws were, in his opinion, opposed to the rights and privileges of daughter lodges, and that, in the interest of Freemasonry in Scotland, they should have been fully discussed. I quite agree with him. But they were fully discussed and considered in Committee. And by whom were these alterations proposed? Almost exclusively by the Colonel's Glasgow friends. The only one opposed by the other sections of Grand Lodge was the first in the list, which was fully discussed and rejected by an overwhelming majority, and even were the votes rejected to which the Glasgow speakers take exception, the proposal would still have been rejected by a large majority.

The alterations proposed in the laws were remitted to Grand Committee for consideration and report, and they were all fully discussed at various meetings and at a meeting of the Committee called specially for the purpose of their consideration. The alterations approved of by the Committee were published and circulated among the members of Grand Lodge several days prior to its meeting, and were considered by them. Further discussion of these alterations, with the exception of the first, which was separately discussed and disposed of, was unnecessary, for it was the very parties proposing them who sought their renewed discussion. Getting all they wanted, such a discussion became a waste of time. Besides, I am sure Colonel Campbell, and any common-sense person, will admit that a large meeting of 400 Masons, composing the Grand Lodge of Scotland, is not the one best fitted to dispose of alterations in existing laws, which require calm and deliberate consideration in their disposal. The Committee was the proper forum for this duty, and there the Glasgow brethren got all they wanted, with the exception of the alterations embraced in the Second Section, which were also fully considered by Grand Committee and not sustained. These were not insisted on at the meeting of Grand Lodge. On the whole matter, it appears to me that a great noise has been made of nothing. I am, &c.,

THE LOSS OF THE "PRINCESS ALICE."

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The Rev. A. Styleman Herring's pathetic letter to the Times of the 28th ult., mentions among a few cases claiming commiseration and assistance by that terrible loss of life in the collision of the "Princess Alice," and consequent distress and misery to numerous families. He quotes among others, "a city agent (a Freemason) leaves a widow with nine children, in reduced circumstances, after securing by personal efforts a good income."

This allusion is, of course, to our late Bro. Jardine, whose pecuniary position I know not, and whose personal acquaintance was slight, meeting him occasionally at the London Masonic Club, of which he was a member, and also at lodge of instruction.

The circumstances of this case seems to require the special and individual help of the Craft, irrespective of the fund collecting at the Mansion House for general distribution, and I venture to suggest through your valuable journal that a subscription be started, as no doubt more will be required for the widow than that of securing one admission to our Schools, of which notice has been given. If you will undertake to receive contributions, or any member of his lodge, I shall be happy to add my mite.

Trusting this proposal will meet your approval and the brethren generally, I am, yours faithfully and fraternally,

J. E. SHAND.

THE QUEBEC QUESTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I observe that in your article, on this subject, of Sep. 28th, you lay special stress on the fact that the Grand Lodge of Quebec was in the wrong for requesting the Grand Lodge of England and Scotland to hand over to it three old lodges now holding allegiance to them. But you omit the fact that the answer of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was to charter two new lodges in Montreal, and you only passingly allude to the appointments of a P.G.M. at Montreal by that Grand Body. Seeing that it is always more conducive to peace and harmony that there should be only one governing body in a district, I fail to see how so natural a request is "wrong." If these three old lodges wish to remain true to their old allegiance, the Grand Lodges of England and Scotland are quite right to refuse the request of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, but there is in this no "casus belli," the case simply remains "in statu quo." That, I imagine, has been the course pursued by the Grand Lodge of England, and no evil has ensued therefrom, peace and harmony continuing between it and the Grand Lodge of Quebec.

The cause of the rupture between the Grand Lodge of Scotland and Quebec is that the former did not act with the same dignity and courtesy as that of England, but responded to a civil request by a gratuitous insult, viz.:—the invasion of a Masonic power, whose regularity and supremacy within its own district she had recognised in the previous year. I certainly for one, do not anticipate in the future any ill-feeling or hostility between the Grand Lodges of England and Quebec, if the former refuses the requests of the latter; but I think I have shown where the "wrong" is in the matter.

Yours truly and fraternally,

NEMO

THE CHARITY ORGANIZATION SOCIETY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The following is said to be the report of this Society in July, and which has appeared in several of your contemporaries:—

"The thirty-eight district committees of the Charity Organization Society have dealt with 1028 cases, exclusive of 305 vagrants and homeless persons, during the four weeks ending Saturday, July 27th. In class one, 435 were dismissed as not requiring relief or otherwise ineligible. In class two, 272 were recommended to the guardians, local agencies, or private persons. In class three, 321 were assisted by grants, loans, employment, or letters for hospitals, etc."

Thus, including vagrants, &c., the Society has dealt with 1333 cases in the four weeks ending July 27th. The Society divides the applicants into three classes, and this report covering them, we see:—in class one, 435 were dismissed as not requiring relief or otherwise ineligible. How many cases were relieved is not stated. In class two, 272 were recommended to the guardians, local agencies, or private persons. In class three, 321 were assisted by grants, loans, employment, or letters to hospitals.

Thus, it would seem prima facie, that out of 1333 cases 593 were aided, under 50 per cent. I should like to know how much was given in grants and loans, and how many of the 272 were profited by the recommendations? And then comes the further question, what came of the 740 unrelieved? Were they simply relegated to mendicancy and despair, and the vagrant wards?

I confess to have been deeply touched by the following story, at one of our police courts, a few weeks back:—"A poor woman, widow of a solicitor once in affluence, is found by a policeman on a doorstep, with her daughter. They are too poor to pay for a night's lodging. They will not go into the workhouse. The policeman, very kindly, seeing her ill, takes her to the infirmary of the nearest workhouse, where she dies, as the doctor testifies, of sheer starvation." Is this not a disgrace to our civilization? And do we not want a higher and deeper exercise of a good Samaritanism than is necessarily the outcome of Organization Societies? They seem, if I may say so, to touch the surface but never to probe the hidden depths beneath.

I will deal with the last report in your next issue.

I am, yours fraternally,

THE NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD OF WALES.—

Ben. Reuead, surnamed the "City of the Future," was invaded last week by hosts of natives of the Principality, who travelled from every portion of North and South Wales, for the purpose of being present at their annual national Eisteddfod meetings, which, notwithstanding the sneers of the London "Thunderer," have done very much to foster and advance a truly national taste for literature, poetry, music, art, trade, and domestic economy. Prizes were offered in each of these and other departments, and in some instances keen competitions took place. The most valuable of the prizes were for contests in choral singing, brass band performances, piano and harp playing, essay writing, musical compositions, &c., and the principal adjudicators in music were Professor Macfarren, Mr. Brinley Richards, Signor Foli, &c. It is estimated that the total attendance during the four days the Eisteddfod continued was upwards of 50,000, and the profits of the "spec." are to be divided amongst the University College of Wales, the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, and the Birkenhead Charities. The presidents of the different meetings were Lord Aberdare, Mr. Osborne Morgan, Q.C., M.P., D. Mac Ivor, M.P., the Mayor of Liverpool, &c. Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, R.W.P.G.M., N.W. and Salop, was announced as one of the presidents, but continued ill-health and a journey in a foreign country prevented his attendance.

The following stand over till next week:—Letter from "I.P.M. 1327," "A. 33," reports of Ivy Lodge, N. 1441; St. John's Mark Lodge, Bolton.

CONSECRATION OF ST. THOMAS'S CHAPTER, No. 142.

The consecration of this new chapter took place on Wednesday, 25th ult., at the Cannon-street Hotel, by Comp. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, assisted by Comps. Buss, Woodford, and Terry, and in the presence of a large assembly of companions, among whom were Comps. H. C. Levander, M.E.Z.; G. A. Rooke, H.; James W. Lambert, J.; C. F. Hogard, S.E.; F. W. Levander, P.S.; F. J. Macaulay, 1st. A.S.; F. Statham Hobson, and A.S.; H. A. Dubois, Treas.; John Hervey, G.S.E.; A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.P.S.; H. G. Buss, G. Std. Br.; J. Terry, Prov. G.D.C. Herts; W. S. Moses; George Powell, P.Z.; 976; and George Motion. Visitors: Comps. Col. Burdett, G. Supt. Middx.; T. Fenn, P.G.S.B.; P. De Lande Long, P.G.P.S.; Hyde Pullen, P.G.D.C.; John Boyd, P.G.H. Middx.; B. Kimber, Z. 28; W. Smallpeice, Z. 21; Rev. Dr. Brette, H. 1194; Charles Martin, J. 25; Jabez Hogg, P.Z. 1260; and George Kenning, P.Z. 192. Musical companions: Comps. John Read, P.Z. 720; G. T. Carter, 145; J. Large, 771; and T. Distin, Crystal Palace.

Comp. Hervey opened the proceedings by expressing the pleasure he felt at being present on the occasion, assisted by his friends and companions, to consecrate a new chapter. He congratulated the companions on the progress of Royal Arch Masonry, and called attention to some statistics which would serve to show the rapid extension of the Grade. From 1843 to 1857, 4 London Royal Arch Chapters, and 70 provincial and colonial chapters were consecrated; from 1858 to 1867, 15 London, and 108 provincial chapters were consecrated, while, from 1868 to 1877, 41 London chapters, and 192 provincial chapters were consecrated; and, whereas, in 1845, '46, '47, '48, '49, '50, '51, '52, '53, 60 provincial chapters, and 4 London chapters were consecrated. From 1869 to 1877, 182 provincial chapters, and 38 London chapters were consecrated. In former days there was rather a prejudice against multiplying chapters, but he was happy to remark, that for some time past, a steady increase in the applications for warrants for new chapters had set in, and which, he felt bound to say, he thought a good thing. (Applause.)

The ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with, and the following oration was delivered by Comp. Woodford, acting as J.

M.E. Companion and Consecrating Officer: In acceding to the request of the companions of this new chapter, about to be consecrated by you, to assist on this occasion, (conveyed to me by Comp. Hogard), I am glad not only to associate myself with the pleasing duty of establishing another chapter, but above all, of humbly aiding yourself, whose unceasing devotion to the interests and increase of Freemasonry is so great, and so manifest to all. It is, therefore, a peculiar pleasure to myself, (as it is, I know, to all my reverend brethren), when assenting to the courteous invitation of our companions, we are enabled to offer you, Sir, any assistance in your arduous duties and responsible position. I, Sir, as you well know, am, like yourself, a great admirer of this Degree of Masonry, and rejoice to think that now, after a period of comparative neglect, our brethren are at last sensible of its utility, its beauties, and its importance. Some foreign writers, as you are aware, have thrown, or attempted to throw discredit on the Royal Arch Degree, and to deny its rightful position as the apex of our Masonic Pyramid. But we, in England, better instructed, and more practical, less given up to sentimental theories, (which generally lead people into mischief, like some of our more excitable neighbours), have wisely made it the culmination of our system of grades and teaching, and have surrounded it with all those æsthetic influences, which a touching ceremonial and a goodly symbolism, are calculated to bring to bear effectively on the minds of loyal and educated companions. Sir, as it has been well said by a Masonic writer, Mackey, "the Royal Arch is the capstone of the Masonic edifice," and is absolutely necessary to the perfection of the Master's Degree as a science of symbolism, "inasmuch that the latter cannot be understood without the development of the former. They are the first and second volumes of a continuous history, and the absence of either would mutilate the work." In other days, perhaps too much was said in praise of the Royal Arch Degree, in terms which some may consider hyperbolic and exaggerated, but we shall not be doing wrong in treating it to-day, as the completion of our whole system, the pinnacle of the Masonic fabric, the key to the Masonic lore of Craft Masonry, and the embodiment, so to say, of the whole theory and practice of our Order. Webb calls it, like Dermott, "august," "sublime," "most mysterious," and "more important than all that precedes it," but without altogether endorsing this encomiastical language, let us be content, as I said before, with pointing out its beauty, its importance and its utility. Some writers like to compare the "weary sojourner" with the "penniless neophyte," in search of the great temple of truth, and at last establishing the dwelling place of the Most High in his heart and mind. Others would say that in the Royal Arch the "Candidate finds himself at the acmé of the system. The veil is lifted, and he comprehends its ineffable beauties," while another writer, who, though curiously enough an anti-Masonic writer, (Stone), declares that "it is in the Royal Arch Degree where the full fruition of light and knowledge is to be only enjoyed, when the student, like another Prometheus can, as it were, steal sacred fire from the chariot of the Sun, to kindle his genius, and hold converse face to face with immortal truth herself in all her perfections and beauties." I think, as I said before, M.E.Z., without making too much of all this glowing eulogy, it may suffice us to say that we have in the Royal Arch Grade a very beautiful and effective ceremonial, a fitting conclusion of our actual and symbolical journeying, a ceremonial, which, the more we understand it, reveals fresh graces and abounds in moral teaching, and personal application for us all alike. Time would fail me, and the patience of my companions would be exhausted were I to-day to seek to give them a detailed explanation, either of the history, or symbolism, or ceremonial of the Royal Arch Grade. I will content myself, (keeping to the mystical Triad), to touch upon those lessons which are impressed by our graceful ceremonial on all candidates for exaltation. They are—belief in God, Humility, and Perseverance. If at this period, unfortunately in other jurisdictions the very name of God is forbidden to be acknowledged, or, is about to be erased from ritual and circular, and all emblems and symbolism of belief in the Most High rigidly suppressed, we, in England, adhering to the teaching of cosmopolitan Freemasonry, and the customs of our fathers, and resolutely adhering to the "better way," make belief in God the beginning and the ending of our whole Masonic teaching. Just as of old, the humble aspirant avows his "trust in God," so in this grade the acknowledgement of the Most High is the distinguishing character of all our work and symbolism. It is that central Sehechinah of sacred light, and wisdom, and truth, which seems to irradiate our whole Masonic teaching with the unchanging glory of God's own most Holy Name and Word. Lawrence, a modern American writer of some very interesting "Practical Masonic Lectures," thus well expresses (better than I can do) the position of the Royal Arch in this respect. "The great lesson of life in this Degree is a nearer acquaintance with, and a better understanding of the attribute and character of God, the Great I Am, and of our relations to him, we are impressed with the importance of improving and enlarging that acquaintance and knowledge by the diligent study of 'His Holy Word.' We are bidden to remember the duty of prayer to Him, who alone heareth prayer, and is still as of old to all who seek Him, 'a very present help in trouble,' the 'shadow of a great rock in this weary land.' And thus we are inspired with a reverence for that Great, Eternal, and Triune Jehovah, whose goodness abounds to all His creatures, and whose mercy, love, wisdom and power, are strikingly displayed in all His works. It will then be seen what a confirmation of the truly religious character of Masonry is set forth in the Royal Arch Degree. Some foolish people in these latter days, the Ultramontane assailants of Freemasonry, have declared Freemasonry to be an enemy to religion. We solemnly deny the charge. If, in other jurisdictions, the words and actions of perverse and infatuated men seem to be transforming the fair form of Freemasonry into a hideous monster, surrounded by all the hateful emblems of revolution and impiety; if others, dead to the voice of reason and conscience, degrade Masonry into the contemptible character of a political faction, a secret and conspiring association, disobedient to law, and favourable to anarchy and convulsion, we declare that we, in England, utterly disavow such proclivities, that we are still, as ever, believers, firm believers, in the Most High. As Jethro Inwood puts it, 'the central point of the innumerable lines, squares, and circles of Masonry is the love of God. On this one central point, Masonry builds her faith, from it she derives her hope of glory here and hereafter, and by it she squares her conduct in strict justice and universal charity. Despite some mistaken actions of some portion of our Order, we assert that we are loyal citizens, opponents of revolution and civil discord, and deeply sensible both of the enduring sanctities of religion, and the solemn responsibilities and unchanging duties of patriotic, social, domestic, and individual life. Let us hear no more of the charge that Masonry is irreligious. No more religiously reverent society exists on the face of this wide world. If all were as religiously-minded as the teaching of Masonry would urge its members to be, this world would be a great deal better than it is. As an eloquent American brother has said:—'Yes, Brethren! the institution of Freemasonry is worth preserving and perpetuating. It is a house not made with hands. It is a blending of the spiritual of another life with the realistic of this. It is a temple which has its corner-stone and stable foundations in truth and charity; it has its mystic crypts, its sacred fanes, and its towering columns, while above bends its canopy, fretted with the tracery of Deity's hand. In the heart of every true Mason this temple has its shrine, while its entire fabric is hallowed by God's word, and every part made strong and lasting by the cement of brotherly love. Let us keep pure and holy this glorious structure, and we may hope to walk by the beautiful river of life and enjoy for ever the beatitudes of the just.

"We seek that City Grand,

The House of Deity.

By His Divine Omnipotence planned,
Based through all depths by God's right hand,
Reared to all height, whose pillars stand,
Built for Eternity."

Humility is a lesson which, in these self-asserting days, may fairly be recommended to us all alike. We are all, Sir, apt to become in ourselves, through the frailty of mortality, egotistical, selfish, and inconsiderate. In this Royal Arch Degree we are taught to be humble before God, and humble with our brethren. We are to seek to "honour all men" rightly and properly, and never to forget that while it is our duty to adhere to principle, at all hazards, and never to abandon the straight path of duty on any consideration, or for any bribe, we are always to be meek and self-restrained in our estimation of ourselves, our own position, our claims or talent, and anxious to recognize merit and admire goodness in others, in all persons, and under all circumstances. And, lastly, we are reminded of the duty of Perseverance. Like the faithful Sojourners, we are to persevere in our labours until the end, working on faithfully in spite of every obstacle. We are to be faithful in every good word and work. Just as did the patriotic Jews of old, so are we to labour to rebuild the walls of the Temple, the temple of truth in our hearts, with our swords by our sides and our trowels in our hands. We are never to weary, never to give up, never to sit down with lackadaisical lamentations by the way, but to work on until the Grand Master of us all calls us from toil to rest, from time to eternity. Such are some lessons among many others which the beautiful ceremonial of the Royal Arch Degree teaches us all, and may they serve to adorn and illustrate the history of this new chapter in the whole of its future career. As Oliver well puts it, "with such a series of emblems as this Royal Arch Degree sets before us, it will be impossible, (let us hope), to forget the moral which they are intended to convey to sojourners, and companions alike. For in this grade we find a completion of the lesson we were first taught at our admission into Masonry, and which has accompanied our onward course thus far. Reverence to God, love for man, kindness and assistance to our brethren, the cardinal virtues and the social duties, these are our teachings and these should be our practice. Yes, if we humbly seek to practice all these goodly lessons and all these useful duties, in all fidelity and zeal, we shall be truly Royal Arch Masons, and by God's Great Mercy, may hope one day to ascend to an immortal inheritance into those heavenly mansions, veiled from mortal eye, in which the Great Jehovah presides over that Grand and Heavenly Chapter, where peace, order, harmony, and love eternally endure. Let us then, companions of this new chapter, strive to keep close to the Centre of that Sacred Circle which encloses us all in its mystic harmony, so that, faithful sojourners, and loving companions, we may at last, our labours ended, our building consummated, hope to be admitted under the Royal Arch of the Divine Mercy, into the Holy presence of the King of Kings, into those beatific mansions, made without hands, eternal in the Heavens. Let us all say—So mote it be!

At the conclusion of the oration, the remaining portion of the ceremonial was conducted by Comp. Hervey, with his accustomed skill and effect, and the rendering of the consecration service seemed to produce considerable effect on the companions present.

Comp. Hervey proceeded to instal Comp. H. C. Levander, as M.E.Z.; Comp. Brooke, as H.; and Comp. Lambert, as J.

The election of the officers took place, when Comp. C. F. Hogard was elected E.; Comp. Dubois, Treas.; and Comp. F. C. Levander as P. Soj.

The customary complimentary votes having been passed, and several candidates proposed for exaltation and joining companions, to be balloted for at the next meeting,

The companions adjourned to banquet, which gave every satisfaction, and did great credit to the resources of the Cannon-street Hotel, under the able superintendence of Comp. E. H. Rand.

After grace had been sung, the M.E.Z. proposed the usual R.A. toasts and then gave, in felicitous terms, "The Queen," and, subsequently, "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales."

To the toast of "Lord Carnarvon, Lord Skelmersdale, and the Present and Past Grand Officers of the Grand Chapter," Comp. Col. Burdett, Prov. Grand Supt. for Middlesex, replied. He said that he rejoiced on that occasion to return thanks for the Present and Past Grand Officers of the Grand Chapter, and he was greatly pleased to be present on this most pleasant occasion. He heartily felicitated the companions on the day's proceedings, which he had witnessed with much satisfaction, and he had full confidence in the future of the St. Thomas's Chapter. He doubted not that the emulation arising from the Masonic ability and knowledge possessed by those who were called upon to preside over the chapter, would induce the companions of this new chapter to render the chapter one of the most efficient in the Order. He offered his "Hearty Good Wishes." (Hear, hear.)

In reply to the toast of "The Consecrating Officers," Comp. Hervey said, that often as he had addressed the companions of the Order, he had never addressed them with feelings of greater pleasure. On the present occasion he was most happy to be there, first, because he knew he was surrounded by old friends, (hear, hear), and secondly, because he was glad to think, that he had been able, with the assistance of his friends, to consecrate the St. Thomas's Chapter. He was pleased to think that Royal Arch Masonry was extending, and he felt sure of this, that whatever happened elsewhere, there would be no fear of English Masons letting go the principles of Masonry, (hear, hear), those religious principles which, universal in their cosmopolitan character, belonged to the Order. Comp. Woodford, in his oration, had set before them certain truths, which all, he thought, would appreciate, and, for himself, he had never felt greater pleasure than in the ceremonies of the day, in which, assisted by Comps. Buss, and Woodford, and Terry, as the Consecrating Officers, he had sought, and he hoped not in vain, to impress the companions with the ceremonial of the Royal Arch Degree. He was greatly pleased to instal Comp. Levander as First Principal, and he felt sure, from what he knew of the two other Principals and the officers, that the St. Thomas's Chapter would do its work as well as St. Thomas's Lodge. He thanked the companions for the hearty reception accorded to him, as well as for the honour offered to him and his coadjutors in electing them honorary members of the chapter, and he begged to offer in all sincerity, his warmest aspirations, alike for the efficiency of the officers, and the success of St. Thomas's Chapter. (Cheers.)

Comp. Hervey then proposed "The Health of M.E. Comp. Levander, and the Second and Third Principals," in most graceful words, to which Comp. Levander replied in a most effective speech, assuring the companions present that he hoped the St. Thomas's Chapter would become a credit to the Order. He greatly praised the ceremonial of the day, and returned the warm thanks of the new chapter to Comp. Hervey and the other Consecrating Officers.

The Second and Third Principals responded in very appreciative words, confirming the hopes expressed of future services and zealous work.

"The Visitors" was proposed by Bro. Levander in warm and friendly terms.

Comps. De Lande Long, Boyd, Hyde Pullen, Jabez Hogg, and Smallprice all returned thanks, equally expressing their gratification at the day's proceedings, and spoke in warm eulogy of the pleasant evening they had spent.

The other toasts being disposed of, not forgetting the Janitor's, the companions dispersed at an early hour, feeling that the ceremonies of consecration, so efficiently performed, had made a deep, and let us trust, a lasting impression on their minds, and had enabled them in part to realize the many beauties and the importance of the Royal Arch Degree.

The days of meeting of the new chapter are the third Saturdays in October, January, and April.

The address of the Scribe E., Comp. C. F. Hogard, is 4 to 6, Watling-street, City, E.C.

The new furniture of the chapter was greatly admired by all present.

CONSECRATION OF THE MID-SURREY CHAPTER, No. 1044.

The consecration of the above took place at the Masonic Hall, Cumberwell, on Friday, 27th Sept., 1878. Present—Comps. C. W. Gray, M.E.Z. Designate; H. R. Jones, H. Designate; G. Phythian, J. Designate; J. R. Jones, acting S.E.; also Comps. F. Kelly, E. F. Storr, J. Stevens, Godfrey W. J. Hunter, Brydges, P.G.S.B., P. Grand Chapter for Middlesex, and several others.

The Chapter having been opened by Comp. H. E. Frances, P.G.D.C. Grand Chapter for Surrey, Comps. J. M. Kieve, R.Z. 1339; E. Crouch, H. 857; acting as H. and J., the companions were admitted and the warrant having been read by the acting S.E., the chapter was duly consecrated in accordance with ancient rites and ceremonies. Comp. Frances performing the ceremony impressively and ably, was well supported by the acting H. and J., and received valuable assistance from Comp. Stevens, as D.C. The grand old anthems, which are incorporated into this fine ceremony, were admirably rendered by Comp. Lawler, assisted by Comps. Carter, Baxter, and Jekyll. The oration, an original composition from the pen of Comp. Frances, was listened to with deep attention, the entire ceremony giving the greatest pleasure to the assembled companions. After the consecration Comps. Gray, Jones, and Phythian, were duly installed into their several chairs by Comp. Frances. The companions afterwards adjourned to the Holborn Viaduct Hotel, to a banquet which must have been the especial study of Messrs Spiers and Pond to make unique. The Masonic toasts were duly honoured, among them was given "Prosperity to the Wandsworth Lodge," of which the Mid-Surrey Chapter is the outcome. Between each toast the musical abilities of Comp. Lawler and his friends were a source of great satisfaction and delight.

CONSECRATION OF TRINITY COLLEGE LODGE, No. 1765.

The consecration of Trinity College Lodge, No. 1765—formed in connection with the admirable musical institution in Weymouth-st., known as Trinity College—took place on Wednesday, 25th ult. The chief portion of the ceremony was very ably performed by W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, S.G.D.; assisted by W. Bro. Captain N. G. Philips, P.G.D. (as Senior Warden); R.W. Bro. H. D. Sandeman, Past District Grand Master, Bengal (as Junior Warden); V.W. Bro. Rev. C. W. Arnold, Past Grand Chaplain; and R.W. Bro. R. W. H. Giddy, District Grand Master, Gt. Britain (as Director of Ceremonies). The petition and the warrant for the new lodge having been read, and the brethren present having signified their approval of the officers named therein, the P.G.C. delivered a short but eloquent oration on the nature and principles of Freemasonry. This was followed by the anthem, "Behold, how good and joyful a thing it is, brethren, to dwell together in unity," the music being by Bro. H. Bonavia Hunt, B.Mus. Later on the Sanctus, composed by Bro. Professor E. M. Lott, was sung; and then the lodge board was uncovered, the Masters and Wardens pro tem carrying the elements of consecration. The lodge having been dedicated in due and solemn form, the anthem "for the Children of Israel," music by Bro. H. J. Stark, B. Mus., was given, the solo parts being finely rendered by Bro. J. Stedman. The further formalities having been duly discharged, a lodge was constituted. The anthem, "I have surely built thee an house," was sung to the setting of Bro. W. Boyce, D. Mus.; and the Benediction having been pronounced, a Board of Past Masters was formed for the installation of Bro. Edwin Matthew Lott, P.M. 245, P.P.J.W. Jersey, P.G.O. Surrey, as first W.M. The brethren having been readmitted, the W.M. chose his officers as follows: Bro. Rev. T. Robbins, D.D., P.M. 1365, S.W.; Bro. Ernest Passawer, L.L.D., J.W.; Bro. J. A. Homanood, S.D.; Bro. Humphrey J. Stark, B.Mus. (Oxon), J.D.; Bro. H. G. Bonavia Hunt, B.Mus. (Oxon) L.G.; Bro. J. Stedman, Sec. This important business over a number of candidates for initiation and joining members were proposed, the lodge being then closed in solemn form. It should be mentioned that Bro. Stark officiated as Organist during the consecration, music written for the occasion being very impressively sung by Bros. Lott, Stedman, and Hunt.

The banquet took place at the Café Royal, Regent-street, where, under the presidency of the newly-installed

W.M., a very highly entertaining musical evening was spent.

The "Queen and the Craft" having been duly honoured, The W.M. proposed "The M.W.G.M., His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the rest of the Grand Officers," whose merits and excellences were too well-known, he said, to need comment from him.

Bro. Giddy responded. Amongst their Grand Officers there were undoubtedly men thoroughly deserving the high estimation in which they were held by the Craft all over the kingdom. He knew that that sentiment would be thoroughly and heartily endorsed when he mentioned the names of Carnarvon, Skelmersdale, and Leigh. (Cheers.) Equally popular among Masons were their Bros. Hervey, McIntyre, Monckton, and last, but not least, the two Consecrating Officers who had honoured them with their services and presence to day. One and all had rendered great service to Masonry; and they were men of whom the Craft might well be proud. (Hear, hear.) The skilful manner in which their Bro. Clerke had discharged the duties that had fallen to him in that day's important and interesting ceremony entitled him alike to the admiration and gratitude of their newly-founded lodge. Nothing had ever delighted him more than the impressive manner in which the words of their beautiful ritual were delivered. And whilst they expressed their delight at the ability with which Bro. Clerke had acquitted himself, they must not—indeed, could not—forget to acknowledge the excellent service rendered them by their rev. brother, the Past Grand Chaplain, (hear, hear), who, in his admirable address had set before them some grand truths, upon which they would do well to ponder. With the proceedings of the Grand Orient of France still fresh in their minds, it was well that Bro. Arnold should strive to bring them back to the first principles of Freemasonry, which acknowledged the rule of the Supreme Architect of the Universe in all the operations of the Craft. (Hear, hear.) It was of all things desirable that the true landmarks, as it were, of their Order should be kept in view. On behalf of himself and the rest of the Grand Officers, he thanked the brethren very heartily for the cordial reception they had given them.

Bro. Shadwell Clerke then proposed, amid much enthusiasm, "The Health of the First Master of Trinity College Lodge," a toast, he said, which required no elaboration on his part to secure for it a hearty response. (Cheers.) A good many months ago Bro. Lott mentioned to him that a project was in hand for starting a lodge in connection with Trinity College. At the time he (Bro. Clerke) laid before him various difficulties connected with the undertaking—for difficulties of some kind were inseparable from matters of that kind; but on taking counsel together they were found not to be of an insuperable character, and by the determined perseverance of Bro. Lott, and those who worked with him, they had all been overcome, the scheme culminating in the perfect and interesting success that day accomplished. (Cheers.) To him it was an unusual pleasure to be connected with a lodge which united with true Masonic devotion a zealous cultivation of the ennobling art of music. Of what the lodge was likely to become in a musical sense, they had that day received a foretaste in the magnificent performance both in lodge and at banquet. Of one thing, he was quite certain that Trinity College Lodge could not have made a better selection of a first Master. (Cheers.) Bro. Lott was an old and a tried Mason; he had done good service both in the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Orient of France, and the experience thus gained could not fail to be of great use both to the lodge and the Craft generally. Beyond this, his high musical ability pre-eminently marked him out for the position to which he had that day been raised; and altogether it would be difficult to imagine how the lodge could have been ushered in under more gratifying auspices. He congratulated the W.M. heartily upon the proud and honourable office to which he had attained; and on behalf of Grand Lodge he wished him and Trinity College Lodge all happiness and prosperity in this his first year of office. (Cheers.)

The W.M., who was loudly cheered, briefly returned thanks. Trinity Lodge, he observed, was designed for music, not for talk; therefore they would not expect from him anything beyond a simple but heartfelt acknowledgment of the compliment that had just been paid him. The thing he had most at heart was, as they knew, the perfection of church music; the next, he admitted, was the prosperity of Trinity College. (Hear, hear.) The organization of Trinity College Lodge had been a work of pleasure, not a trouble, and for what little time and energy he had expended upon it he was amply repaid by the crowning success of that day. (Hear, hear.) The lodge was chiefly intended for musical men, and the brethren must not complain if they had real music set before them. (Laughter.) Though a Past Master of two lodges, he felt none the less pride at the dignity they had conferred on him to-day, for which, as one of the founders of the lodge, he thanked them from the bottom of his heart. (Cheers.)

"The Health of the Consecrating Officers" was next given by the W.M., who remarked, that he believed, had it not been for Bros. Clerke and Philips, Trinity College Lodge would not have been consecrated for another two years to come. Personally he felt indebted to them more than he could express; but when they remembered that they could not possibly have done without them to-day, brethren would be able to estimate their services for themselves.

Bro. Clerke responded, regretting that the exigencies of the railway had compelled their rev. brother, the Past Grand Chaplain, to leave the banquet before the toast could be proposed. He regretted it, because they must all agree that he had fulfilled his part in the day's ceremony with special grace and ability. (Hear, hear.) As the principal Consecrating Officer, he desired to testify to the able and perfect manner in which his coadjutor had assisted him in his important duties. He was sure that his colleagues felt with himself that it was a great pleasure to be allowed to come amongst the founders of Trinity College Lodge, to take part in their ceremony, and to bear witness to the esteem in which their first Master was held among Masons. (Hear, hear.) He hoped and predicted that Trinity College Lodge would have a glorious future. In coming there to-day, the Consecrating Officer had formed a good many friendships, which he hoped would be lasting ones. On future occasions, he should be only too delighted to be allowed to take part in what they might call their family gatherings; and from the very promising character of their opening meeting he felt sure that he would never come away disappointed. He thanked them for their recognition of his small services, which were at their disposal if at any future time they should again be required. (Cheers.)

The W.M. then gave "The Visitors." As the founders of the lodge numbered only seven, it would have been very difficult for them to have created so successful a meeting as they had to-day out of their own forces. Therefore, they were unfeignedly glad to see the visitors, as indeed they would be on all occasions. He could promise them something to eat, good music, and no restrictions upon tobacco. (Laughter.) With the toast he coupled the name of Bro. Routledge.

Bro. Routledge, in reply, expressed the gratification he had derived from being permitted to take part in the day's proceedings—a gratification that was enhanced by the opportunity now given him of expressing his feelings on the subject. He proposed, therefore, to offer a few remarks upon the advantages of Masonry in general and of musical lodges in particular. Oh, but he observed the Worshipful Master pulling a long face at that intimation—(Laughter.)

The W.M. No, no; I am prepared to listen to you with pleasure.

Bro. Routledge: Well, under the circumstances, perhaps, it was better he should not descend upon the subject (renewed laughter), interesting as it was; and, therefore, he would content himself with saying that whilst good fellowship reigned in all their lodges, in none could the spirit of harmony exist to a greater degree than in Trinity College Lodge, 1765. (Hear, hear.)

The W.M., in proposing "The Officers of the Lodge," remarked that a Master would not be worth his salt if it were not for the cordial and efficient assistance of his officers. They might put a man in the chair, but by himself he would be a perfect stick. Before appointing his officers, he was perfectly certain that the men he had chosen were good ones; and that he was equally sure would be proved as time rolled by. He was convinced that in the brother, who in the ordinary course of things, would succeed him in the chair, they would have a Master of whom they would hereafter say, that he was the best that Trinity College Lodge ever saw. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Robbins, observing the rule of the W.M., that the business of the evening was music, not speech-making, returned thanks in a few words.

The W.M. remarked, that the programme he had laid down for himself was—first, the lodge; then, when they had refreshed after labour, music, with tobacco; spending a pleasant evening, and getting home in good time. Trinity College Lodge was per se a musical lodge; and any of the brethren who felt they could enjoy themselves in that way would always be heartily welcome.

The Tyler's toast concluded the list, but the W.M. afterwards took occasion to acknowledge the valuable services rendered in the formation of the lodge by Bro. B. Hunt, who suitably acknowledged the compliment. We should add that the music at the banquet, sustained principally by the W.M., and Bros. Hunt and Stedman, gave gratification to all present. Handel's "Where'er you Walk," and Nelson's, "Mary of Argyll," sung by Bro. Stedman, elicited much applause.

A WORD TO INVESTORS.—Throughout the whole of these terrible Continental disturbances, it is surprising to note the little fluctuation, considering all circumstances, which have occurred in the government securities of Russia, Austria, Prussia, and Hungary. Russia, however, owes what credit she now enjoys to faith in her punctuality—especially as shown during the Crimean War—rather than to any well-grounded belief in her solvency. With regard to Austria and Hungary the position is very different. No severe strain upon the vast resources of these Empires has, or is likely to occur, and no better investments exist than the loans emitted by these governments, solely for public works, with the sanction and guarantee of the different legislatures. These loans are discharged from the revenues arising from the works they were contracted to construct, as well as from the general revenues of the country also. The repayments take place by "drawings" at fixed dates, half-yearly, or more frequently, and to each drawing a certain amount of "bonuses" are attached, so that important benefits may accrue, at any time, to holders of these debentures. This is an attractive addition to an exceedingly good rate of interest. For the modus operandi of these drawings, as well as other particulars, we must refer intending investors to an important and exceedingly interesting prospectus issued gratuitously by Ernst Wilhelm and Co., 3, Victoria-street, E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Nervous debility often occurs at this season of the year in persons otherwise healthy, but who having overtaxed mind and body in some one of the many ways so common nowadays, suffer in consequence from an irritability of the whole nervous system, characterized more especially by sleeplessness, tremors, palpitation of the heart, and a general feeling of shakiness and sense of unstrung fibre more distressing even than the actual pain. The muscular and vital energies in these cases seem almost as if they were utterly relaxed, and mental despondency sufficient to alarm anxious relatives and friends, often accompanies this condition; no time should be lost, but immediate recourse had to these powerfully tonic and restorative remedies.—(Adv.)

Masonic and General Tidings.

Anthony Trollope will contribute a new and original story to the Christmas Number of the "Masonic Magazine."

Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master, opened the new Masonic Hall on Wednesday, at Shipley, near Bradford, which has been erected as a memorial of the jubilee of the Airedale Lodge, No. 387. The building has cost £10,000, and is said to be one the finest Masonic halls in Yorkshire. After the opening ceremony had been concluded, a luncheon was served at the Bellevue Hotel, Bradford, at which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given.

The large clock for the New Law Courts will shortly be placed in the main tower facing the Strand. It will be larger than any metropolitan clock, except Big Ben, and will have two dials of gun metal, each nine feet in diameter, with gilt figures and hands, and adorned by ornamental framework terminating with gables. The distance from the ground to the roof of the case will be 114 feet, and the dials will therefore be visible at a great distance.

Mr. Brock, of 30, Osnaburgh-street, Regent's Park, has been commissioned to execute a statue of Mr. Robert Raikes, the founder of Sunday-schools. The statue will, it is believed, when completed, be erected on the Thames Embankment.

Bro. Lord Carnarvon, Pro G.M., is to deliver on the evening of Tuesday, the 5th of November, the opening address of the winter session of the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of North and East Yorkshire will, according to the Yorkshire Gazette, be held on Thursday next, the 10th inst., at Beverley, at 2.30 p.m., at the Assembly Rooms. At noon the brethren will be conducted over Beverley Minster, and there will be an organ recital by Bro. J. Camidge. A banquet will take place at five p.m. at the Assembly Rooms.

Professor James C. Watson, of Ann Arbor, announces the discovery by himself, on September 22, of a planet of the eleventh magnitude in R. A. 23 hours 14 mins., dec. 8 deg. 1 min. south, with a slow motion south.

The Consecration of the Abbey Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 225, will be performed by V.W. Bro. P. M. Holden, Past Grand Mark Chaplain, at Abingdon, on Wednesday, October 30th. Several distinguished Mark Masons have signified their intention of being present. Special railway arrangements that have been made will enable London brethren to return to town the same evening, at 8.30. Further particulars will be duly announced.

The Consecration of the Pimlico Lodge, No. 1772, was performed by Bro. John Boyd, P.G.P., &c., on Thursday last, at the Morpeth Arms, Millbank. Bro. Boyd was assisted in the ceremonies by Bro. H. G. Buss, A.G.S. The officers installed were Bros. John Palmer, W.M., Caleb Holden, S.W., and John Hunt, J.W. A full report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of West Lancashire held its annual meeting at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool, on Wednesday last. A full report of the interesting proceedings will appear in due course.

Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Prov. G.M., as President of the Salt Schools, Saltaire, delivered an address there on Thursday week, on the subject of education, his chief point being that instruction should be more largely than at present directed to the development of the moral side of character.

The ceremonies of consecration and installation were rehearsed on Wednesday last, at the Southwark Lodge of Instruction, by Bro. James Terry, before over eighty brethren, forty-three of whom were visitors, who afterwards became members. A fuller report will appear in our next.

By an obvious misprint the word "Boys" was printed for "Girls" at the heading of the report of the meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

Aristarchus, in the Whitehall Review, states, "I believe I am correct in saying that Mr. 'Cleopatra Needle' Wilson has been offered the honour of Knighthood by Her Majesty, and that he has accepted the Queen's gracious acknowledgment of his enterprise."

The Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise will sail for Canada on the 14th November from Liverpool, in the Allan steamer "Sarmatian," which has been specially engaged by the Government for the transport of the Governor of Canada and his suite. The "Sarmatian" is the vessel which conveyed the Black Watch to the Ashantee War.

The Consecration of the St. Leonard Lodge, of Freemasons, No. 1766, will take place on Tuesday, the 22nd inst., at the Town Hall, Shoreditch.

Bro. John Millward, of Longnor, near Buxton, the oldest Mason in England, died on Saturday last. He was initiated in the year 1811.

Rothsay Lodge, No. 1687.—A report of the installation meeting, which took place on Wednesday last will appear in our next.

The Annual Banquet of the Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862, will be held on Wednesday October 30th, at Bro. Hyde's, The Bed Lion, Fleet-street, E.C. Bro. Long, the Preceptor of the Lodge, will preside.

Several communications, owing to the pressure upon our columns, stand over until next week.

ST. CLEMENT DANE'S LODGE (No. 1351).

—The installation meeting of this flourishing lodge was held on Thursday, 3rd inst., at Bro. Carr's, the King's Head, in the Strand, when there was a good attendance of members of the Craft, amongst those who signed their names were Bro. Geo. Wilson, W.M.; H. Porter, W.M. elect; Peters, I.G.; Steward, P.M.; Betts, P.M.; Hamilton, P.M.; Wiseman, W.H. (Hall) (Freemason); Prior, Brannan, Greive, Parker, P.M., Treas.; W. Hilton, P.M., Sec.; Livett, P.M.; Hale, P.M.; Wigg, J.W.; Hodges, Tedbury, A. Betts, Osborne, Pomano, Hepburn, J. Child, J. Child, jun., and others, whilst the following were the visitors to the lodge, Bro. Kennedy, Hurter, Beasley, and Thomas. After the ceremony of raising had been gone through, a Board of I.M.s. was formed, and all under the degree being absent, Bro. H. Porter was duly installed as W.M. for the ensuing year by Bro. Livett. On all the brethren being re-admitted to the lodge the usual ceremonies were gone through, Bro. Livett delivering the charges in a manner which excited the admiration of the brethren. The newly-installed Master having been saluted according to ancient form, appointed as his officers for the ensuing twelve months Bro. Wigg, S.W.; Butler, J.W.; Parker, Treas.; Hilton, Sec.; Peters, I.G.; Barnes, Org.; Perryman, D.C.; Gilbert, Tyler. After lodge the brethren sat down to a most sumptuous banquet, prepared by Bro. Carr, in his best style, which was keenly relished by the brethren. The usual loyal toasts having been disposed, Masonic ones followed, and the toasts of "The Visitors," "The W.M.," "The P.M.s.," "The Officers," and others followed. There was some excellent vocalisation, to which Bro. Jno. Child, jun., was the chief contributor, and his singing was much admired. It appeared from what fell from the Treasurer, that though the lodge has not a great surplus in hand, it is in a satisfactory condition.

IVY LODGE (No. 1441).—The first meeting of the winter session of this excellent lodge was held on Tuesday, the 24th ult., at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road. The lodge was opened at six o'clock, by the W.M., Bro. Louis Cornelissen, who was ably supported by the following officers, viz.: Bro. Noke, P.M.; Ashwell, S.W.; Knight Smith, J.W.; Mattock, P.M., Treasurer; Jolly, Secretary; Foster, S.D.; Skegg, J.D.; Burgess, I.G.; Ashford, D.C.; A. Vernon, W.S.; Goodman, Organist; and Fox, P.M. 73, Tyler; there were also present Bros. Ware, Doherty, Giles, J. Vernon, J. B. Wright, Catling, Reynolds, Taylor, Jacques, Lucus, Cooper, C. R. Smith, and W. Haycock. Visitors, Bros. F. H. Tomkins, Jordan Lodge, 201; and A. Lamarque, S. W. Cosmopolitan Lodge, 917. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. G. L. Luker was duly passed by the W.M. in a very able manner, the other candidate for passing, Bro. Frost Smith, not being in attendance, the W.M. closed the lodge in the Second Degree. Intelligence of the death of Bro. J. E. Arnold, since the last meeting of the lodge, was received by the brethren with deep regret. All business being ended, the lodge was closed in due form, with solemn prayer, until the fourth Tuesday in November. The brethren then adjourned to the banqueting-hall, where an elegant banquet awaited them, and which was admirably served; the inward man having been satisfied, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and duly honoured, "The Visitors," Bros. Lamarque and Tomkins, each replied in very neat and appropriate speeches. The present W.M., Bro. Cornelissen, has belonged to the lodge since its foundation, and was amongst the first officers appointed, and from his regular attendance to all Masonic duties, amiability, and kindness of disposition, has rendered himself not only popular in the lodge, but endeared himself to all. This lodge has been particularly fortunate in its Masters from the first W.M. (and father of the lodge) Bro. Charles Smith, Bros. Mattock, Cautle, and Poupard, who must be ranked amongst the finest Masters that ever ruled a lodge for their great care and Masonic zeal, and the present Master evidently intends to keep up the high character and prestige of the lodge, and from those brethren who are at present in the lower grades of office and gradually working up to the Mastership the Ivy Lodge may be congratulated upon having a good string of Masters in perspective for some years, and it is worth while to mention that the members of this lodge are very strict, and most particular whom they initiate into the Masonic order, for the candidate's character must bear the strictest investigation. There being excellent talent in the lodge the members were entertained with some excellent singing and recitations, the Tyler's toast bringing a most pleasant and enjoyable evening to a close.

ROSE LODGE (No. 1622).—The installation meeting of this young but flourishing lodge took place at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road, on Saturday, the 5th inst., and in addition to a full muster of its members, was attended by a large number of visitors, including many P.M.s. and W.M.s. of the lodges held in the district. The lodge having been duly opened and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, Bro. D. Rose, I.P.M. (whom we are glad to announce is recovering from a very serious illness), presented the W.M. elect, Bro. A. Allworth, P.M. No. 1621, to the W.M., Bro. J. Garnar, who in a most impressive and perfect manner, installed him as W.M. of the lodge. Bro. A. Allworth then appointed and invested the following officers: Bros. W. C. Thue, S.W.; A. W. Stead, J.W.; J. W. Kirby, Treas.; W. W. Pritchett, S.D.; G. P. Coltar, J.D.; W. Hamlyn, I.G.; T. E. Webb, D.C.; J. W. T. Chapman, W.S.; and A. B. Church, Tyler; the appointments of Secretary and Organist being deferred until a future occasion. The lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall, where a splendid banquet was served, and the usual Masonic and patriotic toasts were given and received in a most cordial manner. The W.M., in a very appropriate speech, presented Bro. J. Garnar with a handsome jewel, in recognition of the valuable services rendered to the lodge during his year of office, and after some excellent harmony, to which the visitors materially contributed, a very successful gathering was brought to a close.

ROYAL KENSINGTON LODGE (No. 1627).—This lodge held its first meeting for the season at Freemasons' Hall, on Friday, the 4th inst. Present Bros. Charles E. Soppet, W.M.; W. E. Gordon Leith, S.W.; B. F. Cramer, J.W.; D. M. Dewar, Sec.; Hyde Pullen, Treasurer; J. B. Stevens, as S.D.; G. I. Robinson, J.D.; Jos. Steele, D. of C.; Geo. Mathews, I.G.; R. Potter, Tyler, Percy Leith, Justin, Delacoste, and others. Visitor, Bro. Hoddinott, 181. After the minutes of previous meeting had been read and verified, Bro. Delacoste was passed, and Mr. J. B. Ball initiated. Bro. W. E. Gordon Leith was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Hyde Pullen, Treasurer. A P.M.'s. jewel was voted to Bro. Charles E. Soppet for his services in the chair. The names of four candidates for initiation were proposed, and the lodge adjourned till the installation meeting on the 1st of November. The W.M. afterwards presided at a banquet, provided in Bro. Best's very approved style.

ROTHESAY LODGE (No. 1687).—This lodge met on the 2nd inst., at the Inns of Court Hotel, under the presidency of its first Worshipful Master, Bro. Louis Beck, when the following visitors were present: Bros. W. H. Dean, 417; F. R. W. Hedges, R.M.I.G.; A. M. Thomas, P.M. 1446; Henry Cawte, P.P.G.W. Hants and the Isle of Wight; H. Gloster, 1531; J. Inge, 1563; T. Grammant, 1559; Col. Francis Burdett, Prov. G.M. Middx.; R. F. Giles, 1328; E. Crickmay, 1426; W. White; T. E. Gibb, 34; F. H. Cozens, 907; J. Terry, R.M.B.I., P.J.G.W. Herts; W. Honeyhall, 1681; A. Barfield, P.M. 511; J. Tee, 511; H. R. Heather, 858; W. E. Duncan; Warner Skigh, 1381; W. W. Morgan, jun., 1385; Geo. Wood, 1328; J. Randall, 913; A. F. Rowley, P.M. 917; R. Coad, 1328; John Quincey, 1349; F. Trotman, 1381; J. E. Danks, 1101; R. Prickett, 1101; R. C. Mount, W.M. 1328; S. Rowley, 1602; C. Wentworth, 101; C. Goodyear, 1029; R. Farquarson,

99; A. B. Weston, 1585; and H. Massey (Freemason). After the W.M. had raised Bros. Lloyd and Wright to the Third Degree, he installed Bro. Frank Kirk as Master for the ensuing year, performing the whole of his work most satisfactorily. The following brethren were invested as officers: Bros. J. Hancock, S.W.; J. B. Docker, J.W.; Louis Beck, I.P.M., Treas.; W. C. Parsons, P.M., Sec.; J. Crossland, S.D.; J. K. Outhwaite, J.D.; Forskett, I.G.; Duret, D.C.; B. H. Swallow, P.M., W.S.; Jones, A.D.C.; Livermore, Asst. W.S.; Rev. P.M. Holden, P.M., Chap.; Berrow, Org.; and Potter, Tyler. The Secretary announced that he had received a circular from Bro. Jame Terry, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, soliciting a Steward from this lodge for the next festival of his Institution. Bro. Beck informed the brethren that he had already been Steward for the Girls' School, and that the present W.M. had undertaken that office for the Boys' Institution, but he would be very happy if a brother would come forward for the old people. In the meantime he would propose that ten guineas be voted from the lodge funds to the W.M.'s list. The J.W. seconded the motion, which was then put and carried unanimously. After this the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, and the usual toasts were proposed. Col. Burdett having had to leave soon after the banquet, Bro. Buss, Asst. Grand Secretary, responded for "The Grand Officers." He said it was not for him to speak of the merits of the Grand Officers; that was for the brethren to do; but it must be a source of great gratification to the Pro and Deputy Grand Masters to see in the Masonic press how cordially this toast was received in all Masonic assemblies. This was some reward to them for the endeavours they made to promote the welfare of the Craft. It was quite impossible to find two noblemen who would devote more time or display greater ability in the interests of the Order. This had been evidenced particularly during the present year in Grand Lodge, when matters of considerable importance had been brought before the brethren. He responded, therefore, in their name with a great amount of heartiness. For himself he had to thank the brethren sincerely for the kind reception extended to him, and he was glad to have the opportunity of expressing the pleasure it gave him to see both Bro. Beck retire from the chair of the lodge with so much honour, and also the Rothersey Lodge stand so high in the estimation of the Craft. Bro. Beck having proposed "The Health of the W.M.," Bro. Frank Kirk in responding said, he should enter on his duties with a great deal of confidence, and at the same time with an earnest desire to promote to the utmost of his ability, the true interests of Masonry in connection with the Rothersey Lodge, because he knew he should have the hearty co-operation of the brethren in so doing. It must be conceded that Bro. Beck had left an exceedingly onerous duty to his successor to attempt to imitate him, for it would be impossible to add lustre to that bright morning star. But he had the interests of the Rothersey Lodge at heart, and he should endeavour to hand the gavel to his successor in peace and unanimity. Bro. Thomas, Mount Edgecumbe Lodge, replied for "The Visitors." He did not know whether, when a man became a Mason his nature was changed, or he was made of any different material to what he was before, but there was no meeting he ever attended where he was so kindly and cordially received as in a Masonic lodge. He hoped the day was far distant when visitors would be excluded from lodges. He believed it was by an interchange of visits that Masons carried out the principles of Masonry. He looked forward with pleasure to these meetings, they were like bright spots of sunshine in our journey through life. There was no meeting of creditors, no bad debts, no heavy acceptances, no short balance at the bankers thought of. All matters of business were left outside, and they could do with their cares and anxieties what Shakespeare said with regard to physic,—throw them to the dogs. Bro. Mount, W.M., 1328, also replied, and said he felt peculiar pleasure in being present because he was one of the Deacons who assisted in the Granite Lodge at Bro. Kirk's initiation. The W.M. in proposing "The Health of the I.P.M.," and presenting him with a jewel, reminded the brethren of the great energy which Bro. Beck threw into his work, and how devoted he had been to the success of the Rothersey Lodge. Fifteen months ago the lodge had no existence, but now, thanks to Bro. Beck's energy, it had arrived at a state of great prosperity. Bro. Louis Beck responded, and said that he had taken great pride in forming the Rothersey Lodge, and it had been his ambition to make it a success. He was very proud of the lodge having proved such a success in the first year. Although the W.M. had said much in his favour, he, nevertheless, considered it his duty, after so many friends had assisted him in the formation of the lodge, to make it a success. He was glad he had discharged that duty, but the way in which he had been received completely overwhelmed him. He was sure that all his successors would do equal service to the lodge, and as long as he was a P.M. of it he should second their endeavours. Bro. W. C. Parsons, P.M., and Secretary, responded to the toast of "The Treasurer and Secretary," and after expressing how much he and all the brethren had enjoyed themselves in the lodge ever since it had been established, wished the brethren to remember that they were not only to enjoy themselves but to remember the poor and distressed. Bros. Hedges and Terry replied to the toast of "The Charities." Bro. Terry believed that if lodges were non-dining lodges there would be no support to the Charities, and as an illustration mentioned the case of a lodge which at its consecration was established as a non-dining lodge and for eight years lived—and that was all. Two years ago, however, a new Master was installed, and he invited the brethren to dine with him. On that occasion the lodge had its greatest gathering, and in response to an appeal for a Charity Steward, one brother immediately offered himself, and about £70 was there and then subscribed. He nevertheless thought with Bro. Parsons that the expenses of banquets might be somewhat curtailed. They all knew that The Great City Lodge by having a bread and cheese night subscribed £50 to the old people. He did not wish to suggest bread and cheese to the Rothsay Lodge, because he believed they could have something better and yet do something for the Charities. £38,000 a year was now required to keep the three Masonic Institutions. There were 100,000 Freemasons under the English Constitution, and if each of those brethren would give 5s. a year to each of the Institutions £75,000 would be got immediately, and every case that presented itself to the Institutions could be dealt with. He suggested that this should be done, and that every lodge should give a guinea a year to each Institution. The other toasts were afterwards honoured, and the brethren separated. During dinner the band of the London Scottish Volunteers played a selection of music.

FARRINGTON WITHOUT LODGE (No. 1745).—The regular meeting of this new but flourishing lodge was held at the Viaduct Hotel, Holborn, on Monday, the 30th ult., when there were present amongst others Bros. W. H. Jackson, junr., P.M. of the Royal Arthur, W.M.; C. Jacques, S.W.; T. C. Walls, P.P.G.O. of Middlesex, J.W. (Freemason); H. A. Dubois, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, Hon. I.P.M.; W. Ramsey, P.M., Treasurer; H. J. Lardner, S.D. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M., with the assistance of the officers, raised Bros. M. Samuel and Quilter, and initiated Mr. Eberhardt into Craft mysteries, both ceremonies being carefully performed. The W.M. then appointed and invested Bros. Samuel and Quilter to the respective offices of Junior Deacon, and Director of Ceremonies. There being no other business before the lodge it was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to an elegant banquet. The visitors were Bros. Hart, St. James's Union; and Acland, Lodge of Israel. Upon the removal of the cloth the W.M. briefly but pertinently gave the customary Royal and Craft toasts, and which pledges were duly and loyally honoured. The I.P.M., in proposing "The Health of the W.M." dwelt at length upon his Masonic capabilities. The Farrington Without being a new lodge, it was highly necessary that the ceremonies should be well carried out. He was pleased to see that it was making such good progress, and that its members, from the W.M. downwards, were working so harmoniously together. In conclusion, he wished the W.M. health and every prosperity during the remainder of his tenure. This toast having been warmly received, the W.M. made a modest response, and immediately gave "The Initiate." He said, in the course of his remarks, that he felt highly pleased with the number and status of the gentlemen who had enrolled themselves under the banner of 1745. It augured well for the prosperity of the lodge when each meeting brought a succession of initiates. He had not had a "maiden sitting," and he hoped that that happy state of things would continue. In conclusion, he thanked both the proposer and seconder of their newly made brother for having introduced so eligible a candidate for Masonic privileges, as he felt confident their Bro. Eberhardt would prove to be. The initiate, in reply, briefly thanked Bro. Ramsey, his proposer, and the rest of the members of the lodge, for having given him an opportunity of entering their ancient Craft. He hoped to learn more of its principles, and he promised them that he would endeavour to make himself a worthy Mason. "The Visitors" followed, and this toast was acknowledged in fitting terms by Bro. Harts and Acland. In proposing "The Officers," the W.M. expressed his great thanks to those brethren for the very able assistance they had rendered him. This toast was coupled with the names of Bros. Ramsey, Treasurer, and Jacques, S.W. Those brethren having responded, the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a conclusion. During the evening the brethren were favoured with some very select music, by Bro. Hart and others. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the last Monday in November next.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The ordinary monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Station-street, on Tuesday evening, the 1st inst. There were present:—Bros. J. Black, W.M.; R. W. Robinson, as S.W.; Tom Bird, J.W.; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treas.; T. C. Robinson, Sec., as S.D.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Org.; Dr. Dodgson, P.M.; W. Shilton, P.M., as J.D.; W. Martin, W.M. 1660; H. Peacock, I.G.; Jos. Hewson, Tyler; S. Ferguson, H. P. Wicks, J. Towers, C. H. McCall, J. Evening, R. Harrison, H. Ritton, and T. C. Fearon. There were also three visiting brethren present. After the minutes were read and confirmed, ballots were taken for the admission of Messrs. W. Pailey and Jos. Nicholson, which being successful, they were duly initiated into Masonry by the W.M. The candidates having retired, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. T. C. Fearon, having previously given proof of his proficiency, was passed to the degree of F.C. by Bro. W. Shilton, P.M. This was all the business, and the lodge was closed in form.

CARLISLE.—Bective Lodge (No. 1532).—The ordinary monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday evening, the 2nd inst., in the Masonic Hall, English-street. The following members were present:—Bros. Quartermaster-Sergt. Noakes, 55th Foot, W.M.; Hector Glendinning, S.W.; Geo. Potter, P.M., as J.W.; Jas. Haswell, J.W. as S.D.; J. Ewing, I.G.; J. Higgins, Tyler, and others. The following visitors also attended:—Bros. Newton, Lodge Segontium, 606, Carnarvon; J. Blaylock, S.W. Union Lodge, 310, Carlisle; and W. F. Lammonby, P.M. Skiddaw Lodge, 1002, Cocker-mouth (Freemason). After the minutes were read and confirmed, Bro. Jos. Nicholson gave proof of his proficiency as an E.A., was intrusted, and retired, after which the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Nicholson, was passed to the degree of F.C. After closing down several items on the agenda paper were disposed of, and, on the proclamations being put Mr. Stephen Nicholson, of Bonness-on-Solway, was proposed as a candidate for initiation. "Hearty good wishes" were tendered from the visiting brethren, and the lodge was then finally closed in form.

ROYAL SUSSEX CHAPTER (No. 342).—The regular quarterly convocation of this chapter was held at the Freemasons' Hall, St. George's-square, Portsea, on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., when a goodly gathering attended, including the M.E. Principals A. Riddell, Z.; G. A. Green, H.; and R. J. Turney, J.; Past Principals Rastrick, Redward, Friedberg, and E. S. Main. The ritual was creditably rendered by the several officers, and well sustained the honestly earned reputation of this old chapter. After the business had been transacted, the companions adjourned to the banquet room for supper. The M. E. presided, and in terse but expressive language gave the loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured. "The Health of the Visitors," was drunk with enthusiasm, and responded to by Comp. Starkie, 8; E. Comp. Udsell, P.Z. 480; and M.E. Comp. J. Lillywhite, Z. of 257; who in a few well chosen words expressed the gratification it had afforded him in being present to witness the correct and elaborate rendering of the very beautiful ceremonies of the Royal Arch Degree, especially commending the delivery of the lectures.

BOLTON.—St. John's Lodge (T.I.).—At the last regular meeting of this lodge there were present:—Bros. Thomas Holmes, W.M.; Jas. Horrocks, as S.W.; H. Greenwood, as J.W.; Thos. Morris, P.P.G.S.B., Sec.; G. P. Brockbank, Past G. Warden, Treas.; Byrom, P.G. Steward, M.O.; John Harwood, P.G.D., S.O.; Rob. Whittaker, P.P.G.D. of C., J.O.; Stanley, Deacon; J. Wolstenholme, I.G.; T. Higson, Tyler, Entwisle, P.P.G.M. Lancashire; John Alcock, P.P.S.G.D.; and numerous other brethren. After the confirmation of the minutes of the last lodge, Bros. Barrett, Corret, Smith, Latham, Nicholson and Stead, of St. George's Lodge, Bolton, 1723, and Bottomley, of Earl Ellesmere Lodge, Freemantle, were balloted for and approved, and they being present, with the exception of Bro. Stead, were advanced to the Degree of Mark Master, by Bro. John Harwood, and the concluding portion of the ceremony was performed by Bro. Entwisle. Bro. William Wadson, of St. John's Lodge, was elected a joining member. The day of holding the meetings was altered to the 2nd Thursday, in March, September, and December. Bro. Henry Greenwood, J.W.; was elected W.M. for the ensuing year. On the motion of Bro. Brockbank, seconded by Bro. Entwisle, it was agreed to contribute the sum of £5 to the fund for founding a memorial scholarship in honour of the late Bro. Callender, late Deputy Grand Master of the Province, and who was advanced in this lodge as a Mark Master under the Scottish Constitutions in 1857.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of this Institution was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Colonel Creton presided. There were also present Bros. S. Rawson, J. M. Case, Griffiths Smith, C. A. Cottebrune, Henry Smith (Prov. G. Secretary West Yorkshire), J. A. Farnfield, C. J. Perceval, Louis Stean, J. G. Stephens, W. Hilton, Raynham W. Stewart, R. H. Giraud, Dr. Strong (Honorary Surgeon to the Institution), James Terry (Secretary), and H. Massey (Freemason).

Bro. Terry reported the death of four annuitants, and that the £70, voted by Grand Lodge for supplying the inmates of the Institution at Croydon with coals during the winter season, had been received, also that he had entered into an agreement with Messrs. Hall, of Croydon, to supply coals at 25s. per ton.

Bro. Terry, having read the Warden's report, proceeded to read the Audit Committee's report for the quarter last past, from which it appeared that there is a balance to the credit of the Institution of £1644 8s. 3d., viz.: £188 14s. 2d. to the Male Fund, £1410 14s. 10d. to the Widow's Fund, and £64 19s. 3d. to the Sustentation Fund. On the motion of Bro. J. G. Stevens, seconded by Bro. Griffiths Smith, this report was ordered to be received and entered on the minutes.

The report of the Architect showed that the Gardener's Lodge at the Institution is nearly completed, and that at the end of next week only the colouring of the walls would remain undone, and this he recommended should not be executed till the walls are dry.

Bro. Terry read a letter from a female annuitant of the Institution, living at Plymouth, thanking the Institution for the annuity she had enjoyed for the last four years, but stating that she did not feel herself justified in receiving it any longer, as a relative of hers had died leaving her a competence.

On the motion of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, a letter was ordered to be written to the annuitant congratulating her on her good fortune, and thanking her for relinquishing her annuity.

Some petitions having been accepted, the tender of Mr. Kerr for building the greenhouse at the Institution, lately decided upon, for £120 was accepted.

On the motion of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, seconded by Bro. J. A. Farnfield, the salary of Miss Norris, the matron of the Institution, was increased from £30 to £50 a year, the motion being accompanied by some very complimentary remarks by both mover and seconder on the indefatigable attention shown by Miss Norris to the aged annuitants.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the proceedings.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST LANCASHIRE.

It was acknowledged on all hands that the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Western Division of Lancashire, which was held at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., was in many respects the most successful and imposing, and certainly in every respect the most numerous and influentially attended meeting which has ever been held within this, or probably any other Masonic province in the kingdom. The vitality and growing importance of the Craft could have had no better illustration than in connection with this immense and impressive gathering, at which there were, it was computed by competent judges, upwards of one thousand brethren present, and the hearty enthusiasm which characterised the whole of the day's proceedings conclusively showed two important facts which cannot be disputed—first, that Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Dep. G.M. of England, the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of the division (the second largest in the kingdom), enjoys the hearty and undivided support of the brethren in connection with his genial and popular Masonic government; and, second, that the Masonic pulse of the province is as strong and healthy now as it has ever been.

The gathering on Wednesday week was in every respect of the most satisfactory character, and proved to demonstration that the P.G.M. occupies a position as its head which is hardly second to any in the country, and one which he fills to the universal satisfaction of the brotherhood in West Lancashire. It must also be a matter of the deepest satisfaction to his lordship to know that during the past year only one "little cloud" of unpleasantness, "no bigger than a man's hand," has arisen in one of the seventy-nine over which he holds sway—a fact which speaks eloquently for the brethren amongst whom peace and good-will have so universally prevailed. The expected enormous attendance at the Prov. Grand Lodge necessitated the engagement of the Philharmonic Hall (recognised as one of the finest in the kingdom) for the purposes of the meeting, and no better gathering place could have been found anywhere. The magnificent interior and imposing proportions of the hall were immensely enhanced in effect by the array of "purple and blue" with which the body of the building was filled after the commencement of the business.

Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., Prov. P.G.M.; was present and presided, and he was accompanied and supported by no fewer than nearly 100 past and present Provincial Grand Lodge Officers, several hailing from neighbouring and distant provinces. The chief body in the gathering—representatives from the Craft lodges—were mainly composed of W.Ms., P.Ms. and officers, additional value and splendour being thus added to the meeting. The arrangements for the gathering at the Philharmonic were wisely entrusted to two brethren whose skill and assiduity are well known in all lodges, Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., and Bro. W. S. Vines, P.G.D.C., both of whom did their duties in an eminently satisfactory manner. The lodge furnishings were sent from the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, and several splendidly carved old oak chairs, used on the platform, also sent from the Masonic Hall, were the objects of general admiration. The brethren were summoned to their Masonic duties at noon, and with an amount of punctuality which was commendable, the business was commenced shortly after that hour.

Amongst the Provincial Grand officers who attended to support Bro. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M., the R.W.P.G.M.; were the following:—

Rev. Charles Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain, P.G.M. Suffolk; Rev. H. Bethell Jones, M.A. Past G. Chaplain; Major Geo. Turner, P.G.T. 832; Dr. S. J. McGeorge, P.G.R. 241; H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec. 155, 680, 1570; Peter Macmurdrow, P.J.G.D. 1299; H. W. Johnstone, P.J.G.D.; Wm. Tyrer, P.G. Sup. of Works 86, 1384; Wm. Vines, P.G.D. of C. 220, 1299; B. B. Marson, P.G.S.B. 1356, 1609; Jos. T. Skeaf, P.G. Org. 216; J. E. Jackson, P.G.S. 667; E. C. Cooper, P.G.S. 484; John Wells, P.G.S. 580; E. Simpson, P.G.S. 281; Peter Ball, P.G. Tyler, Wm. H. Ball, P.G.A. Tyler; Geo. Remington, P.P.J.G.W., P.M. 995; Peter Maddox, P.P.G.S. of W. 249; B. W. Rowson, P.P.G.S. of W. 203; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C. 155, 823; W. Leather, P.P.G.A.D.C. 897; J. A. Bowes, P.P.G.J.W. Cumberland and Westmorland, P.M. 148; T. B. Fishwick, P.G.J.W. East Lancashire; Dr. J. Kellet Smith, P.P.G. Reg.; G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C.; R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D.; S. E. Ibbes, P.P.G.S.B.; R. C. Mellor, P.P.G.J.D.; A. Stoddart, P.P.G.S.W., (North Wales and Salop); T. Armstrong, P.P.G. Treas.; Rev. H. G. Vernon, M.A., P.P.G.C., West Lancashire and Cheshire; J. F. Roberts, P.P.G.A.D.C.; J. Wainwright, P.G.S.; C. I. Smith, P.P.G.S.D., Cumberland and Westmorland; J. D. Moore, M.D., Past G.S.B. of England; Major George Turner, P.G. Treas.; C. Banister, Past G.S.B. (England), P.P.G.D.C., (West Lancashire), P.P.G.S.D. (Durham), P.P.G.J.W. (Northumberland); T. Chesworth, P.G.D.C. (Cheshire); J. Cavanah, P.G.A.D.C. (Cheshire); J. Pemberton, P.P.G.S. of W.; W. Goodacre, P.G.P. (Cheshire); J. C. Gillman, P.P.G.S.D.; J. Sillitoe, P.P.G.J.D. (Cheshire); W. C. Deeley, P.P.G.J.W.; Edward Pierpoint, P.P.G.S.D.; S. White, P.P.G.S.B.; T. A. Collinson, P.P.G.D.C.; H.

Jackson, P.P.G.A.D.C.; W. Bowden, P.P.G.S.B.; W. Laidlaw, P.P.G.S. of W.; and others.

There were also present about 1000 other brethren representing the various lodges, in this and neighbouring provinces.

The Craft lodge was opened according to ancient form. Bros. Spence, Lodge 32, being the W.M.; W. J. Chapman, I.P.M., 1609, acting as P.M.; W. W. Elton, 113, as S.W.; Jowett, 281, as J.W.; and R. H. Evans, 292, as J.D.

The Provincial Grand Lodge being announced, entered in processional order, and the P.G. Lodge was opened in due form and with solemn prayer. The P.G. Secretary (Bro. H. S. Alpass) then read the roll of lodges in the province, when it appeared that the whole of the 79 lodges in the division were represented with two exceptions—the Ellesmere Lodge, No. 730, Chorley, and the Arthur John Brogden Lodge, No. 1715, Grange-over-Sands. The P.G. Secretary also read the minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge meeting held at Southport, which were confirmed nem. con.

The P.G. Treasurer's report for 1877-8, which was taken as read, showed that the balances from last year were as follow:—Charity Fund, £308 11s. 6d.; Provincial Grand Lodge Fund, £369 2s. 11d.; Fund of Benevolence, £1637 3s. 9d.—total £3314 18s. 2d. The income during the year with these balances amounted to the following sums:—Charity Fund, £472 5s. 9d.; Provincial Grand Lodge Fund, £719 0s. 2d.; Fund of Benevolence, £1962 19s. 10d.—total £3154 5s. 9d. The disbursements included votes of £200 for the Indian Famine Fund, £100 to the Royal Masonic Educational Benevolent Institution, and £105 to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. It was also stated that up to the last report the sum of £1829 5s. had been paid to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. It also appeared that £1000 was now invested in a bond in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, £773 8s. 1d. in the Savings' Bank, and £757 10s. 5d. in the National Bank of Liverpool. The balances at the close of the present financial year were—Charity Fund, £472 5s. 9d.; Provincial Grand Lodge Fund, £719 0s. 2d.; Fund of Benevolence, £1962 19s. 10d.—total £3154 5s. 9d.

Bro. Dr. J. K. Smith, P.P.G. Registrar, then rose, and said it would still be in the recollection of many brethren present that not many years ago the appointment of P.G. Treasurer was, along with the other officers, vested in the hands of the P.G.M., but through the kindness of the P.G.M., that trust had been placed in the hands of the brethren, and he (Bro. Dr. Smith) felt certain that that trust would ever be exercised as it ought. (Hear, hear.) He had now to propose that Bro. James T. D. Callow, P.M. of Lodge 673, and also of Lodge 1505 (Emulation), should be elected to fill the office of Prov. Grand Treasurer. (Loud applause.) He was well-known to almost all who were present, and certainly well-known to Masons in Liverpool as a very hard-working and assiduous brother for many years. Independent of being the P.M. of two lodges, he had been Secretary of the Relief Committee for nearly five years, and as Treasurer of that fund he (Bro. Dr. Smith) had had many opportunities of seeing the zeal and ability he had shown in the discharge of his duties. Bro. Callow had also been for three years Secretary of the Masonic Hall Committee, and there, as Chairman, he (Bro. Smith) had likewise good opportunities of seeing his excellent qualities. Bro. Callow was a hard-working and zealous Mason, and he was sure the brethren would do themselves an honour in unanimously selecting him to fill the position of P.G. Treasurer. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., seconded the motion, and said that a more hard-working Mason could hardly be found in Liverpool than Bro. Callow—one who not only did his duties well in the lodge and chapter, but one who was not afraid of the drudgery of Masonry, which too many were rather apt to shirk.

The motion was carried unanimously and by acclamation, and the P.G.M. subsequently invested Bro. J. T. Callow as the P.G. Treasurer, in room of Bro. Major G. Turner, who retired after two years' service.

The newly-elected P.G. Treasurer then said—Brethren, permit me to thank you most heartily for the very high honour which you have conferred by electing me to the office of Treasurer of this Provincial Grand Lodge. I shall endeavour to discharge its duties to the entire satisfaction of every brother, and trust that when my successor shall be appointed I may retire with the good wishes of this Provincial Grand Lodge. (Hear, hear.)

The P.G.M. next proceeded to invest the following brethren as his Prov. Grand Officers for the ensuing year:—

W. J. A. Baldwin (Dalton-in-Furness)	Prov. G.S.W.
H. R. Robertson (Liverpool)	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, 216	Prov. G. Chap.
Ralph Robinson, 1502	Prov. G. Reg.
F. W. Serjeant, 203	Prov. G.S.D.
W. Archer, 1086	Prov. G.J.D.
J. E. Jackson, 667	Prov. G.S. of W.
J. Wells, 580	Prov. G.D.C.
J. Wainwright, 613	Prov. G.A.D.C.
E. C. Cooper, 484	Prov. G.S.B.
J. Skeaf, 216 (re-appointed)	Prov. G.O.
E. Simpson, 281	Prov. G. Purs.
Joseph Bell, 1609; Captain W. J. Newman, 786; R. H. Evans, 1393; H. Williams, 1264; J. Hayes, 249; and D. W. Finney, 1250	Prov. G. Stewards.

Bro. P. Ball was re-appointed P.G. Tyler, and Bro. W. H. Ball, P.G. Assistant Tyler.

The Prov. Grand Lodge then considered a number of applications for relief from distressed brethren and relatives of deceased brethren, and the sum of £60 was voted in response to these applications.

The P.G. Secretary (Bro. Alpass) then said—In making the customary annual report of the province it affords me much pleasure to state that Masonry continues to make very satisfactory progress, both as regards the number of lodges and subscribing members. Since our last meeting warrants of constitution have been granted for the Wilbraham Lodge, No. 1713, Walton; the Urnston Lodge, No. 1730, Urnston; the Kirkdale Lodge, No. 1756, Kirkdale; and the Ashton Lodge, No. 1140, has been removed from Cheadle, in the province of Cheshire, to Withington, near Manchester, in this province. It is gratifying to report that the lodges generally are in good working order, and with one exception brotherly love and harmony prevail amongst them. My attention is frequently directed to the circulars of lodges, and the improper manner in which the names of candidates for initiation are inserted in them. For instance, in a circular just received, two candidates are thus proposed: Mr. A. B., Southport; Mr. C. D., Manchester. This surely is not a compliance with the "Book of Constitutions," which, besides requiring the name of every candidate, also requires the addition of profession and place of abode to be sent to all members.

At the last election of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution the widow of a brother, a Past Prov. G. Officer, was elected to the benefit of the fund. There are three children of widows of Freemasons, whose mothers are desirous of obtaining their admission into the Masonic Schools in London; but it will be very difficult to ensure their election, in consequence of the few votes held in the province for these Charities. Brethren should recollect that when a widow is left with a large family dependent upon her, something more than paying for the education of her children should be done for her. She should at least be relieved of the clothing, maintenance, and education of one child, by its being elected into the schools above referred to. According to the last report of the Boys' School which has reached me, only twenty-seven lodges in this province possess votes for the School. And I am reminded by the consideration of this fact that it has become an annual custom for some of the Liverpool lodges to expend so large a portion of their funds on a picnic, that they are unable to support the Charities with the liberality we have a right to expect from them, and which, from the great number of their subscribing members, they ought to be able to evince. All the lodges in the province have sent in their annual returns and paid the fees due from them. During the past year fifteen dispensations have been issued. At the commencement of this year the Skelmersdale Masonic Hall, Westminster-road, Liverpool, was completed. The Prince of Wales and the Walton Lodges met there; and the Kirkdale Lodge, when consecrated, will be held there. The erection of this convenient building is due to the zeal of the brethren at the north end of this town, and will add to the prosperity of the lodges meeting there, and the comfort and convenience of their members; and it has pleased the R.W.P.G.M. to acknowledge the service thus rendered to the Order by appointing Bro. W. Archer, who has been one of the most active in the cause, P.G.J.D. for the ensuing year.

The P.G.M. said it had been his intention to make a good many remarks upon certain points, but as these had been referred to very fully in the P.G. Secretary's report, he would content himself with remarking that at the end of another year he hoped to see a marked improvement in the direction of larger amounts voted for the Masonic Charities and a smaller sum expended in picnics in connection with the various lodges. (Hear, hear.) He thought it was rather a disgrace to that province—the second largest in the kingdom—that it should be so poorly represented on the lists of the London Charities, and he hoped these few words would be taken to heart by the brethren, and that there would be a marked improvement. He trusted that each individual brother would do something on his own behalf as far as he could. He (Lord Skelmersdale) did not want to bribe any one, but he desired to intimate that in future he intended to carry out the plan adopted in several other provinces, viz., that when a brother served the office of two Stewardships in connection with the London Charities he should be entitled to wear a charity jewel. (Hear, hear.)

On the motion of Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., seconded by Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., the sum of 100 guineas was voted from the charity fund to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls in the name of the R.W.P.G.M., and another sum of 100 guineas from the same fund to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution.

On the motion of Bro. Wylie, seconded by Bro. G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., it was also resolved that the sum of £25 be voted from the Prov. Grand Lodge fund to promote the election of the daughter of the late Bro. Mott on the foundation of the Girls' Institution.

Bro. Major Turner, P.P.G. Treas., moved, and Bro. Callow, P.G. Treas., seconded, the following resolution, which was carried:—"That the ninth bye-law of the Provincial Grand Lodge do in future apply only to such moneys as shall be appropriated to the Fund of Benevolence, and that all other moneys belonging to Provincial Grand Lodge be deposited in some other bank, approved by the Provincial Grand Master, to an account entitled 'The Provincial Grand Lodge of West Lancashire.' All payments thereout to be made by cheque signed by the Provincial Grand Treasurer, and countersigned by the Provincial Grand Secretary."

On the motion of Bro. J. R. Jenkins, P.G.C., seconded by Bro. J. T. Callow, P.G. Treas., a vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Major Turner for his services as P.G. Treasurer, a compliment which he briefly acknowledged.

Bro. R. Wylie, Secretary of the Hamer Benevolent Fund, read the fifth annual report of that institution, which stated that one case had been relieved, and the report further appealed for the continued support of the brethren. The officers and Committee of the fund were appointed, and the Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed.

The Annual Court of Governors of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, Lord Skelmersdale presiding, was afterwards held to receive and determine the several recommendations of the General Committee, and for the transaction of the general business of the institution.

Bro. Richard Brown, P.M., 241, Honorary Secretary of the institution, read the minutes of the last court, and 16 children were elected on the foundation of the institution. Grants were made to three for their advancement in life, and a vote was taken for the education of 81 children for the ensuing year, there being now 115 children receiving the benefits of education from the funds of this charity. Bro. G. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., on the motion of Bro. R. Wylie, seconded by Bro. Alpass, P.G. Secretary, was appointed joint Secretary with Bro. Brown in connection with the institution, in consequence of the great increase in the work of the charity. The various officers and Committees were appointed, and the proceedings terminated.

The Craft Lodge was then closed in due form.

A banquet was served shortly after five o'clock at Eberle's Restaurant, Eberle-street, at which there were about 300 brethren present. Lord Skelmersdale presided during the evening, supported by a large and imposing array of his P.G.L. Officers and the leading representatives of the lodges throughout the province.

After proposing "The Queen," Lord Skelmersdale gave "The Health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the other Members of the Royal Family." His lordship said it was the intention and object of the Prince of Wales to carry out the main objects and principles of Freemasonry, and his recent enthusiastic reception in Grand Lodge was an evidence of the appreciation in which he was held by the brethren. (Hear, hear.) Speaking of His Royal Highness's efforts in connection with the Paris Exhibition, his lordship said he might safely say that had it not been for the great zeal and energy shown by the Prince the Exposition would not have had half the success which it had enjoyed. His lordship, in conclusion, spoke of the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold as being both enthusiastic and devoted Masons. The former was really a hard working brother, although he had not been much in their lodges, and H.R.H.'s intention at the present time was one rather towards the higher degree. (Laughter and loud applause.)

The P.G. Chaplain (Bro. the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins) next gave "The Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro G.M., and the other Officers of the Grand Lodge," and in doing so spoke in high terms of the position which the G.L. had taken with respect to the Grand Orient of France.—The toast was acknowledged by Bro. Bannister, P.G.S.B.

Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Secretary, next gave "Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, R.W.D.G.M., and R.W. P.G.M.," a toast which was received with tremendous enthusiasm, the cheers lasting for several moments.

Bro. Alpass spoke of the great amount of time and attention which his lordship devoted to his Masonic duties, and said there were many good and faithful P.G.Ms. throughout the country, but none who took so much interest in his province as his lordship. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

Lord Skelmersdale, in acknowledging the toast, referred to the pleasure which it had given him to be present that day, and although Masonry took up a large amount of his time, he looked upon the day spent in connection with that P.G. Lodge as one of the most pleasant of the year. (Hear, hear.) His lordship again expressed a hope that at the end of the year there would be a great improvement in the province as to the support of the London Charities.

Bro. Dr. Smith, P.P.G.R., gave "The Right Hon. Colonel Frederick Stanley, W.D.P.G.M., and the P.G. Wardens," which was responded to by Bro. Baldwin, P.G.S.W.

Lord Skelmersdale stated that Bro. Colonel Stanley would have been present that day but for the fact that he had received an urgent summons to London to attend certain imperial business with the importance of which everyone was conversant.

The P.G.M., in giving "The Provincial Grand Masters of the Adjoining Provinces," coupled the toast with the name of Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain of England, and Deputy Grand Master of Suffolk, of whom he spoke in the highest terms as a man, Mason, and minister.

Bro. Martyn, in response, thanked the brethren for the hearty reception which they had given him that day as a stranger, and he felt bound to say, as an old Mason, that he had never witnessed so great and enormous a gathering of Masons as he had seen that day. (Applause.) It had been to him a special source of pleasure to see the working of the lodge that day, and he would carry with him into his distant province pleasant recollections of his visit to West Lancashire.

Bro. Spence, W.M. 32, gave "The P.G. Officers, Past and Present," which was responded to by Bro. R. Robinson, P.G. Reg.

The P.G. Sec. proposed the toast of "The Worshipful Masters of the Lodges in the Province," and spoke in high terms of the excellent working which prevailed in every section of this Masonic division.

Bro. Spence, W.M. 32, and Bro. Goodacre, W.M. 1730 (Urnston), responded to the toast, the latter stating that, as the result of the remarks made by Lord Skelmersdale that day, he had pleasure in stating that his lodge had determined to vote the sum of 50 guineas to one of the London Charities. (Loud Applause.)

Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.D.C., gave "The Charities of the Province," which was responded to by Bro. R. Brown, the Honorary Secretary of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution.

Bro. Robertson, P.G.J.W., gave "The Ladies," which was responded to by Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.

A capital musical programme, which, in consequence of its excellence, secured numerous encores, was supplied by Bros. Child, Muir, J. Hill, and T. J. Hughes, Messrs. Kirkburn, Austin, Kitwood, Robinson, Shimmis, and Lewis. Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., most efficiently presided at the piano.

OPENING OF A MASONIC HALL AT SHIPLEY.

The occasion of the Earl of Carnarvon's visit to Saltaire has been taken advantage of by the Freemasons of Shipley to give éclat to the opening proceedings of a new Masonic Hall in that town, an event which was looked forward to with considerable interest, not only by Masons in the district, but by those of the Craft resident elsewhere. The securing of a hall specially adapted for Masonic purposes by the brethren at Shipley was of itself an event sufficiently interesting, and has been rendered increasingly so by the circumstances that they have been able to secure the good offices of so distinguished a Mason as the Pro Grand Master of the Order to conduct the inaugural proceedings. Another circumstance of interest is the fact that the new hall is a memento of the jubilee of the Airedale Lodge 387, for whose accommodation the hall has been erected.

From the published address of the Secretary, P.M. J. Ramsden Riley, which was read upon the fiftieth anniversary of the Lodge in April, 1877, we learn that the Airedale Lodge was established at Baildon, on April 11th, 1827, having succeeded to the paraphernalia of the defunct Duke of York Lodge, which was constituted at Doncaster in 1788.

During the latter part of this earlier lodge's existence it does not appear to have shown much vitality, and in 1807 it was removed to Bingley, where it existed under slightly better conditions, until January 1815. A few brethren of the district appear to have met without interruption at each other's homes, but it was not until 1827, mainly through the exertions of Wainman Holmes and Jonathan Walker, assisted strenuously by two or three members of the Keighley Lodge, that a lodge could be formed, and the present Airedale Lodge constituted. The last 50 years has been so important an epoch of Masonic history that it would have been extraordinary if the Airedale had not had its vicissitudes, and notably in 1838, when its members were returned to Grand Lodge as 7 (although nominally comprised of about 14), the career of the lodge had well nigh ended through the severe commercial depression in the Baildon district. It had even then, however, some staunch supporters, whose example has no doubt materially affected the subsequent growth and importance of the lodge, which since 1866 (commencing as it were another generation), has had an uninterrupted prosperity, while its future prospects are decidedly auspicious. The jubilee of the lodge was held on the 11th April last year, in the old rooms in Westgate, Shipley. The number of members is now about fifty, the following being the acting officers of the lodge, viz., John Morrell, W.M.; John Hey, I.P.M.; John Magson, S.W.; Fred Ives, J.W.; J. Lister, S.D.; H. Mitchell, J.D.; S. Smith, I.G.; E. Heaton, O.G.; the indefatigable Secretary of the lodge being J. R. Riley, P.M.

The last-named brother is a remarkable example of the possibility of fifty men, composing any society, holding the same opinion on any subject, and in his case uniting to recognise the merit of one individual. Bro. Riley is so highly esteemed by his brethren of 387 as to be the honoured recipient in 1876 of a magnificent illuminated address and testimonial, and it was stated by the P.M., who presented them on behalf of the lodge, that there was not a single brother who had not shown the greatest anxiety to subscribe. Bro. Riley has also had the rare honour of being appointed by 10 Worshipful Masters of the Airedale Lodge.

We have been pleased to notice that the R.W. Prov. G.M., in his speech in Prov. G. Lodge has, without knowing it, done an act of justice towards Bro. Riley, which would, no doubt, be most satisfactory to that brother. In 1870, in the course of a controversy in the columns of the Freemason, reflecting upon the Province of West Yorkshire as regards the reception of candidates for Freemasonry, Bro. Riley defended the province, and on the ground that what was good for West Yorkshire must be good for other provinces, sent up to us as an unanswerable argument, the circular respecting bye-law 57, referred to by Sir Henry Edwards, for publication for the benefit of the fraternity. The ruff Bro. Riley received at that time by the withdrawal of the circular from our columns by official request, would have extinguished the future energies of many a less zealous brother.

The new Masonic Hall is situate in Wellcroft Court, Kirkgate, Shipley, and has been erected upon the site of the former New Inn, by Mr. Jonas Bradley, who has built the Star and Garter Hotel adjoining. About £1000 has been expended upon the building, which is every way adapted for the purposes of a lodge of Freemasons. There are two large rooms for lodge purposes, a room of medium size, a large kitchen, with store-rooms, lavatories, &c. The lodge-room, which is upon the upper storey, is 27ft. by 25ft.; the dining-room being of equal dimensions, and situate upon the floor beneath. To the former a small ante-room is attached, and to the latter a convenient store-room. Upon the first floor are situate the practice-room, 25ft. by 12ft., and a kitchen, 18ft. by 13ft. The latter is fitted with the best appliances for cooking, and upon all those occasions when the austerities of the Craft are so far relaxed as to allow its members to dine, this department of the lodge premises will be regarded as an indispensable adjunct. A hoist communicates with the dining-room and also with the lodge-room. All the rooms are lofty, and are well ventilated. The lighting of the lodge-room is effected by means of a central chandelier and six side lights, while in the dining-room a central light on Benham's principle is introduced, supplemented by side lights, a very cheering effect being produced thereby. The furnishing and decoration of the premises are quite in keeping with the structural arrangements of the hall, the appointments of the lodge-room being such as to entitle it to rank as one of the neatest in Yorkshire. The decoration of this room has been effected with considerable taste, all the colours being in distemper. The ground colour of the walls is of fawn, relieved by parallelograms divided by chocolate lines, the panels filled in with Masonic emblems drawn in vermilion and blue. Boldly-designed corbels support the roof, the frieze being effectively relieved by a series of Egyptian figures continued round the room. This design is reproduced from one introduced into the decoration of the former lodge-room. The ceiling of the room is done in colours and gold. The dining-room is of a modest tone, the prevailing colour being drab. Round this room is a surbase moulding in pitch pine, the interval between this and a deep plinth being filled in with geometrical designs in black. The furnishings have been the subject of much attention, and in respect to some portion of the furniture a more than ordinary interest attaches. Three of the pedestals, presented to the lodge by Bro. Chas. Marchbank, have withstood the wear and tear of over ninety years, having been used in the old Duke of York Lodge, and, re-furnished, look equal to quite as long a tenure of existence. Apropos to the opening of the new hall, various presents have been made by members of the lodge, including an eagle-lectern, a large quarto copy of the Holy Scriptures, a beautiful ivory mallet, &c. The various works in connection with the erection of the building were contracted for by the following tradesman, viz.:—Mason, John Rhodes; joiner, George Yates; plumbers, S. Rushworth & Son; plasterers, Walsh and Son; decorators, Sam Oddy and Son; gas fittings, C. Howroyd. The architects for the works were Messrs. Jackson and Longley. The extra decorations, rendered necessary by the ceremony consisted of the laying of crimson cloth along the passages and staircases of the hall, and draping the windows with curtains, &c. These have been supplied by Messrs. Pratt and Sons, of Bradford.

The brethren of the lodge assembled in good force, but owing to the limited accommodation of the building (although sufficiently large enough for the purposes of their own meetings), they were unable to make the occasion so general as it otherwise would have been. Their invitations included the acting members of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire; and they had succeeded in securing the honour of the company of the M.W. Bro. Earl Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master. The lodge having been opened by the W.M. and officers of the Airedale Lodge, the Provincial Grand Lodge entered, and was presided over by the R.W. Bro. Lieut.-Colonel Sir H. Edwards, Bart, Prov. G.M., assisted by the W. Bro. T. W. Tew, D.P.G.M., of West Yorkshire. After the customary salutations of these two dignitaries, a procession was formed, and escorted the M.W. Pro Grand Master (Earl Carnarvon) into the lodge.

Bro. Sir Henry Edwards, Prov. G. Master of West Yorkshire said:—

I beg to return my hearty thanks to this assembly for their very cordial reception of me. We are gathered here to-day to perform an important ceremony. It is to dedicate this new Masonic Hall to the purposes of Freemasonry for ever, and to encourage and exhort the brethren in this town and province to learn and practice more and more the beautiful principles of our ancient fraternity. We are honoured to-day by the presence of the Pro Grand Master of England, the Earl of Carnarvon. This compliment to West Yorkshire is warmly felt and appreciated by the whole Craft in this province, over which I have the honour to preside. I need not dilate on the admirable way in which the Pro Grand Master performs his Masonic responsibilities, or the immense interest he takes in the affairs of the Grand Lodge. He always does everything he undertakes for the benefit of the Craft in the same admirable manner, and, I repeat, we owe him a debt of gratitude for being present amongst us to-day. The address of the Pro Grand Master to H.R.H., the Prince of Wales, on his installation as Grand Master on the 28th April, 1875, which I had the honour to listen to, will be long remembered. We welcome the Pro Grand Master to West Yorkshire, a province of 65 lodges and 3000 loyal Masonic subjects, who read with the deepest interest of his dignified conduct whilst occupying the throne of Freemasonry in Grand Lodge. (Applause.) I can assure the Pro Grand Master that implicit obedience and Masonic law is in my province encouraged and enforced; and it is with pride that I can refer his lordship to his highly esteemed Grand Secretary, Bro. John Hervey (applause), as to the punctuality of this province on the part of the brethren in rendering and making the annual returns and payments. It is a well-known circumstance that wherever you find prosperous lodges they are certain to be most loyal and punctual observers of the regulations and landmarks of the Grand Lodge and the bye-laws of the Craft. (Hear. Hear.)

I may also point out the strictly enforced rule laid down in our Provincial Grand Bye-Laws, especially No. 47, in which it is incumbent on the Master of a lodge wherein a candidate seeks admission to make inquiry, in writing, of the Master of the lodge established in the town or place wherein the candidate resides, touching the character and moral fitness of such candidate or joining member. Our great difficulty is with candidates coming into our province and obtaining admission from lodges over the border, or from some populous place where sufficient enquiry cannot be made. This appears to be a weak point in Masonic watchfulness and carefulness, as to the admission of "just, perfect and upright" men only, "of mature age, sound judgment, and strict morals," and I hope one not unworthy of his lordship's grave consideration. Again thanking the Pro Grand Master for his presence here to-day I call upon you to salute him with the honour due to his exalted rank; a call most heartily responded to.

The Secretary (Bro. Riley, P.M.) then read an address of welcome to Lord Carnarvon, which he afterwards presented to his lordship.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master, in responding said:—Right Worshipful Master, and Brethren,—It does not need so hearty a demonstration of feeling to assure me of meeting in Yorkshire, and, indeed, in every part where Freemasonry prevails, with a truly fraternal and sympathetic welcome. I rejoice greatly to have the opportunity of coming amongst you to-day; I rejoice greatly to hear from your Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of the progress of Freemasonry in West Yorkshire; I rejoice greatly in meeting the Worshipful Master and brethren of the Airedale Lodge a lodge old in Masonic history, well known in the Craft, and holding an honourable position in this province, in their new home; and I cordially tender to each and all my hearty good wishes. May it be the beginning of a fresh and bright chapter in the history of the lodge; and may it also be the beginning of fresh honours for Masonic success. It has been truly said in that address which had just been read to me that Masonry had a world-wide name and character. I will only say that when we reflect on the truthfulness of that assertion it becomes more patent to us that we have a great duty to perform; that by our actions, whether we act in the lodge, or whether we act in the province, or whether it be in our individual capacity outside the lodge, our aim should be to uphold and maintain the fair fame of the name and character of Freemasonry; that we may not only be able to hand it down to future brethren in all its brightness, but that we may be able to send it on with additional lustre. All who study Freemasonry know the high standard of its principles, and I believe all who do make it a study to try to live to those principles, I hope the number may be largely augmented in the future members of this lodge. Every lodge ought to possess a home of its own; nothing, I think, so much as a migratory residence tends to damage the prestige of a lodge. A settled home is a source of continual pleasure; a constant gathering of new history. Such, I hope, will be the new home of the Airedale Lodge; and may it be to its several members a source of additional attraction. I will say no more on this subject, but will most gladly, at the proper time in the ceremony, and if requested so to do by your Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, comply with the wish you have expressed in that address, and formally declare this lodge open.

The ceremony of dedication was proceeded with, according to ancient Masonic custom, by the W.D. Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Tew, in an able manner, the oration being given by Bro. the Rev. William Collings Lukis, M.A., F.S.A., Prov. G. Chaplain, West Yorkshire, De Grey and Ripon Lodge, 837.

The musical part of the ceremony was most impressive, the really fine consecration service of Bro. F. C. Atkinson (Mus. Bac., Cantab., P. Prov. G.O., W. Yorks.), having rarely had such an interpretation as was given to it on this occasion by the musical members of the lodge.

The Pro Grand Master then rose, and said—Brethren, the ceremony of dedication being now completed in all its parts, it only remains for me to perform the task I undertook to-day, namely, to open this building. And it is open accordingly.

After the business of the lodge had been brought to a close, a sumptuous luncheon, under the superintendence of Bro. R. Breuer, of the Belle Vue Hotel, Bradford (and which reflected the highest credit upon that brother, for the ability and exquisite taste displayed in all its details), was served in the banqueting-room, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and honoured.

[We regret that we are unable to find space, in its entirety, for the admirable report, kindly forwarded by a Correspondent. We shall give in our next, if space permits, the address to Earl Carnarvon, the oration of Bro. the Rev. Collins Lukes, M.A., and the proceedings at the banquet.]

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

A special meeting of the Committee took place last week, when several new members were elected, and added to the Provisional Committee, and brethren qualified as Life Members.

All voting papers should be sent to A. Tisley, Esq., 1, Clifford's-inn, at once, and all applications for membership can be sent to the Treasurer, or either of the Secretaries, according to the advertisement in the Freemason.

A meeting also took place on Thursday, the 10th inst., when twelve members and three life members were elected.

The Committee adjourned to Wednesday next, 16th inst., at 11 o'clock, at 1, Clifford's-inn.

Obituary.

We regret to record the death at an early age of our respected brother and companion William Henry Sleeman, P.M. of the Gosport Lodge, No. 903, and P.P.G.S.B. Hants and the Isle of Wight. The deceased companion was Principal Z. of the Gosport Chapter at the time of his death, and was much esteemed by a large circle of Masonic friends.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—With the darkening days and changing temperatures the digestion becomes impaired, the liver disordered, and the mind despondent unless the cause of the irregularity be expelled from the blood by an alternative like these Pills. They go direct to the source of the evil, thrust out all impurities from the circulation, reduce distempered organs to their natural state, and correct all defective and contaminated secretions. Such easy means of instituting health, strength, and cheerfulness should be in possession of all whose stomachs are weak, whose minds are much harassed, or whose brains are overworked. Holloway's is essentially a blood-tempering medicine, whereby its influence, reaching the remotest fibre of the frame, effects a universal good. —[Advt.]

THE ILLUSTRATED LEOPOLD SHAKESPEARE.

Casell, Petter, and Galpin.

We have received the first part of the "Leopold Shakespeare," to be completed in nineteen parts, and which "aims," the preface tells us, "at being one of the complete editions before the public." It is dedicated to our Royal and illustrious Bro. Prince Leopold, and is published with all that effect of artistic illustration and typographic excellence which Messrs. Casell have at their command, and so often and so strikingly evidence. The work promises to be a great success, and a most interesting and valuable addition to the editions of Shakespeare. It has an "introduction" by Mr. Furnival, which will be appreciated by many readers, and Professor Delius Bonn is the authority for the chronological sequence of the plays. We shall watch the progress of this work with deep interest.

ANSWER TO THE PROCLAMATION OF M. M. TAIT, G.M. OF QUEBEC. By Dr. G. BAYNES, Prov. G.M., S.C., Montreal.

This is an able and forcible reply to the incriminations and excommunications of the Grand Lodge of Quebec. We think, to say the truth, there is "a good deal in it." It is clear to us that (1st) the original theory of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, as regards the Scotch and English lodges, which preferred to keep up allegiance to their "constituting authority" is bad in law Masonic, and absolutely untenable; and (2ndly), it is also evident that the position of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, to say the least of it, is somewhat hazy and shaky in itself; and (3rdly), that for the Grand Lodge of Scotland (after all is said and done), a good deal, Masonically speaking, might be put forward by friends and allies. For the position, let us note it well, is simply this,—when we have put on one side the verbiage of pamphlets and cleared away the rubbish which some have spoken and written about it. The Grand Lodge of England has always kept up a Prov. Grand Master of Montreal (though we believe the Prov. Grand Lodge is dormant), and this state of things is expressly acknowledged by the Grand Lodge of Canada. The Grand Lodge of Quebec is a "swarm" from the Grand Lodge of Canada, under peculiar circumstances, and cannot ignore the "Concordats" of the Grand Lodge of Canada. If it does we cannot think the Grand Lodge of Scotland wrong in refusing to acknowledge the Grand Lodge of Quebec, except on its own terms. It is also patent, by this time, as we always felt sure, that the sympathy and support of the Grand Lodges of America are not so sure to be accorded to the Grand Lodge of Quebec, inasmuch as the reality of a lodge warrant, when legal and good, by Masonic law, national and international, is upheld in America, for the best of reasons, as strongly as by us in England, and Scotland. We recommend all who seek to make good the old adage, "audi alteram partem," to study Bro. Baynes's brochure.

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE GRAND LODGE OF PENNSYLVANIA, 1878.

This important report merits study by English brethren. We are glad to observe how carefully and how Masonically all the American Grand Lodge proceedings are carried on, and how truly their principles of thought and action accord with ours. To the able pen of Bro. Clifford McCalla, the Editor of the Keystone, the report is evidently much indebted, as is gracefully admitted. He is one of the most rising and promising young Masons in Pennsylvania.

HEROES OF GREAT BRITAIN IN PEACE AND WAR. Casell, Petter, and Galpin.

To the effective and prolific press of these world-known publishers we are indebted for this new, handsomely got up, and interesting publication, and which we commend especially to the notice of the young. Some one has said that we are "overdone nowadays with heroes and heroines," and that it is too much for common average humanity; and there is, perhaps, some truth in the statement, for there is, no doubt, a "touch of invidiousness" in proclaiming that a person is a "hero" or "heroine;" it is lifting them out of the crowd of fellow mortals. There is a great objection to Papal "beatification" of saintly persons, inasmuch as it can only, after all, be the "hero worship" of "subjectivity," at the very best, and we confess that we have always ourselves felt that it is just possible that our mundane estimate of heroism may be a defective one, since contemporary enthusiasm is liable to err from over sentiment on the one hand, and personal idiosyncrasy on the other. Still we do not see why we should be debarred from considering such subjective estimates of heroism, since everything in this respect is "subjective," after all, here. The region of the "objective, (except in the case of revealed religion), can hardly be reached by the finite mind of mortality. At any rate, in things purely human, infallibility is beyond our reach, and objective truths can hardly be offered to us, except by infallibility which alone belongs to God, and not to man. We hope our readers will excuse the seriousness of these remarks in a review. Without, then, "going in," as our young men say, for hero worship too strongly, (though hero worship is no doubt a "cultus" of humanity), let us like to peruse, as far better than the morbid sensationalism of the hour, the biographies of the good, the brave, the high-minded, the pure, true men and true women.

The Lodge of Progress, No. 1786, will be consecrated at Freemasons' Hall on Thursday next, 17th inst., at 6 o'clock, by the V.W. Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary. All the founders are members of the Emulation Lodge of Improvement, and it is intended to work the new lodge on the Emulation ritual. The principal officers designate are Bros. W. A. Dawson, W.M.; F. R. Spaul, S.W.; A. C. Spaul, J.W.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

(Communiqué.)

Bro. Hubert begins his elaborate report (which takes up 24 closely printed pages) of the proceedings and scenes of the last convent at Paris in these words.

"C'est avec une certaine tristesse que nous prenons la plume pour parler de la session du Grand Orient de France."

"It is with a certain sadness that we take up the pen to tell of the session of the Grand Orient of France, in 1878."

And then he goes on to describe those proceedings and scenes in words which deserve all careful consideration from those who read the Chaine d'Union, for they are weighty words, and truthful words, most properly repudiating that unmasonic party spirit which seems so markedly to have characterised the sitting of this last noisy and turbulent assembly, whether at labour or refreshment. The result has been, as Bro. Hubert puts it, to make Freemasonry something else beside and beyond Freemasonry and to render all most anxious for the future, especially of an assembly which deliberates without dignity, and legislates without consideration. The last Grand Orient has practically asserted Revolution abroad and at home, has put forward a denial of legitimate Masonic and human authority, just as it has repudiated all belief in God.

The revision of the Ritual is to be proceeded with and settled at the next Convent in a nihilistic and destructive sense altogether, and the erasure of the venerable and reverent formula "A la gloire du Grand Architecte de l'Univers," is now only a question of time, and will, sooner or later, be the "order of the day."

To Bro. Hubert, and the minority which acted with him, all English Masons will offer hearty thanks and good wishes, for it required no little moral courage to stand up amid so hostile and unruly an assembly and uphold of true principles of Cosmopolitan Masonry, now out of fashion in France.

We give a few of Bro. Hubert's striking words to "point the moral and adorn the tale":—

"It seems to us, and we are not the only persons who have expressed the same opinion, that the General Assembly of the Grand Orient was not sufficiently held in that order and fraternal procedure which ought to characterise all such Masonic reunions, and without which they greatly risk the chance of falling into chaos, tumult, antagonism, and recrimination. This state of things presented itself too often in the session of 1878. A certain number of brethren belonging to the group of adherents of the erasure, without restriction of the affirmation of belief in God, &c., placed themselves side by side, in order to be better able to act as one man in the course of every debate which might arise in those meetings, and thus to exercise a truly moral and material purpose in this assembly. Certainly our brethren neglected nothing to reach their end. It is much to be regretted, and we say it openly, for then everyone would be better informed and better able to appreciate judiciously the facts, that the "Bulletin Officiel du Grand Orient de France" does not reproduce our meetings in their integrity of discussion, of tumult, of interruptions, of interpellations, of vehemence, &c. There would be in all this great teaching, and perhaps we might avoid all that we were witnesses of, especially in the session of 1878, meetings more full of noise than of labour."

And here, "pour le moment," we are constrained to leave French Freemasonry. We can only hope for it better days, and a "locus penitentium." We feel bound once more to express to Bro. Hubert our earnest and grateful sense of the gallant fight he has made against revolutionary change and irreligious innovation. The hypocrisy of the plea of toleration is absolutely sickening.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.—The annual meeting of this Provincial Grand Lodge was held at Alnwick on Tuesday last, under the presidency of the Earl Percy, R.W.G.M. A full report will appear in our next. After the lodge business a sumptuous banquet was given at Alnwick Castle, where, in responding to the toast of his health, Bro. Lord Percy alluded to what he characterised as a lurking notion that he had copied the example of the Marquis of Ripon, and he said there was not the shadow of a foundation for such a report. He was not a Roman Catholic. (Great cheers.) There was nothing to be ashamed of in anyone becoming a Roman Catholic, or in joining any religious denomination; but there was in being afraid to avow it. He repeated he was not a Roman Catholic, and, please God, he never would be. (Loud cheers: the company rising and waving their handkerchiefs.) In conclusion, his lordship hoped they never would have occasion to regret his occupying the chair.

At the meeting of the Sheffield Town Council on Wednesday it was stated that the Duke of Norfolk had decided to give three recreation grounds to the town for its use for ever. The grounds are situated at Brightside and Attercliffe, two crowded suburbs, and comprise twenty-six acres.

The Installation meeting of the Paxton Lodge will take place at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham on Saturday the 26th inst. Bro. F. H. Goddard is the W.M. designate.

Bro. A. Best, on Thursday last was granted a license by the Middlesex Magistrates, for music and dancing for the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, London.

Bro. Aeneas J. McIntyre, Q.C. Grand Registrar, has been elected master of the Needlemakers' Company, his Wardens being Mr. E. B. Webb and Bro. Sir C. Bright.

HERVEY LODGE, No. 1260.—A report of the proceedings at this lodge, on Wednesday last, is in type, and will appear in our next.

NOTES ON ART, &c.

On Wednesday week last, at midday, the Mayor of Reading (Mr. J. Silver), attended by the Corporation of the borough, opened a loan exhibition of oil and water-colour paintings, engravings, and photographs in Victoria-hall, in that town. Among the contributors are Mr. Walter, M.P., Mr. E. Hermon, M.P., Mr. George Palmer, M.P., and Sir Charles Russell, M.P. The collection is large and valuable, and comprises the works of many old and modern masters, including Vandyck, Titian, Rubens, Gainsborough, Canaletti, Sir John Gilbert, Millais, Birket Foster, Riviere, and Teniers. There are several pictures which attracted considerable notice when exhibited at the Royal Academy this year. The exhibition has been got up for the purpose of encouraging and developing a taste for higher art among the working classes, a similar exhibition held in the town four years ago having been attended with unexpected success. In opening the exhibition, the Mayor spoke of the great value of such undertakings, and expressed a hope that the aims which they had in view would be fully realised. The exhibition will remain open for a fortnight at very low charges.

The Grosvenor Gallery will reopen in December for a winter exhibition of drawings by the Old Masters and water-colour paintings.

The Shakespeare Memorial Buildings at Stratford-upon-Avon are being actively proceeded with, and the library and picture-gallery were begun last week.

One subsidiary result of the late Eastern changes in the extension of the area of the Roman alphabet. The Austro-Hungarian Government has adopted for Bosnia and Herzegovina the Croato-Slav dialect in Roman type, instead of the Cyrillic type used by the Ottoman Government. The occupation of the Dobruja by the Roumans is attended by the use of the Roman character, which will, however, be displaced in Bessarabia by the Russian.—Athenaeum.

A silver medal, the freedom of the company, and, with the consent of the Court of Aldermen, the freedom of the City of London, are this year offered as prizes by the Company of Turners for the best specimen of hand turning in wood, and diamond cutting and polishing. The competition is open to all workmen, whether masters, journeymen, or apprentices of the trade in England. A large medal will be given as second prize, and certificates and rewards in money will be assigned to competitors according to merit. The freedom of the company, a sum of money, and, with the consent of the Court of Aldermen, the freedom of the City are also offered for the best piece of pottery thrown on the wheel in one piece without joints and not afterwards shaved or turned in any way or glazed, and silver medals, a bronze medal, certificates of merit, and money prizes for proficiency in the art in other respects. The Baroness Burdett-Coutts, who is a member of the company, has placed £20 at the disposal of the Court for competition in diamond cutting and polishing, and £15 towards the wood, and £15 towards the pottery money prize, while the Court itself contributes £50.

A better proof of the importance of the newly-developed industry of ostrich-farming could hardly be given than the brief announcement made recently in the South African press that at a public sale of ostriches at Middleburg twenty pairs of breeding ostriches realised an average of nearly £200 per pair. The lowest price given for a single couple was £130, and as much as £285 was paid for one pair of birds. We believe even these prices have been exceeded in the case of well-known breeders. When it is remembered that a few years ago ostriches could be procured in South Africa for the catching, and were purchased for a mere trifle for exhibition purposes in this country, whereas at the present time a live ostrich does not exist in London, the importance of the birds on the ostrich-farms of Cape Colony may readily be realised. Even the Zoological Society of London does not possess a single specimen of the African ostrich; the late birds exhibited in Regent's-park were poisoned by the idiocy of visitors who, amused to see the birds swallow stones and other hard substances, used to throw coppers into the paddock, the consequence being that the birds were killed by the verdigris thus engendered in their crops. Even the eggs of the bird, once commonly collected as curiosities, are now hardly obtainable, being reserved for breeding purposes. And while such keen competition exists for the birds themselves, their produce is also eagerly sought for. At a recent sale of ostrich feathers at Port Elizabeth a parcel of selected "blooms" realised the fancy price of £67 15s. per lb., or about 15s. for each separate feather. Similarly high prices were paid for other qualities, and this notwithstanding a large increase in the supply. The following figures will show the rapid increase in this trade. In 1860 the quantity of ostrich feathers exported from the Cape of Good Hope was 2297 lbs., valued at £19,361. Ten years later the quantity had increased more than twelvefold and the value fivefold. In 1873 the quantity was 31,581 lbs. and the value £159,679, while last year the value had increased to £393,406.—The Colonies.

A competition for the vacant scholarship of the Society of Arts was held at the National Training School for Music on Monday week last. The examiners were Mr. Arthur Sullivan, principal, and Mr. Ernest Pauer, of the Board of Principal Professors. There were 12 candidates, of ages varying from 12 to 19 years. The scholarship was awarded to Mr. Ernest Crook, violinist, aged 14 years. The examiners regret that there were no scholarships to award to Miss Sandwith, Miss Bigwood, and Miss Tasagni (violinists), and Miss Wood (pianiste), who are commended for their talents and acquirements. In accordance with the announcement previously made, preference was given to a violinist in the award.

The Mansion-house Princess Alice Relief Fund now amounts to upwards of £34,600. The Abercrombie Colliery Explosion Fund about £26,500.

THE FREEMASON,

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1878.

FRENCH FREEMASONRY.

We have perused with great care and concern the report of the proceedings of the Grand Orient of France in the last Monde Maçonnique, which in all probability will be found to differ but very little, if anything, from the official publication of the Bulletin du Grand Orient. We have read, we repeat, this report with great care, but with greater pain, because it demonstrates to all alike too clearly, alas, in what direction French Freemasonry is rapidly tending. As our correspondent from Paris, describing the same meeting, well put it, it is hastening on with giant strides to "something," which is not Freemasonry. We have also studied Bro. Hubert's elaborate report in the Chaine d'Union.

We feel, that as far as we are concerned, we have but one path to pursue, one duty to fulfil. We have endeavoured to place before our readers from time to time a correct "coup d'œil" of the progress of affairs in France, the real state of the case, not only what is and must be patent to us as "outsiders," but what is well known to French Freemasons as the real "dessous des cartes," to use a French term, the true meaning, that is of all that is going on. In our humble opinion the French Grand Orient by its successive acts of folly and perversity, has, if we may so say, "unmasoned" itself, and has made a "tabula rasa," or "clean sweep," of all the ancient and sacred teachings of Cosmopolitan Freemasonry. We need hardly refer our readers to the startling revelations of an "eye witness" of the proceedings of the last "Convent," and which appeared in a recent Freemason, neither need we reiterate the account of Bro. Caubet, or the lucid report of Bro. Hubert to convince our readers, we feel sure, how correct our own anticipations have been of what must be the inevitable "corollary" of previous proceedings, and which, therefore, have by no means taken us by surprise. Our readers will kindly bear in mind, that we have always, though deeply deploring the fact, realized, to use a common expression, what the movement party in the French Grand Orient was "driving at," and what it would inevitably achieve; and our words have been verified in every little particular. Indeed, it would be a waste of time to seek to point out to our readers, not only how alarming is the situation, how dangerous the "outlook" for French Freemasonry, but how menacing and antagonistic are such revolutionary proceedings on the part of the French Grand Orient, to the peace, harmony, and welfare of the great family of universal Freemasonry. But having thus, as we think, done our duty, in this respect, openly, calmly, straightforwardly, with deep regret, and certainly with no personal resentments, or prejudiced opinions, we do not feel called upon to continue in these peaceful pages of ours such painful and profitless discussions. Life is too short for such continual protests, for such abject reports of hateful controversies, and revolutionary resolutions. The syllabus of Ultramontanism is now eclipsed by the syllabus of Ultrapositivism, by the fashionable ineptitudes of the "Morale Independante," by the fiery proposals of angry partizans. Freemasonry in all this "embroglio" cuts a sorry figure, and seems to be forgotten. And, therefore, we give up these painful reports of what is not and never can be Masonry, which is something, we know not what, "uncouth, unclean," and we wash our hands of it, and will have none of it. We shall leave henceforth French Freemasonry to the patronage of its own friends, and the sympathy of its own acolytes. We cannot afford as a Masonic journal to occupy our crowded columns, which contain so much to interest and edify English, Scottish, Irish, Canadian, and American Masons, and our brethren "all the world over," with the sayings and doings of a non-Masonic body, with the programme of a "secret political society," with the proceedings of an association ashamed to avow its belief in God, and which is now intent on erasing from all its circulars the venerable and reverent ascription to the Most High! To French Freemasonry until better days, until a happier epoch, which, we trust, may yet providentially arrive for it, the Freemason says to-day, sorrowfully, but seriously, "VALE."

THE TOWN COMMISSIONERS OF MULLINGAR.

Mullingar is a town of no "mine pritions," in county Westmeath, in "Oireland," which boasts among other articles of "bigotry and virtue" of a most intelligent body of "Town Commissioners." It seems, that these sapient worthies have "been passing" a resolution about those "wicked fellows" the "Freemasons," who, it is well known, are many of them "mighty bad characters," and "extramely disrespectful to the Pope and Cardinal Paul," and not only this, but they are "inemies to religion, to morality, to decency, and to respectability!" Accordingly this highly respectable and cultivated Roman Catholic board has had a "slap" at these "haythen and worse nor haythen." Imitating the upright and admirable and benevolent action of a Roman Catholic Board of Guardians which lately refused to allow a little Roman Catholic girl from the workhouse to enter the service of a respectable mistress, but who was base enough to be a Protestant, this Roman Catholic Board of Guardians, objecting "on principle," or probably on no principle at all, to the promotion and propagation of Freemasonry in Mullingar, has asked the promoters of a new Masonic Hall, to "abandon an undertaking, so painfully offensive to the inhabitants" of that well-known town! Our contemporary the "Leeds Daily News," (for which we are indebted to a correspondent, and to whom we tender our thanks,) particularly asks "is it one of the functions of a local board to sit in judgment and to publicly denounce or 'repudiate' the principles of their fellow-burgesses, and to presume that all the evil consequences mentioned must necessarily result from the propagation of principles of which they can form no opinion except from the fact that they are bound to repudiate them by a foreign mandate?" So far it seems that these wise men of Mullingar understand that the "principles of Freemasonry, which every Roman Catholic is bound to repudiate, must tend to promote an estrangement in the amity and good-will which have hitherto existed between Roman Catholics and Protestants, and must of necessity cause a disruption of social and business intercourse which we shall be pained to see introduced." Anything more absurd we have never read, anything more absolutely ridiculous we have never yet encountered in all that garbage of Ultramontane folly and violence, which it is our painful lot to have constantly to peruse. We quite agree with our contemporary when he says, The responsibility for any unpleasant feeling which may arise in Mullingar is more likely to be laid at the door of those who have taken this extraordinary step for promoting a kindly social feeling and an amicable business relationship amidst the various classes of Mullingar. That the Freemasons of Mullingar will be affected by such a beautiful "outcome" of rampant intolerance, we do not believe, but quite endorse the words of our contemporary, when he says, "The Freemasons of Mullingar will probably feel that their civil governors have misunderstood their functions, and those outside the mystic circle may regard this gratuitous condemnation of private opinion as a meddlesome interference with the liberty of the subject." "Any how," as they say in Ireland, this proof of an unchanged "animus" of hostility and bigotry which marks "Rome" everywhere, will not be without its use to those who seem disposed to carry on a flirtation with that remarkable but dangerous body, which, unchanged in its destructive theories, and consistent in its hearty intolerance, too often only smiles but to betray, only blusters but to intimidate. "Semper eadem," it never loses sight of its unvarying hatred of freedom of conscience and true civil and religious liberty, and like as in the last allocation of even the new Pope, would deny to all outside the pale of its own communion not only the privileges of education, but even the rights of belief.

THE MASONIC FESTIVAL AT THE TROCADERO.

It appears that the alleged invitation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has gone not from the "Grand Orient," if it has gone at all, as we felt was an impossibility, but from the "Grand Conseil" of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. There is this difference between the two bodies, that whereas one has erased "belief in God" from its constitutions, and is now intent on doing so from its ceremonial, the other continues to make a quasi-Theistic profession of faith. We all of us know the extreme kindness and geniality of our Royal Grand Master, his willingness to oblige, his desire to give satisfaction to all who approach him or appeal to him. But, as honest journalists, we also express, what we fancy will be the unanimous feeling of the Masonic body in England, namely, that at this juncture, and under special circumstances, great caution is necessary. Knowing something of what is going on abroad, we only fear that the gracious condescension of our Royal chief may lead to a mistaken and mischievous use of his high name. We cannot profess to think the proposal a safe one, or a judicious one. Up to the present we have no official information that His Royal Highness has received, much less accepted the invitation.

A SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

We rejoice to hear, and to see announced in our advertising columns, that the publisher of the "Masonic Magazine" has secured the able pen of Anthony Trollope for the Christmas Number of the "Masonic Magazine." Several distinguished brethren will contribute to that number, and we have every reason to believe that it will be alike a credit to the Craft and pleasant to its readers. We congratulate our brethren on the advance of Masonic serial literature.

THE FESTIVAL OF THE A. AND A. S. RITE IN PARIS. (Communiqué.)

Referring to the notice which we publish elsewhere, in respect of the approaching Masonic fete to be given by the Supreme Council of France on the 24th inst., we have been asked to give the following information on authority. The fete will be held in the great hall of the Trocadero, as announced in our notice; all discussions on political and religious subjects will be avoided. An opening address will be delivered by Bro. Cremieux, Sovereign Grand Commander, who will deliver a second address on the aims and objects of Freemasonry; this will be followed by an address to be delivered by Bro. Emanuel Arago; and the speeches concluded, recitations by artistes of the Comédie Française, and musical selections by well-known performers from the opera will conclude the proceedings. In the evening a banquet, at which Freemasons only will be admitted, will be held at the Continental Hotel. We lay these details before our readers in order that all English Masons may understand the real position of affairs. Tickets of admission may be obtained, as mentioned in the notice, at the Secretariat of the Supreme Council, No. 46, Rue de la Victoire; and it should be understood that the fete is given by the Supreme Council, and not by the Grand Orient of France.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even approving of, the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.]

THE MASONIC FETE IN PARIS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have been startled at reading a copy of "Reuter's Telegram" to the effect that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is to be entertained by the Masonic lodges of Paris at a grand fete on the 23rd inst. The intelligence is in the Daily News, and also in others. What does this mean? Is it desirable for our M.W.G.M. to identify himself in any way with the "Grand Orient of France" under present circumstances? Knowing how well you are informed as to Masonic matters in France, I shall be glad of your kindly relieving the minds of many brethren on this most important subject, for is it not likely that our M.W.G.M. may be entertained in part by Atheists?

Yours fraternally,

The Tower, 5th October, 1878.

[We know nothing "officially" on the subject to which our correspondent alludes, nor was it likely that we should do so. We have seen the reports in the papers, which, as far as the Grand Orient was concerned, we felt sure were "canards." The Times of the 7th gives the following explanation of the matter:—"The Masonic festival to be held at the Trocadero on the 24th, and to which the Prince of Wales is invited, is due to the initiative of the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite. This section of French Masons is not affected by the recent decision of the English lodge, for it adheres to the declaration of theism expunged by the Grand Orient." See also Communiqué.—Ed. F.M.]

OBSERVATION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I perceive by a Reuter's telegram in the Standard newspaper of Friday, the 3rd inst., that "a grand fete will be given to the Prince of Wales, on the 23rd inst., at the Grand Hotel, by the French Masonic lodges."

The recent abrogation of Art. 1. respecting the acknowledgement of a Supreme Being renders this a somewhat singular proceeding, when viewed in connection with the very proper condemnation passed on it by our Grand Lodge in England. Or it is a sign that the Grand Orient of France has returned to its senses and restored the landmark to its position? If not, it would seem strange that our admirable and illustrious Grand Master could permit himself to be present "in partibus."

But, perhaps, there is some other explanation.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, sincerely and fraternally yours,

KENNETH R.H. MACKENZIE, IXth,

S.G. Sec. Swedenborgian Rite.

[See Editorial Note above.]

A. AND A. SCOTTISH RITE IN NEW ZEALAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have to thank Bro. Colonel Clerke for his courtesy in, so promptly, calling my attention to the decree by the Supreme Council of Egypt, dated 7th September last.

I was some months ago made aware of the negotiations which have resulted in that decree, over which the Supreme Councils of England and Scotland are so jubilant. But the result of these negotiations is fatal to their recent contention, that the Supreme Council of Egypt was an "irregular" body, and that it derived its origin from a "spurious" source. These allegations, which I long ago shewed to be unfounded, are now admitted to have been so! and, in consideration of the Supreme Council of Egypt annulling its decrees constituting the Supreme Council of New Zealand, it has been recognised by the Supreme Councils, which have seceded from the confederation of Lausanne viz:—Charlestown, Scotland, Ireland and Greece.

But the agreement made by these Councils with that of Egypt, does not affect the constitution of the Supreme Council of New Zealand. It is now admitted that its charter was granted by a body possessing the power to confer it, and it is thus shown to be a valid instrument. It does not contain a reservation authorising its grantors to revoke or annul it; and, without such a reservation, it can be neither revoked nor annulled. It is a completed, signed, sealed and delivered deed, and it has been acted on, for a period of upwards of two years, with the entire approval of Egypt. Upon its faith considerable sums of money have been spent, Masons have been admitted to the various degrees of the A. and A. Scottish Rite, and consistories and chapters have been formed in various parts of the Colony. If onerous deeds could be revoked and annulled in such circumstances, there would be an end to the finality of all Masonic and business transactions.

But, further, what is said to be annulled? It is simply the decrees authorising the formation of a Supreme Council in New Zealand, and cert in patents, diplomas and certificates issued to that country in absence. The Supreme Council of Egypt does not, and it could not annul what has followed in these decrees, the creation of the Supreme Council of New Zealand—its consistories and Chapters; nor does it annul the diplomas and degrees conferred by that body. All these are beyond question, and are left unchallenged and intact. Every person knows that nothing can result from the annulling of an exhausted and implemented decree. Its existence is only valuable as evidence of the authority for the performed acts it authorised; and if destroyed or lost, that evidence can be otherwise supplied.

But why should there not be a Supreme Council for New Zealand? The declared object of the constitutions of the order is, to create Supreme Councils in every state and province of the Globe, their mission being declared to be that "of everywhere occupying themselves with works of peace and compassion." At the date of the constitutions the existence of Australasia was unknown, and it is therefore unprovided for in the constitutions; but it stands now in very much the same position towards European powers as North America then stood, and as regards it the constitutions provide, not as in the case of Europe, that "each great nation of Europe, Kingdom, or Empire," and, in the case of Asia, Africa, &c., that "each Empire, Sovereign State, or Kingdom," shall have each a Council, but that "in States and Provinces, as well on the continent, as in the Islands whereof North America consists, there will be two Councils." It is not provided that these states and provinces shall, as in the case of Europe, and the other continents, be "sovereign" states, nor that the Councils to be so formed shall be created only by the Supreme Councils of the European Kingdoms, to which the States and Provinces in North America then respectively belonged. Their formation is left to any Supreme Council, or Sovereign Grand Inspector General, irrespective of nationality, acting in terms of the constitutions. The Supreme Council of Egypt, at the date of its charter to New Zealand, was in the unqualified enjoyment of every privilege of a Supreme Council, and one of these was the creation of Supreme Councils in places where none already existed. This privilege as regards New Zealand it lawfully exercised.

But it is contended that New Zealand, being a dependency of the British Crown, is part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and that it thus falls within no other provision of the constitutions, which provides that in each great nation of Europe, "and in each Kingdom or Empire there shall be a single Council." Although a dependency of Britain New Zealand does not fall within this law, for it is neither a part of the United Kingdom nor of any nation, Kingdom or Empire of Europe. It is a country of another continent, inhabited by an unconquered native race, and by colonists of varied nationalities, possessing a separate constitution and Government. In fact the very expression "dependency" shows it to be separate territory, and, as already shown, it is one of those "States and Provinces" which the constitutions declare to be "places that may properly possess a Supreme Council."

But even assuming New Zealand to be a part of the United Kingdom, which it is not, it is of as distinct a nationality as either England, Scotland or Ireland, which each has its separate Council. Surely New Zealand is equally entitled to one,—particularly as we find these very three Councils, with flagrant inconsistency, recognising Canada as a separate jurisdiction from themselves. The difference between the Canadian Colony and that of New Zealand it is impossible to discover.

The great zeal these Councils evince in carrying out the provisions of the constitutions, in the cases of others, is lost sight of in their own! Not only so, but they have actually extorted a statement from the Supreme Council of Egypt that all the three have a legal existence in the United Kingdom, and a joint jurisdiction over New Zealand! And they have done this, although the constitutions,—the observance of which they preach, and under which they profess to exist, expressly provide that only a single Supreme Council shall exist "in each great nation of Europe." The contention they make against the Supreme Council of New Zealand on the strength of that regulation is manifestly insincere, and comes, indeed, with bad grace from any one of the three. By such a declaration the regulation just referred to is not only ignored, but the existence of no less than three Councils is sought to be legalised in New Zealand.

As regards the annulling of the diploma in favour of brethren resident in Scotland, I am in a position to state that these diplomas were purely honorary, and were conferred on these brethren unsolicited. In order to facilitate the recognition of Egypt they readily consented to their recal. But no such request was made to New Zealand, and no such consent has been given.

The narrative given of the transaction in question by your Scotch correspondent is wanting in the impartiality of the historian, and in many respect it is inaccurate. Not only were the two brethren he names admitted 33rd by Egypt, but, as he knows, the late Grand Secretary of Scotland, a 31st of Scotland, David Murray Lyon, one of the most erudite and distinguished of Masonic historians, presently Grand Secretary of Scotland, and the present Provincial Grand Master of Aberdeen (City) Province also received the Degree. The profound Masonic knowledge of these brethren is well-known, and your readers may rely on the fact that they thoroughly satisfied themselves of the genuineness of the Egyptian Degrees before accepting them, in face of the ridicule attempted to be thrown on them, and the warnings against them referred to by your correspondent.

It is interesting to observe another statement of your Scotch correspondent, that brother John Whyte-Melville, the head of the Supreme Council of Scotland, wrote to the Grand Orient of France, requesting it not to confer a charter on New Zealand. Now the Supreme Council of Scotland professes to deny that that Grand Orient is a genuine Supreme Council; and, yet, by the very request made to it by Bro. Whyte-Melville is implied his Council's direct recognition of it! But Bro. Whyte-Melville's letter had not the effect which your correspondent ascribes to it, for the Grand Orient of France did agree to give the charter, being satisfied of the necessity of a Supreme Council in New Zealand, and that it was unoccupied territory.

Your correspondent further refers to the fact that the Grand Lodge of Scotland warned its members against the Supreme Council of New Zealand. This is true. But this was done because Bro. Whyte-Melville incorrectly represented to Grand Lodge that the Egyptian charter created in New Zealand, not only a Supreme Council, with which Grand Lodge had no concern, but also an independent Grand Lodge, which he indicated would cause the secession of its lodges. Your correspondent, however, does not add that Bro. Whyte-Melville also requested the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, and Ireland not to recognise the Grand Orient of Egypt, for he said "should such recognition be accorded them it is difficult to see how the validity of this (the New Zealand) chapter can be impugned."

The Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, and Ireland made, however, inquiry for themselves into the facts, and each unanimously found the Grand Orient of Egypt to be not the spurious body Bro. Whyte-Melville represented it was, but on the contrary a genuine Masonic power, and they publicly recognised it as such.

By this test, to which Bro. Whyte-Melville himself appealed, the charter of New Zealand is seen to have been valid from the first; and, to use his own words, "the whole affair," which he stated to be "ludicrous," ends in his own recognition of its genuineness!

Yours fraternally,

A 33°.

WARNING TO THE CHARITABLE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Knowing that your publication is as free to expose imposition, and thus protect the charitable, as it is to urge the true spirit of benevolence for any genuine case of distress, I wish, through your columns, to warn brethren against giving charity indiscriminately to individuals going about pretending to be Masons in distress.

A man was about this neighbourhood last week, calling upon various brethren, and calling himself Bro. Szapira, of Morning Lodge, No. 351, Frankfort-on-Maine. He introduces himself by offering to sell books (a history of various religions), but soon lets you know he is begging for relief. We find that he has collected in this neighbourhood alone at least two pounds, in various amounts, although most of the older members refused to give, informing him that our lodge (1327) had a special fund (collected at the festive board of our meetings) from which such cases had to be relieved by one brother, who held the fund. I referred him to that brother myself, but it appears he did not succeed in that quarter, as our good Treasurer had heard too much of him previously.

When here I find he visited various public houses, where he spent money, and boasted about getting money from Freemasons of the neighbourhood.

No doubt when he left here he proceeded a few miles further to again carry on this very remunerative way of preying upon the kind feelings of those he calls brother Masons. I hope, however, if he is, that this may put a stop to it, and that he may meet with an introduction to the nearest police station, if he is, as some suspect, obtaining money, not only by begging (which of itself is unlawful) but by fraudulent pretences.

Many brethren here have experienced the worthlessness of those (and they have been several) who go about obtaining money under the cloak of Masonry. In one case, a few years ago, nearly a pound was collected at our lodge of instruction and handed to one who professed to be anxious for employment. I offered him constant employment myself, and he was to start work at eight o'clock the next morning, but instead of doing so, he went away, and was seen going towards London as early as six o'clock a.m., and somewhat later was again begging of Masons at Tottenham.

Our lodge has adopted a system now of having a fund from which to relieve cases that appear genuine, but individually [we are not supposed to give to such cases. I think in every lodge something of the sort should exist, because when these people find they can only succeed in obtaining about three or four shillings in a neighbourhood, and not that without severe testing, they will not be so likely to make a trade of it.

Yours fraternally,

I.P.M. 1327.

THE PROVINCIAL CHARITY JEWEL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Can you explain what this is? Is it to be a special and new provincial jewel, and under what authority is it to be conferred and worn? I do not understand it.

There is a "charity jewel" worn by resolution of Grand Lodge, but have the Provincial Grand Masters the right to institute new charity jewels? Or, is this only an adaptation and extension of the existing charity jewel?

Yours fraternally,

ENQUIRER.

PRECEDENCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Where in the toast list, and whether by itself, or jointly with any other, and, if so, with what toast, should the health of the Past Prov. G.M. appear, and is he R.W., V.W., or W.?

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

THE MARK DEGREE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In looking over a recent number (August 31st) of the Freemason, my attention was drawn to the address of Bro. Lamont, Chaplain 151, in which he remarks, "It is high time the Grand Craft Lodge (sic) and the Supreme Grand Chapter of England acknowledged the Mark Degree."

Now as Mark meetings rarely pass without some allusion of this kind, it may be respectful to that association that silence upon the subject should not always be retained, and, I trust, therefore, it may not be considered intrusive to ask our brother for some further information on the subject.

I think it will be conceded that when a right is claimed, or privilege asked for, it is incumbent on those so asking or claiming to give some evidence of 1st, what they are? 2nd, whence they come? Also, in this case, thirdly, by what right they lay claim to affiliation with the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England? It is further necessary that such statements be made in plain English, and in accordance with common sense and truth.

I presume that on this subject being brought before the Grand Lodge the first thing would be to produce the authentic history of Mark Masonry. Secondly, its ritual, and, indeed, all its professes to know, except its actual passwords. This would be imperative, otherwise the Grand Lodge would be asked to accept that of which it officially knew nothing.

This would seem also to be the opinion of our brother, since in proof of his claims, he refers us to its history as he understands it, and the beauty of its ritual.

As to this latter, it is satisfactory to have his assurance that it is beautiful, and it may be so, yet, as tastes differ, others might question the grammar, the good sense, and the truth it might contain. Thus what is vouched for as beautiful by some might seem to others devoid of those qualities in which true beauty alone consists.

In giving the history of Mark Masonry our brother has quoted two very unequal authorities, viz.: the Holy Scriptures and our late Bro. Oliver.

Now, the writings of Bro. Oliver are excellent commentaries on the rules of Freemasonry, as practised amongst us, but his authority as historian is simply nil, his pretended history absurd.

The other authority to which our friend refers is that of the Holy Scriptures, giving from them an abstract of the dealings of Solomon, King of Israel, with Hiram, King of Tyre, a narrative beautiful in itself and true.

Now, may I ask our brother what this narrative has to do with Mark Masonry, since the Holy text says not one word of Mark Masonry from end to end.

That Freemasonry is an ancient institution many truth speaking men agree, and surrounded as the subject is with great difficulty, would gladly welcome any historical contribution towards the solution of the question, and when a man of learning approaches the subject, it is with a sense of disappointment that one finds no real assistance towards the resolution desired.

It may further be fairly presumed that should he ever succeed in bringing his favourite topic under discussion at the Grand Lodge, he might there find an audience less inclined, than the one he lately addressed, to give him credit for historical accuracy. Some, indeed, might think that had so zealous a man as was King Solomon found any considerable number of his workmen forming themselves into secret associations, he might have distinguished their leader by a mark of approbation, similar to that mark by which he distinguished his brother Adonijah.

Indeed, it would be most easy logically to prove that such an association as a lodge of Mark Masons would have been an impossibility in that nation and race, and utterly unknown in its history.

Leaving this proof of what our friend informs us King Solomon did "to detect impostors," he leaves his argument like an ostrich egg in the desert to take care of itself, and carries us (it almost takes away our breath) right over to the middle ages, merely remarking that "leaving the scriptural age we find ample proof, if any were needed, that Mark Masonry was coeval with operative Craft Masonry," evidently considering the proof of its descent from King Solomon as altogether beneath his notice.

Glibly as all this is written, each line to the thinking man gives rise to important questions. Who can tell us anything authentic of Craft Masonry at the epoch to which he alludes? Who really knows whether it ever was operative? Surely a learned historian, who asserts that a certain institution was coeval with another institution, must know and have it in his power to tell us something credible of both those institutions at the time he mentions, and of which he professes to have "ample proof."

This information, however, he keeps to himself, remarking only that certain "marks" made by the builders of certain mediæval structures (a long way indeed from the time of King Solomon) are proofs—of what? Our author does not tell.

The copies of these marks which I have seen and I have sought, are merely nondescript figures, resembling no present Masonic signs, except so far as any other set of angular scratches might be said to do, and it is not too much to assert that they convey no meaning whatever, either in history, philology, or philosophy.

The question whether our present Masonry had an operative origin is settled by our friend on his mere assertion, whilst of the connection of the Masons of King Solomon with those of the middle ages he gives us no proof whatever. Why the poor Welshman in showing the identity between Monmouth and Macedon proved himself a better logician. Neither does our friend offer any proof of the connection of either with the Mark Masons, an association which arose "in this kingdom of ours" a comparatively few years since, and which we know all about.

I have no doubt our worthy brother is highly esteemed by all who know him, and his influence is only for good in his own sacred sphere. I would, however, ask him seriously (as he thus steps aside from his own sacred character and assumes that of the historian), the question, whether he thinks such a paper would be accepted by any learned society whatever, engaged in the research of truth?

Such historical evidence might have indeed been accepted from a Preceptor of a lodge of instruction, but from a man claiming to belong to a learned calling it is inexplicable.

Of course our brother and the audience he addressed are at liberty to believe whatever they please of King Solomon and his Masons, or Melrose Abbey, or "Time immemorial," whatever that may mean. We cannot however but remark that unless he is prepared with a deliverance very different from the one here presented, he had better defer his appeal to the Grand Lodge for the audience he desires, unto some future period of Masonic history, when every rule of evidence shall have been forgotten, and critical acumen be extinct.

Yours Fraternally, W. VINER B. BEDOLFE, M.D., P.M., P.Z., 1329.

THE CHARITY ORGANIZATION SOCIETY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The following is the last report of this Society, to which I alluded in my last letter:—

"The thirty-eight District Committees of the Charity Organization Society have dealt with 1013 cases, exclusive of 372 vagrants and homeless persons, during the four weeks ending September 28th. In Class 1, 410 were dismissed as "not requiring relief" or otherwise ineligible. In Class 2, 260 were recommended to the guardians, local agencies, or private persons. In Class 3, 343 were assisted by grants, loans, employment, and letters for hospitals, &c."

By this it will be seen that four-fourteenths were dismissed as not requiring relief, and 260 were recommended, 343 were assisted. It would be a curious fact to ascertain what became of the 410, and how many of the 260 got relief.

Yours fraternally,

OMICRON.

MASONIC STUDENT.

Dear Bro. Kenning,

I see that Bro. Rob Morris, in the New York Dispatch, says that "Masonic Student" is Bro. Hughan. Now, with all respect and regard to my excellent friend, Bro. Hughan, he is not "Masonic Student," as he will no doubt confirm. But I am, as the Irishman said, "myself."

And more than this, I am a reality, and, as some of my friends say, "non levis umbra," if only a shadow, as far as the Freemason and Masonic Magazine, &c., are concerned.

Though extremely obliged to Bro. Morris for what he says of me, I am sorry he finds the style of the Freemason "heavy." Men's ideas differ. Perhaps his style some may think light. I venture to be of opinion that the Freemason hits the "juste milieu," as the French put it—the "happy mean," as we should say, and is neither too grave nor too gay, too heavy nor too light.

Claiming, therefore, for my personal identity and existence an actuality, which is not that of my esteemed confrere, W. James Hughan (whose own merits are enough for any one), I beg to subscribe myself once again,

Yours fraternally and obliged,

MASONIC STUDENT.

QUERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Answers to the following questions in the next issue of the Freemason will be esteemed a favour:

1st. If a Worshipful Master at his installation appoints a brother, who is not a Past Master, to the office of Secretary, is it compulsory that such a brother should serve the office of Secretary three years before being entitled to the office of J.W.?

2nd. If a Worshipful Master elect has promised the Secretary of his lodge (who is not a P.M., and has only served the office of Secretary one year) that at the installation he will appoint him Junior Warden, but a Past Master of the lodge comes forward, and informs the W.M. elect that such a Secretary must serve three years as Secretary before he ought to be appointed J.W.?

Would the W.M. elect be acting against the rules or customs of the Craft in still persisting to appoint the Secretary to the office of J. Warden, and thus carry out his promise?

3rd. Is there any such law or custom as stated by the Past Master, viz.: that a Secretary (not a P.M.) must serve his office three years before being entitled to the Junior Warden's Collar?

Yours fraternally,

VERITY.

1. Certainly not.
2. The W.M. can so appoint him if he thinks well.
3. There is no law of the Craft on the subject. In some lodges service as Secretary is made preparatory to the Warden's chair, but it is merely a custom, and not law.—Ed. F.M.

CONSECRATION OF THE PIMLICO LODGE, No. 1772.

This new lodge was consecrated on Thursday, the 3rd inst., at the Morpeth Arms, Ponsonby-street, Millbank. The brethren who were present on the occasion were Bros. J. Boyd, P.M., P.G.P. (Consecrating Officer); H. G. Buss, Asst. G. Sec., D.C.; J. A. Rucker, P.M., P.G.D.; P. de Lande Long, P.M., P.G.D.; C. B. Payne, G. Tyler; Col. Peters, J.G.W. Middx.; W. Coombes, P.G.S.B. Middx.; Herbert Dicketts, 23, P.G.S.; J. Jermyn Boyd, 23; G. R. Shervill, P.M. 25; Charles Atkins, P.M. 27; D. H. Jacobs, P.M. 27; A. Head, 27; W. Carter, P.M. 141; Cobham, P.M. 141; T. Bull, P.M. 145; T. Baxter, 145; G. Everitt, P.M. 177; G. Stacey, P.M. 209; G. T. Carter, P.M. 382; E. C. Woodward, 382; Alfred Dawson, 421; E. J. Scott, P.M. 749; C. C. Ewbank, J.W. 803; J. C. Cox, P.M. 1257; Howard Reynolds, 1319; G. F. Swan, P.M. 1321; Alfred Wade, P.M. 1449; J. R. Nicholls, S.W. 1567; W. Elliot, 1567; J. Kiallmark, P.M. 1608; C. Brewer, S.W. 1608; T. H. Hartley, 1608; J. Lawler, 92; Montem Smith, 179; John Palmer, P.G.S.W. Berks and Bucks, P.M.; Caleb Holden, P.G. Treas. Berks and Bucks, P.M.; John Hunt, P.M.; John Elliott, P.M.; John Mason, P.S. G.D. Middx., P.M.; F. A. Pemberton, H. Haycock, and H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason).

The ceremony of consecration was performed by Bro. John Boyd, Past Grand Pursuivant. The S.W. chair was occupied by Bro. John A. Rucker, P.G.D.; and that of J.W. by Bro. Peter de Lande Long, P.G.D. Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, acted as D.C.; Bro. John Elliott, as Secretary, and Bro. C. B. Payne, Grand Tyler, as Inner Guard.

After the lodge had been opened, and the customary formalities observed, Bro. John Boyd delivered the address and oration. In doing so he said:

Brethren,—In the introduction to the lecture on the First Tracing Board it states, that the usages and customs observed among Masons have ever corresponded with those of the ancient Egyptians, to which they bear a near affinity. Again, in another of our lectures, we find that the history of the Royal Arch staves, is that of the rod of Moses, of which they are symbolical—the earliest mention of the rod is traditional. It is said that when our first parents by transgression fell from their original state of innocence, and were expelled from paradise into a world of woe, Adam, bending under the oppression of guilt, to support his weary limbs, took in his hands a branch of that fatal tree which had occasioned his disgrace. The Almighty foreseeing the miserable consequences of sin and the necessity for divine interference to counteract its effects, not only permitted Adam to take with him the rod, but afterwards miraculously preserved it for His own purposes. I need not upon the present occasion follow out this historical legend, further than to say that eventually we find the rod symbolised by the W.M.'s gavel as an emblem of his authority, power, and dignity; whether we accept these and other legends or not, there can be no doubt, that Masonry has, in some shape or form, existed from the most remote periods of antiquity, and, possibly, been handed down by a chosen few, essentially unchanged by time, unimpaired and uncontrolled by prejudice. This, however, I am neither going to uphold nor dispute, I think it is quite sufficient for us to know that we belong to an institution that has virtue for its aim, the glory of God for its object, and the eternal welfare of man considered in every part, point, and letter of its ineffable mysteries. That Masonry is a peculiar institution no one can dispute or deny, as a body we interfere with no one, directly we pass the portals and Inner Guard, and enter the lodge, we leave all political and religious discussions to the outer world, and properly so; but the outer world is not always satisfied, the outer world will have a grievance against us, we have, or we have not, secrets; if we have, and they are any good, why do we not impart them? If we have no secrets, why do we pretend we have? Again, we are a selfish body, we collect vast sums of money, which we expend upon ourselves in feasting, and frivolous paraphernalia, now, here, I think we must have a great Masonic secret, for if we expend our subscriptions in banquets, appendages, and ornaments, how do we manage to have any for other purposes? If we lay our money out upon eating and drinking, how do we contrive to educate, clothe, feed, and house over four hundred boys and girls; provide for some three hundred adults; and give substantial or temporary relief annually to some hundreds of others? This, I think, you will agree with me must be a marvellous secret, and one that no other society can boast of. However, leaving the outer world to its surmises, speculations, assertions, and absurdities, we pursue the even tenor of our way, and feel pleased to take Masonry with all its faults, as we find it, and in proof that we are fully satisfied with it, we have assembled here to-day for the purpose of inaugurating a new lodge, which figuratively means the adding a fresh link to that mysterious Masonic chain which binds together every country, sect, and opinion. I, therefore, need scarcely say that the consecration of a new lodge forms a most important as well as interesting epoch in the history of the Craft, for although these events are not so rare as formerly, yet they possess the same amount of significance, probably I might with truth say more, for their frequency shows the wonderful and marvellous strides made by Masonry in each succeeding year. Only three decades since the number of lodges under the English Constitution was about 700. The Polish National Lodge, of which I have the honour to be the second Treasurer, was numbered 778 at its consecration; at the revision or filling up of the numbers it became 534. Now, looking to your own number, 1772 (and that not the last on the list), we may fairly assume that over 1200 lodges have been consecrated within thirty years. Now what does this show. Well, at any rate, it shows that the popularity and prosperity of Freemasonry is something very extraordinary, but extraordinary, as it undoubtedly is, it is nevertheless a fact, and a fact beyond dispute at the present time. No doubt, the popularity of the Chief, Head and Ruler of the Craft must be taken into consideration, and will readily be so by those who were fortunate enough to be present at the installation of His Royal Highness, and witnessed that spontaneous ovation, which, probably, has no parallel in, or even out of Masonry. We must also bear in mind that although prosperity is not without its beneficial effects, it sometimes has to contend with evil influence, and, as in all numerous bodies or societies of men, some unworthy will ever be found, it can be no wonder then that notwithstanding the excellent principles and valuable precepts laid down and inculcated by our institution, we have such amongst us, men who, instead of being ornaments, or useful members of the body, are a disgrace and scandal. Now, as we are fully aware of the difficulty of ridding ourselves of obnoxious brethren, it behoves us all to be particularly careful in the selection of candidates, and the admission of joining members, and this cannot be impressed too strongly upon the minds of those brethren forming new lodges. From what I have heard and know of the promoters and founders of the Pimlico Lodge, I am led to believe they are fully alive to the advisability of commencing with good, sound, and thoroughly stringent bye-laws. With these, and the assistance of an intelligent Master in the chair (and let me observe that none but intelligent brethren should ever be placed in that responsible station), harmony and good feeling will and must prevail in the lodge, and which is sure to be attended with success, and a brother will not fail to derive information from every ceremony he may witness, and instruction from every ordinance with which he may become acquainted; a Mason should never forget to act as a gentleman, and that all the peculiarities he witnesses, or in which he is required to participate while in the lodge, are designed to illustrate and inculcate some great moral truth; therefore, everything approaching levity or rudeness in speech or action, is to be deprecated and avoided; quiet deportment and strict attention to the business before the lodge will add much to the beauty, harmony, and pleasure of the proceedings, and this cannot be too firmly fixed on the minds of the brethren, for we ought always to remember that the lodge is opened with prayer, and it is closed with prayer. Or, as it has been beautifully said by an eminent brother, that "The Master opens his lodge at sunrise with solemn prayer; the Junior Warden calls the brethren from labour when the Sun attains its meridian height, and the Senior Warden closes the lodge with prayer at sunset, when our labours are ended. The great luminary of creation rises in the east to open the day with his mild and genial influence, and all nature rejoices in the appearance of his beams. He gains his meridian, in the south, invigorating all things with the perfection of his ripening qualities. With declining strength he sets in the west to close the day, leaving mankind at rest from their labours. This is a type of the three most prominent stages in the life of man—infancy, manhood, and age. The first, characterised by the blush of innocence, is pure as the tints which gild the eastern portals of the day. The heart rejoices in the unsuspecting integrity of its own unblemished virtues, nor fears deceit, because it knows no guile. Manhood succeeds, the ripening intellect arrives at the meridian of its powers. At the approach of old age man's strength decays, his sun is setting in the west, enfeebled by sickness or bodily infirmities, he lingers on, till death finally approaches and closes his eventful day; and happy is he, if the setting splendours of a virtuous life, gild his departing moments with the gentle tints of hope, and close his short career in peace, harmony, and brotherly love.

The ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with and completed, and at its termination Bro. Boyd installed Bro. John Palmer, Past Provincial Grand Senior Warden; Berks and Bucks, P.M. 27, &c., as Master of the lodge. The brethren invested as officers for the year were Bros. Caleb Holden, S.W.; John Hunt, J.W.; John Elliott, P.M., Secretary; John Mason, S.D.; John Pemberton, J.D.; John Haycock, I.G.; and Bro. Rawks, Tyler. Afterwards Bros. Boyd and Bass were elected honorary members of the lodge, and a vote of thanks for assisting at the ceremony of consecration was passed to Bros. Rucker and Long. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a choice banquet, after which the list of toasts were gone through seriatim.

Bro. J. A. Rucker, P.G.D.; responding for "The Grand Officers," said he could not but feel himself flattered by being called upon to return thanks for this toast, and all the brethren then standing up with him were equally obliged for the heartfelt warmth with which the toast had been honoured. He could not sit down without saying how pleased he was to have assisted at the consecration of the lodge, a lodge which he was sure had been launched under the happiest auspices, seeing that not only had the ceremony of consecration been well performed, but the new W.M. had shown the fullest acquaintance with his duties. There had been no hitch on the ways, but she had gone aloft gracefully. Under the care of the W.M., and those who might be called upon to follow him, he was sure the lodge would be a credit to the Craft.

The W.M. in proposing "The Health of Bro. Boyd, the Consecrating Officer," said that he (the W.M.) and Bro. Shervill, a short time back, went down to Hampton Court, where Bro. Boyd was consecrating a chapter, and they thought afterwards that if they ever had a lodge to be consecrated they would ask Bro. Boyd to perform the ceremony. The Pimlico Lodge was afterwards started, and they immediately applied to Bro. Boyd. The Grand Master appointed him as the Consecrating Officer, with Bro. Bass to assist. The result they had seen that day, and the lodge had been formally dedicated to Freemasonry.

Bro. Boyd, in reply, said there were several brethren present who had the opportunity of attending the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge; there were others present who did not attend that communication; but, at all events, as good Masons, they read the Freemason; and in either case it would follow that they had seen that since the Quarterly Communication of June the Grand Master had granted warrants for twenty-five new lodges. Such lodges, therefore, must be consecrated, and it had been his good fortune to be selected to consecrate the Pimlico Lodge, which was among them. Now, he had been in the habit of consecrating chapters, but not lodges, and, therefore, it became to him an arduous duty, and he felt that there was a large amount of responsibility on the shoulders of those who asked him. However, he said he would consecrate the lodge with pleasure, if the brethren would put up with his inability. He was glad to consecrate the lodge because in it there were many old friends of his own. Consecrating a lodge was not like installing Principals, an office he had often been called upon to perform. He had delivered a short address that evening in which he had endeavoured to lay before the brethren some of the principles of Freemasonry, and without exhausting all that was to be said about the ancient ritual, and the different ceremonies, he had given but a slight sketch; he hoped, however, it might be useful to the brethren. He begged to return thanks for the toast of his health and the attention paid during the ceremony.

The W.M. returned thanks for the toast proposed in his honour, and assured the brethren that while he was Master of the lodge he would undertake to fulfil his duties to the best of his ability. He also drew the brethren's attention to the fact that the Ebury Lodge of Instruction met at the house they were then in, every Thursday evening, and he should be present himself, unless business prevented him, on those occasions, when he hoped to meet all the officers of the Pimlico Lodge who were able to attend.

The W.M. then proposed "The Charities."

Bro. Peter de Lande Long, P.G.D., replied. Speaking as a member of the House Committee of the Girls' School, he thought every member of the Craft who had taken the trouble to enquire into the work of that Institution, and the vast amount of good it did, would be satisfied, as they should be, that the trust reposed in them to administer the funds was performed in such a way as to do the greatest amount of good to the brethren and their belongings who required help. Any member of the Craft was perfectly welcome at any time to go and visit the Institution and see and judge for himself from the happy faces at the School, and the order that reigned there, how great a work was being unostentatiously performed for the daughters of distressed brethren. The other Institutions were equally well managed, especially that of the old people. Nothing could be better than the administration and management of that Institution. He was as sorry as Bro. Boyd could be that the whole of the House Committee of the Girls' School was not present to acknowledge this toast. It was certainly not the fault of the House Committee, for if they had been asked they would have attended. (Laughter.) All the House Committees did excellent work for the Charities. Earnestly wishing to promote the cause they had at heart, they worked quietly, and with a desire to gain that confidence which would bring in the largest subscriptions. They had succeeded so far that no other society or fraternity could boast of such Institutions as the Freemasons. They had been so nobly built up and supported that they must be a benefit in the future. There were in this new lodge many members who had already done excellent service in the cause of the Charities, and he trusted the different W.M.s. of the lodge would make themselves Life Governors and Vice-Presidents, following the good example of the present W.M., who was now Vice-President of all the Charities. He would advise them at their banquets to pass round the charity column, because they would find the small amounts so collected tell up in the course of time.

Col. Peters, P. Prov. G. J. W. Middx., replied to the toast of "The Visitors." Speaking of the banquet, he had never sat down to a better repast, and as to the W.M., no man could have done his work better. Bro. John Mason, replying for "The Junior Officers," said he seemed to have to join every lodge now in Pimlico. However, he was very pleased to be a member of the Pimlico Lodge, especially because Bro. Palmer was the first W.M. He was proud to think that from what the W.M. had seen of him in the Ebury Lodge, he had thought fit to select him to fill an office in the Pimlico. He hoped he should never be absent from any of its meetings, and whenever he was present he would perform his duty. The brethren shortly afterwards separated.

During the consecration, the musical portion was performed by Bros. G. T. Carter, T. Lawler, T. Baxter, and Montem Smith, who also sang some excellent songs after the banquet.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Saturday last in the Board Room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. G. Chancellor presided. The other brethren who attended were Bros. G. J. Row, D. M. Dewar, S. Rawson, A. H. Tattershall, H. Browse, James Winter, Rev. R. S. Morris (Head Master), Hyde Pullen, R. B. Webster, S. Rosenthal, G. J. Palmer, W. F. C. Moutrie, Alexander Wallace, W. Paas, Frederick Binckes (Secretary), and H. Massey (Freemason).

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the minutes of the House Committee were read for information. In these latter the Committee recorded an expression of their sorrow for the loss by death of one of their number, the late Bro. Jesse Turner.

A son of Bro. Charles Jardine (who was drowned in the Princess Alice, leaving surviving him a widow and nine children) was brought before the Committee, and passed the usual examination.

Bro. Binckes said, that a similar motion would be made at the Quarterly Court on Monday the 14th, to that of which notice had been given for the Quarterly Court of the Girls' School, for the suspension of the laws of the institution, and the admission of a girl and a boy of Bro. Jardine's without election. He observed that he took some little credit to himself for this suggestion, for when he found that other institutions outside Masonry were taking a similar course he proposed that the Masonic Institutions should exhibit the same elasticity with respect to their rules. He was happy to say that unlike most of the cases that came before the two Masonic Schools, the late Bro. Jardine was a Life Governor of all the Masonic Institutions, and had served the Stewardship of each.

Two other petitions were accepted, and the candidates directed to be placed on the list for election in April.

It was agreed that sixty-five candidates should be on the list of candidates for election on Monday next.

Bro. Binckes said, as three or four boys had quitted the institution, he had recommended the Quarterly Court to elect thirteen boys instead of eleven. The institution could very well accommodate the extra boys.

Bro. Webster gave notice of motion for the Quarterly Court for the suspension of the laws of the institution regulating the admission of candidates for the purpose of admitting the son, above named, of Bro. Charles Jardine, without election.

Bro. Binckes said that he had seen Colonel Creaton that morning, who had expressed his intention of being present at the present meeting for the purpose of giving notice of motion for the Quarterly Court that a sub-Committee of five members of the General Committee be appointed to revise the laws of the institution, and to confer with a similar Committee of the Girls' School, and to report to the Quarterly Court in January. Colonel Creaton, however, had not been able to attend, and, therefore, he (Bro. Binckes) gave the notice of motion for him. Bro. Binckes also said that the other business of the Quarterly Court would be to elect a Trustee of the General Fund in the room of Bro. John Symonds, resigned.

The Committee then adjourned.

Masonic and General Tidings.

A Grand Masonic Fête will take place on the 24th October, 1878, at Paris, in the Great Hall, of the Trocadero, under the presidency of Monsr. Cremieux, Senator, and formerly Minister, at which some of the principal people in the capital will be present. This Fête is offered to all foreign Freemasons by the members of the Supreme Council of the A. and A. Scottish Rite of Freemasonry for France and her Dependencies. Tickets of admission may be obtained gratis on proof of Masonic Title, at the Secretariat of the Scottish Rite, No. 46, Rue de la Victoire, Paris.

A Quarterly General Court and Election of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys will be held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, London, on Monday next, at 12 o'clock noon. The business will consist of electing thirteen boys instead of eleven, as stated on the voting papers, and to consider three motions, one of which is as follows, proposed by our esteemed Bro. R. B. Webster: "That the Laws regulating the admission of Candidates to this Institution be suspended, for the admitting, without election, Arthur George Jardine, age ten years and five months, a son of the late Bro. Charles Jardine (Steward for the Anniversary Festival in July last), who lost his life in the recent fatal collision on the Thames, leaving a widow and nine children without provision.

The Deputy Grand Master at Southport.—An especial meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of the western division of Lancashire will be held at Southport, on Friday next, the 18th inst., when Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Dep. G.M., and R.W.P.G.M. of the province will perform the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of St. Luke's Church. His lordship will afterwards preside at a grand banquet at the Prince of Wales Hotel. It is expected there will be a very large gathering of Freemasons, and the arrangements are under the direction of an efficient local committee.

A regular meeting of the Eboracum Conclave of the Red Cross of Constantine 137, was held at York on Thursday, 10th inst., Bros. W. P. Husband and Robert Walker, were duly installed Knights of the Order by the M.P.S., Bro. Thomas Cooper, who was assisted by Bros. T. B. Whythead, P.S. as V.E.; W. Valentine, Prelate; J. S. Cumberland, S.G.; G. Balmford, J.G.; M. Millington, Prefect; A. T. B. Turner, Recorder; G. Simpson, Treasurer; J. Ward as Herald; and several other members.

Capt. Charles E. Gladstone, R.N., (nephew of the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P.) was raised to the degree of Master Mason, in the Royal Naval College Lodge of Freemasons, last Tuesday at Greenwich.

The Consecration of the Progress Lodge, No. 1768, will take place at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, London, on Thursday next, the 17th inst.

The Daily Telegraph, of Thursday last contained an interesting "leader" on Freemasonry.

The Whitehall Review has reason to believe that the government expects it may be necessary to institute a species of censorship over telegrams sent by correspondents from the front. It is thought that the signature of a staff-officer may be required in order to prevent the transmission of news that might be made available by the enemy. No restrictions, however, will, or indeed could, be placed upon the transmission of news by letter. The correspondents already off are Captain Charles Norman for the Times, Mr. Forbes for the Daily News, Mr. Frederick Boyle for the Standard, and Mr. Phil. Robinson for the Daily Telegraph.

The Duke of Richmond and Gordon, K.G., will take the chair at the 214th anniversary festival of the Scottish Corporation (of which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Duke of Rothesay and Lord of the Isles, is president) on St. Andrew's Day, November 30th.

LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS COMPANY.—Traffic receipts, week ending October 6, 1878, £11,849 17s. 10d.; 1877, £10,755 3s. 7d.

PRINTERS' CORPORATION.—Three additional orphan children have been placed on the funds of this institution by election.

Bro. Francis G. Faithfull, Citizen and Merchant Tailor, is a candidate for the City Remembrancer'ship. He is 46 years of age, was educated at Harrow and Oxford, and took his M.A. Degree in 1855. He was in the War Office fifteen years, during the last three of which he has held the appointment of Assistant Private Secretary. Bro. Faithfull obtained a fair knowledge of the duties of City Remembrancer, both Ceremonial and Parliamentary, during his services as Clerk of the Merchant Tailors' Company, having frequently to communicate personally, and otherwise, with the Royal and Noble Members of that Guild; and as Private Secretary at the War Office, his duties necessitated his attendance at Parliament, which brought him into personal contact with members of both houses.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. E. G. Holbrook, of the Portsmouth Times, on Tuesday last, of typhoid fever. An obituary will appear in our next.

HERVEY LODGE (No. 1260).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, 10th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. H. Southwood, W.M., presided. About thirty brethren attended, and among them were Bros. E. J. Goodman, S.W.; E. S. Foot, as J.W.; Dr. Jabez Hogg, Treas.; C. J. Atkins, Sec.; O. Latricelle, I.G.; H. L. Dean, Org.; A. Lear Room, W.M. 1227; P. H. Protheroe, 375; J. B. Lambe, 145; W. W. Morgan, jun., 1385; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason). The work of the evening consisted of raising Bros. Fildew and Cadenhead, and passing Bros. Kirby and Hart. After the completion of this work, a resolution was passed appointing a Committee for forming bye-laws for re-establishing a benevolent fund. On the motion of Bro. Dr. Jabez Hogg, P.G.D., P.M., Treas., a vote of thanks was passed to the W.M. and Bro. Atkins, the Secretary, for the highly successful summer festival lately held. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren subsequently partook of supper at Freemasons' Tavern. The toasts followed, and Dr. Hogg, P.G.D., P.M. and Treas., responded to the toast of "The Grand Officers," and in the course of his reply, referring to his connection with the Hervey Lodge, said he should always strive to serve the lodge with all his heart. Whatever funds were entrusted to his care would be laid out by him with the same care as if they were his own. He was constantly seeking the welfare of the lodge, and to do so properly he attended all its meetings. Even though he had illness at home at the present time he could not separate himself from the brethren, and one of his greatest pleasures out of his home was to be in this lodge. "The Visitors" toast was responded to by Bros. Lambe, Lear Room, Protheroe, Massey, and Morgan. Dr. Hogg proposed, "The Health of the W.M." He stated that Bro. Southwood continued to maintain his supremacy over the affections of every member of the lodge. The W.M. always found some new thing between their periods of meeting for them to thank him for. Since they last met they had a very pleasant summer festival in August, when all the brethren had a happy day. The W.M. said he wished them to be happy, and he put himself to a great deal of inconvenience to make the pleasure of the day perfect. Fortunately they had very fine weather on that day, although about that time there was much unpleasant weather. After the working of the lodge, they drove to a most delightful part of the country, where they enjoyed some lovely scenery, in addition to the other pleasures of the day. The W.M. was mainly instrumental in bringing about the happiness of the brethren on that occasion, and it behoved the brethren now to remember that fact and to give the toast a warm reception. The W.M., in reply, said it was always a pleasure to find the efforts made by a W.M. for the enjoyment of the brethren and the honour of the Craft met with the satisfaction of the brethren. First, it was pleasing to him personally; and, secondly, he felt he had discharged a duty which devolved on him in the capacity to which the brethren had elected him. The Master of a lodge should at all times be able to command, not simply the satisfaction, but the appreciation of the brethren, and he had been particularly happy in his second year of office, untrammelled by any fetters, to obtain from the members of the lodge the full meed of their satisfaction for the work done. He sometimes thought they were much more liberal than his humble efforts justified. He recognised when he was placed in the chair the very responsible duties appertaining to his office, and, above all, when he left the chair he hoped it would be practically brought out that he left behind him in the working of the lodge a pleasant recognition of his year of office. If he lived many more years even than he expected he should retain the most vivid recollection of the happy days he had spent in the lodge. While Master of the lodge he trusted it might please T.G.A.O.T.U. so to exercise his mind and inclination, and so to dispose his will that what he did as W.M. he might do, not simply to meet with the brethren's satisfaction, but that it might redound to the honour and welfare of the Craft. For he maintained that much as we might be esteemed in our individual capacity we had each and all of us to fulfil a certain duty. When he joined the Hervey Lodge, some five years ago, he found too soon for his own happiness that there were certain elements that would lead to the ruin of the lodge, and he determined if it were possible to hold on to the actual work until such time that he should be elected W.M., and then, with the hearty co-operation of the members of the lodge, to reform those blots which had become conspicuous, to put on, as it were, a new coat and start afresh, and show to the Craft that the individual blemishes should not be allowed to extend, and so pollute the whole Craft; to recognise whatever little evil there was, and purge themselves of it; to show to the Craft generally that they were not brethren who should be laid under the ban of contumely, but rather, that like the fabled phoenix, they could rise from the ashes a living body full of vitality, and able to make themselves felt through all the ramifications of the Order. The resolution it had been his pleasing duty to get passed that evening was one which would make the Hervey Lodge a power in the Craft. The effect of the resolution was that instead of the major part of their money being devoted to refreshment it would be given for the furtherance of the true principles of Masonry. Out of the initiation and joining fees he should submit that one-half should go to the benevolent fund. He also should propose to raise the annual subscription from three guineas to £3 10s., and devote the ten shillings to the benevolent fund. These were the main alterations he should propose, and he hoped the Committee would recommend them, and that when the recommendation came before the lodge the brethren would pass them unanimously. He also hoped that the brethren of the lodge would qualify themselves as Governors of the Institutions. He did not expect any brother who could not afford it to do so, but the W.M.'s eye would be on those who could afford it. The other toasts were afterwards given, and the brethren separated.

THE GREAT CITY LODGE (No. 1426).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, Oct. 12th, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, and was very numerously attended by both members and visitors. Bros. Stanway, W.M.; Freeman, S.W.; Blackie, J.W.; Catchpole, S.D.; Hamer, J.D.; Headon, Treas.; Moody, Sec.; the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Chaplain; Taylor, I.G.; Jenkins, Organist; W. H. Hook, Steward; Thompson (Freemason); and a long list of visitors, amongst whom were Bros. Thomas Town, P.G.D., Ronsignol, 1216; Alcock, 1149; Raup, Vraie Union; Berryman, P.M. 3; Lake, 1471; Davis, P.M. 95 and 173; a P.M. of 104, and one of 27 (names illegible); McKay, W.M. 720; Benstead, 657; Saul, S.W. 1201; Churchill, W.M. 615; Mackney, 299, P.P.G.O., Kent; Dakins, 1669; Carper, 1246; Eastgate, 1563; T. Harper, 1216; Edmondston, W.M. 1658; Bradley, 1669; Krell, 145; Brook, 73; Sutton, P.M. 73; Binet, 179; Preston, 1669; Green, 225; Light, 959; Partridge, 1445; Medwin, 1613; O'Connor, 636; Manger, 1314; George Kenning, P.M. 192, P.G.D. Middlesex; Latricelle, 1260; Fountain, S.W. 1216; Pritchard, P.M. 117; W. W. Morgan, jun., 1385; Richardson, 1658; Reeding, 1475; Thomas, 1396; Vernon, 1441; Lane, 1275; Saunders, 1293, and others. The lodge having been opened, and the minutes of the last regular and an emergency meetings read and confirmed, Bro. Freeman, S.W., and W.M. elect, was presented to receive from the retiring W.M. (Bro. Stanway) the benefit of installation. The brethren below the chair having retired, a Board of twenty Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Freeman was, in due form, installed as Master of the lodge. The brethren having been admitted, and the W.M. saluted in the different degrees, he appointed his officers as follows: Bro. Blackie, S.W.; Catchpole, J.W.; Headon, Treasurer; Moody, Secretary; Simpson, Chaplain; Hamer, S.D.; Taylor, J.D.; Kiffe, I.G.; Hook, D.C.; Jenkins, Organist; Steedman, P.M. Tyler. The customary address were delivered by Bro. Stanway, and the lodge was closed in due form. The brethren and visitors then retired to the large hall, where a splendid banquet was provided. On the withdrawal of the cloth, grace was sung by Bros. Thornton and Kempton, and Messrs. Frost and Hanson. The W. Master then said, the toast he was about to propose was one that was always well received by Freemasons, as it was that of "The Queen." He need say nothing of her, as she was loved and honoured by all. He gave "The Queen and the Craft," which was well responded to, and followed by the National Anthem. The W.M. said—Brethren, the next toast I have to propose is "The Most Worshipful Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales," and said as a man and a Mason we ought to be very proud of him. I have not had the honour of meeting him in Grand Lodge, and, therefore, I cannot speak personally of his working, but I understand from others that he does everything that is required of him in the high position in which he is placed. The toast was enthusiastically received. Mr. Hanson sung in exquisite style, Dibdin's well known "Tom Bowling," and there was an unanimous encore. The W.M.—Brethren, I rise to propose "The Health of the Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, K.G., the Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present." With respect to the Worshipful Pro Grand Master I had the pleasure of seeing his working in the Grand Lodge, and I must say that I was struck with the gentlemanly and courteous manner in which he conducted the affairs of Grand Lodge, and the same remarks will apply to Lord Skelmersdale, the Deputy Grand Master. They had that night the pleasure of seeing two Grand Officers at their table, and he had coupled with the toast the names of Bros. Fenn and Simpson." Mr. J. Harper played a solo on the trumpet and was encored, Bro. R. J. Simpson said, after having listened to such delightful sounds as they had just heard it would ill become them, as Grand Officers, to blow their own trumpet, but he would say that their illustrious Grand Master shed a lustre on the Order to which they had the honour to belong. The duties of the Grand Lodge were sometimes of a very trying character, but he trusted that they would always do what they were then most ably doing, promoting a belief in the Great Architect of the Universe, and promulgating the principles of Freemasonry over the different quarters of the world. He thanked the W. Master for again placing him in the high position of their Chaplain, an office which he had held in the lodge from the time of its consecration and he was deeply indebted to the Worshipful Master for that appointment. In addition to any duties he might have to perform as the Chaplain of their lodge, whether it was in the time of sickness or sorrow, should any member wish for his assistance, at all times his humble services would always be at his command. He had heard a few years ago from a brother not a hundred miles from where they then were, that he looked upon his admission into Masonry as a great blessing, for it had been to him the turning point in his life, for during the ceremony of his initiation, although he did not know the voice, it was one that reached his heart when he was asked, "In times of difficulty or danger in whom do you put your trust?" That question, not put to him irreverently or heedlessly, had such an effect in bringing out the feelings of his heart, such a powerful influence upon him, that from that very moment he became a changed and different man, and if he (Bro. Simpson) dared to mention his name it would be found amongst the most eminent Masons of the present day. As their Bro. Fenn was with them that night they hailed his presence with the greatest pleasure, and he might say that he was present at every lodge throughout the country, and he did not flatter Bro. Fenn, but he spoke the truth when he said that the Lodge of Emulation affected every other lodge in the kingdom, and wherever that working was adopted there was Bro. Fenn present amongst them. The reverend brother then related that he had lately visited a town called Dunwich, on the coast of Suffolk, of whose geographical position until then he was ignorant, and he found that it was a most ancient place, having existed since the time of King John, that it at one time, sent two members to Parliament, but the sea had washed away its ancient landmarks, but it had no promontory like Dover, which had stood the storms of centuries. So in Masonry there was still preserved a great moral principle and landmarks, which had escaped the ravages of time and tide. Freemasonry had stood its trial against all the shafts of ridicule levelled at it on the one hand, and against the anathemas of superstition on the other. Their only duty was to uphold their principles, make Freemasonry what it should be, amidst good repute and evil repute, and preserve that noble character it should always maintain. Bro. Fenn, P.G.D., said when he entered the lodge that evening and beheld Bro. Simpson, he felt and believed that he should be relieved from the pleasure of returning thanks for any toast, but he found himself in the position of no ordinary difficulty in having to respond to a toast, the subject of which had been already exhausted by one of the most eloquent members of the Craft, so that he hardly knew what to say. Before, however, he spoke to the toast, he must deliver a message he had received yesterday from Bro. Hervey, the Grand Secretary, which has to express his regret, in consequence of illness, of being unable to be present with them that night, and that was an announcement he was sure they would all share with regret. He (Bro. Fenn) had not been with them for two years, but he did not think it was so long, as time had so rapidly passed away, but during that period they had lost Bro. Bagshawe, the Provincial Grand Master for Essex, Sir Frederick Williams, and last, but not least, Bro. Tomkins. That, however, was not a pleasant subject to contemplate after dinner, and, therefore, he would take up a more pleasant subject than speaking of the losses they had sustained. He would ask them to look at the accessions they had received to Freemasonry of late years, and which formed their sheet anchor, for they had the Prince of Wales presiding over them, and two princes of the blood in the other two chairs. Therefore, while Freemasonry was supported by the throne on the one hand, and religion on the other, they might look forward with confidence to the future, when it was thus maintained by the great and good of the land. He (Bro. Fenn) had been a Past and Present Grand Officer for fourteen years, and he could state confidently from his experience of the Grand Officers, and assure them that they were most desirous of maintaining Freemasonry in all the prosperity it possessed at the present time. Their Bro. Simpson had alluded to his connection with the Lodge of Emulation, and he was hardly tempted to add anything to what he had said, except to say that he agreed with him that they had been engaged for about twenty years in bringing about a proper and decorous working of Freemasonry. He would not take it upon himself, but he would say that he believed the Lodge of Emulation had worked a marked effect, for he recollected the time when there was very irreverent and slovenly working, but that was now the exception, and the change was due to the improved ideas of the new candidates who entered their Order. In the name of the Grand Officers he thanked them for the kind compliment that they had paid to them that evening. Bro. Stanway, I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M.," Bro. Freeman, and after referring to the liberal advance of money he had made for the establishing of the lodge, said he was a man whose hand was guided by justice, and his heart expanded by benevolence, and he hoped the Most High would give him health and strength to conduct the affairs of the lodge with credit to himself and the satisfaction of its members. The W. Master said he felt the full weight of the responsibility that had fallen upon him in being called upon, to rule a lodge of such importance as the Great City Lodge. As to the remarks of Bro. Stanway, he felt that he did not deserve a title of what he had said of him, but he had done his best, and next to his duty to God his duty would be to his lodge, and if he did that he did not think that he should be going very far wrong. He thanked them very sincerely for the high honour they had conferred upon him in placing him in the chair of the lodge, it was an honour he highly appreciated, and he hoped to hand down that honour to his successor pure and unsullied. The W. Master next gave "The Immediate Past Master, and Installing Master, Bro. Stanway, and the Past Masters of The Great City Lodge," and having done so presented Bro. Stanway with a Past Master's jewel, voted to him by the lodge, which he said he had fairly earned, and hoped he might live many years to wear it. Bro. Stanway in returning thanks said, at the termination of his year of office he had to express the pleasure with which he had passed through it, and to thank the brethren for the kind support they had given to him, and also to the officers of the lodge, for without their assistance his efforts would have been of little avail in bringing their beautiful ceremonies before the lodge. The assistance he had received from his officers was everything that a Master could desire, and he left the chair and the officers with peace and happiness prevailing amongst them. The jewel they had that night presented to him would be a memento which would never be effaced from his memory, and he should always remember with pleasure that he had been associated with the members of that great prosperous and influential lodge. Bro. Stevens in a long speech returned thanks for the Past Masters. "The Visitors," was next given, for which Bros. Davis and Edwards then severally returned thanks. The W. Master then gave "The Treasurer and Secretary," Bros. Headon and Moody. Bro. Headon, in responding, said the brethren knew that he was always very brief in what he had to say, and as time was on the wing he would be as brief as possible. He thanked them for the kind manner in which they had received the toast, and in the coming year he hoped to do what he had done in the past, and at the end of the year to entitle himself to their confidence by bringing forward a good balance in their favour. Bro. Moody, the Secretary, also responded, and, after the Tyler's toast had been given, the proceedings were brought to a close. The professionals engaged for the musical performances were Bros. Bertrams Thornton, Kempton; and Messrs. W. Frost, Hanson, and T. Harper. Bro. H. Frost presided at the piano-forte.
